On the night of the 16th Rosser, with two brigades of cavalry and a brigade of infantry mounted behind his men, was sent around the left to surprise what was reported by his scouts to be the camp of a division of cavalry. He found, however, that the camp had been moved, and he only found a picket, which he captured. As I could not remain at Fisher's Hill, for want of forage, I then determined to try and get around one of the enemy's flanks and surprise him in camp. After ascertaining the location of the enemy's camps from observations from a signal station on Massanutten Mountain, I determined to move around the left flank of the enemy. I selected this flank from information furnished by General Gordon and Captain Hotchkiss, who had gone to the signal station, and because the greater part of the enemy's cavalry was on his right, and Rosser's attempt had caused that flank to be closely picketed. To get around the enemy's left was a very difficult undertaking, however, as the river had to be crossed twice, and between the mountain and river, where the troops had to pass, to the lower ford there was only a rugged pathway. I thought, however, the chances of success would be greater from the fact that the enemy would not expect a move in that direction on account of the difficulties attending it and the great strength of their position on that flank. The movement was accordingly begun on the night of the 18th just after dark, Gordon's, Ramseur's, and Pegram's divisions being sent across the river and around the foot of the mountain, all under the command of General Gordon, and late at night I moved with Kershaw's division through Strasburg toward a ford on Cedar Creek just above its mouth, and Wharton was moved on the pike toward the enemy's front, in which road the artillery was also moved. The arrangement was for Gordon to come around in the rear, for Kershaw to attack the left flank, and for Gordon [Wharton?] to advance in front, supporting the artillery, which was to open on the enemy when he should turn on Gordon or Kershaw, and the attack was to begin at 5 a. m. on the 19th. Rosser was sent to the left to occupy the enemy's cavalry, and Lomax, who had been sent down the Luray Valley, was ordered to pass Front Royal, cross the river, and move across toward the Valley pike. Punctually at 5 Kershaw reached the enemy's left work and attacked and carried it without the least difficulty, and very shortly afterward Gordon attacked in the rear, and they swept everything before them, routing the Eighth and Nineteenth Corps completely, getting possession of their camp and capturing 18 pieces of artillery and about 1,300 prisoners. They moved across the pike toward the camp of the Sixth Corps, and Wharton was crossed over, the artillery following him, but the Sixth Corps, which was on the enemy's extreme right of his infantry, was not surprised in camp, because Rosser had commenced the attack on that flank about the same time as the attack on the other, and the firing on the left gave that corps sufficient time to form and move out of camp, and it was found posted on a ridge on the west of the pike and parallel to it, and this corps offered considerable resistance. The artillery was brought up and opened on it, when it fell back to the north of Middletown and made a stand on a commanding ridge running across the pike. In the meantime the enemy's cavalry was threatening our right flank and rear, and the country being perfectly open, and having on that flank only Lomax's old brigade, numbering about 300 men, it became necessary to make dispositions to prevent a cavalry charge, and a portion of the troops were moved to the right for that purpose, and word was sent to Gordon, who had got on the left with his division, and Kershaw, who was there also, to swing round and advance with their divisions, but they stated in reply that a heavy force of cavalry had got in their front, and that their ranks were so depleted by the number of men who had stopped in the camps to plunder that they could not advance them. Rosser also sent word that when he attacked the cavalry he encountered a part of the Sixth Corps supporting it; that a very heavy force of cavalry had massed in his front, and that it was too strong for him, and that he would have to fall back. I sent word to him to get some position that he could hold, and the cavalry in front of Kershaw and Gordon having moved toward Rosser, they were moved forward and a line was formed north of Middletown facing the enemy. The cavalry on the right made several efforts to charge that flank, but was driven back. So many of our men had stopped in the camp to plunder (in which I am sorry to say that officers participated), the country was so open, and the enemy's cavalry so strong, that I did not deem it prudent to press farther, especially as Lomax had not come up. I determined, therefore, to content myself with trying to hold the advantages I had gained until all my troops had come up and the captured property was secured. If I had had but one division of fresh troops I could have made the victory complete and beyond all danger of a reverse. We continued to hold our position until late in the afternoon, when the enemy commenced advancing, and was driven back on the right center by Ramseur, but Gordon's division, on the left, subsequently gave way, and Kershaw's and Ramseur's did so also, when they found Gordon's giving way, not because there was any pressure on them, but from an insane idea of being flanked. Some of them, however, were rallied, and with the help of the artillery the army was checked for some time, but a great number of the men could not be stopped, but continued to go to the rear. The enemy again made a demonstration, and General Ramseur, who was acting with great gallantry, was wounded, and the left again gave way, and then the whole command, falling back in such a panic that I had to order Pegram's and Wharton's commands, which were very small and on the right, to fall back, and most of them took the panic also. I found it impossible to rally the troops. They would not listen to entreaties, threats, or appeals of any kind. A terror of the enemy's cavalry had seized them, and there was no holding them. They left the field in the greatest confusion. All the captured artillery had been carried across Cedar Creek, and a large number of captured wagons and ambulances, and we succeeded in crossing our own artillery over, and everything would have been saved if we could have rallied 500 men, but the panic was so great that nothing could be done. A small body of the enemy's cavalry dashed across Cedar Creek above the bridge, and got into the train and artillery running back on the pike, and passed through our men to this side of Strasburg, tore up a bridge, and thus succeeded in capturing the greater part of the artillery and a number of ordnance and medical wagons and ambulances. The men scattered on the sides, and the rout was as thorough and disgraceful as ever happened to our army.

After the utter failure of all my attempts to rally the men I went to Fisher's Hill with the hope of rallying the troops there and forming them in the trenches, but when they reached that position the only organized body of men left was the prisoners, 1,300 in number, and the provost-guard in charge of them, and I believe that the appearance of these prisoners moving back in a body alone arrested the progress of the enemy's cavalry, as it was too dark for them to discover what they were. Many of the men stopped at Fisher's Hill and went to their old camps, but no organization of them could be effected, and nothing saved us but the inability of the enemy to follow with his infantry and his expectation that we would make a stand there. The state of things was distressing and mortifying beyond measure. We had within our grasp a glorious victory, and lost it by the uncontrollable propensity of our men for plunder, in the first place, and the subsequent panic among those who had kept their places, which was without sufficient cause, for I believe that the enemy had only made the movement against us as a demonstration, hoping to protect his stores, &c., at Winchester, and that the rout of our troops was a surprise to him. I had endeavored to guard against the dangers of stopping to plunder in the camps by cautioning the division commanders and ordering them to caution their subordinates and take the most rigid measures to prevent it, and I endeavored to arrest the evil while in progress without avail. The truth is, we have very few field or company officers worth anything, almost all our good officers of that kind having been killed, wounded, or captured, and it is impossible to preserve discipline without good field and company officers.

I send you a map* of the battle-field with the surrounding country. You will see marked out on it the different routes of the several columns. The plan was a bold one and was vigorously pursued by the division commanders, and it was successful, but the victory already gained was lost by the subsequent bad conduct of the troops. The artillery throughout, from first to last, in this as well as in all the actions I have had, behaved nobly, both officers and men, and not a piece of artillery has been lost by any fault of theirs. I attribute this good conduct on their part to the vast superiority of the officers. Colonel Carter and all his battalion commanders richly deserve promotion. They not only fought their guns gallantly and efficiently, but they made the most strenuous efforts to rally the infantry.

It is mortifying to me, general, to have to make these explanations of my reverses. They are due to no want of effort on my part, though it may be that I have not the capacity or judgment to prevent them. I have labored faithfully to gain success, and I have not failed to expose my person and to set an example to my men. I know that I shall have to endure censure from those who do not understand my position and difficulties, but I am still willing to make renewed efforts. If you think, however, that the interests of the service would be promoted by a change of commanders, I beg you will have no hesitation in making the change. The interests of the service are far beyond any mere personal considerations, and if they require it I am willing to surrender my command into other hands. Though this affair has resulted so disastrously to my command, yet I think it is not entirely without compensating benefits. The Sixth Corps had already begun to move off to Grant and my movement brought it back, and Sheridan's forces are now so shattered that he will not be able to send Grant any efficient aid for some time. I think he will be afraid to trust the Eighth and Nineteenth Corps.

---

* See Atlas, Plate LXXXII, Map 9.

The enemy's loss in killed and wounded was very heavy, and we took 1,300 prisoners, making, with some taken by Rosser, and others taken on the day of reconnaissance, over 1,500. My loss in killed and wounded was not more than 700 or 800, and I think very few prisoners were lost. A number of my men are still out, but they are coming in. Except for the loss of my artillery the enemy has far the worst of it. We secured some of the captured artillery, and our net loss is twenty-three pieces. I still have twenty pieces besides the horse artillery. The enemy is not pursuing, and I will remain here and organize my troops.

Respectfully,

J. A. EARLY.

General R. E. LEE,

Commanding Army of Northern Virginia.

A D D E N D A .

Organization of the Confederate forces commanded by Lieut. Gen. Jubal A. Early, C. S. Army, at the battle of Cedar Creek, Va., October 19, 1864.

RAMSEUR'S DIVISION.

Maj. Gen. STEPHEN D. RAMSEUR.*

Battle's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. CULLEN A. BATTLE.†
Lieut. Col. E. LA FAYETTE HOBSON.

3d Alabama, ————
5th Alabama, Lieut. Col. E. La Fayette Hobson.
6th Alabama, ————
12th Alabama, Capt. P. D. Ross.
61st Alabama, Maj. William E. Pinckard.

Grimes' Brigade.

Brig. Gen. BRYAN GRIMES.

32d North Carolina, } Col. David
53d North Carolina, } G. Cow-
2d North Carolina Battalion } and.
43d North Carolina, } Col. John R. Win-
45th North Carolina, } ston.

Cook's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. PHILIP COOK.

4th Georgia, Lieut. Col. William H. Willis.
12th Georgia, Capt. James Everett.
21st Georgia, Capt. Henry T. Battle.
44th Georgia, Lieut. Col. James W. Beck.

Cox's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. WILLIAM R. COX.

1st North Carolina, Capt. William H. Thomson.
2d North Carolina, ————
3d North Carolina, Capt. William H. Thomson.
4th North Carolina, ————
14th North Carolina, Capt. Joseph Jones.
30th North Carolina, Capt. John C. Mc-Millan.

* Killed.

† Wounded.

PEGRAM'S (EARLY'S) DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. JOHN PEGRAM.

Pegram's Brigade.

Col. JOHN S. HOFFMAN.

13th Virginia, Capt. Felix Heiskell.
 31st Virginia, Lieut. Col. J. S. Kerr McCutchen.
 49th Virginia, Capt. John G. Lobban.
 52d Virginia, Capt. John M. Humphreys.
 58th Virginia, Capt. Leroy C. James.

Johnston's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. ROBERT D. JOHNSTON.

5th North Carolina, ——— ———.
 12th North Carolina, ——— ———.
 20th North Carolina, Col. Thomas F. Toon.
 23d North Carolina, ——— ———.
 1st North Carolina Battalion Sharpshooters, Capt. R. E. Wilson.

Godwin's Brigade.

6th North Carolina, ——— ———.
 21st North Carolina, ——— ———.
 54th North Carolina, ——— ———.
 57th North Carolina, ——— ———.

GORDON'S DIVISION.

Maj. Gen. JOHN B. GORDON.

Evans' Brigade.

Brig. Gen. CLEMENT A. EVANS.

13th Georgia, ——— ———.
 26th Georgia, ——— ———.
 31st Georgia, ——— ———.
 38th Georgia, ——— ———.
 60th Georgia, ——— ———.
 61st Georgia, ——— ———.
 12th Georgia Battalion, ——— ———.

*Terry's Brigade.**

Brig. Gen. WILLIAM TERRY.

2d Virginia, }
 4th Virginia, }
 5th Virginia, } Col. John H. S. Funk.
 27th Virginia, }
 33d Virginia, }
 21st Virginia, }
 25th Virginia, }
 42d Virginia, } Col. Robert H. Dungan.
 44th Virginia, }
 48th Virginia, }
 50th Virginia, }
 10th Virginia, }
 23d Virginia, } Lieut. Col. Samuel H. Saunders.
 37th Virginia, }

Hays' Brigade.

5th Louisiana, }
 6th Louisiana, } ——— ———.
 7th Louisiana, }
 8th Louisiana, ——— ———.
 9th Louisiana, ——— ———.

Stafford's Brigade.

1st Louisiana, }
 14th Louisiana, } ——— ———.
 2d Louisiana, ——— ———.
 10th Louisiana, }
 15th Louisiana, } ——— ———.

* Composed of the fragmentary remains of fourteen of the regiments of Edward Johnson's division, most of which was captured by the enemy May 12, 1864.

KERSHAW'S DIVISION.

Maj. Gen. JOSEPH B. KERSHAW.

Conner's Brigade.

Maj. JAMES M. GOGGIN.

- 2d South Carolina, Maj. Benjamin R. Clyburn.*
 3d South Carolina, Maj. Rutherford P. Todd.*
 7th South Carolina, ——— ———.
 8th South Carolina, ——— ———.
 15th South Carolina, ——— ———.
 20th South Carolina, Col. Stephen M. Boykin.
 3d South Carolina Battalion, Capt. B. M. Whitener.†

Humphreys' Brigade.

Brig. Gen. BENJAMIN G. HUMPHREYS.

- 13th Mississippi, ——— ———.
 17th Mississippi, ——— ———.
 18th Mississippi, ——— ———.
 21st Mississippi, ——— ———.

Wofford's Brigade

- 16th Georgia, ——— ———.
 18th Georgia, ——— ———.
 24th Georgia, ——— ———.
 3d Georgia Battalion, ——— ———.
 Cobb's (Georgia) Legion.
 Phillips (Georgia) Legion, ——— ———.

Bryan's Brigade.

Col. JAMES P. SIMMS.

- 10th Georgia, Col. Willis C. Holt.*
 50th Georgia, Col. Peter McGlashan.*
 51st Georgia, Col. Edward Ball.*
 53d Georgia, ——— ———.

WHARTON'S DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. GABRIEL C. WHARTON.

Wharton's Brigade.

- 45th Virginia, ——— ———.
 50th Virginia, ——— ———.
 51st Virginia, ——— ———.
 30th Virginia Battalion Sharpshooters.

Echols' Brigade.

- 22d Virginia, ——— ———.
 23d Virginia Battalion, ——— ———.
 26th Virginia Battalion, ——— ———.

Smith's Brigade.

Col. THOMAS SMITH.

- 36th Virginia, ——— ———.
 60th Virginia, Capt. Albert G. P. George.
 45th Virginia Battalion, Capt. William B. Hensley.
 Thomas Legion, Lieut. Col. James R. Love, jr.

CAVALRY.

LOMAX'S DIVISION.

Maj. Gen. LUNSFORD L. LOMAX.

Imboden's Brigade.

- 18th Virginia, ——— ———.
 23d Virginia, ——— ———.
 62d Virginia, ——— ———.

McCausland's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. JOHN MCCAUSLAND.

- 14th Virginia, ——— ———.
 16th Virginia, ——— ———.
 17th Virginia, ——— ———.
 25th Virginia, ——— ———.
 37th Virginia Battalion, ——— ———.

Jackson's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. HENRY B. DAVIDSON.

- 8th Virginia, ——— ———.
 21st Virginia, ——— ———.
 22d Virginia, ——— ———.
 34th Virginia Battalion, ——— ———.
 36th Virginia Battalion, ——— ———.

- 2d Maryland, ——— ———.
 19th Virginia, ——— ———.
 20th Virginia, ——— ———.
 46th Virginia Battalion, ——— ———.
 47th Virginia Battalion, ——— ———.

* Wounded.

† Killed.

ROSSER'S (FITZ LEE'S) DIVISION.

Maj. Gen. THOMAS L. ROSSER.

Wickham's Brigade.

1st Virginia, ——— ———.
 2d Virginia, ——— ———.
 3d Virginia, ——— ———.
 4th Virginia, ——— ———.

Rosser's Brigade.

7th Virginia, ——— ———.
 11th Virginia, ——— ———.
 12th Virginia, ——— ———.
 35th Virginia Battalion, ——— ———.

Payne's Brigade.

5th Virginia, ——— ———.
 6th Virginia, ——— ———.
 15th Virginia, ——— ———.

ARTILLERY.

Col. THOMAS H. CARTER.

Braxton's Battalion.

Virginia battery (Carpenter's).
 Virginia battery (Hardwicke's).
 Virginia battery (Cooper's).

Cutshaw's Battalion.

Virginia battery (Carrington's).
 Virginia battery (Tanner's).
 Virginia battery (Garber's).

King's Battalion.

Lieut. Col. J. FLOYD KING.

Virginia battery (Bryan's).
 Virginia battery (Chapman's).
 Virginia battery (Lowry's).

Carter's Battalion.

Alabama battery (Reese's).
 Virginia battery (W. P. Carter's).
 Virginia battery (Pendleton's).
 Virginia battery (Fry's).

Nelson's Battalion.

Lieut. Col. WILLIAM NELSON.

Georgia battery (Milledge's).
 Virginia battery (Kirkpatrick's).
 Virginia battery (Massie's).

Horse Artillery.

Maryland battery (Griffin's).
 Virginia battery (Jackson's).
 Virginia battery (Lurty's).
 Virginia battery (McClanahan's).
 Virginia battery (Johnston's).
 Virginia battery (Shoemaker's).
 Virginia battery (Thomson's).

No. 174.

*Journal of Capt. Jed. Hotchkiss, Topographical Engineer, Second Corps, Army of Northern Virginia (Valley District), of operations August 4–December 31.**

Thursday, August 4.—We started at sunrise and went to Shepherdstown via Leetown. Breckinridge went the same way. Rodes and Ramseur went by Martinsburg to near Hainesville. Headquarters at Mrs. Bedinger's. Pleasant.

Friday, August 5.—We crossed the river to Sharpsburg and had engagement with Cole's cavalry and drove them away, and then encamped near there. General Early and myself rode over part of the battle-field of Sharpsburg, and I sketched, by his order, the position of his brigade there. General Ransom accompanied us. Rodes and Ramseur encamped at Claggett's Mill. A warm day.

Saturday, August 6.—We marched to Tilghmanton and the cross-roads beyond toward Hagerstown, and then went to Williamsport and encamped on the Virginia side. We found Rodes and Ramseur near Saint James' College. The general went to Saint James' College and paroled Doctor Kerfoot and Professor Coit for the return of Doctor Boyd, of Winchester, to his home in three weeks. He talked to Doctor Kerfoot for some time. It began to rain very early in the morning and rained most of the forenoon, then cleared off finely. We dined at Williamsport. Breckinridge encamped opposite Williamsport. Rodes and Ramseur went to near Hammond's Mill. The Yankees have a force at Harper's Ferry.

* For Hotchkiss' report covering operations from the Rapidan to the James May 3 to June 13; the Lynchburg Campaign June 14 to 22; in the Shenandoah Valley and Maryland June 23 to August 3, and the Shenandoah Valley Campaign August 4 to November 14, 1864, see Appendix, p. 1015. Omissions of strictly private matter in the Journal are indicated by asterisks.

Sunday, August 7.—We started at an early hour and went to Martinsburg and spent most of the day at Ed. Pendleton's, and in the p. m. went on to Bunker Hill. Breckinridge came to Darkesville and Rodes and Ramseur to Bunker Hill. General Pegram reported for duty. Quite warm.

Monday, August 8.—Worked at map of the battle of Monocacy all day. Quite warm. Enemy reported coming up from Harper's Ferry.

Tuesday, August 9.—Spent day in camp at Bunker Hill making map of battle of Monocacy. Robinson reducing Adams County and Oltmanns copying map of District of Columbia. Lieutenant Koerner came to see me in p. m. about details, &c. Warm.

Wednesday August 10.—We moved at an early hour to Stephenson's Depot, Breckinridge in advance, and then by Jordan Springs to the Red Bud and Abraham's Creek, where Breckinridge encamped. Rodes marched to the right of the road at Stephenson's and encamped. Ramseur marched yesterday to Winchester to meet a reported advance of Averell from Romney. We got the details of the rout of our cavalry at Moorefield. It was a disgraceful affair. We lost some 400 men and 4 pieces of artillery. We had headquarters near Burgess', a mile from Winchester on the Berryville road. Dined at Wall's. Warm day. Enemy made demonstrations on the Millwood, Berryville, and Martinsburg roads in the p. m., and were easily repulsed.

Thursday, August 11.—Appearances indicating a general attack by a large force, we this morning formed a line of battle covering the approaches east and southeast of Winchester; Breckinridge covering the Berryville and Millwood roads, Ramseur the Front Royal road, and Rodes the Martinsburg road. Everything was moved from Winchester and we had a skirmish on the Millwood road. About noon I guided Gordon across the country, by a route I had selected in the a. m., to the pike near Kernstown and took him to a position south of Newtown. The rest of the army followed, and we had a brisk skirmish, about dark, on the road to the Double Toll-Gate from Newtown. We drove the enemy back and encamped near Newtown. Headquarters at Chrisman's. Very warm. Bryan's and Lowry's batteries, on the Millwood road, were engaged some.

Friday, August 12.—We marched at an early hour and went across Cedar Creek and formed a line of battle. The Yankees came on and formed on the north side of the creek, and we had some skirmishing but no general engagement. In the evening we fell back to Fisher's Hill and took up our headquarters at Funkhouser's. I spent the day reconnoitering and carrying orders, and at night took Colonel Jackson and his cavalry to the Middle road and posted them for pickets. Got to camp at midnight. Very warm.

Saturday, August 13.—We selected a line of battle on Fisher's Hill, Wharton on the right of the pike, Gordon to the top of the hill beyond the railroad, Ramseur from Gordon to the top of the hill beyond the Middle road, and Rodes half a mile beyond the Middle road with strong pickets across the Valley to the Back road; cavalry in front, McCausland at the foot of Three Top Mountain, Jackson on the Middle road and Johnson on the Back road. We spent the day on the lines. The troops fortified them. Very warm.

Sunday, August 14.—We spent the day on the lines, staying under a tree by the roadside. Had a little skirmishing with the enemy. Most of them remained on the north side of Cedar Creek. Our signal men were driven off the point of Three Top Mountain, but Captain Keller and his sharpshooters drove the Yankees off and killed 2 and captured 3.

Monday, August 15.—Spent the day on the lines and at Breckinridge's headquarters. In the p. m. we drove the enemy back to Cedar Creek Hill and found them in the same position. A very warm day. It rained late in the p. m. and at night. Major Jones spent the night with me. General Lomax came to-day.

Tuesday, August 16.—Sketched the country between the river and Massanutten Mountain and along the foot of Fisher's Hill. Quite warm. Fitz Lee came to see General Early, his cavalry being at Front Royal. Anderson had a fight with the Yankee cavalry at Guard Hill, in which he got the worst of it.

Wednesday, August 17.—We found the enemy gone this morning and the smoke rising from all parts of the Lower Valley from the burning of barns and hay and wheat stacks by the retreating Yankees. We followed, Gordon in advance; then Wharton, Ramseur, and Rodes. McCausland went down the Valley pike, Jackson on the Middle, and Johnson on the Back roads. We did not get up with the enemy until we reached Kernstown; there drove in the skirmishers, and found the cavalry posted on Bowers' Hill. I took Forsberg's small brigade to the Middle road and threw them out to the left and drove the enemy from the hills in front and to the left of Bell's, Johnson's cavalry being there on our left; then reported, and Wharton's division was sent there. I put it in line to advance against Bowers' Hill. Then saw it go in and take the hill. Ramseur's sharpshooters advanced at the same time. I watched the left of the line and the advance of Johnson's cavalry, then reported to General Early after dark. Gordon crossed from Kernstown to the Front Royal road and came into Winchester from that way. We lost some killed and wounded, and inflicted some loss on the enemy and drove them through the town. We got the town just after dark. We encamped at Pritchard's, near Kernstown. We took 200 prisoners. The day was pleasant and cloudy; part of it very hot. Anderson marched up to the Opequon.

Thursday, August 18.—We moved our camp to the yard of Mrs. Wood, near the Town Spring, at Winchester. Rodes moved out a mile or so on the Berryville road, Ramseur on the Martinsburg road, and Gordon and Wharton remained on Abraham's Creek, near Hollingsworth's Mill. General Anderson came up with Kershaw's division and Fitz Lee's cavalry and encamped near the Opequon, on the Front Royal and Millwood roads. It rained most of last night and half of to-day quite steadily. Oltmanns finished a map of the Valley, which I sent to General Lomax, and corrected some maps.

Friday, August 19.—We moved at an early hour to Bunker Hill, Ramseur in advance, followed by Rodes and Breckinridge. All encamped in the vicinity of Bunker Hill. Anderson and Fitz Lee remained at Winchester. Lomax and his cavalry went to vicinity of Martinsburg and held the line of the Opequon all along. A fine day. Slight showers. Cool evening. Lomax went to Martinsburg and Shepherdstown.

Saturday, August 20.—We spent the day in camp. I corrected some maps. Oltmanns copied part of battle of Monocacy and Robinson copied a Valley map. It rained and misted most of the day. We had some skirmishing with the enemy along the Opequon. Camps as yesterday.

Sunday, August 21.—We moved toward Charlestown at an early hour. Drove the enemy from the Opequon. Met their infantry skirmishers at Aldridge's about 9.30 a. m. Rodes was in front and threw out his skirmishers and drove the enemy to the vicinity of Charlestown. Ramseur was put on his right and advanced to near the Summit Point road. Anderson came by the old Winchester and Charlestown road and Fitz Lee by the Berryville road. They had some fighting near Summit Point. We advanced by Smithfield. It threatened rain some, but cleared off by noon. Lomax, with Vaughn, Johnson, and Jackson, advanced by Leetown and then toward Charlestown. McCausland came on in our front and went toward Summit Point with part of his force from Smithfield. Gordon was put on the right and Wharton on the left of the pike in reserve. We skirmished with the enemy during the p. m. and used some artillery. They made some advances, but were repulsed. We encamped some two and a half miles from Charlestown. A fine day. I reconnoitered positions, &c.

Monday, August 22.—We advanced at an early hour and found the enemy gone, leaving only cavalry behind. We soon drove them off, and three miles beyond Charlestown. Anderson and Fitz Lee came to vicinity of Charlestown, and our cavalry was thrown out toward Shepherdstown and toward the Shenandoah. It rained very hard for several hours in the p. m. I dined at Mr. Strider's. Robinson copied map for General Kershaw in p. m. and night. Headquarters near Davenport's.

Tuesday, August 23.—The army remained in front of Charlestown. Made some few movements to thwart moves of the enemy, moving more to the left. I sketched the portion of country that we fought over on Sunday. There was a dense fog in the morning, but it cleared off and became quite warm. Headquarters at Davenport's.

Wednesday, August 24.—Still at same place. Enemy drove in our pickets toward Harper's Ferry and created some stir, which was soon quelled. Quiet the rest of the day. I rode over to Rock's Ford, on the Shenandoah, to view the country. Dined with Major Adams at Osborne's. Very warm day.

Thursday, August 25.—We started at an early hour for Shepherdstown, via Leetown, Wharton in front, followed by Gordon, Rodes, and Ramseur. Fitz Lee went by Smithfield to Leetown and Lomax collected his at the same place, and all went on to Martinsburg and Williamsport. We met the enemy's cavalry advance about one mile and a half from Leetown and had quite a heavy skirmish with them. Wharton's division was thrown out and engaged, most of it on the left of the road. Gordon was moved to the right and Rodes to the left. We soon drove the enemy off, with considerable loss on both sides. They made another stand near Shepherdstown on the Charlestown road, which Gordon repulsed with Terry's brigade on the left, then York and Evans on the right. Quite a lively skirmish ensued, in which Gordon was wounded in the head, but he gallantly dashed on, the blood streaming over him. We finally drove the Yankee cavalry in every direction, and encamped at night near Shepherdstown. Headquarters at Boteler's house. A stampede of ambulances when the firing began came near causing a stampede of Wharton's division. We lost a good many. The Yanks had started on a raid and had three days' rations with them. Very warm. The cavalry is opposite Williamsport to-night.

Friday, August 26.—We spent about half the day at Shepherdstown, then marched back to Leetown, Ramseur in advance, followed by Rodes, Gordon and Wharton. Our cavalry came to the vicinity of Shepherdstown, having found the enemy in force to oppose their passage at Williamsport. They had an artillery duel in the morning. Anderson had a fight near Charlestown in the p. m. Headquarters in the orchard at the old General Lee house. Colonel Boteler spends the night with me. Robinson and Oltmanns worked awhile at maps. Fine day. Windy and some rain at night.

Saturday, August 27.—We continued our march back to our old camp at Bunker Hill. Rodes went by Dandridge's and the Sulphur Springs, the rest by Smithfield. Ramseur followed by Gordon and Wharton. Anderson came from Charlestown by Smithfield, and went on to Stephenson's. Pleasant, but quite cool in the p. m. We also found the cavalry falling back, but General Early ordered McCausland back to Charlestown, and he went beyond toward Harper's Ferry. Fitz Lee and Lomax remained near Shepherdstown.

Sunday, August 28.—We spent the day in camp at Bunker Hill, and had preaching in some of the divisions. The enemy's cavalry advanced on ours, and we had some fighting near Smithfield, especially Harry Gilmor, but our cavalry retired, Lomax toward Bunker Hill, and Fitz Lee toward Brucetown. The enemy occupied Smithfield, burning three houses there. Some infantry marched toward the Opequon, but was not engaged. The day was quite cool. Robinson made a map for General Wickham.

Monday, August 29.—The enemy's cavalry advanced this morning and drove ours across the Opequon. Ramseur was marched out by the turnpike and advanced to drive them back. Gordon moved by a road to the right to turn the enemy's left flank. The artillery was also advanced. After some brisk cannonading across the creek, and skirmishing, we drove the enemy through Smithfield and two miles and a half beyond, then returned to our old camps again. Rodes held the road toward Martinsburg. We lost 10 killed and 75 wounded. Late in the p. m. our cavalry was again driven across the Opequon by the enemy. I went to General Anderson in the morning to apprise him of the situation, then came back and witnessed most of the advance. Pleasant day. Cool in morning and evening. Robinson and Oltmanns worked at maps. I sent Green's baggage to Winchester.

Tuesday, August 30.—Spent the day in camp, not feeling very well, but worked some at maps. Robinson and Oltmanns copying maps of the Valley. Fine day; cool night; all quiet.

Wednesday, August 31.—I sketched the road to the Opequon and back. The Yankee cavalry made some advances toward Winchester. Came to the Opequon. Anderson moved back to near Winchester. Our cavalry was moved to meet them, but they went back in the p. m. and the usual quiet prevailed. Fine day; cool at night. Rodes' division went to Martinsburg and back.

Thursday, September 1.—I rode up to Winchester in the a. m. and brought back some dispatches for General Early. Oltmanns copied map of the Valley. Robinson finished reducing Adams County, Pa. A very fine day.

Friday, September 2.—Dispatches came in the morning stating that the enemy was moving toward Berryville in force. So we moved across the country toward Stone Chapel by Fry's Ford, Gordon in advance, followed by Wharton and Ramseur. We got nearly to Stone Chapel when Vaughn's brigade of our cavalry got stampeded at Bunker Hill and ran away, leaving the wagons and Johnson's brigade to take care of themselves. A few hundred cavalry took fourteen wagons and some men and compelled us to turn back. Rodes had been left near Stephenson's. He turned back and drove the enemy nearly to Bunker Hill. We turned back through Brucetown, Ramseur in advance, and encamped between Brucetown and Stephenson's. Our wagons went from Stephenson's nearly to Summit Point ahead of the army, but all got back safely to Stephenson's about midnight. The enemy retired and Fitz Lee reported that the enemy had gone to City Point. Anderson and Fitz Lee moved toward Berryville.

Saturday, September 3.—The enemy's cavalry appeared at White Post this morning threatening to come to Newtown. Fitz Lee moved toward Newtown and Anderson toward Berryville. He met the enemy near there in the p. m. and drove them from a line of works with small loss. The cannonading kept up until 9 p. m. Rodes started in the morning for Bunker Hill, to be followed by the rest of the corps; but he alone went on and had a skirmish with the enemy there after the cavalry fight, in which Harry Gilmor was wounded. Ramseur remained in camp guarding some roads. At night Gordon moved to Winchester, his men in high spirits. It rained in the night; began just about dark. I went to Winchester to attend to some business. * * *

Sunday, September 4.—We were roused up very early to go to Berryville, Ramseur in front, followed by Wharton and Rodes (Gordon remained at Winchester). We found Anderson in line of battle in front of Berryville and joined on to his left. He was skirmishing some with the enemy. Their cavalry soon passed back from Millwood. We marched to find the enemy's right flank. Went as far as Sidney Allen's. Found them well fortified, so skirmished with them until night and then withdrew to a line parallel with the Winchester and Berryville roads, and there spent the night. Headquarters at Russell's. A fine day. It rained some at night.

Monday, September 5.—We remained in front of Berryville until 2 p. m., then withdrew and returned to Stephenson's Depot by the way of the Burnt Factory, Jordan Springs, &c. Rodes was in front, followed by Wharton and Ramseur. Anderson moved back to Winchester in the morning. Our cavalry had a skirmish with the enemy below Stephenson's and was falling back when Rodes' advance came there, just before dark, and threw out a brigade to the right of the pike and advanced rapidly and drove Averell's cavalry some three miles, inflicting some damage. It rained very hard late in the p. m. and also after dark. Headquarters at Mrs. Stephenson's.

Tuesday, September 6.—We spent the day in camp, and it rained and misted most of the time. I corrected maps and wrote some letters. Gave Colonel Smith a map of the northeast part of Virginia.

Wednesday, September 7.—I rode over a back road to Winchester on the left of the pike and back by one on the right and sketched them. A fine, clear day. Enemy's cavalry made a demonstration near Brucetown; also near the Yellow House on the Martinsburg road, and also on the Millwood and Front Royal roads not far from Winchester, and were repulsed at all points. The general went to Winchester.

Thursday, September 8.—I went to Newtown to-day to see Lieutenant Koerner. Met him and we went to Major Jones' and spent the night. It rained most of the day; began at 10 a. m. We changed camp and went back of Mrs. Stephenson's.

Friday, September 9.—It cleared off and we had a fine day. Koerner and myself came back to camp, then went over to Breckinridge's and fixed to have his engineer company go and aid in the survey of the country. The enemy came to the Opequon and burned some mills. Wharton went to meet them.

Saturday, September 10.—We moved down to Bunker Hill, Rodes in front, followed by Ramseur. Some of Lomax's brigade preceded us. We had a very hard rain in the morning, with thunder and lightning. We marched through. Our infantry marched just beyond Darkesville. Our cavalry drove the Yankees through Martinsburg after the infantry had started them from Darkesville. There were only two brigades of cavalry this side of the Opequon. All the enemy went south of that stream. We came back to our old camp at Bunker Hill. Ramseur and Rodes came there. Lomax remained at Darkesville. The day became pleasant.

Sunday, September 11.—It began to rain about 11 p. m. last night and rained very hard until 7 this morning, with thunder and vivid lightning. The infantry moved back to Stephenson's to-day. I went with Captain Wilbourn by the Back road to our old camp at Stephenson's. The cavalry remained at Darkesville. There were several hard showers during the day, accompanied by thunder and lightning. We dined at Mr. Abbott's.

Monday, September 12.—Spent the day in camp preparing to go to Staunton. All quiet. A fine day; showery. Cool mornings and evenings. Major Jones dined with us.

Tuesday, September 13.—I left for home. Went to the engineer camp, seven miles southwest of Strasburg, and spent the night. There was heavy cannonading near Brucetown when I left. A fine, cool day. The enemy advanced on the old Charlestown road. We broke up camp at Stephenson's at 2 p. m. The general spent the day at Carpenter's battery on the left of the road near the Opequon. We skirmished across the creek. Carpenter had 2 guns disabled, 3 men killed, and 5 wounded. Gordon on the left, Ramseur on the right. Enemy left. Headquarters at same place at night.

Wednesday, September 14.—I rode as far as Mr. Cowan's, near Tenth Legion. It rained very hard most of the day. Cold and chilly. Colonel Boteler left for Winchester. Anderson took his division away to Culpeper Court-House via Front Royal.

Thursday, September 15.—Went on home by way of Mossy Creek. Dined at Mr. Craun's and called at Major McCue's. A fine, cool day. The people are busy sowing grain. Grass is growing finely. Oltmanns made copy of map of Virginia. Lieutenant Boyd came to headquarters to report to Lieutenant Koerner.

Friday, September 16.—Went to Staunton by the way of E. Geeding's. Looked some for supplies. Got maps and sent some down to camp. A fine day. Cool in evening. Lieutenant Koerner sent Boyd and Chichester to the west of Winchester to survey.

Saturday, September 17.—Rode around among my neighbors to buy supplies for the year. Had some difficulty, but got along well. Fine, bracing day. They had dinner in camp at 1 p. m. and two days' rations were ordered, and moved at 3 p. m. to Bunker Hill, Gordon in advance, preceded by Jackson and followed by Rodes. Camped at Bunker Hill.

Sunday, September 18.—I spent the day at home, as it portended rain and rained some in the a. m. Henry Sieg and others called to see me. Fine day. At 3 a. m. Gordon marched for Martinsburg. Cavalry met enemy's pickets at Big Spring and drove them through town of Martinsburg. Two brigades of Gordon went to the left of Martinsburg, and one (York's) to the right. Destroyed Tuscarora bridge, took 21 men and horses, 5 wagon loads of coal, and 5 coils of telegraph wire. Left at 4 p. m. and came back to Bunker Hill; headquarters at Stephenson's. Rodes came to Stephenson's. Grant said to be at Harper's Ferry.

Monday, September 19.—I started back to camp by the way of Staunton. Passed through Harrisonburg, where there was a large crowd at court. Came to Big Spring and spent the night at Lincoln's. Fine, warm day. Enemy came on by the Berryville road and Ramseur engaged them three miles from Winchester, at right angles to the road, from 3 a. m. Lomax, Johnson, and Jackson on the right. Rodes came up at 10 a. m. and formed on Ramseur's left, and Gordon came about noon and formed on Rodes' left. Wharton came up and fought along the Martinsburg road to Gordon's rear. He drove the enemy's cavalry back several times. The infantry fighting became heavy about noon. General Rodes was killed between 1 and 2 p. m. Enemy advanced several times. Were repulsed with very great loss. The Yankee cavalry made a dash on our left at 1 p. m. and were driven back, but at 4 p. m. they turned our left and fell on our rear and made our men give way in great confusion, coming to the suburbs of Winchester. Then Gordon's line gave way and we were compelled to retreat about sundown. This was effected with little loss. The enemy's cavalry came on to Kernstown, but were checked by Ramseur. We fell back to Newtown, Gordon in front and Ramseur in the rear. Camped about midnight. We took 400 prisoners and inflicted a loss of 8,000 or 10,000 on the enemy. Our loss about 1,500. Fine day. Chilly night.

Tuesday, September 20.—Started early for camp. When I got to New Market heard that we had had a disastrous battle and General Rodes had been killed, and at Rude's Hill I met his body. A severe loss, his men along the road lamenting it deeply. Soon met trains of ambulances, and troops of wounded and stragglers filled the road all the way to Fisher's Hill, where I found the army in its old position. Our losses were heavy yesterday. A fine, warm day. The army came to Fisher's Hill at daylight. Ramseur was put in command of Rodes' division and Pegram of Early's division, which Ramseur has been commanding this summer. We lost 3 pieces of artillery at Winchester. Rodes is much lamented by the army. Wharton is now on the right of the turnpike, then Gordon across to the Middle road, then Pegram and Ramseur, with Lomax on the left, on the Back road, except McCausland's brigade, which is across the river opposite Strasburg. Wickham, of Fitz Lee's division of cavalry, fell back to Front Royal. Only one division of the enemy's cavalry followed us. The enemy came to Strasburg. Headquarters at Fisher's Hill.

Wednesday, September 21.—We spent the day in line of battle and fixing our works. The enemy's infantry in front and cavalry on the left made some demonstrations. Late in the p. m. they drove in our skirmish line on the Middle road, and got a hill there which they fortified. Wickham had to fall back to Milford. Breckinridge and staff left to-day. I watched the movements of the enemy. A fine, warm day. We had some artillery fighting.

Thursday, September 22.—The enemy advanced a line of battle in front at an early hour, and engaged our skirmishers, but did not push forward much. At 9.30 a. m. they engaged our skirmishers quite earnestly, and, at 1 p. m., advanced several lines of battle in front of Ramseur, but did not come far, and only drove in our skirmish line.

At 4.30 p. m. they drove in the skirmishers in front of Gordon and opened a lively artillery duel. At the same time a flanking force that had come on our left, near the North Mountain, advanced and drove away the cavalry and moved on the left flank of our infantry—rather beyond it. The brigade there (Battle's) was ordered to move to the left, and the whole line was ordered to extend that way, moving along the line of the breast-works. But the enemy attacking just then (5.30 p. m.) the second brigade from the left, instead of marching by the line of works, was marched across an angle by its commander. The enemy seeing this movement rushed over the works, and the brigade fled in confusion, thus letting the enemy into the rear of Early's division, as well as of Gordon's and the rest of Rodes'; our whole line gave way toward the right, offering little or no resistance, and the enemy came on and occupied our line. General Early and staff were near by, and I with others went after Wharton, to [the right], but it was too late. Our whole line had retreated before he got on the turnpike. The enemy opened a furious cannonade on him. Our men came back in a perfect rout, and so rapidly that the enemy was crossing the railroad before the head of the column got into the pike, even. It was then getting dark. I hastened back to try and stop the mass of fugitives on the top of the hill near Mount Prospect. General Gordon, General Pegram, and Colonel Pendleton with others came up. Colonel Pendleton and myself had gotten a few men to stop near a fence, there, and also two pieces of artillery, which were opened on the enemy. By the combined efforts of all a few men were induced to stop. The artillery was opened on the woods where the enemy was advancing and it checked them for the moment, but most of our men went on, officers and all, at breakneck speed. Wharton came along parallel to the pike and on the left, and kept some of his men together. He checked the enemy some, and a rear guard was formed from his division which made a stand at Tom's Brook, and gave the enemy a volley which made them desist from pursuit. Battle's brigade moved to the left and came out intact. Colonel Pendleton was mortally wounded soon after we made a stand on the hill. The rout of wagons, caissons, limbers, artillery, and flying men was fearful as the stream swept down the pike toward Woodstock, as many thought the enemy's cavalry was aiming to get there by the Middle road and cut us off. I became alarmed for the bridges, lest they should be broken and stop the retreat, so I hastened along as best I could and checked the speed of the train, which was fairly flying. I finally got to the head of the train at Hawkinstown and advised Major Harman to park beyond Mount Jackson. Then I went to the river, beyond Mount Jackson, and got Captain Hart, of the Engineer Company, to put out guards and stop the fugitives, a duty which he and Lieutenant Boyd nobly performed. I then laid down and slept two hours and fed my horse. I got there about 1 a. m. A fine warm day. We lost some eighteen pieces of artillery and about 600 or 800 men.

Friday, September 23.—The troops marched all night. The enemy only came to Tom's Brook. We got to Mount Jackson at an early hour. All the wagons got there safely, except a few that were overturned. They were this morning all sent across the river to Rude's Hill. We spent the day in line of battle, Wharton on the left and Ramseur on the right, in front of Mount Jackson, just beyond the hospitals, and Gordon and Pegram between Mount Jackson and the river. The enemy's cavalry came up and threw a few shells, but no advance was made. After dark we came across the river. We had our headquarters just back of Rude's Hill and all spent the night near there. Some rain; cool.

Saturday, September 24.—We formed a line of battle on Rude's Hill in the morning, Wharton on the left and Ramseur on the right, in front, and Pegram on the right and Gordon on the left, in the rear, and remained there until noon. The enemy came on and threw a few shells and began to move up the opposite side of the river on our left flank. We then fell back to near New Market, then gradually, in line of battle and by the flank, skirmishing and using artillery, to Tenth Legion Church, where we formed a line and kept the enemy at bay until after dark. The enemy drove our cavalry rapidly on the Back and Middle roads. Wickham brought his cavalry across the Massanutten to New Market and then went back and up the Luray Valley. The enemy followed him closely. I took orders to Major Harman about the wagons, and then aided in getting them off the pike and onto the Keezletown road. After dark the infantry retired to Flook's, eight miles from Tenth Legion, on the Keezletown road, getting there about midnight, Ramseur in front, followed by Gordon, Wharton, and Pegram. I remained and posted Jackson's cavalry brigade. Our cavalry was driven in great confusion nearly to Harrisonburg. We rested at the wagons at Flook's until the moon rose. A fine day. Cool in p. m. and some rain.

Sunday, September 25.—We started the wagons on toward Port Republic at 1 a. m. At daylight the army came on, Pegram in rear, by Peale's Cross-Roads, Meyerhoeffer's Store, &c. Wharton preceded Pegram. I came to Port Republic to guide the head of the train. It went on to Brown's Gap. Harman and Allan were with me. I rode on to Staunton to look after my map box. Got there by noon. Found much excitement. They were evacuating the place. I dined at Major Harman's. Got back to camp by 10 p. m., having ridden forty miles to-day. A fine warm day. The enemy did not follow. Their cavalry came to Harrisonburg. We got our whole command into Brown's Gap, except the cavalry. Left them north of the South River. Headquarters at Mount Vernon Furnace.

Monday, September 26.—Kershaw's division came up from Swift Run Gap. Joined us about noon. The Yankee artillery fired a few shots at it as it turned off at Lewis' to come to Brown's Gap, and a few cavalry went down the river to attack his trains. Kershaw got some men and artillery in position and gave them a warm reception. The Yankee cavalry drove ours across the river and came up to our lines. Pegram's division was marched out on the Cave road, and skirmished some with them near the angle of the road, and repulsed several charges of their cavalry, using artillery. The enemy also advanced on the turnpike, and Ramseur drove them back from there. Wharton moved out in rear of Ramseur, and Gordon in rear of Pegram. I showed Kershaw the way up, and carried some orders. Oltmanns copied a map of the Valley. A fine, warm day. Enemy reported up South River, and Wickham moved to near Patterson's, on South River. My horse was killed by a bullet in the Yankee charge.

Tuesday, September 27.—Wickham crossed the river at Patterson's, and Gordon followed him with artillery, &c. Ramseur followed Gordon. We attacked the Yankee cavalry encamped near Weyer's Cave and drove them away from between Middle and South Rivers, and also from the vicinity of Port Republic, giving them some help with our artillery as they went toward Harrisonburg. Pegram pushed forward and crossed at the cave, and then went toward Port Republic. Kershaw held the front of Brown's Gap. Wharton followed Pegram. We surprised the Yankees, but an untimely opening of artillery advised them of our approach. We brought our camp to opposite Weyer's Cave. The army (except Kershaw, who remained at the Furnace) encamped between the rivers. I suggested the routes of the army and guided movements. Pleasant day.

Wednesday, September 28.—We started at an early hour to go to Waynesborough, but a report of an attack on Pegram's pickets turned us back for a time. Then we had to wait for Kershaw's train to pass by. Then a misunderstanding of orders caused delay at Mount Meridian. The train went up South River and crossed at Patterson's Ford, Ramseur in front. Pegram, followed by Wharton, went by the Waynesborough road from Mount Meridian. Five miles from Waynesborough Wharton took the River road and Pegram kept on to Dogtown. I guided Kershaw by Mount Meridian to New Hope. A mile beyond New Hope we took the Waynesborough road. We encountered the enemy's cavalry pickets near the Hermitage, five miles from Waynesborough, and drove them rapidly forward. Pegram drove them to Dogtown by dark, and attacked them there just after Wickham drove them through Waynesborough from toward Rockfish Gap, whither he had gone by the south bank of South River. Pegram had driven the Yanks three miles and a half. He gallantly attacked them after dark and drove them toward Fishersville and encamped where they had had their camp on the Staunton road. Gordon followed Kershaw. All encamped in the vicinity of Waynesborough at a late hour. Headquarters at Gallagher's. A fine day. Some rain in p. m.

Thursday, September 29.—We moved our camp to the southwest of Waynesborough and spent the day cleaning up. I rode around the lines with the general in the a. m. The enemy went toward Mossy Creek at a rapid rate. They made the night light with burning barns, hay stacks, &c., during the day and night. I went to the tunnel in the morning to see if any damage had been done there; also examined the track of the railroad and got the pioneers and engineer troops at work on the bridge across South River, which the enemy had burned. Showery day. Rained hard at night. Quite warm.

Friday, September 30.—We spent the day at Waynesborough. It rained and misted in the morning, but got quite pleasant in the p. m. The Yankees went to Bridgewater yesterday. Our cavalry went up to Staunton and put pickets out to Middle River. A great deal of burning going on to-night toward Rockingham—mills, barns, &c.

Saturday, October 1.—We moved to near Mount Sidney. I guided Gordon, Kershaw, and Pegram by the road from Waynesborough to the Willow Pump and took them three miles beyond Mount Sidney on the Valley turnpike. Ramseur and Wharton went by the Mount Meridian road, then to New Hope, and thence to Mount Sidney. Three miles from Mount Sidney, near the river, they encamped. Our cavalry pickets were moved to Pleasant Grove Church and some cavalry went to Centerville. It misted and rained all day quite hard, and was cold and unpleasant. Hard marching. I stopped at Mr. Guy's a few moments. Headquarters at the angle of the Valley pike and Keezletown road.

Sunday, October 2.—We spent the day in camp. The enemy pushed up on the pike and drove in our pickets. The "Stonewall" Brigade marched out and drove the enemy across the river at Mount Crawford. Had some skirmishing and some artillery firing. We got 2,000 bushels of wheat from Grattan's mill. The cavalry had some fighting at Bridgewater. Sent Robinson to my house and let William go home. I went and heard Mr. Bowman preach. A fine, warm day.

Monday, October 3.—Spent the day in camp. Army quiet, save some skirmishing with Yankee cavalry along North River. It misted and rained during the day and rained hard at night. General Rosser came yesterday, and to-day reconnoitered the front. The enemy holds the line of North River. Sent map of Southeastern Virginia to General R. E. Lee.

Tuesday, October 4.—Spent the day in camp. Oltmanns went to Staunton. Robinson copied map of Valley. It cleared off and was a fine day. All quiet. Rosser's cavalry encamped near Staunton; came from Lynchburg and Richmond. The enemy burned barns, &c., at night.

Wednesday, October 5.—Spent the day in camp drawing—Robinson reducing Pennsylvania maps, Oltmanns copying Valley map. Gordon moved camp to vicinity of Naked Creek. Rosser moved to Landes' Mill, on road from Stone Church to Mossy Creek. Cars ran to Smith's to-day, two miles and a half from Staunton. We have rebuilt the bridges over South River and Christian's Creek. About two miles of track are to be relaid. Enemy still near Harrisonburg. The general rode along the lines to-day. Fine day. Lieutenant Boyd dined with us.

Thursday, October 6.—The enemy left Harrisonburg last night. We followed early this morning [with] our cavalry. The infantry started at 11 a. m. Gordon, in front, went a mile beyond Harrisonburg. Kershaw, Pegram, Wharton, the artillery, and Ramseur followed. All encamped near Harrisonburg, all around it. Our headquarters about two miles southwest. Lomax went to Peale's Cross-Roads, Rosser to near Timberville. The enemy did a vast amount of damage in Rockingham. A good many Dunkers left the county and went with the Yankees. They burned some of the houses they deserted. Rosser fell on Averell's (Custer's) cavalry at Brock's Gap and routed it. A very fine day. I directed the repair of the telegraph line and put Chichester in charge of the party. Got it to Mount Crawford to-day. Cool in evening. It rained some.

Friday, October 7.—We moved on as far as New Market. Got there at an early hour. The troops came on in good time, Pegram in advance. He encamped near the river on the Timberville road and Wharton near him. Kershaw and the artillery on the Luray road, Gordon and Ramseur on the Forestville road. Headquarters near town. Dined at Doctor Strayer's. Our cavalry went to Stony Creek, driving the enemy's with loss. Quite cool.

Saturday, October 8.—We remained in camp. It hailed and snowed some and was quite windy and cold. Rosser on the Back road drove the enemy's cavalry to near Round Hill, encamping at Tom's Brook, and Lomax did the same on the pike. Worked some, but it was too cold to do much.

Sunday, October 9.—We spent the day in camp until about 4 p. m., when a stampede of the cavalry came rushing back as far as New Market, and Ramseur and Kershaw were marched to Rude's Hill to meet any further advance of the enemy, but they only came to Mount Jackson. The Yanks moved on Rosser on the Back road, at Fisher's Hill, and drove him back, capturing 5 pieces of artillery and some wagons; then turned on Lomax, on the pike, and drove him to Mount Jackson, and took 3 pieces of artillery. Rosser rallied and drove the enemy back and established his pickets at Stony Creek. Lomax fought stubbornly at Woodstock. We came back to camp late in the evening. It was very chilly all day. Mr. Landstreet preached in the a. m.

Monday, October 10.—We spent the day in camp. I started parties to fix the telegraph from Harrisonburg to New Market. Had Robinson copy Yankee map of battle of Winchester and reducing Pennsylvania maps. Oltmanns copying map of Georgia. Very heavy frost. Pretty day. Cavalry on Stony Creek. Church at night.

Tuesday, October 11.—Troops remained in camp. A lovely day. I looked after telegraph. Had two parties at work—Gordon's and Ramseur's pioneers. Took Kershaw's pioneers late in the day and went and built a bridge over river at Mount Jackson for infantry. Lomax's division went to Page Valley late in the p. m. * * *

Wednesday, October 12.—We marched at sunrise, Ramseur in front, followed by Gordon, Kershaw, and Pegram. Ramseur encamped southwest of Narrow Passage, and Gordon and Kershaw between there and Woodstock, and Wharton ———. Headquarters two miles southwest of Woodstock. The cavalry on the Back road came from Timberville to Columbia Furnace. Lomax's old brigade preceded us and went beyond Woodstock to Pugh's Run. Cool. Some rain in p. m. and at night.

Thursday, October 13.—Moved on at 6 a. m., Gordon in advance. Got to Hupp's Hill by 10 a. m. and moved Gordon's division into the woods on the left of the pike, concealed from the enemy, and got the other divisions in line under the brow of the hill. Only showed a few cavalry and some artillery. The enemy was encamped north of Cedar Creek. We opened the artillery on one of their camps and made them run off and leave it. We opened first on a brigade on picket near Hite's house and scattered them. The flight from the camp was a perfect stampede. Then a column of Yankees came down from Hite's house to the bridge across the bottom. We played on them and scattered them some. They crossed the bridge and formed at right angles to the pike and advanced. Conner's brigade, of Kershaw's division, was advanced on the right of the pike to meet them. They moved forward in fine style and driving the enemy back, the artillery playing on the enemy at the same time. We also suffered some from the Yankee artillery. Gordon's and Wharton's skirmishers also advanced on the left, and we drove the enemy in confusion across the creek, advancing to Stickley's house, where we were exposed to the fire of their batteries. Wharton was formed on Gordon's left. Ramseur came up in rear of Kershaw. Rosser advanced to Cedar Creek on the Back road. Lomax's old brigade, Payne commanding, was our advance on the pike. Lomax's division came down Luray Valley. The day was windy and quite cool. We moved back to Fisher's Hill late in the p. m. Headquarters at Funkhouser's. General Conner was badly wounded. We took 65 prisoners, and killed and wounded a good many. Our loss, 22 killed and 160 wounded.

Friday, October 14.—We spent the day on Fisher's Hill. Enemy's cavalry came this side of Strasburg, and we sent out Gordon's and Wharton's skirmishers and drove them back to Hupp's Hill. No loss. Wharton was put on the right at Fisher's Hill, then Kershaw, Gordon, Pegram, and Ramseur to the left, and Rosser on the Back road. Lomax came to near Front Royal yesterday and drove the enemy's pickets to Guard Hill. The force of the enemy that had been destroying at Front Royal went toward Winchester. A pleasant day.

Saturday, October 15.—We spent the day at Fisher's Hill. Some of our skirmishers went to Hupp's Hill. Enemy on north bank of Cedar Creek fortifying. We rode along the lines some. Windy and cool.

Sunday, October 16.—All quiet. Yanks fortifying. We went on Round Hill in the morning and looked at them. Then Colonel Allan, General Pegram, and myself rode down the Back road to Lebanon Church, then back by the Middle road. A few Yanks had been there and left. Pleasant. Made and sent Rosser a map of country.

Monday, October 17.—The troops were marched out a mile or so in front of Tumbling Run in the a. m., as Rosser's brigade of cavalry, with Grimes' brigade of infantry behind it, went yesterday to surprise a Yankee camp near Petticoat Gap, and was to come back this a. m. The Yankee camp had moved, but they captured a picket of 50 men. He went by Snarr's Store and back of North Mountain. Ramseur held the left of the line on the Back road, Pegram advanced on the Middle road, Kershaw to the right of the Middle road, Gordon on the ridge west of the pike, and Wharton held the right. General Pegram reconnoitered some in his front toward Cedar Creek in the p. m., and General Gordon, General Evans, and myself, by direction of General Early, went to the end of Three Top Mountain and examined the position of the enemy around Belle Grove with reference to an attack. I made a map of the position, and General Gordon and myself fixed upon a plan of attack to suggest to General Early, which we discussed fully as we came back. General Gordon was to propose it to General Early. We had an arduous journey, and it was after dark when we got back. I supped with General Gordon. Reported the state of things to General Early when I got back. A fine day.

Tuesday, October 18.—General Pegram came up to report to General Early, urging a movement by the line he had examined. I told him General Gordon had a plan to propose, and stated the substance of it to General Early and showed him the map, as I did not wish his judgment to be forestalled by General Pegram. Soon all the division commanders, Generals Gordon, Pegram, Ramseur, Wharton, Rosser, and Kershaw, and Colonel Carter, of the artillery, and Payne, of the cavalry, came, and there was a conference at headquarters at Round Hill. General Early decided to go by the route recommended by General Gordon and myself, and decided on a plan of attack to which all agreed. General Gordon, in command of the Second Corps (Gordon's, Ramseur's, and Pegram's divisions), was to cross the river at Fisher's Hill and go round the end of the mountain and cross again at Bowman's Ford, turn the enemy's left and press on to the pike to his rear. Kershaw was to go through Strasburg, go to Bowman's Mill near the mouth of Cedar Creek, and cross and advance over the front of the enemy's line of breast-works. Wharton, followed by the artillery, was to go along the turnpike to Hupp's Hill and cross after the others and press up the pike. Rosser was to cross Cedar Creek at Mohamy's Mill and engage the Yankee cavalry. Payne was to precede Gordon and try to capture Sheridan at Belle Grove. This plan having been decided on, Generals Gordon, Ramseur, and myself went to examine the route around the mountain, going almost to Water Lick. General Pegram went to the top of the mountain. We selected a route; got back late in the p. m., when I took the pioneers of Rodes' division and went over the route and made bridges and cut out trees, &c. Got back after dark, expecting to meet the column, but found the generals waiting for General Pegram, who had gone to General Early to report some new works that he thought he had discovered from the mountain on the enemy's left, and he rather opposed the movement, but General Early held firm; said he saw no occasion to change his plans, and General Gordon started at 8 p. m. We slept until midnight, then started along the turnpike, Kershaw and Wharton having gone before. The general found some stragglers who had been after whisky, and stopped and poured it out as we passed. A fine day. Cool at night.

Wednesday, October 19.—We went through Strasburg and took Kershaw to his position on the top of the hill above Bowman's Mill. He was there by 5 a. m. Wharton was also in position on Hupp's Hill. The hour fixed for Rosser, then Gordon, and then Kershaw to attack. Page and myself examined the route ahead, and I urged the moving of Kershaw nearer. A light mist hung over the creek and river. Soon we heard Rosser driving in the pickets on the left, then Gordon on the right, then Kershaw advanced across Cedar Creek in gallant style, and in almost a moment he was going up the hill and over the breast-works. A few flashes of musketry, a few shots of artillery, and he had the works, guns and all, surprising the enemy, though they had sounded the reveille in many parts of their camps before we attacked. Then, in conjunction with Gordon, Kershaw swept over the Eighth and Nineteenth Corps, and drove them in wild confusion across Meadow Run, upon the Sixth Corps and through Middletown, Colonel Payne at the same time charging their train, &c., along the pike and helping the confusion and capturing wagons, &c. Wharton and the artillery came up and helped across Cedar Creek. Our troops then formed and drove them from their camps northwest of Meadow Run to the ridge in front of Middletown, where the Sixth Corps made a stand and drove Wharton and Pegram back. Then we had the artillery brought up to near Middletown and massed it on them and drove them from the ridge. The fog concealed the enemy some time. The vigorous use of the artillery and advance of the infantry drove the enemy beyond Middletown, and by 10 a. m. we had formed a new line, extending through Middletown at right angles to the pike and along the Cedarville road on the right and the Furnace road on the left. Gordon was on the left, near Stickley's; then Kershaw came across the ridge; then Ramseur down the slope to Meadow Run; Pegram from that up to the turnpike; Wharton to right with Wofford's brigade, of Kershaw's division, on his right at the angle of the Cedarville and Buckton roads; then Payne's cavalry extending to the woods. Rosser had driven the enemy by the Grove road and was to the left and in advance. We lay there some time, using some artillery on the right and left and advancing our skirmishers a little, but making no decided move. We skirmished with the cavalry on the right and they charged our lines several times, but were repulsed. Thus we lay until 4 p. m., making a few efforts to get off the immense captures we had made of artillery and everything else. We had some twenty-three guns. The enemy having had time to rally, had collected in rear of the large body of woods in our front and formed a line of battle and advanced at 4.30 p. m., obliquely to the left, and struck our left, or rather between the two brigades on the left, where the line was weak, and it gave way with little resistance, and was followed by all the rest of the line toward the left, and soon everything was in full retreat toward Cedar Creek. The artillery nobly fell back fighting and kept the enemy in check, and everything was getting off well, when Rosser, having fallen back, the Yankee cavalry crossed by Hite's old mill and came up to Stickley's and fell on our train and artillery just after dark, on Hupp's Hill, and dashed along, killing horses and turning over ambulances, caissons, &c., stampeding the drivers, thus getting 43 pieces of artillery, many wagons, &c., as there was nothing to defend them and we had no organized force to go after them. Only a few Yankee cavalry did it all. They came as far as Spangler's Mill, and there tore up a bridge which had been broken and impeded our train, but had been repaired and we were passing over it. The general and staff got to Fisher's Hill and tried to rally the men. We succeeded in getting many of them into camp, but could get none to go back and recapture the wagons, &c., at Strasburg. Colonel Brown got eight or ten to go on guard at the stone bridge. We got 1,300 prisoners off safely. The general was very much prostrated when he learned the extent of our disaster and started the wagons for the rear, and sent for Rosser to come and cover the retreat. He sent me to Edenburg to stop the stragglers. Thus was one of the most brilliant victories of the war turned into one of the most disgraceful defeats, and all owing to the delay in pressing the enemy after we got to Middletown; as General Early said, "The Yankees got whipped and we got scared." I got to Edenburg and put the engineer troops on guard at the bridge to stop fugitives. A very fine day. Cool at night. I spent the day with the general; carried orders, &c. We had many narrow escapes. We were frequently fired at and much exposed. Colonel Godwin was wounded in the neck. General Ramseur was killed. Payne had 326 men and took 399 prisoners (Payne).

Thursday, October 20.—Our wagons came to New Market, and, starting at daylight, the infantry came there also, most of the men having sorted themselves and order been somewhat restored. All took their former camps. Captain Shorter, engineer officer, came up to-day. It was quite windy and cool. The Yankee cavalry followed ours slowly to Edenburg.

Friday, October 21.—Spent the day in camp. Made a sketch of the battle for General Early to send to General Lee. Oltmanns copying map of Georgia. Fine day, but cool. Enemy at Strasburg and Cedar Creek.

Saturday, October 22.—I started on the stage for Richmond at 7 a. m. to bear dispatches to General Lee. Got to Staunton after dark. Spent the night at M. G. Harman's. Had quite a long chat with Andrew Hunter. Quite cool.

Sunday, October 23.—Went to Richmond on the cars. Many of the reserves were going down and I met some coming to the Valley District. A fine day, but cool. I went to General Lawton's to get a horse to go to General Lee's at Chaffin's. Took tea with General Lawton and had a long chat. Got a horse and went to General Lee's, six miles. Got there at 11 p. m. Saw General Lee and we had a long talk about matters in the Valley, commanding generals, &c. I spent the night there. General Early told me not to tell General Lee that we ought to have advanced in the morning at Middletown, for, said he, we ought to have done so.

Monday, October 24.—I went down to see General Ewell at the Chaffin house; found him in a fine humor. We rode out along the line of works and to Fort Gilmer. Saw Fort Harrison and the Yankee lines. Came back and conversed awhile with General Lee, then went up to Richmond. Transacted some business at the Engineer Bureau. Went to the Spotswood and found my old friend Colonel Heck there. Called on Col. Nat. Tyler in the evening and went home with him and spent a pleasant hour or so. A fine day.

Tuesday, October 25.—Went to Staunton on the cars and then got a horse and rode home. Got there at midnight and spent a few delightful hours with my family. * * * Fine bracing day. All quiet at the army.

Wednesday, October 26.—Started for Staunton at 5 a. m., then went on to New Market on the stage. Found all quiet, save that the cavalry of Sheridan had been fighting Lomax at Milford, and he had repulsed all their attacks. Cool day. Some rain at night. Rosser's brigade went to Luray in the night.

Thursday, October 27.—Spent day in camp writing, correcting maps, &c. Pleasant. All quiet. The enemy's cavalry reported to have left our front. It began to rain about dark and rained most of the night.

Friday, October 28.—Spent day in camp making sketch of the battle of Rutherford's farm. All quiet. Cool. Papers abusing General Early roundly.

Saturday, October 29.—Making map of battle of Castleman's Ferry. Robinson copying Valley map and Oltmanns map of Georgia. Fine October day. Generals in consultation. A contention between Generals Gordon and Early about the battle of Cedar Creek, &c.

Sunday, October 30.—Went to church. Warm. Quiet.

Monday, October 31.—I rode to the division headquarters to get information for battle maps. Robinson copying Valley map and Oltmanns battle of Chattanooga. Sent to Engineer Bureau a map of Georgia. Cool day. Let William go home.

Tuesday, November 1.—Made map of battle of Berryville and position of army next day. We worked in a shop. All quiet. Quite cool. Robinson finished a copy of Valley map (sheet No. 1), and began map of Southeastern Virginia for Engineer Bureau. Oltmanns copying battle of Chattanooga. General Early came to camp in the evening and chatted until quite late with Doctor McGuire and myself; an interesting dish of discourse. Forrer called.

Wednesday, November 2.—Employed as yesterday. It rained nearly all day. Quite cool and unpleasant. Fixed stove in my tent.

Thursday, November 3.—Engaged as yesterday, except I began a map of the battle of Belle Grove. It rained and misted all day.

Friday, November 4.—Engaged as yesterday, at Belle Grove, Chattanooga, and Southeastern Virginia. Some rain. Quite cool.

Saturday, November 5.—Ditto as to work. Windy and cool. Froze quite hard. Army filling up rapidly. Much in want of small-arms.

Sunday, November 6.— * * * Fine day. Bracing air.

Monday, November 7.—Engaged as before. It misted and rained most of the day. Captain Shorter came over in the evening.

Tuesday, November 8.—At same work. Oltmanns finished map of Chattanooga and began map of Virginia; fifteen miles to one inch. Fine day; showery.

Wednesday, November 9.—In the p. m. got orders from General Early to have the foot bridge over river at Mount Jackson repaired; so went and had Captain Hart go and see to it late in the p. m. Marching orders were issued at quite a late hour. It rained some; turned quite warm.

Thursday, November 10.—We marched down the Valley at sunrise, Kershaw in front, followed by Pegram, Grimes (who commands Rodes' division since Ramseur's death), Gordon, and Wharton. The artillery followed Kershaw. Two divisions encamped beyond Woodstock; the others this side. Headquarters on the Burner's Springs road, a mile from Woodstock. Marched twenty-two miles. The troops marched well. Rosser went to Fairview; Lomax to Front Royal. Fine day; mild in a. m., but chilly wind late in p. m.

Friday, November 11.—Marched at 6 a. m., Pegram in front, Kershaw in rear; rest as before; artillery third in order. Found enemy's pickets at Middletown; drove them to Newtown. Payne's brigade in our advance. We formed a line near Chrisman's Spring; found the enemy intrenched at Newtown. Headquarters near Vanclose. Rosser on the Middle road northwest of Newtown, on our left; Lomax on our right, from Cedarville to near Newtown. Pegram is on the right, near the road to the factory; then Gordon to the pike; then Grimes to top of Jones' Hill; then Wharton and Kershaw to the left. I sketched the left of the Yankee position at battle of Cedar Creek. Rosser and Lomax were at headquarters at night. Enemy's infantry camps near Kernstown and Bartonsville. Had details of ten from each division made for an army pioneer party, and put Lieutenant Flood in charge of it. A bracing day; clear and cool.

Saturday, November 12.—We were roused up at an early hour; took breakfast, and prepared for a fight. The army was, part of it, in line of battle last night, and held the same position to-day. We formed in rear of the stream that runs from Chrisman's Spring on the right of the pike, then across Jones' Hill on the left. Kershaw, Wharton, and Grimes on the left, and Gordon and Pegram on the right of the road. We had some skirmishing, but no general engagement. On the Back road Custer drove back a portion of Rosser's brigade as far as Cedar Creek. He brought up his other brigade and Payne went to him, and they routed the Yankees in turn and scattered them far and wide, saber in hand. We remained in line until about dark, then fell back to Fisher's Hill, getting to camp at a very late hour. The day was raw and cold. Late in the p. m. the Yankee cavalry fell on McCausland's brigade at Cedarville. He repulsed two attacks, and then thinking they were gone he halted to feed, but they came on and caught him unprepared and drove him across the river and through Front Royal, capturing two pieces of artillery. I finished sketching the battle-field of Cedar Creek; found it quite cold and raw. Oltmanns went with me. Camp at Round Hill.

Sunday, November 13.—We moved back at daylight up the Valley, Grimes, Gordon, Wharton, Kershaw, and Pegram. The army encamped on Pence's Hill, on the south bank of Stony Creek, the artillery going to near Hawkinstown. The cavalry came to the vicinity of Edenburg. Headquarters went on to New Market. Intensely cold, windy and snow flying. The mountains and hills white.

Monday, November 14.—We spent the day resting, fixing up camp, &c. Col. William Proctor Smith came up day before yesterday as chief engineer of the Army of Valley District. It was milder to-day, but still raw and cold. The army came on up, Gordon, Wharton, Kershaw, Grimes, and Pegram, the artillery in front. Captain Hart with his company and Lieutenant Flood and the pioneers were ordered to encamp near headquarters and report to the chief engineer.

Tuesday, November 15.—Moved into a house and began new map of battle of Cedar Creek; Robinson, at Southeast Virginia, and Oltmanns, at Eastern Virginia, for Engineer Bureau. Kershaw started up the Valley for Richmond. It was quite cold and rained some. Wrote memoranda of Army of Valley District for Colonel Boteler or Hon. Mr. Goode.

Wednesday, November 16.— * * * It was a fine day. In the p. m. Colonels Smith and Allan and myself rode to the top of the mountain on the Luray road. * * * Sent off document to Colonel Boteler, showing that to this date we had marched, since the opening of the campaign, 1,670 miles, and had seventy-five battles and skirmishes.

Thursday, November 17.—Worked at battle of Cedar Creek; Robinson finished Southeast Virginia and worked on Franklin County, Pa. Oltmanns at small Virginia. Misty and rainy. Pegram moved up to Big Spring. Hinrichs called to see us.

Friday, November 18.—Spent day as yesterday. It rained and misted all day.

Saturday, November 19.—Drawing map of battle of Cedar Creek. Oltmanns copying map of Eastern Virginia. Robinson reducing Franklin County, Pa. It snowed in the morning and rained and misted until about noon.

Sunday, November 20.— * * * The day was chilly and misty. Captain Page came back from Richmond.

Monday, November 21.—All engaged as before. It rained and misted all day. Got orders at dark to go to-morrow with Major Harman to select camps for winter quarters for the troops in Augusta County. * * *

Tuesday, November 22.—We were up by 5 a. m. I took breakfast with Major Harman, and we were far on our way by sunrise. Colonel Allan accompanied us. We stopped a short time at Mrs. Grattan's, but pressed on and reached Major Harman's, near Staunton, by 4 p. m., forty-three miles. The air was very chilly and the ground in places white with snow. The enemy's cavalry, two divisions, encamped at Woodstock last night, and to-day it came on up as far as Rude's Hill. We marched three divisions of infantry down to meet them, Gordon's, Wharton's, and Grimes', from their camps three and four miles southwest of New Market. Grimes, Gordon, and Wharton in order. We took a line on the top of the hill ——— on the left of the road ——— on the right, and ——— in reserve in the rear of the others. A regiment of cavalry and ——— pieces of artillery. The enemy came boldly up to near the hill, when we opened on them and sent them back in great disorder, inflicting considerable loss. Our infantry skirmishers pursued to Hawkinstown and the cavalry to below Edenburg. A brigade of our cavalry pursued. All came back to the old camps at night. Marched twenty-five miles.

Wednesday, November 23.—Major Harman, Colonel Allan, and myself went toward Waynesborough to look for winter quarters for the troops. Colonel Allan soon found a camp for his ordnance train and left us, and we spent the day riding through woods, &c. We selected a set of camps near Fishersville and returned to Major Harman's by 5 p. m. The day was chilly. Rode thirty miles.

Thursday, November 24.—We rode toward Christian's Creek and selected some camps there if it should be desired to encamp some troops there. * * * The engineer troops passed through Staunton on their way to Lexington. The day was quite pleasant. Rode twenty miles.

Friday, November 25.—Started back to camp at 7 a. m. Stopped a few moments at Mr. Forrer's. Got to Harrisonburg by 12.30 p. m., where met Major Harman. We got to camp by 6 p. m., and reported to the general. We were very tired. The day was warm and pleasant. Cool late in the p. m. Cosby's brigade of cavalry passed me at Bridgewater on its way to Tennessee. Rode forty-three miles.

Saturday, November 26.—Spent day in my room working on map of battle of Cedar Creek. Robinson is reducing Cumberland County, Pa. Oltmanns copying Western Virginia. Day cool, and it rained in p. m. and at night. Rosser started.

Sunday, November 27.— * * * The day was chilly, though very pleasant in the a. m. General Early was considerably excited by habeas corpus writs for soldiers from Judge Thompson.

Monday, November 28.—Spent day in camp. Finished battle of Cedar Creek and worked at battle of Kearneysville. Oltmanns finished Western Virginia; Robinson made map of Harper's Ferry. Mild day; fog in morning.

Tuesday, November 29.—I sketched the road to Mount Jackson, and got position at Rude's Hill. A fine, warm day; summer-like. Heard that Rosser had captured a gun at Moorefield and gone on toward Cumberland.

Wednesday, November 30.—Spent the day in camp making map of the engagement at Rude's Hill. Oltmanns copying battle of Chattanooga. Robinson made maps for Colonel Smith's monthly report, showing position of army, pickets, &c. A fine, pleasant day. We heard of General Rosser's capture of New Creek; 800 prisoners, 8 pieces of artillery, &c. \* \* \* I drew my pay for November, \$833.33 $\frac{1}{3}$ , under new appointment.

Thursday, December 1.—Finished my map of the engagement at Rude's Hill. Visited General Gordon's camp. Got information of positions, &c., from General Wharton, Major Peyton, &c. Oltmanns copying Chattanooga. Robinson is sick. Colonel Smith went to Luray Valley. Fine, warm day.

Friday, December 2.—Worked at map of battle of Charlestown. Oltmanns finished map of battle of Chattanooga. Robinson was sick. Rosser got back to-day with flags, &c. Major Peyton called to see me to-day. Colonel Smith got back. It began to rain about noon. Somewhat cool.

Saturday, December 3.—Finished map of battle of Charlestown. Oltmanns began yesterday a reduction of the map of Northeastern Virginia and part of Maryland and Pennsylvania. Robinson still sick. A pleasant day. The Yankee prisoners were brought in.

Sunday, December 4.—Spent day in camp. * * * A fine, warm day.

Monday, December 5.—Finished map of action at Kearneysville and worked at battle of Harper's Ferry. Robinson finished off several battle maps and outlined some. Oltmanns at reduction. A hard white frost and day chilly. Mr. Lacy spent some time with us.

Tuesday, December 6.—Finished map of Harper's Ferry and worked some on one of Fort Duncan. Robinson made a copy of Rude's Hill; Oltmanns at reduction of Northeastern Virginia. Gordon's division changed camp and moved up toward Staunton; also Pegram. A pleasant day; little rain in a. m.

Wednesday, December 7.—I began map of fight at Smithfield. Robinson copied Cedar Creek. Oltmanns at reduction of Northeastern Virginia. Wickham's brigade went from Mount Jackson to Timberville.

Thursday, December 8.—Finished Smithfield and began map of New Creek. Robinson finished copy of Cedar Creek. Oltmanns at reduction. Finished copying my journal at night. It is reported that Gordon's and Pegram's divisions went to Richmond from Staunton last night. A big battle is expected at Richmond. The Sixth Corps of Sheridan's army has gone there, and it is reported to-day that more of his men have gone.

Friday, December 9.—Finished map of vicinity of New Creek and corrected map of Northeastern Virginia. Robinson made map of vicinity of Lynchburg. Oltmanns at reduction of Northeastern Virginia. The day was very cold, chilly; it began to snow after dark. General Lee sent word that Grant had sent off two corps of his army. Heavy cannonading said to be heard toward Richmond. Gordon and Pegram got to Waynesborough Wednesday night and went on to Richmond. There were a good many deserters in Pegram's division—the conscripts that lately came in. Made list of maps I had furnished at night.

Saturday, December 10.—It snowed all last night and for some time to-day; the snow is about ten inches deep. I began another map of the battle of Cedar Creek, after correcting a map for Robinson to copy of Rosser's route. Oltmanns at reduction. Quite cold. * * *

Sunday, December 11.—* * * The day was cold and chilly; it rained a little and snowed a little. * * *

Monday, December 12.—Worked at Cedar Creek. Robinson copying Monocacy; Oltmanns at reduction. A very cold day; wind sharp and biting. It froze very hard last night. * * *

Tuesday, December 13.—Robinson finished Monocacy. Oltmanns at reduction, I at Cedar Creek. Cool day; looks like storm. * * *

Wednesday, December 14.—Worked at Cedar Creek. Robinson at map of vicinity of Washington; Oltmanns at reduction. Some rain that froze early in the a. m.; mild day. Grimes' division left for Richmond.

Thursday, December 15.—Spent the day finishing some maps for Colonel Smith. Robinson was very sick and we sent him to the hospital. Oltmanns worked at reduction awhile and then packed up. Mild day; thawed some.

Friday, December 16.—We started from New Market about 11 a. m. Wharton's division started by daylight and went to near Mount Crawford. Rosser's division went on toward Swoope's and Lomax's to Swift Run Gap. We rode on to Harrisonburg and spent the night there. It thawed all day. Warm south wind. * * *

Saturday, December 17.—I rode on quite early to show General Wharton his camp. Turned off at the Willow Pump and went by the Barren Ridge road to the Waynesborough road; showed his inspector the camp and then went to John Hamilton's for the night. It continued to thaw and most of the snow left. General Early came to Staunton. Wharton went out two miles toward Waynesborough. It rained some in the p. m. and at night.

Sunday, December 18.—I rode back to Staunton to see General Early, then came back to Fishersville, where the wagons came, and went to look for a camp. It rained most of the day and the mud got quite deep. We spent the night in the woods near Fishersville. The general did not come from Staunton.

Monday, December 19.—I obtained quarters near Fishersville and moved to them. Wharton's division came two miles this side of Staunton night before last and encamped, and to-day came on to camps near Fishersville. The general came down late in the p. m. and went to Mrs. McCue's. We went to Staunton on the cars again, owing to report of enemy coming up the Valley—at Woodstock to-night. Two divisions of their cavalry crossed the Blue Ridge at Chester Gap. Mild day.

Tuesday, December 20.—We started back down the Valley this morning to meet the advance of the enemy. Rosser, who moved to Swoope's Sunday, went in advance. I guided Wharton across by Major Harman's into the pike and we went on to Naked Creek, where we spent the night. Had our quarters in the church. Rosser went to Harrisonburg and the enemy came to Lacey's Springs, a division of cavalry. Most of the snow gone, but the day was quite chilly and before midnight a severe storm began of sleet, hail, and snow.

Wednesday, December 21.—We marched on at daylight in the midst of a blinding storm, cold and biting, but most of the men in a good humor, though in no plight for a battle. Rosser moved at dawn and attacked the enemy just as they were saddling up. Routed their first and second brigades, capturing 35 prisoners and getting their wagons and ambulances, but they rallied on their third brigade and he had to fall back and they got their wagons back, but at once retreated down the Valley. The infantry was halted at the Big Spring on the pike three miles southwest of Harrisonburg, and went into camp. Rosser did not get all his men up in time for his attack. We got to Harrisonburg about noon. The storm ceased at noon. It was quite warm for a short time. It was very slippery on the pike. The general stays in Harrisonburg. I had J. Arthur Wilson detailed for topographical duty.

Thursday, December 22.—The day was windy and quite cold. * * * Wharton marched back to near Staunton. Payne's and Wickham's brigades came to near Staunton.

Friday, December 23.—In p. m. went to Staunton and down to quarters at Fishersville; air keen and cold, but clear. Roads very icy. Wharton's division (two brigades) took the cars and went across mountain (Blue Ridge); one brigade went to old camp.

Saturday, December 24.—Went to Fishersville, then back and up to Staunton, and Mr. Oltmanns and Colonels Smith and Allan went home with me to a Christmas dinner, and we had a very pleasant evening. Robinson came out yesterday. A fine day. It thawed some. The Yankees came near to Gordonsville and were repulsed there.

Sunday, December 25.—Colonels Smith and Allan went back to Staunton to-day. * * * A fine day, quite pleasant and thawed some.

Monday, December 26.—I rode to Staunton. Was there awhile and then came back and examined the location for a bridge over Middle River. Lieutenant Flood and party came out there to-day. It was warm. The sun shone brightly and most of the snow was melted. General Early came back to Staunton yesterday and dined at Maj. John Harman's to-day. (Came from Gordonsville.)

Tuesday, December 27.—I rode to Staunton in the a. m., and after looking after business there awhile, I went on to Fishersville; dined at our quarters, then went to see General Early and got a furlough until January 3, then went back to Major Harman's. It was very muddy. Quite warm; rain at night. Troops back in camp near Fishersville.

Wednesday, December 28.—Spent part of the day in Staunton looking for servants, &c., then rode home, stopping to see Lieutenant Flood, who is building a bridge at Middle River. There was a heavy fog and mist in the morning; then rain in the p. m., and at night quite hard. Very muddy.

Thursday, December 29.—Spent the day at home. Worked at map of Kernstown. It thawed some. Snowed last night. Froze at night. Robinson engaged at Lynchburg. * * *

Friday, December 30.—Spent day at home. Worked at vicinity of Winchester. Robinson at Lynchburg map. It was quite chilly.

Saturday, December 31.—Spent some time at battle map of Kernstown, and Robinson at Lynchburg. Snow in the morning; quite cold.*

* For such of the maps mentioned in this Journal as have been obtained, see Plates 81 to 85, inclusive, of the Atlas.

No. 175.

Report of Surg. A. Russell Meem, C. S. Army, of operations November 22.

GENERAL HOSPITAL,
Mount Jackson, November 23, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that the enemy's cavalry, in strong force, advanced and occupied this town yesterday. Their medical officers came into the hospital and acted very uncivilly, requiring a list of all officers, saying they would remove all on their return; but owing to their unexpected defeat, and being rapidly pursued by our forces, they had not time to stop. As they went up they carried off with them some bedding, bedclothing, and clothing of a portion of the wounded, the exact number of which I have not at this time been able to ascertain.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. R. MEEM,
Surgeon in Charge.

Surg. W. A. CARRINGTON,
Medical Director, Richmond, Va.

No. 176.

Report of Col. James P. Simms, Fifty-third Georgia Infantry, commanding brigade, Kershaw's division, First (Longstreet's) Corps, of operations August 3-October 20.

HEADQUARTERS SIMMS' BRIGADE,
December —, 1864.

SIR:*

Here General Bryan returned and resumed command about August 3, and remained with the brigade until the morning of the 21st, when he again left, during which time we moved from Chester Station to the Valley, nothing of importance having occurred during the time. When I took command again, on the 21st, the brigade was near Winchester, and with orders to move. The division was moved in the direction of Charlestown, with this brigade in front. After moving some six or eight miles we encountered the cavalry of the enemy. The major-general ordered me to send forward two regiments to attack, which was done, driving the enemy a short distance, when it was found necessary to re-enforce with another regiment. I suppose we met about one brigade of the enemy's cavalry, driving them about six miles, when they fell back upon a division of their cavalry strongly posted and with artillery. Here I halted the brigade, thinking it not prudent to advance farther, when the major-general brought up the remainder of the division and ordered an advance. By this time the enemy had retreated hastily in the direction of Charlestown. In this affair we lost a few men wounded and one or two killed. After this we moved on to Charlestown, the enemy falling back to Harper's Ferry. Remained at Charlestown a few days. The skirmish line engaged slightly near Charlestown on the 30th. On the 31st the brigade, with the others of the division, moved back in the direction of Winchester.

* For portion of report (here omitted) covering operations from June 2 to August 2, 1864, see Vol. XXXVI, Part I, p. 1064, and Vol. XL, Part I, p. 768.

On September 3 we left Winchester and moved toward Berryville, arriving near Berryville a little before sunset in the evening, and the enemy immediately in our front. Line of battle was formed by order of the major-general, in conjunction with the other brigades of the division, and an attack made upon their lines. Our men moving forward with great spirit and gallantry, the enemy only held their position long enough to fire one round, then fled precipitately. By this time night interposed, and we slept upon the field, and next morning found that their line, which had crossed the road, now ran parallel to it, and they had made use of the time allowed by night to fortify. We remained in line confronting them next day and night, and were then ordered to withdraw, and returned to Winchester. The loss of the brigade in this battle was 4 killed and 26 wounded.

We remained at Winchester until September 16, and then marched in direction of Culpeper Court-House. On the 19th the general, having received information that a raiding party was in the vicinity, and that they were going toward Stevensburg, ordered me with this brigade to a certain point on that road to intercept them. The brigade was put in motion immediately and moved at double-quick for nearly two miles, but upon arriving within about 500 yards the enemy were opposite to us in the road, having proceeded so far as to render it impossible to cut them off. Finding that this was the only opportunity we would have of inflicting damage upon them, I gave orders to fire. We killed and wounded several of them. Our loss was nothing. We recaptured from this party quite a number of horses and mules which they had captured from a Government lot near Rapidan Station. On the 20th we left Culpeper, marching in the direction of Gordonsville, which place we reached on the 25th. Encamped there one night, and then again we moved in the direction of the Valley, passing through Swift Run Gap; thence up by the foot of the mountains in the direction of Port Republic. On September — we came in sight of Port Republic, at which place the enemy's cavalry were distinctly visible, driving ours before them across the river and through the town. By an order from the major-general, I placed my brigade in the edge of a wood near by the road leading from the town, in such manner as not to be observed by the enemy, and awaited their advance in that direction. Our cavalry having already retired as he had anticipated, it was not long before they came dashing down the road, moving by the flank, but by the untimely firing of some shots from the command we failed to inflict such loss upon them as otherwise would have been done. The enemy escaped with slight loss, and the loss of the brigade was nothing.

From this time until October 14 the brigade was marching from point to point, encamping at different places for a short space of time. When, on the 14th, General Conner's brigade was engaged at Hupp's Hill this brigade was held as reserve for his support, but that brigade having accomplished the work assigned to it so handsomely it was not thought necessary to bring it into action; therefore the brigade was not engaged, but lost in wounded some eight or ten men.

On the evening of the 18th I received orders to move out in the direction of Strasburg at 12 o'clock that night, preparatory to an attack that was to be made on the enemy's works next morning. In compliance with the order, the brigade moved out at the time specified and to the point designated, each man having been supplied with sixty rounds of ammunition. Soon after our arrival at the place designated by the major-general, on the turnpike, the other brigades of the division came up, and we marched in the direction of Strasburg by the turnpike road in front of the division. Having passed through Strasburg we left the turnpike and moved upon a little road turning to the right, which was followed until we came in sight of the enemy's camp-fires. Here a halt was ordered until near 5 o'clock, when I was ordered to move down this road until the brigade had crossed over, and then turn down the creek and form line of battle parallel to the creek, and to advance immediately to the front until a certain clump of woods was passed, and then to change direction to the left in such manner as to cause the line to confront that of the enemy, to drive the enemy's pickets in without firing upon them, and not to fire until the enemy's line was reached—all of which was strictly complied with, the gallant men moving forward steadily and firmly, receiving the shots from the enemy's picket-line without replying, but continuing to move forward with unbroken front through the volleys of musketry and cannon which they were now exposed to until they reached the enemy's works. The enemy made a stubborn resistance. Some of them were shot down while firing upon our men at the distance of a few feet. The works were of a formidable character, with a strong abatis covering most of the front and in a favorable position for defense. After capturing the works and sweeping through the camp (which was just inside the works), there being no troops either on our right or left, I thought it prudent to fall back to the captured works and await the arrival of other troops. Here the brigade captured a large number of prisoners, seven pieces of cannon which were mounted on the works, besides some other pieces which were parked in rear—the whole of the camp equipage which was upon that part of their line. While waiting for the other troops to come up the captured artillery was turned upon the enemy. Very soon the brigades of Generals Conner and Humphreys came up on the right and left and again we advanced, encountering a second line of works, but driving them like chaff before the wind, and again came in contact with their third line, but here did not meet with as much resistance as upon the other lines. We continued to drive the enemy until about 11 o'clock, when a halt was ordered, our position was changed by moving to the right, and rested until about 5 o'clock in the afternoon, when an attack was made upon the troops to our left. They broke and fled in confusion, forcing upon us the necessity of falling back. The line was formed about one-quarter of a mile in rear of the one which had been abandoned, which was held until it was found that the troops on the left of my brigade had abandoned the field. I placed a regiment on my left, formed perpendicularly to the rear to protect the flank. The enemy soon attacked it with such force as it was not able to withstand. I then determined to throw back the entire brigade, so as to protect the flank of the line, and while carrying into execution this purpose I observed the troops on my right moving by the right flank, which rendered it necessary I should move likewise. By this time the enemy had gotten completely in our rear and were pressing from the front and flank, and in moving out among the confused masses of troops from other commands our organizations also became confused, and it was impossible to reform the command in proper order. We moved back that night to Fisher's Hill, and next morning in the direction of New Market, which place we reached the same evening.

In this battle the brigade had about 520 arms-bearing men. Of four regimental commanders three were wounded, two have since died of the wounds—Colonels Ball and Holt. Colonel McGlashan was wounded through both thighs.

The loss of the brigade was heavy in officers and men (about 200 killed and wounded), complete lists of which have been sent in prior to this time.

I take pleasure in bearing testimony to the gallantry [of] and acknowledging my indebtedness to Capt. C. C. Kibbee, acting assistant adjutant-general, for his efficient service throughout the entire time which I have had the honor to command the brigade.

After remaining a few days at New Market we marched to and came by railway to Richmond.

I am, your obedient servant,

J. P. SIMMS,
Commanding Brigade.

Maj. J. M. GOGGIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

No. 177.

Report of Brig. Gen. James Conner, C. S. Army, commanding brigade, of operations September 13.

HEADQUARTERS,
September 14, 1864.

MAJOR: I have the honor to submit the following report of facts attending the capture of the picket from this brigade yesterday:

The Eighth South Carolina Regiment was on picket, numbering (officers included) 150 men. The main body was near the Berryville pike, having two companies at a post to its right and one company at a post to its left. The Yankee cavalry advanced (mounted) and deployed in front of the main picket; another portion deployed considerably to the left of the main picket; another portion advanced in column at a gallop up the pike, and receiving a volley from the picket dashed past it. Colonel Henagan then fell back into the woods in rear of his picket station, reformed his men, and moved through the woods to the edge of the timber on this side. Gaining that point they perceived the Yankee cavalry in front of them; these they fired upon and drove back. Advancing from the woods with the view of coming back to the brigade, they were again met by a considerable body of Yankee cavalry and Colonel Henagan fell back into the wood, some desultory firing going on between his men and the Yankees. While this was taking place the Yankee cavalry that had deployed in his front at the commencement (now in his rear) dismounted and advanced into the woods, while the other cavalry rode around the edge of the timber shouting to our men to come out. When the dismounted cavalry were within 50 or 100 yards of our men in the woods the latter surrendered. The prisoners were immediately hurried off, the officers of the Yankee cavalry urging their men to be expeditious. The two companies on duty at the picket-post to the right, after skirmishing with the advancing enemy, fell back and escaped, with the exception of three or four men, who were acting as vedettes at the mill.

I have examined all those who escaped, so as to report the facts as correctly as possible. I have mainly derived my information relative to the main picket from Doctor Dunlop, the surgeon of the regiment, who climbed a tree and escaped notice, and from Private Moore, who escaped in like manner. The result is deeply mortifying. So far as I can ascertain, no one on our side was killed or wounded. The dead bodies of the Yankees have been found. Had any of our men been killed they also would have been found upon the ground.

As soon as the cavalry courier reported the advance of the enemy Colonel Henagan sent a mounted courier to me with the intelligence. I ordered the courier to gallop back and tell Colonel Henagan to hold the ground to the last; that I would hurry up re-enforcements to him. I dispatched the Third [South Carolina] Regiment to his relief, with orders to the brigade to follow, and galloped forward myself toward the picket, but as I rose the hill from my camp I saw the Yankee cavalry in rear of our picket. The courier who brought me the intelligence never got back to Colonel Henagan.

My own impression most decidedly is that the woods could have been held at least long enough for re-enforcements to arrive. The known gallantry of Colonel Henagan and of his regiment alone render the matter inexplicable. Circumstances possibly existed of which I know nothing, and in justice to a brave officer and a command which has done good fighting I withhold all expression of censure in this report.

The loss, as officially reported, is 14 officers and 90 men.

Very respectfully,

JAS. CONNER,
Brigadier-General.

[Maj. E. L. COSTIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.]

---

No. 178.

Report of Maj. James M. Goggin, Assistant Adjutant-General, C. S. Army, commanding Conner's brigade, of operations October 19.

HEADQUARTERS CONNER'S BRIGADE,
October 31, 1864.

MAJOR: I have the honor to report that on the 18th instant, at 11.45 p. m., this brigade, in pursuance of orders received during the afternoon, moved from its camp to the turnpike, in rear of Fisher's Hill. Soon after reaching there, the other brigades being put in motion, it fell into the position previously assigned it as the rear brigade of the division, and moved noiselessly and in good order to the north side of Cedar Creek on the road ———, where just after daybreak it rapidly formed in line of battle and pushed forward at once in support of the other brigades of the division, then advancing on the enemy's works. On clearing the dense and tangled woods immediately in our front, and reaching the open, elevated ground occupied by the enemy (understood to be Crook's corps), it was discovered that Bryan's brigade by a most brilliant dash had already succeeded in driving them out and held possession of their first line of works. Without delay, the brigade moved up on the left of Bryan's brigade (commanded by Colonel Simms) and dashed forward across the turnpike, attacking the second line of works with such fierce vigor and determination that the enemy soon fled in the utmost confusion, leaving in our hands a number of prisoners and four pieces of artillery. From this point the brigade steadily advanced to the left of and on a line nearly parallel to the pike, as far as a lane which led into the pike, and passing near a house said to have been the headquarters of the commanding general of the Federal forces. Beyond this lane some 200 yards the enemy had rallied apparently with the determination of making an effort to check our advance, and as one of my regiments, in consequence of the inequalities of the ground over which we had passed, had become detached, the brigade was halted a few minutes until it could resume its proper place in the line. As soon as this was accomplished the brigade recommenced its forward movement, the enemy retiring before it as if panic-stricken, and continued it until we had passed into the woods beyond and to the left of Middletown, where, finding that any farther advance would expose me to an attack on my left flank, and it being reported to me that the enemy's cavalry were in strong force in the second woods in front, I moved to the outer edge of the woods and halted until I could reconnoiter the position. The major-general commanding rode up at this time, and by his order the command was moved half a mile to the right in the direction of the turnpike, and the forward movement again resumed. After proceeding some distance the troops on our right having halted this command was halted also, and my skirmishers, together with those of Bryan's brigade, advanced to clear the woods of a body of skirmishers in front of my left, which was handsomely done, when the line again moved forward and occupied a road half a mile distance in advance. Here the Third and Fifteenth Regiments, which had been temporarily detached, rejoined us and were sent to the right to fill up a gap between this brigade and that of Humphreys. Soon after this the enemy made an attack on Humphreys, which was met by such a heavy fire, so coolly delivered by that brigade and by the right of my own that they were at once checked and driven back. A repetition of the attack met with a like result, and the firing for a time seemed to have ceased along the whole line, but between 3 and 4 o'clock it was resumed, and it was soon ascertained that the troops on our left had given way and the enemy threatening our left flank while pushing us in front.

In this condition of affairs the command fell back to the position it had previously held, and for one hour and a quarter kept the enemy at bay, foiling every direct effort to draw us from our position, and it was not until the enemy had passed completely around our left flank and were moving on our rear that the order was given to withdraw. So closely were the enemy pushing us at this time that I found it necessary to move out by the right flank while my skirmishers held them in check in my front. After moving sufficiently far to my right to uncover my rear the command was faced to the right and moved in the direction of the pike at Middletown, with orders to halt on the crest of the hill.

Up to this time both men and officers had obeyed with commendable cheerfulness and alacrity all orders given them; but, unfortunately, in moving to the rear a very high fence was encountered, and in clearing it my line was necessarily broken, and being without a staff officer or courier and with no horse myself, before it could be reformed a stream of flying fugitives from other portions of the field became so mixed up with my own men, infecting the latter with their own fears, that they soon became oblivious of everything save to leave the enemy as far in the rear as possible.

I shall say nothing of the panic and flight that ensued, so much deplored as it is by all. I cannot, however, while alluding to the shortcomings of this brigade forbear giving both officers and men that praise which is so justly their due for the noble display of all the admirable and true qualities of the soldier up to the time the retreat was ordered, and no one who witnessed the advance of the brigade on that day against the different positions of the enemy will hesitate to bestow upon it their unqualified admiration. It would perhaps be invidious for me to discriminate or to attempt to allot to each their due proportion of praise, but I may say to the commanding officers of each of the organizations I am greatly indebted, not only for the prompt obedience of orders, but for the skill and gallantry displayed in the handling of their men.

For a full and detailed account of the operations of each command I refer you to the reports herewith inclosed.*

I am also greatly indebted to Lieut. Y. J. Pope, of the Third South Carolina Regiment, acting assistant adjutant-general, and to Cadet E. P. Harlee, acting inspector, for the very efficient aid rendered me during the day, and for their conspicuous display of gallantry on every occasion to call it forth. The former was severely wounded, losing an eye, and the latter slightly.

One of my couriers, De Saussure Burrows, was shot through the head while riding by my side. He was a noble and gallant youth—a favorite with all who knew him. Couriers Crumley and Templeton also deserve honorable mention for their good conduct.

Among the killed I cannot forbear making special mention of Capt. B. M. Whitener, commanding the battalion of sharpshooters. He fell while gallantly leading his little band in an attack on the enemy's lines. His best epitaph may be found written upon the hearts of those who have so often witnessed his cool courage and undaunted bravery in the presence of the foe.

It is a matter of profound regret that the Second Regiment is deprived (for a time at least, on account of the loss of a leg) of the services of its commanding officer (Maj. B. R. Clyburn), whose bravery in this as on other occasions is beyond all praise.

Major Todd, commanding the Third Regiment, was also severely wounded in the arm while gallantly leading his men against the enemy's second line of works.

The entire loss of the brigade was as follows:

Killed—officers, 6; enlisted men, 22; total, 28. Wounded—officers, 13; enlisted men, 172; total, 185. Missing—officers, 6; enlisted men, 199; total, 205.

Among the prisoners are Colonel Boykin and Lieutenant-Colonel McMichael, of the Twentieth South Carolina.

I am, major, very respectfully, &c.,

JAS. M. GOGGIN,
Major, Commanding Brigade.

Maj. E. L. COSTIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Kershaw's Division.

---

No. 179.

Abstract from Inspection Report of Smith's brigade, Wharton's division, for September 29.

This brigade has suffered severely since the opening of the campaign. Its loss in officers has been very heavy. It has lost all the field officers of the brigade proper except Colonel Smith and Lieutenant-Colonel Fife, Thirty-sixth Regiment Virginia Infantry, absent sick, including the command of Lieutenant-Colonel Love, which is of itself a brigade organization, and which has been temporarily attached to this brigade. The brigade entered the present campaign with an aggregate effective of 2,100 men. It now numbers but little over 400 aggregate effective, and the difference has been occasioned principally by the casualties of battle. Before it became part of the army commanded by Lieutenant-General Early it had met the enemy this year in two hard-fought battles, where it encountered vastly superior numbers; first at Cloyd's farm, May 9, where it fought the Eighth Army Corps, U. S. Army, commanded by General Crook, and again on June 5, at Piedmont, Augusta [County], where, in conjunction with a small force of dismounted cavalry and the Forty-fifth Regiment of Infantry, it fought the command of General Hunter, which afterward penetrated to Lynchburg, Va. The sacrifices which it was compelled to make in fighting these battles was necessary for the country, and accordingly its losses were very heavy. These facts are mentioned to show that the present weakness of the brigade is occasioned by the service it has seen and not by the desertion and delinquency of its members. It has borne its full share in all the operations of this army since Lieutenant-General Early assumed command at Lynchburg, Va.

---

* Not found.

The prospects of recruiting the brigade this winter are very flattering. It is believed that many from the border and from the counties of Southwestern Virginia, whom the laws will bring into the field, will, if the opportunity is afforded them, elect to join this brigade, composed of men from that section. A very considerable number of prisoners, wounded and unwounded, in the hands of the enemy will, if exchanged, largely swell the ranks of the command. During the coming winter, too, many of our wounded, now at hospitals and private houses in Western Virginia, will be again able to join the command. If the opportunity is afforded the brigade will, without doubt, be able to take the field next spring in numbers, if not so large as at the opening of the campaign of 1864, still with larger numbers than most of the brigades in the Confederate service.

The men are much worn and exhausted by the fatigues of the campaign, and the regimental and company organizations are very much broken and are quite imperfect. In many of the companies there are neither commissioned nor non-commissioned officers. The brigade discipline and general efficiency would manifestly be much improved if time and opportunity sufficed for a thorough revisal and reorganization of its several regiments and the companies belonging to them.

In the tables of present and absent no account has been taken of those absent as prisoners, as they are beyond the control of the brigade commander, and as no place was prepared for such notice in the printed tables it was presumed that that subject was left exclusively for the department of the acting assistant adjutant-general of the brigade.

The large number of absentees in Forty-fifth Battalion Virginia Infantry is referable to the fact that this command was formed in the enemy's lines, and these men, though enlisted in the command, never came out and have not been under our control.

Respectfully submitted.

HENRY G. CANNON,
First Lieutenant, Brigade Inspector, Smith's Brigade, Wharton's Division, Army Valley District.

No. 180.

Abstract from Inspection Report of Patton's brigade, for September 29.

This brigade, under the command of Brig. Gen. John Echols, entered upon the campaign of 1864 with 2,150 men and a full complement of officers on May 6. The brigade was then well armed, equipped, and provided with a full supply of clothing, and in a thorough state of discipline and efficiency. The commanding officers of the battalions and regiments composing the command were able and experienced officers—graduates of military schools. Two of them, viz, Col. G. S. Patton (Twenty-second Virginia Regiment), Lieut. Col. G. M. Edgar, were graduates of the Virginia Military Institute, and the third, Lieut. Col. Clarence Derrick (Twenty-third Virginia Battalion), was from West Point. The company officers generally were intelligent men, well acquainted with drill, guard, and picket duty, and all requirements necessary to an efficient soldier. The military bearing and appearance of the brigade was soldierly and imposing.

In this thorough state of organization and discipline the brigade opened its campaigning with the battle of New Market, on May 13, under Major-General Breckinridge. From that time the Valley District has been the scene of its military operations to the present, with the exception of a short campaign with the Army of Northern Virginia around Richmond, in which it bore a conspicuous part in the bloody battle of Cold Harbor and in several other engagements of less importance.

During this campaign the brigade sustained heavy loss in killed and captured, both of officers and men. Among the wounded was the gallant officer, Capt. John K. Thompson, Company A, Twenty-second Virginia Regiment, who here received his third wound; he is now again with his command.

The morning report exhibits total for duty of 266 and an aggregate of 275. This great and almost unprecedented reduction in five months is due exclusively to the casualties of war. In the hard-fought battle of Winchester, on the 19th, the brigade organization was almost broken up. Col. George S. Patton, commanding the brigade, an officer of highest gallantry and standing and a gentleman irreproachable in character, was left in the hands of the enemy mortally wounded. Lieut. Col. C. Derrick, the commanding officer of the Twenty-third Virginia Battalion, and Lieut. Col. G. M. Edgar, of the Twenty-sixth Virginia Battalion, were captured while gallantly attempting to rally their commands, thus leaving the brigade without an officer above the rank of captain. A large majority also of the company officers, the most gallant and efficient, either met their deaths on the battle-field or fell captive into the hands of the enemy. The discipline and general efficiency of the brigade is much impaired by the loss of the brigade and battalion commanders. The officers now with the command are, with a few exceptions, very efficient and anxious to contribute all that is in their power for the good of the brigade. They have not, however, commanded heretofore an organization larger than a battalion.

The adjutant's department has heretofore been conducted with great system and care, and complete records of orders and files of papers were preserved prior to the commencement of the present campaign. All of these papers were captured by the enemy on the first occupation of Staunton, and during this campaign the supply of stationery has been so limited that it has been a matter of impossibility to pay that attention to this department that military usage requires.

This brigade is charged at almost every camp for burning rails. No axes are furnished. It is respectfully asked that the attention of commanding general be called to the fact and a necessary number of axes supplied.

Very respectfully, &c.,

WOOD BOULDIN, JR.,

Asst. Inspector-General, Patton's Brigade, Wharton's Division.

---

No. 181.

Report of Brig. Gen. Bryan Grimes, C. S. Army, commanding Rodes' (or Ramseur's) division, Second Army Corps, of operations October 18-19.

HEADQUARTERS RODES' DIVISION,
October 31, 1864.

CAPTAIN: In obedience to orders from corps headquarters I have the honor of submitting the following report as the part taken by Rodes' division in the action on the 19th of October, 1864:

About dark on the evening of the 18th the division moved from camp on Fisher's Hill and was halted for an hour or more near the pike in order that Major-General Gordon, in command of the force which was to move to the enemy's rear, could communicate with Lieutenant-General Early. This halt was caused, as I unofficially learned, in consequence of information received that the enemy were fortifying that evening on their left flank. About 8 p. m. the march was resumed, and after passing the stone bridge filed to the right and passed by a circuitous route around the base of Fort Mountain by a blind path, where the troops had to march in single file. The order of march was, Gordon, Rodes, Pegram. Upon reaching the Shenandoah, where crossed by the Manassas Gap Railroad, the column was halted and massed for the rear to close up. So soon as this was done (about 1 a. m.) we again moved forward, following the track of the railroad until near Buckton Station, where we again halted for an hour and a half, waiting the arrival of the cavalry, who crossed the river in advance and drove in the enemy's pickets.

About 4.30 a. m. the infantry commenced crossing the Shenandoah near Colonel Bowman's house in two columns. The passage was effected with great rapidity and in good order, though the rear necessarily had to double quick for [a] distance to close up. The order of march was as follows: Battle, Cook, Cox, Grimes. On arriving within half a mile of the Valley pike Battle's brigade was formed parallel with the same and moved forward in line of battle. The other brigades continued moving by the flank for about 300 yards, when they were faced to the left and ordered forward, changing direction to the right. Battle soon struck the Eighth Corps of the enemy, and charging gallantly drove them in great confusion, but was himself seriously wounded while nobly leading his brigade, the command of which then devolved on Lieutenant-Colonel Hobson, Fifth Alabama. Cook and Cox continued to advance, swinging to the right, driving the enemy in their front with but slight resistance for upward of half a mile, when General Cox reporting that he was flanked on the left, a temporary halt was made until re-enforcements were sent forward, when these two brigades again advanced. Cook captured several cannon, caissons, ammunition wagons, &c. This movement left a wide interval between Cook's right and Battle's left, which was subsequently filled by Pegram's division.

In the meantime Grimes' brigade was recalled from the left and moved by the right flank through the abandoned camp of the Eighth Corps, which had been completely routed, faced to the front, and advanced to the pike, connecting with Battle's right. This formation was perfected about sunrise, the enemy being then in position on a small creek to the left of the pike, with their artillery on a high ridge in their rear and firing into our line of battle, but the smoke and fog obscured the troops so that their fire was inaccurate. Here Major-General Ramseur had skirmishers thrown to the front and to the right, driving the sharpshooters of the enemy from Middletown. The division remained here perhaps half an hour until a battery was brought into position on the right of the pike, when General Ramseur again ordered an advance, which was made in good order and with a gallantry never exceeded. In this advance Battle's brigade charged a battery in its front, capturing in addition to six guns many prisoners and a flag. The Sixth Corps was found posted on a hill in rear of this battery, and made a most stubborn resistance. Grimes' brigade was ordered forward and charged them most gallantly, but being greatly overlapped on both flanks was forced to fall back and reform after advancing as far as the cemetery.

At this time there was an interval of 300 yards between this and Battle's brigade. Colonel Smith's brigade, of Wharton's division, was now brought into action on Grimes' right and charged the same wooded hill, but was likewise repulsed, when Wofford's brigade, of Kershaw's division, which had been ordered to report to Major-General Ramseur, arrived on the ground and was posted behind a stone fence to the right of Grimes, it not being thought advisable to move it against this strong position of the enemy. The artillery was at this time (about 8 a. m.) massed on the hills near the pike, and the infantry remained quiet until, by a concentrated fire from the artillery, the Sixth Corps was dislodged from its position, where they had erected temporary breastworks of rails, stones, &c. Upon this hill the division was reformed, cartridge-boxes refilled, and rested upward of an hour.

During this time skirmishers were advanced and found that the enemy had again made a stand at the edge of the woods about three-quarters of a mile in advance. We then moved forward and joined our left to Kershaw's right, halting in the road leading from Middletown and at right angles to the pike. Here again we halted perhaps for an hour, and then moved forward en echelon by brigade from the left, which was occupied by Cook, with Cox's brigade in reserve, and took position behind a stone fence.

During this time the enemy were firing from their artillery, engaging ours on the hills in our rear. Our skirmishers all the while were engaged with those of the enemy and had driven in our left, but they in turn were repulsed by our line of battle. In this position Grimes' brigade was about 100 yards to the right and rear of Battle's, with an interval of from 200 to 300 yards between his right and Pegram's left.

At 3.30 p. m. our skirmishers were driven in and the enemy advanced their line of battle. Grimes' brigade was double-quickened upon the line with Battle to meet this advance on the part of the enemy, and Cox moved up on a line with Cook and to his left, which advance was repulsed most gallantly, the enemy fleeing in disorder and confusion, throwing down their arms and battle-flags in their retreat. The musketry on our left still continued to increase, and at the time our troops were cheering for this repulse of the enemy the line on our left was seen to give back and the troops to retreat without any organization. General Ramseur then ordered the different brigades of this division to fall back and form [behind] a stone fence about 200 yards in rear, which was promptly done, and the advance of the enemy in our front prevented. While holding this position the gallant and chivalrous General Ramseur was mortally wounded and brought from the field.

The troops on the left had by this time entirely given way and were running to the rear in great confusion. The enemy were then in front and to the left and rear of the left flank of this division, when they began to fall back in the same disorderly manner as those on the left. Our organization up to this time was intact. Upon the order being given to retire, did so; but the stampede on the left was caught up, and no threats nor entreaties could arrest their flight. Great and repeated exertions were made by the officers of the higher ranks to check the men, but all their exertions were unavailing. Upon reaching the south side of Cedar Creek a few—perhaps to the number of 200—from Cook's and Grimes' brigades formed on the right of the pike near Hupp's Hill, but when the stream of stragglers came running over the hill with the cry that the cavalry were across the creek and prepared to charge, these few likewise scattered and could not be kept together. Up to the hour of 4 p. m. the troops of this division, both officers and men, with a few exceptions, behaved most admirably, and were kept well in hand, but little plundering, and only a few shirking their duty. After that hour all was confusion and disorder.

The brigade commanders conducted themselves, each and all, with great coolness and judgment, and are deserving of especial mention, using all possible efforts to check their troops, but without success.

The death of the brave and heroic soldier, General Ramseur, is not only a loss to this division but to his State and the country at large. No truer or nobler spirit has been sacrificed in this unjust and unholy war.

The conduct of the officers composing the staff of this division cannot be too highly lauded for their gallantry and efficiency. Major Peyton, for the coolness and promptness with which he conveyed orders on the field; Major Hutchinson, for his efficiency (who was captured, escaped from the enemy, and again captured late in the evening). Captain Randolph displayed his usual daring.

Major Whiting, inspector, rendered signal service by preventing all straggling and plundering, and Lieutenant Richmond, aide-de-camp, for his assistance and alacrity in transmitting orders.

For the conduct of others deserving especial mention you are respectfully referred to reports of brigade commanders, herewith transmitted.*

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

BRYAN GRIMES,

Brigadier-General, Commanding Division.

Capt. S. J. C. MOORE,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Army Valley District.

---

No. 182.

Abstract from Inspection Report of Rodes' division for September 30.

Since the last report Cox's and Grimes' brigades have been supplied with nearly as much outer clothing and all the underclothing they require, by the State of North Carolina. Battle's and Cook's brigades have also been partially supplied, though jackets and pants are still badly needed in both. The wants of the command have been nearly supplied in the article of shoes—at least so far as the actually bare-footed are concerned. If a supply sufficient for convalescents, who are returning rapidly, and to replace shoes nearly worn out now can be sent as they are needed, no suffering need occur.

---

* Not found.

I would call attention to the great scarcity of officers in the entire command. The best and efficient officers in nearly every brigade have for the most part been either killed or wounded during this campaign, and some regiments and brigades are sadly deficient in this respect. Cox's brigade has not a single field officer present, and the Fourth Regiment in it is commanded by a second lieutenant; Grimes' brigade of five regiments has but two field officers present; Cook's has but two, and Battle's, with five regiments, only three field officers for duty. Some regiments have not an average of one officer to the company. Under these circumstances it is impossible that discipline should be kept unimpaired or even efficient. Comparatively, the discipline of the division is fair, but much impaired by the recent disaster. I would respectfully suggest that the deficiency in officers might be partially supplied by allowing temporary appointments in line and field officers, as in those of higher grades, and by allowing the places of officers detailed from their commands out of the department to be supplied in the regular way. There are numerous cases in the command of officers detailed for light duty whose companies are without an officer in consequence of the wounding and capture of the other officers belonging to it, and there being no vacancy, no appointment is allowed. There are also field officers on similar details whose places ought to be supplied. If such officers were either required to report to their commands or permanently retired, in order that their places might be supplied, a growing source of evil would be removed and the service positively benefited.

Respectfully submitted.

H. A. WHITING,
Major and Assistant Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

No. 183.

Reports of Col. David G. Cowand, Thirty-second North Carolina Infantry, commanding Grimes' brigade, of operations June 13–December 31.

HEADQUARTERS GRIMES' BRIGADE,
Camp near Sutherland's Depot, Va., March 4, 1865.

MAJOR: In obedience to instructions from division headquarters I have the honor of making the following report of the operations of this command from the 13th of June, 1864, to the 1st of January, 1865:

On the night of the 12th of June this brigade being encamped near Cold Harbor, it received orders from Major-General Rodes to be in readiness to move at daydawn the next morning, when we took up a line of march in direction of Louisa Court-House and marched to North Garden Depot, on the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, and there took the train for Lynchburg, Va. The march to the above-named place was very rapid and quite severe, as the weather was very warm. The marching was at the rate of twenty-five miles per day, but the men arose very cheerful. We arrived at Lynchburg just before night and moved out on the road on the right of the Fair Grounds, and after forming a line of battle went into bivouac. During the night received orders to move to the left of our line at 2 a. m. I believe it was the intention to make an attack on the enemy at daylight. This brigade moved right in front and was the leading brigade of the division. When daylight came we found the enemy had left his works and was moving toward Liberty. This was on the morning of the 20th of June. We were soon ordered to follow the enemy, which we did, taking the old turnpike. We marched very rapidly, but overtook but very few of their stragglers. We marched about twenty-five miles. Next morning at daylight we took up the pursuit and came up with the rear of the enemy at Buford's Gap, when our skirmishers had some little skirmishing which lasted until dark. Next morning we moved on (the enemy having evacuated the gap during the night) in the direction of Salem. The enemy were destroying the railroad as they were moving, but you could see from the things thrown away that they were completely routed. That afternoon we came to a gap in the mountains and found the enemy had gotten through, but not before our cavalry had given them quite a severe blow. We remained in camp the next day resting and cooking rations, both of which the men needed very much indeed.

Next day we moved in the direction of Staunton, passing through Lexington and several small villages. At Lexington the brigade passed by the grave of that noble old hero Lieutenant-General Jackson at reverse arms and heads uncovered. Stopped near Staunton a few days and then moved down the pike in the direction of Winchester, and passed on through very rapidly. Reached Harper's Ferry early on the morning of the 4th of July, and was met by only a small body of sharpshooters, which were soon driven in, the sharpshooters only being engaged, and they soon took Bolivar Heights. Next morning the Forty-third North Carolina Regiment was sent in the village of Harper's Ferry to relieve one of Battle's regiments, then on picket duty. After getting in the village it was quite dangerous relieving the troops then on duty. This regiment lost several men while relieving Battle's by the fire of the sharpshooters in the Maryland Heights. About night the Thirty-second North Carolina Regiment was ordered in the town to assist in doing garrison duty and to help load the wagons with the quartermaster's and commissary supplies that we captured, balance of the brigade being near the Bolivar Heights in reserve. Next morning the brigade was relieved by Lewis' brigade and moved in direction of Shepherdstown. Crossed the Potomac, leaving Shepherdstown to our left, and camped near Sharpsburg, Md. Next morning moved down Pleasant Valley and had some little skirmishing for a day or two, and then moved in the direction of Frederick City without meeting with any opposition. The brigade, except the sharpshooters, was not engaged in the Monocacy fight, being held in reserve. Next day we took up line of march toward Washington City, and arrived at Silver Springs on the 11th. This brigade being the front infantry brigade in the army, sharpshooters were thrown out immediately and the brigade formed line of battle, left extending on the road known as Seventh Street road. After remaining there about two hours were ordered to the front to support the sharpshooters.

The next morning the Fifty-third North Carolina Regiment was ordered down to the line of sharpshooters to support them in case of an attack. All that day the enemy were firing their artillery, which did this brigade some little damage, wounding some 5 or 6 men of the sharpshooters. Kept up a continuous firing all day, and just before night (the enemy having been re-enforced) began to fire at our skirmish line very heavily, and then began trying to set the houses near our lines on fire, which they succeeded in doing, and then made an attempt on our line. They were driven back in our immediate front, but succeeded in driving the troops on our right back, which compelled the troops of this brigade, or rather the Fifty-third North Carolina Regiment and the sharpshooters, to fall back (the Thirty-second North Carolina Regiment was watching the right flank), and immediately the Forty-third North Carolina Regiment and the Forty-fifth North Carolina Regiment were deployed as skirmishers and ordered to the front. They went up beautifully, and the men of the Fifty-third North Carolina Troops and the sharpshooters joined in, and they soon established their line again on the right of the road, but the troops on the left could not succeed in going quite as far as their original line. The troops fought remarkably well indeed, being under very heavy artillery fire, and we had none replying, and besides, the enemy had decidedly the advantage in position, but our men went up cheerfully and confidently. We were ordered to fall back that night about 1 o'clock, and moved off in the direction of Rockville. Marched all night that night and until about 3 the next day, when we rested a few hours and then moved on very slowly, only going a few miles during the night, reaching the Potomac at White's Crossing, in a few miles of Leesburg, and remaining there one day.

On the morning of the 16th we took up line of march and moved in direction of Snicker's Gap. Some time during the day the enemy attacked our wagon train and captured a few wagons. This brigade was soon ordered back, but the enemy had been driven back before we arrived. We then moved on and crossed the mountain that night. Next day we crossed the Shenandoah and moved in direction of Charlestown and went into camp for a few days. About 12 o'clock of the 19th we were ordered to move out in the direction of the ferry again. After marching a few miles we left the road and moved direct toward the river. The enemy having driven the pickets back and succeeded in crossing, we were soon formed in line of battle. This being the second brigade from the right, moved forward. We soon struck the enemy and had quite a severe fight, but we soon drove them back, although we were fighting a very superior force of infantry and at a great disadvantage, the enemy having several pieces of artillery playing on us from the other side of the river, and we had none at all in position. Our men fought desperately and were driving the enemy beautifully toward the river. Some of the troops of this brigade were within thirty steps of the enemy's colors when the troops on the right were ordered back and left our right so much exposed that we had to be swung back. In doing this the gallant Col. W. A. Owens, of the Fifty-third North Carolina Regiment, then commanding brigade, was mortally wounded. Colonel Owens was as gallant an officer as his State has in the service. Our service lost much in the fall of this officer. He had just returned from home that day, having been wounded on the 12th of May.

I think I can safely say that if the troops on our right had held their position a half hour longer we would have captured a large number of prisoners. They were retreating as rapidly as they could, and from what was seen afterward they must have been taken or drowned, as the river was quite deep in their rear. The brigade suffered very severely in this fight. The Forty-fifth North Carolina Regiment was not in this fight, it being on picket duty at another ford at the time the fight was going on. The officers and men behaved as well as troops could. Next day we remained in camp near the battle-field, and that night moved off in direction of Millwood, and rested at that place for a few hours, when we again moved off in direction of Newtown, and then down toward Winchester to support Ramseur's division, which had been engaged that day. Next day we fell back slowly to Fisher's Hill, where we remained a few days, and then threw up a line of intrenchments. On the morning of the 24th we again moved down the Valley. At Kernstown we formed a line of battle and threw out the sharpshooters. They soon moved forward, and, some other troops coming up on the flank of the enemy, soon routed them, and we chased them to Winchester, where they made another stand. This brigade, with the balance of the division, was double-quickened around on the right flank to try to cut off some cavalry. The enemy, seeing the movement, soon began to retreat again in great confusion. We followed them as rapidly as we could, but could scarcely keep in sight. They destroyed a good many wagons, caissons, &c., and threw away everything that could impede them. Although this was one of the rear brigades when the retreat commenced, it was when it ended in front of everything else except the cavalry, and a good part of the time up with that. Next morning we moved on down toward Bunker Hill and toward Martinsburg, where we tore up the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. We then moved up and down the turnpike from Bunker Hill and the Potomac.

On the 5th of August we crossed the Potomac at Williamsport and marched towards Boonsborough, and went in camp. Next day recrossed the river and moved up the Valley. We then moved up and down the Valley for some days, one day running the enemy and the next falling back. On the 17th some of the troops had a fight at Winchester. This brigade was not engaged. On the 21st we moved in the direction of Charlestown. We struck the enemy near Charlestown. Our sharpshooters were sent to the front, and they had quite a severe fight and were being driven back when the Forty-third North Carolina Regiment was ordered out to their support, and they soon checked the enemy. This regiment and the sharpshooters suffered a good deal. That night the enemy fell back and we followed them through Charlestown and formed line of battle just beyond the town, and remained there until the 25th, when we were relieved by a brigade of Kershaw's division, and moved toward Shepherdstown. Had considerable skirmishing with the enemy's cavalry, but amounting to almost nothing, they falling back faster than we could follow. The next day we marched back and camped near Leetown, and next moved back to Bunker Hill, where we remained several days. Then we moved down the Valley and back again several times, when we were ordered to Berryville to support General Anderson.

Next day we moved back and attacked the enemy's cavalry near Stephenson's Station. We drove them back very rapidly and in great confusion, but the brigade lost several men. We then remained near Bunker Hill several days, moving first one way and then the other, having several skirmishes with the enemy's cavalry and driving them back on all these occasions.

On the morning of the 19th of September we received marching orders and we moved up to Stephenson's Station, formed line of battle, and waited further orders. After remaining there from a half to one hour received orders to move toward Winchester. This was the first brigade of the division. When we arrived in four miles of Winchester we found both Gordon's and Ramseur's divisions fighting. We faced to the front and moved forward. Just as we struck the woods we met our cavalry falling back and the brigade went in with a yell, and had only gone a short distance when we struck the enemy and commenced driving them back before us, we gaining ground to the right, and at one time moved to the right by the flank, trying to make connection with Ramseur's division. The brigade moved in fine order and without any hesitation for some distance through an open field beyond any other troops. If the balance of the troops had pushed forward like this brigade we would have driven the enemy from the field. Finally, we were ordered back and took position on a hill in line with the balance of the troops and held that position (although we were suffering very severely indeed) until late in the evening, when we were ordered back, as the troops on the left had given way. It fell back in good order beyond Winchester and that night moved toward Fisher's Hill. During this day's hard fighting the brigade acted as well as men could, particularly while holding the hill they had fallen back to. They were suffering very severely from artillery and musketry fire.

On the morning of the 20th of September the brigade, with the balance of the army, reached Fisher's Hill and formed a line of battle on the left of the army. Remained there until the morning of the 22d, when the enemy moved up in our front and soon threw out their sharpshooters and moved forward their line of battle. The sharpshooters of this brigade were warmly engaged for some time, and finally charged by heavy force of cavalry, but very handsomely repulsed them. The battle soon became general, but after a short time our cavalry gave way on the left, being flanked by a heavy force of infantry, and fell back in confusion. The Forty-fifth and Thirty-second North Carolina Regiments and Second North Carolina Battalion were moved rapidly to the left to their support, and for some time fought successfully the whole force of the enemy, and did not retire until nearly surrounded and being fired at in front, flank, and rear. The Forty-fifth North Carolina Troops acted very gallantly on this occasion. This part of the brigade suffered very heavily from this fire. At this time the whole army had given way and were falling back very rapidly. It retreated toward Mount Jackson and camped near this place, forming line of battle on the right of the army, right resting on the Shenandoah River. On the next morning the enemy made its appearance, and soon engaged our sharpshooters, which lasted until night. At night we fell back to Rude's Hill, and formed line of battle on right of the army. In the morning fell back in line, the enemy pursuing vigorously. This brigade, with our whole army, fell back in good order, under a very heavy artillery and often musketry fire for more than twelve miles. Both officers and men acted well. The brigade left the turnpike, taking the left toward Port Republic, reaching there the following day, and then moved up toward Brown's Gap, camping several days, and then moving out and up to Waynesborough. Camped here for several days, and then moved down toward New Hope, and after camping here for a few days moved down the Valley toward Harrisonburg. The enemy had fallen back, and the brigade went into camp at New Market for some days, and then moved down the Valley to Fisher's Hill and camped for several days.

On the night of the 16th of October this brigade was mounted behind Rosser's cavalry and moved on the right flank and rear of the enemy, surprising and capturing a picket of thirty men. The men then had a very hard march back to camp, reaching there late in the evening. On the evening of the 18th of October the brigade was ordered to move at sunset, and with the balance of the army left camp, crossing the turnpike and moving down the Shenandoah River toward Front Royal. It was quite a long and tiresome march, often climbing in one rank around the brow of mountains. It was also quite cold, and when the men halted to rest they suffered much, having forded the river and not able on account of the proximity of the enemy to have fires. At daylight we crossed the Shenandoah River and moved rapidly to the right of the army, forming in line, and soon struck the enemy and drove them rapidly for some time, when we were halted and remained for some time under a very heavy artillery fire, losing many men from it, our right flank being exposed. The Thirty-second North Carolina Regiment was deployed as sharpshooters, and going to the left moved forward in line with the brigade. The Forty-fifth and Forty-third North Carolina Regiments were also detached to support other troops on the left. The brigade then moved forward under heavy fire, the Thirty-second as a line of sharpshooters following the enemy through Middletown. The enemy made a stand on a very high and temporarily fortified hill, and the Fifty-third North Carolina troops and Second North Carolina Battalion were ordered to charge them, which they did with a yell, driving them back for some distance, but, being unsupported on either flank, soon had to retire, the enemy moving on both flanks. In falling back they lost heavily in good men.

In this charge both officers and men acted very handsomely, and fell back stubbornly, resisting the overwhelming numbers of the enemy. Lieutenant Murray, Company A, Fifty-third North Carolina Troops, then acting adjutant of this regiment, acted with distinguished gallantry. These two regiments, with the balance of the brigade, were soon reformed and moved forward again, but the enemy had fallen back. The brigade followed. In this charge these two regiments lost many good and gallant men. The whole army soon halted, formed line, and then moved forward for about half a mile, halting for a short time; then moved forward again, the enemy still falling back, and after passing beyond Middletown for some distance the whole army was halted, and remained inactive for several hours. During this time the enemy had rallied his army and brought up fresh troops. At about 3.30 p. m. moved forward. Soon our sharpshooters became engaged, and then their line in front of this brigade moved forward in a charge. The brigadier-general commanding this brigade ordered a counter-charge, which the men readily obeyed with a yell, and met the enemy and drove them in great confusion from the field. Soon the troops on the left fell back a short distance, and we were ordered to fall back and form on them, which we did. The troops on the extreme left had given way in much confusion, and soon orders reached us to fall back; and after crossing the creek we found the enemy were between us and Strasburg on the turnpike. The brigade, with much of the army, turned to the left, crossing the river twice below the town, and reaching the turnpike again at Fisher's Hill about 10 p. m. We were then ordered to move toward New Market, but soon camped near the pike a part of the night, leaving before day toward New Market, which we reached the same day. Remained there in camp reorganizing and drilling for some weeks. Then moved to the rear of New Market to new camp, remaining there for several weeks.

On 22d of November the enemy's cavalry in heavy force moved up as high as Mount Jackson, driving in our cavalry. We moved down to Rude's Hill with the balance of the army, formed line of battle, and threw out our sharpshooters, which, with the line, drove the enemy back rapidly in the direction of Mount Jackson. Our sharpshooters followed them for several miles, but could not overtake them. We returned to camp, remaining there until the 14th of December, when we took up a line of march for Staunton, Va., which we reached on the evening of the 15th, and then took the train for Richmond, arriving there on the night of the 16th; then came to Dunlop's Station and went into winter quarters on Swift Creek, near the turnpike, where the brigade has since been stationed.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. G. COWAND,
Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

Maj. G. PEYTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

—
HEADQUARTERS GRIMES' BRIGADE,
October 30, 1864.

MAJOR: I have the honor to report the part taken by this brigade in the late engagement of 19th at Cedar Creek, Va.:

It, with the other brigades of the division, moved on the evening and night of the 18th to the right and below the town of Strasburg, Va., until it reached the road leading to Front Royal, and thence down this road until it had turned the left flank of the enemy on the opposite side of the river; there halted and waited until daylight, when it crossed the river, and with the other troops attacked and drove the enemy from their camps and beyond Middletown. When near this point three of the regiments were thrown out as skirmishers—Thirty-second North Carolina troops on the right, Forty-fifth and Forty-third on the left and to the front. The enemy had made a stand on a high and strongly-protected hill. The brigade was ordered to charge and drive the enemy from this position. In this charge the Fifty-third and Second North Carolina Battalion, with a few men from Forty-fifth and Forty-third, drove the enemy up and nearly off the hill, but having no support on their right (other troops failing to come up in time) they were temporarily checked and had to fall back. The brigadier soon reformed them and they moved forward again, but found the enemy had evacuated the position. After this the brigade moved forward, under a slight shelling from the enemy, and formed a new line. Here the army rested for several hours, when the enemy formed and charged this part of the line. This brigade was ordered to make a counter-charge and meet the enemy, which it did very handsomely, with a yell and two volleys. The enemy broke and ran back, leaving one color and many men lying in our front. We remained here for some time, when we were ordered back to a line in rear. This was soon formed, and here remained until the left of the army gave way, when we were ordered to fall back, which we did, and retired with the army to Fisher's Hill.

The brigade lost 11 killed and 108 wounded and a few prisoners. All the missing, with a few exceptions, have returned.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. G. COWAND,
Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

Maj. G. PEYTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 184.

Report of Col. John R. Winston, Forty-fifth North Carolina Infantry, commanding Forty-third and Forty-fifth North Carolina Infantry, of operations October 19.

HDQRS. 43D AND 45TH NORTH CAROLINA TROOPS,
October 30, 1864.

LIEUTENANT: In obedience to orders from brigade headquarters, I have the honor to submit the following report of the part the two regiments under my command took in the battle of Cedar Creek on the 19th instant:

We had crossed the pike, when we came in closer range of the enemy. It is useless to mention what happened before, more than the fact that the men went through a camp just as it was deserted, with hats, boots, blankets, tents, and such things as tempt our soldiers, scattered over it, and after diligent inquiry I heard of but one man who even stooped to pick up a thing. He got a hat, and has charges preferred against him. Under orders, I deployed the Forty-fifth Regiment as skirmishers in front of the brigade after we had crossed the pike. It moved forward some 200 or 300 yards, when it was halted and ordered to lie down under a heavy artillery fire, several having been struck with shell. I was ordered back to take command of the Forty-third Regiment, having left Captain Wharton in command of the Forty-fifth. The whole line then moved forward. Instead of striking the enemy's line squarely face to face, our brigade, being on the right, would have struck their line in an angling direction; but this would expose our right flank to too distressing a fire, as the left of the Sixth Corps was strongly posted on the pike on the woody eminence near which our right would have crossed. Colonel Coward having been detached with the Thirty-second as skirmishers on the pike, the balance of his command (Fifty-third and Second Battalion) had no commander. When they (composing the right of our brigade) began to be much annoyed from the fire above mentioned, in obedience to orders, I assumed command of them, and they moved squarely to the right and gallantly ran the enemy from the woods, and for some time held their ground against great odds, firing both from flank and front and in close range.

I take pleasure in mentioning this splendid conduct of these troops because their brave commander was in another part of the field and had not the opportunity of observing them as I did. My own regiments moved straight forward with the rest of the army. As above mentioned, I did not have the pleasure of going with them; but their conduct was such as usually characterizes sons of our dear old State. The colors at one time were in twenty or thirty steps of the enemy. Here we lost Lieutenant Vines, Company E, Forty-third. I unhesitatingly pronounce him one of the most efficient officers of his grade in our service; no one was braver.

After the Sixth Corps had been repulsed nothing notable occurred till late in the evening, when the enemy made his final charge. Our brigade was ordered forward to meet him; so all moved off together, and after a few rounds the enemy retreated in confusion. Soon our own army began to fall back in confusion on the left and then to stampede. My command, with the brigade, fell back according to orders, to a first and then to a second line; but the stampede soon became so mixed no officer whose men had fallen back far, and particularly on the left of the pike, could find his men. My flag was for some time in rear of our army. I had to hurry up the color bearer for fear the colors would be captured, and the enemy reaching Strasburg first, my colors accompanied me, with many others, around the left of Fisher's Hill.

Until the stampede began the conduct of officers and men, with very few exceptions, was very commendable. Even then the color bearer, Sergeant Barnes, Company C, Forty-third, deported himself (I use the strongest term) as well as it was possible for man to do. My command acted well till the stampede began. With the co-operation of officers and men, should our army be disgraced with another stampede, under the direction of God, my command will not.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN R. WINSTON,
Colonel.

Lieut. A. W. GREEN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

No. 185.

Abstract from Inspection Report of Gordon's division, Early's corps, for August 21.

There has been but one regular inspection of troops in this division since it left Richmond on the 13th of June last. It will sufficiently account for this to say that since this date to the present time it has performed 800 miles of route marching, independent of movements in the presence of the enemy; that it has been engaged in seventeen battles and skirmishes, some of which have lasted through two and three days, and in which it has captured 500 prisoners, and that it has been almost constantly in the presence of the enemy, either in the advance or in retreat. Under such circumstances regular inspections have been impossible, and inspectors have been compelled to make their observations whilst moving along the column on the march. On leaving Staunton in the latter part of June the transportation of Lieutenant-General Early's command was reduced so as to allow neither company nor field officers an ounce of baggage, except such as they could carry themselves or on their horses; hence records have been left behind and reports are irregular and incomplete. For the same reasons officers of the quartermaster's and commissary departments have been compelled to leave the most of their papers in rear and carry only such as were indispensable.

The discipline in this command is lax. It will be remembered that York's brigade is composed of the discordant fragments of Hays' and Stafford's brigades, and that Terry's is made up of the remnants of the Stonewall, Jones', and Steuart's brigades, formerly of Johnson's division, comprising the remains of fourteen regiments. Both officers and men bitterly object to their consolidation into one brigade. Strange officers command strange troops, and the difficulties of fusing this incongruous mass are enhanced by constant marching and frequent engagements. Evans' brigade has lost by casualty so many and such valuable officers as to interfere seriously with its good management. I am pleased to be able to add that the discipline of the command is improving, and that in spite of all defects, the division has fought with conspicuous gallantry and constant success. The clothing of the troops, though poor, is better than could be expected in so active a campaign, and under the difficulties of transporting supplies so great a distance. Ordnance stores have been supplied to the full extent of need from battle-fields, and it has been a matter of regret that want of transportation has prevented our saving more ordnance supplies from the same source. Our animals have been worked hard and very poorly supplied with grain; grazing and hay have, however, been abundant, and they are in excellent condition. The troops have been well supplied with rations of flour and beef, to which the country has added milk, butter, and vegetables; are consequently in good health.

EDWIN L. MOORE,
Major and Assistant Inspector-General.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
INSPECTOR-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
September 10, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded.

Special attention called to the remarks of Major Moore, which show the embarrassments under which the two consolidated brigades of this division suffer. The troops of the old organizations feel that they have lost their identity, and are without the chance of perpetuating the distinct and separate history of which they were once so proud. This loss of prestige must excite to some extent a feeling of discontent, but it is gratifying to know that the men and officers still fight with "conspicuous gallantry and constant success."

H. E. PEYTON,
Assistant Adjutant and Inspector General.

---

No. 186.

Reports of Maj. Gen. Lunsford L. Lomax, C. S. Army, commanding Cavalry Division, of operations September 19–November 2 and 12.

HEADQUARTERS LOMAX'S CAVALRY DIVISION,
November 2, 1864.

MAJOR: I have the honor to make the following report of the part taken by this division on October 19, 1864, to this date:

Previous to the above period portions of this command were daily skirmishing with the enemy on an extensive picket-line or in a direct attack made by our troops. On three separate occasions different brigades moved to Martinsburg, driving the enemy beyond that place, destroying the railroad or preventing the enemy from repairing it. On the 19th of September (the day of the battle of Winchester) my command was divided, in consequence of a portion of the army with Jackson's brigade of cavalry having moved to Martinsburg on the day previous and McCausland's and Imboden's brigades having relieved a portion of the infantry at Bunker Hill. Johnson's brigade, on picket on the line of the Opequon, received the enemy's attack, but was soon driven to the infantry support. It was then moved to the right of the line, where it remained during the rest of the engagement, one-half being dismounted and deployed on the right of the infantry skirmishers. The enemy threatening to turn our right, Jackson's brigade and afterward Wickham's was moved to that flank. By direction of General Fitz Lee I took immediate charge of the cavalry on the right. The enemy frequently attacked the right of the line, but made no impression, and the brigades held their position until late in the evening, and when ordered to withdraw did so unbroken and in good order. Wickham's brigade was not engaged on the right, but sent to the support of the cavalry on our left, who were immediately under the command of Maj. Gen. Fitz Lee. For the part taken by Imboden's and McCausland's brigades on that day I refer you to General Lee's report.* Johnson's and Jackson's brigades were the last to leave the field, and covered the retreat and flank of our army, which was threatened from the Millwood road.

On the 22d of September my division, with the exception of McCausland's brigade, was dismounted and placed on the left of the line at Fisher's Hill and directed to throw up works continuous with those of the infantry. This line was over one mile long and to be occupied by about 1,000 men. On the left of my line was an open wood, about three-quarters of a mile to the mountain, which I could only occupy by a thin line of skirmishers. Having only a few intrenching tools, borrowing from time to time from the infantry, and the short time of my occupation, the line was not made a strong one; it was naturally very weak. I was notified by the lieutenant-general commanding about 12 o'clock that the enemy were massing on the left (my front). I immediately took every means to strengthen my line and to increase my force by taking men from the led horses. About 4 p. m. I discovered a force of the enemy moving perpendicular to my line of works and about half a mile to the left, on the side of the mountain. I immediately changed my front to meet his force, notifying the nearest division infantry commander of the fact, and asking that the works left by me should be immediately occupied. I met the force from the mountain (about two brigades) and drove them back some distance, but the works on my right (my original front) not being occupied as I expected, the enemy advanced on that front and moved on my rear. The infantry failed to come to my support; I was forced to fall back; rallied on the next line, where I found an infantry brigade, which was the third that had been sent to my support. This brigade was unbroken and had not fired a shot. I formed most of my men on the left of this command and tried to urge them forward. The cavalry advanced; the infantry broke and ran. I then withdrew my command, seeing that the whole army was falling back, my men being well together and one brigade (Imboden's) preserving its organization unbroken. McCausland's brigade was not engaged at Fisher's Hill, being detached to picket the gaps in the rear.

I will mention in connection with this engagement that the cavalry, being on the left and the first attacked, are generally supposed to have been the first to give way, and are accountable for the disaster of that day. I will state that the infantry brigades sent to the support of the cavalry broke while the cavalry were still engaged and did not reach the point of attack. That the only fighting done on the left of the line was by the cavalry, and I believe if they had been supported that the enemy would have been forced back.

On the 26th of September the enemy attacked and drove in my picket near Port Republic. McCausland's and Imboden's brigades were moved out, dismounted, and checked the enemy's advance after a severe engagement.

---

* Not found.

October 2, attacked Wilson's division of cavalry on the south side of the river at Bridgwater and drove them across and beyond. In this engagement Lee's division, commanded by General Wickham, participated. On the 6th of October I received notice that the enemy was falling back from Harrisonburg, and I was directed by the lieutenant-general commanding to send a portion of my command through the Luray Valley and to follow the enemy with the remainder (see accompanying order from General Early, marked A).* McCausland's brigade was on duty holding Swift Run and Brown's Gaps and could not join me in time to take part in the pursuit. Imboden's brigade was ordered to move through the Luray Valley. With Jackson's and Johnson's brigades, numbering about 800 men effective, I moved to Keezletown, and the next morning found the enemy in small force (infantry) about two miles above Mount Jackson. They retired rapidly. I succeeded in capturing about twenty prisoners and saved two mills and several barns which they had prepared to burn. I pursued beyond Mount Jackson, and, on the hill above Edenburg, found the enemy's infantry drawn up in line of battle. At this time there was but one squadron of the enemy's cavalry in my front. I was in advance (on the turnpike) of General Rosser's command, which was then engaged with the enemy's cavalry on the Back road. I withdrew my command and encamped about five miles below Mount Jackson, and notified the commanding general of the position of the enemy in line. Our forces were at that time at New Market. Near dark a division of the enemy's cavalry came across from Rosser's front and engaged my pickets until dark, the infantry retiring. Receiving orders to follow the enemy (see accompanying paper marked B),* I moved at daylight and found a picket of two regiments of cavalry at Edenburg. Drove them to Woodstock, at which place I found a brigade of cavalry drawn up beyond the town and the place in flames. The picket was charged through the town and the support routed. Pushing on to the Four-Mile House I again found the infantry formed in line of battle and received the fire of their skirmish line. Still being in advance of General Rosser, I withdrew to Woodstock, notifying Generals Early and Rosser of the enemy in force in my front. After moving into camp, hearing General Rosser engaged on the Back road, I again advanced and engaged the enemy until dark to prevent them from concentrating on his front. Receiving orders from the lieutenant-general commanding to push on in the morning, I notified General Rosser of my intention to advance at daylight. I could see but two brigades of cavalry in my front, which had advanced since the night before. I drove them back to their infantry support. Hearing the firing on General Rosser's front retiring rapidly, and stragglers coming from his command with the statement that his force was broken, I withdrew my force slowly, the enemy pressing. As long as the country was broken and wooded my command retired in good order and checked the enemy from making a rapid pursuit. The enemy at this time brought a column from the Back road, which advanced steadily on my left while I was engaged in front. On reaching the open and unbroken country at Woodstock the enemy charged Johnson's brigade, which was completely broken. I was unable to rally this command. The brigade on the right of the road was unbroken and was detached to meet the force advancing on the left, and retired in good order. The enemy pursued in force to Edenburg, a small party following to Mount Jackson.

---

*Not found.

In this engagement I lost four pieces of artillery, only three of which were serviceable, one being dismounted the day before. The pieces were lost on account of the miserable condition of the horses. This battery (the Baltimore Battery) had just been newly equipped for the field. The officers and men did all they could to save the pieces after their horses gave out, unlimbering and firing until the enemy reached them. Each piece was lost singly. In the engagement I had but 800 effective men, and was opposed by a division in my front and a brigade on my left (see Sheridan's official report). The officers and men cannot be blamed for giving way when charged in such heavy force, having no arms to resist a charge mounted, not a saber or pistol being in the command. My command being at one time twenty-seven miles from any infantry support, without proper arms or discipline, will explain in a measure why the rout was so complete.

On the 18th instant my command, with the exception of McCausland's brigade, was ordered to Front Royal, to co-operate with the forces moving on the turnpike and to advance to Newtown or Winchester, as circumstances would admit (see accompanying order, marked D).* I found the enemy in small force at Guard Hill; they retired rapidly in the direction of Cedarville. On reaching the latter place I waited to communicate with the lieutenant-general commanding at Middletown. Not being able to hear from him, and judging from the firing that the enemy were being driven, I advanced on the Winchester road, intending to strike the pike near Kernstown, in the enemy's rear. On reaching a point six miles from Winchester it was evident from the firing that our forces were retiring and that the firing was above Newtown. I moved toward the latter place, hoping to strike the flank of the enemy while engaged with our forces. On reaching a point one mile from Newtown I was informed by scouts and citizens that our troops were being rapidly driven back and were at that time beyond Middletown. I then endeavored to strike the pike at Middletown, but found it occupied by the enemy in force. Having been unable to communicate with General Early through the day, and it being evident from the reports of stragglers and citizens that our troops had been driven back rapidly and to Strasburg, I decided to cross the river at Buckton Station and communicate from that point with General Early. I was unable to communicate from that point, our forces having fallen back beyond Fisher's Hill. My train being at Front Royal I moved to that place and awaited orders, which I received (see accompanying order marked —*) at daylight on the morning of the 20th, and moved my command to Milford. I met but a small force of the enemy—one brigade of cavalry, with two pieces of artillery.

In conclusion, I will state that this division has been wanting in organization, in discipline, and arms; that it is composed of good material. The senior officers are generally willing and equal to perform the duties required, and by proper instruction and attention will be able to make their commands equal to others who have had the benefit of longer service.

L. L. LOMAX,
Major-General, C. S. Cavalry.

Maj. H. B. McCLELLAN,
Adjutant-General Cavalry Corps.

---

* Not found.

CAMP NEAR MILFORD, November 13, 1864.

CAPTAIN: I reached this point with my command about 11 a. m. I inclose a report of the engagement of McCausland's brigade.* I trust his loss in prisoners is overestimated; the prisoners are coming rapidly. He had three regiments dismounted and the enemy charged in an open field. The general states that Merritt came in on the Newtown and Nineveh roads, and until then he had been successful. The ground shows evidence of a hard fight. My advance reached Cedarville about half an hour after the enemy left. I had not heard of the enemy being so low down on that road until after I passed through Cedarville.

Respectfully,

L. L. LOMAX.

Capt. W. K. MARTIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

No. 187.

Report of Brig. Gen. John McCausland, C. S. Army, commanding brigade, of operations November 12.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
November 13, 1864.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following brief report of the engagement on yesterday between my brigade and the cavalry of the enemy:

As you are aware I was left at Cedarville to guard the Winchester and Front Royal pike, and also the Cedarville and Middletown road. About 11 a. m. November 12 scouts reported the enemy advancing. I at once formed my command across the road, and put the two pieces of artillery under Captain Lurty in position so as to command the road. Soon the enemy drove in the pickets and advanced. They were soon checked and were afterward driven back. They formed and attacked the second time and were repulsed. I then advanced and drove Powell's division two miles, when he was re-enforced by a command supposed to be a division. They advanced, charged, broke my lines, and drove me to Front Royal, capturing the artillery and about 100 prisoners. I lost 10 killed and about 60 wounded. Owing to the absence of many officers I cannot state exactly the number of men killed, wounded, and missing, and the above may be considered as the nearest approximation that can now be made. I made the best fight that could be made with the same number of men, and I considered it absolutely necessary to fight on account of the great danger that would have resulted had I fallen back to Guard Hill, and thereby exposed the whole Valley pike at Middletown to the enemy.

We have to regret the loss of many brave men and officers. Capt. C. I. Harvie, assistant adjutant and inspector general, mortally wounded; Lieut. Col. J. T. Radford, mortally wounded; Lieut. Col. J. A. Gibson, wounded and left near Cedarville; several lieutenants also wounded.

The men and officers behaved with great gallantry. The fight lasted from 12 m. to 3.30 p. m.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. McCAUSLAND,
Brigadier-General.

Capt. W. K. MARTIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

* See next, post.

No. 188.

Report of Col. Edwin G. Lee, Thirty-third Virginia Infantry, of operations September 28.

AFTON, September 29, 1864.

We whipped the enemy handsomely yesterday evening. Wickham's cavalry joined with my little command. We drove the enemy way beyond Waynesborough. If I have been promoted please send the official evidence of it to Waynesborough.

E. G. LEE,
Colonel, Commanding.

General KEMPER.

AUGUST 9-OCTOBER 14, 1864.—Mosby's operations.

REPORTS.

- No. 1.—Capt. Richard Blazer, Ninety-first Ohio Infantry, commanding Independent Scouts, of operations August 18-October 25.
No. 2.—Col. Henry S. Gansevoort, Thirteenth New York Cavalry, of operations September 8-15, September 24, and October 14.
No. 3.—Record of Board of Inquiry to investigate attack on Union supply train August 13.
No. 4.—General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army, of operations August 13, October 4 and 14.
No. 5.—Lieut. Col. John S. Mosby, Forty-third Virginia Cavalry Battalion.

No. 1.

Reports of Capt. Richard Blazer, Ninety-first Ohio Infantry, commanding Independent Scouts, of operations August 18-October 24.

MYERS' FORD, VA., September 4, 1864.

SIR: I came upon Mosby's guerrillas, 200 strong, at this place, and after a sharp fight of thirty minutes we succeeded in routing him, driving them three miles, over fences and through corn-fields. They fought with a will, but the seven-shooters proved too much for them. My loss is 1 killed and 4 wounded, 1 severely; his is, 1 commissioned officer and 6 privates killed, and 1 commissioned officer and 4 privates wounded. I have 6 prisoners; the circumstances are such that I am compelled to send them in. I have my wounded and entire command over the river. I will move to Charlestown to night.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. BLAZER,
Captain, Commanding Scouts.

Captain BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS INDEPENDENT SCOUTS,
Middletown, Va., October 24, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor of submitting the following report of the operations of my command since the 18th of August:

On the 18th, learning that a party of Mosby's guerrillas were in the vicinity of Myerstown, I proceeded to that place and overtook them near the Shenandoah River, and after a chase of three miles I drove them across the river, capturing one prisoner. The army having fallen back to Halltown, on the 25th, according to your orders, I went into Loudoun County, and after operating for several days I killed five of Mosby's gang and captured three prisoners. The army having again advanced to Berryville, on the night of the 3d of September I learned that Mosby with a considerable force was at Snickersville. Early on the morning of the 4th I crossed the river at Backus' Ford and moved up the river to where I could get up the mountain through the woods. I struck the pike east of the top of the mountain and moved on their camp. Finding that he had left during the night in the direction of Charlestown, I determined to follow. I recrossed the mountain through Lewis' Gap, and by a forced march I overtook them about 2 p. m. at Myers' Ford, and after a spirited fight of several minutes I completely routed them, with a loss on his part of 13 killed, 6 wounded, 5 prisoners, and 17 horses; my loss was 1 killed and 6 wounded. Since that I have had several small affairs with them, in which I have always defeated them, except twice. On the 20th Lieutenant Ewing with five men was attacked on the Berryville pike near the Opequon by a superior force and was all captured except himself. On the 23d Sergeant Fuller, of the Fifth Virginia Infantry, with ten men was attacked near Summit Point by fifty or sixty guerrillas; he fought them until he was overpowered and four of his men were killed, one wounded, and the rest all captured but three, who made their escape.

Having learned that a man by the name of Marshall was recruiting a company in the vicinity of Ashby's Gap, and that they were to organize on the 25th, I proceeded to their reported rendezvous near White Post, and completely surprised them, getting Marshall and four of his men, and capturing all his papers. In another affair below Front Royal I left eight of his murderers to keep company with some that [were] left by General Custer; these, with a number of others that I have picked up through the country, make an aggregate in killed, 44; wounded, 12; and prisoners, including 2 captured in the advance to Cedar Creek the first time, 12.

My entire loss is 5 men killed, 7 wounded, and 8 prisoners.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. BLAZER,

Captain, Commanding Independent Scouts.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL, ARMY OF WEST VIRGINIA.

No. 2.

Reports of Col. Henry S. Gansevoort, Thirteenth New York Cavalry, of operations September 8-15, September 24, and October 14.

HEADQUARTERS THIRTEENTH NEW YORK CAVALRY,
Near Falls Church, Va., September 15, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that according to orders from headquarters cavalry brigade a portion of the regiment, numbering 210 dismounted and 63 mounted men, including the brigade scouts, moved, under my command, on scout on the night of the 8th of September, 1864. The column crossed Fox's Ford, on Difficult Run, on the morning of the 9th of September after a march of thirteen miles, in which vicinity it encamped. At night-fall of the 9th of September it moved twelve miles to the vicinity of Coleman's, near Horse-Pen Run, and during the night of the 10th of September bivouacked, after a march of five miles, on the road to Good Hope Church, near Broad Run, its farther progress being delayed by a severe storm. On the night of the 11th of September the column encamped beyond Red Hill, after a march of ten miles, and reached one mile and a half of Aldie, at a covered point at the intersection of the Aldie pike and the Carolina road, on the night of the 12th of September. Here the command was concealed, and at daybreak of the 13th of September the town was entered by the mounted men, the roads in the vicinity having been ambuscaded during a portion of the night. Nothing was, however, accomplished. Information having been gained that Mosby, with a force, had gone down the Aldie pike the night of, but before, the arrival of the column at Aldie it was deemed best to move after him. The column reached Chantilly after a march of sixteen miles, and encamped on the night of the 14th, ambuscading all the roads in the vicinity.

On the morning of the 15th of September it resumed its march toward Fairfax, all indications and reports of scouts kept on the Centerville road and roads to left of the turnpike tending to show that Mosby, with a large force, but in divided parties, was on the left of the turnpike and between Vienna and Frying Pan. The scouts were driven from Flint Hill, but those at Fairfax reported that Mosby had been seen to pass through the Court-House toward Centerville a short time previous with two men. I dispatched five men to the Centerville road, about three miles distant, to intercept the party, fearing that more men might fail of an approach. Near Germantown three of this number returned and reported a fight with Mosby, in which two of the men had lost their horses and had taken to the woods, and that large parties of guerrillas were now on the right. On the return of the other men it was definitely ascertained that Mosby, or a person resembling him, had been wounded and had escaped. Mosby had certainly been in vicinity of Fairfax just previous to the action and had gone toward Centerville. People on the road had seen him, and from the description of his person and recognition of his picture by parties engaged, there seems to be some color for the report that he was in the action and was wounded, as he or the person in question was seen before riding off to throw up his hands and give signs of pain. This could be observed, as the action was at very close quarters. I dispatched a squadron to the scene shortly after and moved to Fairfax Court-House, sending a party of thirty dismounted men through Vienna to Lewinsville. The regiment reached camp at Falls Church after a march that day of fifteen miles from Chantilly.

During this scout the weather was almost constantly rainy, and violent storms prevented speedy movement which would perhaps have brought the column to Aldie in time for some success, and prevented a movement toward Middleburg and Rector's Cross-Roads, as intended. After the third day the men and horses subsisted on the country as directed. Twelve horses were taken from suspected rebel citizens, and all suspected houses searched on the line of march.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. S. GANSEVOORT,

Colonel Thirteenth New York Cavalry.

Lieut. E. Y. LANSING,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRTEENTH NEW YORK CAVALRY,
Near Falls Church, Va., September 28, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to state that the escort of 500 men under my command moved on the evening of the 24th of September through Centerville, and thence through Thoroughfare Gap, striking and following the line of the Manassas Gap Railroad through Rectortown to Piedmont. Near Piedmont the house of Joseph Blackwell was burned, as directed, together with the barns and extensive outhouses. A large quantity of ammunition, artillery harness, and equipments was destroyed, including a large quantity of pistols and carbines, which were concealed from search in the house, and whose destruction was only known by their reports. This evidently was Colonel Mosby's arsenal and headquarters, as was shown by some articles of clothing and equipments. Near this point, having heard the condition of the railroad beyond Piedmont, the engineer, to whose wishes, by order, I was subordinate, stated that he had sufficient information and desired to return as soon as possible in order to make his report. Having ascertained by moving in close proximity to Manassas Gap that there was no regular force, if any, in the gap, I pursued the enemy by a detachment a mile beyond Piedmont, and returned by the way of Middleburg and Aldie to this camp. The railroad was found to be in good repair, except the growth of grass on track to Piedmont; beyond it was ascertained to be torn up and in need of repair. Nothing of interest occurred en route, excepting frequent skirmishes with and charges on the enemy. I desire to mention Lieutenant Farrell, Sixteenth New York Cavalry, for his conduct in charge of the rear guard near Rectortown. There are conflicting reports regarding Colonel Mosby—some stating that he is dead; all that he is severely wounded and below Charlottesville, Va.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. S. GANSEVOORT,
Colonel Thirteenth New York Cavalry.

Lieut. E. Y. LANSING,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Cavalry Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY,
Near Piedmont, Va., October 15, 1864—1 p. m.

GENERAL: I have the honor to state that the portion of the Sixteenth New York under my command, being two squadrons, moved, as ordered, at an early hour this morning, by way of Orleans to White Plains, to report to Colonel Albright. This leaves the entire force under my command, four squadrons of my regiment, Thirteenth New York Cavalry. The movement last night, which resulted in the capture of Colonel Mosby's pieces, was engaged in by my regiment, two squadrons of the Sixteenth New York Cavalry, and two companies of the Fifth Pennsylvania Artillery. My surmise that this artillery was concealed in the long range of mountains called the Cobblers, was confirmed by a statement drawn from a prisoner, and it was determined to develop the locality. At 9 p. m. 14th instant the above force was moved over very intricate roads to a point at the base of the mountains, where a sort of bivouac was surprised and nine members of the battery captured, including Babcock, late captain C. S. Army, in charge of the artillery. This determined but little the localities of the pieces, and some time was vainly spent in skirmishing the mountain with my dismounted cavalry and Company E, Fifth Artillery. The localities of the pieces was even a secret not imparted to many of Mosby's men. By intimidation, however, when almost relinquishing the task, a driver of the artillery was forced to discover the trail of the pieces. By deploying skirmishers and moving up the precipitous side of the mountain, covered with heavy undergrowth, for about a mile and a half, and following its summit for some distance, the three-inch ordnance gun, 12-pounder howitzer, and two small mountain howitzers, with limber of caisson, sets of harness, and ammunition, were discovered in a dense thicket. These were drawn down the stony sides of the mountain to the command below, and thence to Piedmont, reaching camp at 6 a. m. to-day. I desire to mention Lieutenant Revell, Thirteenth New York Cavalry, and Captain Anderson, Company E, Fifth Artillery, who rendered valuable assistance. As desired, I have dismounted the pieces with the exception of the small mountain howitzer, weighing only 250 pounds, which I have repaired, replenished with ammunition, and would respectfully ask permission to retain with my regiment till it returns to camp. I have it drawn by two horses, and manned by old artillerists. The other three pieces are sent by train as you directed. Prisoners, seven of whom I send, report that a force is expected here from the rebel column in the Valley.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. S. GANSEVOORT,
Colonel Thirteenth New York Cavalry.

Major-General AUGUR,
Rectorstown, Va.

---

No. 3.

Record of Board of Inquiry to investigate attack on Union supply train August 13.

HDQRS. MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., September 8, 1864.

Proceedings of a Board of Inquiry convened at headquarters Military District of Harper's Ferry, at 9 a. m. September 8, 1864, by order of General Stevenson, commanding Military District of Harper's Ferry and president of the Board, pursuant to Special Orders, No. 10, headquarters Middle Military Division, August 20, 1864, to wit:

|                   |                                        |
|-------------------|----------------------------------------|
| SPECIAL ORDERS, } | HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION, |
| No. 10. }         | August 20, 1864.                |
| *                 | *                                      |

9. A Board of Inquiry, to consist of the following-named officers, is hereby convened to investigate into the late attack upon the Cavalry Reserve Brigade train and the burning of most of the same by the enemy, with a view of ascertaining who is accountable for the destruction of the train:

Brigadier-General Stevenson, commanding Military District of Harper's Ferry; Colonel Schoonmaker, Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry; Col. William P. Maulsby, First Maryland Potomac Home Brigade; Major Congdon, Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

And a subsequent order, of which the following is a copy, to wit:

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 19. }

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 29, 1864.

8. The following-named officers are relieved from duty on the Board convened to inquire into the loss of wagons, &c., near Berryville, Va., about the 12th instant: Colonel Schoonmaker, Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry; Major Congdon, Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry; and the following-named officers are appointed in their stead: Col. Samuel Graham, Fifth New York Artillery; Lieutenant-Colonel Cook, First Potomac Home Brigade, Maryland Volunteers.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

C. KINGSBURY, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

The majority of the Board, Brigadier-General Stevenson, Colonel Graham, and Lieutenant-Colonel Cook, being present, were duly sworn, as follows, by First Lieut. S. F. Adams, Fifth New York Volunteer Artillery, acting assistant adjutant-general—"You shall well and truly examine and inquire, according to your evidence, into the matter now before you, without partiality, favor, affection, prejudice, or hope of reward; so help you God"—and proceeded to the examination of the following papers relative to the case on hand:

No. 1.

HEADQUARTERS BRIGADE, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Winchester, August 13, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,

Assistant Adjutant-General and Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report my arrival here with the advance of my train at this 6 a. m. I did not bring a battery with me, as my staff officer sent into Harper's Ferry could not find or learn of one belonging to Major-General Emory's command. I beg to call your attention to the fact that the term of service of the two Ohio regiments of my brigade will expire on the 15th and 18th of this month. I am just informed that the rear of my train, consisting of the train of the Cavalry Corps, was attacked near Berryville and several wagons destroyed; none carried off. My rear guard was under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Miller, of the One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio, and, I am told, behaved well. All the wagons of the Sixth Corps, Nineteenth Corps, the Army of West Virginia, and my brigade train have arrived, as also the cattle herd. I have ordered Captain Mann, assistant quartermaster of the Nineteenth Corps, who was in charge of the train, to make a full report, as I am satisfied the loss was the result of neglect of duty and disobedience of orders on the part of those in charge of the cavalry train. The rear guard is not yet in; it is reported to be bringing in the largest portion of the cavalry train. I have made every exertion to get the train here safely, and owing to my having received orders to march at a late hour yesterday morning, I have been up all night marching. This, I hope, will excuse the brevity of this. I beg that, if I am to remain here, I may be supplied with a battery of artillery, to be sent me at once.

I am, colonel, respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN R. KENLY,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

P. S.—The loss of the rear guard was some four certainly killed; wounded, six.

No. 2.

HEADQUARTERS,
Winchester, August 14, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,

Assistant Adjutant-General and Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

COLONEL: In addition to my report of yesterday, in relation to the attack upon the train of the Cavalry Corps, I have the honor to report that ten wagons of the train, loaded, were brought into this town on yesterday by the quartermaster of the Sixth New York Cavalry, and that I unhitched the mules of my train and sent them back with a guard, by which means I brought in nineteen wagons loaded with supplies and forage for the Cavalry Corps. There are some wagons yet remaining at or about Berryville, which I am endeavoring to have brought in. I have turned over to Maj. W. E. Beardsley, of the Sixth New York Cavalry (whom I found had come up with the train), all the wagons thus far brought in, and ordered him to take all necessary steps to recover and expedite the forwarding of all the wagons, mules, and properties belonging to the Cavalry Corps. I have also the honor to forward you the report of Captain Mann, assistant quartermaster of volunteers, who was in charge of the train which was attacked.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN R. KENLY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

P. S.—Major Sawyer, paymaster of volunteers, who, it appears, came up with Cavalry Corps train from Harper's Ferry, is here, and all is safe with him.

No. 3.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 15, 1864.

Capt. W. H. H. EMMONS,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Reserve Brigade, Cavalry Corps:

SIR: I have the honor to report that on Friday, the 12th instant, I started from this place with five days' rations for 2,250 men and extra stores for sales to officers, in wagons. The wagon train of this brigade was composed of a few wagons carrying forage, ten wagons carrying subsistence stores, and the various regimental and headquarters wagons, and was in the rear of the entire train, which was commanded by Captain Mann, assistant quartermaster. From one mile this side of Charlestown the train was accompanied by a guard of infantry, said to be a brigade. About 2 a. m. of the 13th instant the rear of the train, i. e., the wagons belonging to the brigade, after much trouble, caused by the inexperience of the drivers and the newness of the mules to harness, went into park with the rest of the train (infantry and cavalry) at the stream this side of Berryville. It was daybreak in the morning before the first part of the train had hauled out of the park, and the wagons of the Second Brigade, which immediately preceded those of this brigade, were beginning to cross the stream when a few shots were fired by light howitzers from, I should think, a quarter of a mile distant into the part of the train which was yet in park, which were almost instantly accompanied by a small number of mounted men, charging as foragers, dressed in gray uniforms, and carrying only revolvers, which they used with more noise than precision. The charge and also the howitzer shots came from the side of the road toward Snicker's Gap. The guards who accompanied us, as far as I could see, threw down their arms and ran away without firing a shot. The party that made the attack took away all the mules and fired the wagons which they could not get off, and escaped without any molestation. All the wagons of this brigade were captured or destroyed, as far as I could learn, with the exception of one wagon, carrying officers' baggage of the First U. S. Cavalry. My opinion is that a company of fifty men might have saved the train without loss if they had made a stand in time. The property lost, for which I am responsible, was five days' rations for the brigade, stores destroyed for officers' supplies, all the quartermasters' and commissary property pertaining to the subsistence department of the brigade, and all my papers and vouchers of last month, and this including books, ration returns, invoices, and receipts, receipts for payments of commutation of rations, &c. A wound received at the time the train was attacked prevented my making an earlier report.

Very respectfully, sir, your obedient servant,

E. P. MCKINNEY,
Captain and Commissary of Subsistence, Reserve Brigade.

No. 4.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD BRIGADE, FIRST DIVISION, SIXTH ARMY CORPS,
August 14, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH:

SIR: In accordance with orders received from you last night, I have the honor to return to you the following report:

On the morning of the 12th, in pursuance to orders received from headquarters First Division, Sixth Corps, I marched my brigade to Winchester, arriving here at 12 m. I found a Confederate hospital established there under charge of Doctor Love and two assistant surgeons, C. S. Army. There were about sixty rebel wounded and thirty Federal, all reported serious cases. A post hospital of Merritt's brigade was also established. There were about forty wounded Federals in it. A number of our wounded are concealed by Union families, and they are very anxious to be removed toward Washington. There are several wounded rebel officers concealed in Winchester by secession families; also a number of wounded enlisted men. From information received before the arrival of Brigadier-General Kenly, I think that a thorough search should be made for prisoners, arms, and munitions of war. The Union families are anxious to have a thorough search made; are willing to submit to it themselves, and say that a thorough search has never been made in Winchester. On the afternoon of August 12, 160 guerrillas intended making a dash into Winchester (not knowing that an infantry force was there) by the Martinsburg pike. Learning this on my arrival there I placed the Twenty-third Pennsylvania Volunteers in position to capture them, and allowed no one to leave the city; but they (the rebels) crossed to the Berryville pike and skirmished with my pickets for an hour, showing only twenty or thirty men, then left. Brigadier-General Kenly arrived before the train in Winchester, about 8 a. m. on the 13th. The head of the train arrived at 9 a. m. The mules were so exhausted that it was necessary to water and feed before proceeding, and it was 12 m. before the train was closed up. At 12 m. I started the train for this point and arrived here at 7 p. m. with every wagon closed up. When I left General Kenly had about 150 men at Winchester. The train of Merritt's cavalry brigade was captured near Berryville while under General Kenly. Captain Mann, assistant quartermaster, in charge of the entire train, reports that there was no quartermaster with that part of the train; that they unhitched and fed without authority. Too much praise cannot be given the loyal Union families of Winchester. They attended our wounded night and day, and have used all their coffee, tea, sugar, &c., for sick and prisoners, so much so that they are in actual want themselves. When our prisoners passed through Winchester they supplied them, receiving insults from the rebel officers, and were ordered away; but the guard of enlisted men allowed them to distribute food secretly. They report our men (prisoners) starving and crying for food. I would respectfully suggest, if possible, that commissary stores be distributed among those Union families of Winchester who have used their supplies to feed our sick, wounded, and prisoners. It was reported in Winchester that a corps of the enemy had been sent to re-enforce Early, but nothing definite could be learned.

Very respectfully,

O. EDWARDS,
Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

No. 5.

ACTING ASSISTANT QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
CAVALRY RESERVE BRIGADE,
August 15, 1864.

Capt. W. H. H. EMMONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Cavalry Reserve Brigade:

SIR: On the 12th instant I received orders from Captain Mann, in charge of the army train, to move the train to the front. The order of march placed the cavalry train in the rear of all. At this time I had not been able to obtain more than 200 sacks of grain, although I had my wagons at the depot from morning until night the two previous days. Under these circumstances I thought best to send part of the train on under Captain McKinney, commissary of subsistence of the brigade, and remain myself with the empty wagons (seventeen) to hurry the loading of them, and bring them on that night or next morning. I could not get the teams loaded until near 1 p. m. on the 13th instant. In the meantime I learned the train had been captured. Herewith is Captain McKinney's report* of the circumstances attending the capture of the train.

The loss of the brigade is forty teams, six traveling forges. The train was loaded with regimental property, subsistence stores, forage, quartermaster's stores and clothing, camp and garrison equipage.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. DEAN,
First Lieutenant, Regimental Quartermaster First U. S. Cavalry, Acting Assistant Quartermaster Cavalry Reserve Brigade.

No. 6.

BERRYVILLE, VA., August 13, 1864.

ASSISTANT ADJUTANT-GENERAL TO GENERAL WEBER:

Maj. John Mosby attacked the rear of supply train en route for Winchester at this place at sunrise this morning and succeeded in destroying by fire about twenty wagons, and ran off the teams of twenty more. If teams and drivers with the necessary guards are sent here twenty wagons with their loads can be saved. I was camped with my command last night on the pike five miles from Winchester. Immediately on hearing of the attack on the train I moved my command to this place with all possible speed, and arrived here at 6.45 a. m. The enemy, discovering our approach, retreated in haste across the country. Our forces are following, but there is very little, if any, chance of recovering more property than I have mentioned above. Mosby had a mountain howitzer, which he used in the attack.

* See paper No. 3, ante.

Yours, respectfully,

P. M. FARRINGTON,
Major, Commanding First Rhode Island Cavalry.

After which the Board adjourned to meet at 9 a. m. following day.

HDQRS. MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., September 9, 1864.

Pursuant to adjournment, Board met at 9 a. m. this day, Brigadier-General Stevenson presiding, Colonel Graham and Lieutenant-Colonel Cook both being present.

Brigadier-General Kenly being duly sworn testified as follows:

On the morning of the 12th of August, while lying at Halltown, an orderly brought me from Harper's Ferry orders from Major-General Sheridan to escort a train to Winchester. The order directed me to reach Winchester that evening, the 12th. It was at 9.40 a. m. that I received the order. The order directed how the trains were to move, which was—first, the train of the Sixth Corps; second, of the Nineteenth Corps; third, that of the army of the Department of West Virginia; next, the Cavalry Corps train. I was also directed to bring with me General Emory's battery; that I would be held responsible for the safety of the train, and that it would be entirely under my control, or words to that effect.

Immediately after receipt of order I assembled my staff officers together and read the order to them and sent my aide-de-camp, Lieutenant Huidekoper, One hundred and fiftieth Pennsylvania Volunteers, into Harper's Ferry to hurry out the trains and bring up the battery. I then proceeded to issue my orders, which were to the following effect: That the train would move according to the order of General Sheridan. My own brigade train (General Kenly's) was put in the rear of the Cavalry Corps train. My brigade consisted of three small regiments, the Third Maryland, the One hundred and forty-ninth and One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio National Guards, the two latter 100-days' men. It was the turn of the One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio to be rear guard. My orders were, and so delivered to the colonels commanding, in writing: Two companies of the Third Maryland should precede the leading wagons of the train, and the remainder of the regiment was to be distributed in the train in the proportion of one company to every twenty wagons, counting from the head of the train. The companies of the One hundred and forty-ninth Ohio National Guard were to be distributed in the proportion of one company to every twenty or thirty wagons, counted from the rear of the wagons guarded by the Third Maryland. The One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio National Guard was directed to be distributed in the following manner: Two companies, under charge of the lieutenant-colonel commanding the regiment, were ordered to be posted in the rear of the last wagon of the train. There were but six companies in the regiment, and the remaining companies were directed to be distributed between every twenty wagons, counting from rearmost end of the train. I also ordered that should the battery report, one section of it should march at the head of the train, in the rear of the two companies of the advanced guard; one section in middle of train, supported by a company of infantry, and one section in the rear of the train, in advance of the two companies of the One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio.

At the time these orders were issued I was totally ignorant of the number of wagons that would constitute the train, except so far as I could judge of the number from seeing the wagons the preceding day lying inside of Bolivar Heights. These orders were issued, delivered to the regimental commanders, and the regiments ready to march before my aide returned, and before a single wagon had reached Halltown, where my troops were lying. Between 11 and 12 o'clock some wagons came down the road from Bolivar and halted where my troops were lying on the roadside. I rode toward them to ascertain who was in charge of them, but I could not learn from any one who was in charge, but was told by one of my staff officers, whom I sent to inquire, that there was a quartermaster over among a group of dismounted men near the roadside. I sent for him and directed him to report to me. He came promptly and reported that he was Captain Russell, quartermaster Sixth Corps, and in charge of the Sixth Corps train. I told him who I was, and that I was in charge of the escort of the train, and that I was exceedingly anxious to get the train started as soon as possible. All this time I supposed that the train in the road had been moved from Bolivar Heights by my aide, whom I sent for that purpose. A few wagons were slowly moving from Bolivar toward Halltown, when the head of the train, the leading wagons, commenced moving from Halltown. I rode up the road toward Charlestown to see the train pass. After nine wagons passed me so long an interval elapsed that I sent a staff officer to halt those wagons and learn by whose orders they had moved. He returned and reported that they were the wagons of a brigade of the Sixth Corps, and had been moved by the order of a wagon-master. I rode back to Halltown to see Captain Russell, quartermaster Sixth Corps. Before I met him an order in pencil writing was shown me, by whom issued I could not make out, directing that all the ammunition wagons should remain behind and be driven into Bolivar Heights. The mounted orderly who had the order referred to stated to me verbally that the orders were that all the ammunition should be left behind. I immediately sent an order to my ordnance officer, who was in charge of my ammunition train, to withdraw his train and remain behind. I now met Captain Russell, who informed me that the nine wagons referred to had moved without his orders. There was still a large gap between the rearmost wagon of those lying at Halltown and Bolivar Heights, a gap of at least a mile, although some disconnected wagons were passing from Bolivar Heights. At this time, about 1 p. m., my aide came from Harper's Ferry and reported to me that the trains all had their orders, other than those issued by me, and that there was so much confusion among them, and learning that Captain McGonnigle, General Sheridan's chief quartermaster, was in Harper's Ferry, he rode in to see, and to communicate my orders; that, after much inquiry, he found that he was at Captain Gardner's, post quartermaster at Harper's Ferry. He went there and was told by Captain Gardner that Captain McGonnigle was asleep; that he, McGonnigle, had ridden all the preceding night; that he, Captain Gardner, would not disturb him; that the necessary orders had been issued for starting the train. I asked my aide if he had brought the battery with him. He replied that he could not find it; that he had inquired of everybody and no one could tell him about it.

Upon learning that the trains had received their orders from some one other than myself, I presumed, and was so told, that the battery had received its orders. By 1.30 o'clock, as the wagons were coming rapidly over Bolivar Heights, I ordered the head of the train at Halltown to move forward, and the troops were commenced being distributed as the train moved on. I rode up the road to a point about midway between Halltown and Charlestown to see the train pass, and that the escort was in its proper positions. I remained at this point until between 3.30 and 4 o'clock, and seeing that the train was passing in a disconnected manner, with gaps between the wagons, shortly after taking my position at this point, I sent a staff officer, Lieutenant Alexander, to halt the train this side of Charlestown, to park it as it came up, and not suffer a wagon to leave until I sent him orders; and that otherwise the head of the train would be at Berryville before the rear left Halltown. Whilst at this point, I should think about 3 o'clock, Captain Russell, assistant quartermaster Sixth Corps, rode up to me and commenced deprecating the slow manner in which the train was coming up, and we both agreed that there must be some trouble behind at Bolivar Heights or Harper's Ferry. I was as yet ignorant that there was a quartermaster in charge of the train, and learning from him, on inquiring, that he was the senior quartermaster with the train, I ordered him to take charge of the train. I gave him the order of march of the train, which I found he was acquainted with, and told him that I had ordered my own brigade train to move in rear of the Cavalry Corps train; that no place had been assigned it, and I ordered it to march in the rear; and I think I told him that I ordered my ammunition train to remain behind, that such I understood to be the orders, that there were to be no ammunition wagons in the train. I inquired of Captain Russell if he knew how many wagons were in the train, as I wished to see if the escort were properly distributed. I think that his answer was that he judged that there were about 400 or 500, but that the number had not been reported to him. This conversation lasted but a few minutes, when Captain Russell sprang on his horse, and sent the persons who were with him to hurry up the trains, and started himself for the same purpose. About twenty minutes after Captain Russell left me, while still on the roadside watching and hurrying up the train as it passed, Captain Mann, assistant quartermaster Nineteenth Corps, rode up to where I was standing on the roadside and reported to me that he was in charge of the train. I told him that I had appointed Captain Russell, of the Sixth Corps, to take charge of and have entire control of the train; that he was the senior quartermaster with the train, as I had been informed. Captain Mann replied by taking from his pocket a written order, which I read, from Captain McGonnigle, chief quartermaster Middle Military Division, ordering Captain Mann to take charge of the train. In Captain Mann's orders, the order of march of the train was the same as I had issued, except that there was no mention made of my own brigade train. I called attention to this, and directed him to place my train in rear of Cavalry Corps train. I then sent a staff officer to find Captain Russell and to say to him that his appointment was revoked; that Captain Mann, quartermaster Nineteenth Corps, had been ordered by Captain McGonnigle to take charge of the train, and to make my apologies for having given him any unnecessary trouble.

I inquired of Captain Mann why it was that the wagons came along so slowly, and if he knew how many wagons would be in the train. He replied that he judged there would be about 600 wagons, and that there was a great deal of trouble getting the Cavalry Corps train started from Harper's Ferry. I explained to him (Captain Mann) the pressing nature of General Sheridan's order; that I believed the army would be out of supplies that night; that I was determined to get the train into Winchester by daylight next morning, so as to be ready to issue supplies next day, and that he must spare no exertion to get the train forward as promptly as possible. I also explained to him the disposition I had made of the escort. I then directed him to go to the rear, close up the train, see that rear guard was in its proper place in rear of rearmost wagon of the train, and that when he was ready to move to send me word; that I was going up to the head of the train near Charlestown. We both mounted; he rode down the road toward Halltown and I up toward Charlestown to the head of the train.

Whilst there, and at 4.15 p. m., I received a note from Captain Mann by an orderly, which was to the purport: "All is in order" (or the train is in order); "you can move on." I wrote on the note in pencil, "All right, I shall move," or "I am moving," and sent the note thus indorsed back to Captain Mann by the same orderly. The train had not started when I received the note, but I gave orders immediately for it to move, and it started within five minutes after I gave the order. While standing on the roadside between Halltown and Charlestown I judge that some 400 wagons had passed before I proceeded toward Charlestown to the head of the train, and I thought, from seeing the troops which passed me, that they were in position, according to my orders, as far as they had come up.

The train moved through Charlestown at 4.20 and took the road toward Berryville as I was ordered. I ordered two halts before I got to Berryville to refresh the men and enable the train to close up. At the halt before I got to Berryville, the last one, about sundown, several officers came to me and applied for permission to make coffee, which I refused. At this halt Captain Russell came to me and stated that it was desirable the animals should be watered; that many of them had been harnessed all day and had no water. I replied that it was my purpose to halt the train at the first water where it would be convenient to park the train and water the animals. I continued on with the train until we reached the stream at this side of and near to Berryville. I here ordered a halt, moving the advanced guard of two companies across the stream, and also a squad of some twenty men of the Sixth Corps whom I had organized at Halltown, and who had been directed and did march about 200 yards in advance of the escort. I then rode back to see Captain Russell, who was in advance of his train, to consult him about the proper method of parking the wagons so as the animals could be watered. He went to work at once to park the train on the road, and on both sides of it. I then ordered a picket-line to be established and went in person to attend to the execution of it. I found the squad of the Sixth Corps men lying in the road, and but one man in the squad obeyed my orders to get up. I then went to the commanding officer of the two companies that was in the road in advance of the train and ordered him to picket the road to Berryville, and to extend his pickets to the left of hill, which I pointed out to him. I also ordered two of my mounted orderlies to act as vedettes in advance of the picket-line. After seeing the picket-line established, I returned to the head of the train, where I found Captain McGonnigle. I inquired if he knew of any of our cavalry being at Berryville. He replied that there were none there, according to the best of his knowledge. At this moment some mounted men passed and I inquired who they were. They replied that they belonged to the Signal Corps. I requested Captain McGonnigle to see the officer in charge and request him to send his men out as vedettes, indicating the direction in which I wished they should be posted, which he promptly proceeded to do. It was now, I judge, about 10 p. m. Captain Fallon, of the Third Maryland Regiment, who was in charge of the two advance companies, asked me when I proposed starting. I replied that the trains were coming in nicely; that the animals were being watered, and I thought in about an hour. He answered that his men were so tired they would not even make coffee; that he thought that they ought to have about two hours' rest. I told him of the necessity of the case, and that he must be ready with his command to march when I gave the orders. At about 11 p. m. Captain McGonnigle came to me and stated that he thought the head of the train had better move on. I represented to him the condition of the men, who had been on their feet nearly all day, and that they were very much fatigued; that I would give them fifteen minutes more sleep and then order the advance. This I did, going in person to see the order obeyed. I found the men of the advance guard still lying in the road after the advance was ordered. Captain Fallon got his men up, called in his pickets, and at 11.30 started the train. The squad of the Sixth Corps, which had acted as an advance guard, did not and would not move, and I marched past them with the two leading companies of the escort. Before starting, Captain McGonnigle came to me and inquired if he should go to the head of the train or remain at the rear. I replied that Captain Mann had my orders to remain with the rear of the train, and that I would rather he would remain with the advance, and that I had left a staff officer, Lieutenant Huidekoper, with orders to remain and see that the wagons had all started, that the escort was in its proper places, and then ride forward and report to me; that I would be at the head of the train. The first balk on the march was occasioned by a large tree across the road, about two miles beyond Berryville (on leaving Berryville I took the direct road to Winchester). This was avoided (the tree) by turning into the woods on the left. The wagons moved very slowly through the woods, as it was very dark and the road not clearly defined. I remained there a short time and saw the wagons passing. There was no obstacle to the wagons passing through the woods to the left of the tree, and I went to the front. The next halt was occasioned by a very dangerous bridge, over which I hesitated to let the train pass. Whilst halting, I sent to discover if a road could not be found above or below the bridge. One was found on the right of the bridge, not far from it, which seemed as if it had been used. The wagons commenced passing over at this crossing, and after about a dozen had passed without any trouble, I again went forward to the head of the train. I supposed some fifty or sixty wagons had crossed when word was brought to me that a wagon had got choked and was broken down in the crossing. I ordered a halt, and as I was giving directions what to do, Captain Mann rode up from the rear. He said if I would send back, or give him my pioneer corps, which was composed of some eighteen or twenty men, and which I should have mentioned had marched in front of the advance companies from Halltown, he would or could repair the bridge. I directed Captain Mann to take charge of the pioneer corps, and send me word when the bridge was done and the train moving. This he did in about three-quarters of an hour after he left with the pioneers, and that the wagons were passing over the bridge nicely. I moved on until I came across a heavy sutler's wagon, which blocked up the road and was being plundered by a crowd of unarmed stragglers who had forced their way to the head of the train, despite my efforts to have them kept back. I succeeded in getting the wagon out of the road and the train moved on. I pushed on until I got within a mile and a half of the Opequon. At this point Captain Fallon came to me and said that his men could go no farther without a rest. Would I not halt? I ordered a halt and remained for fifteen minutes, when I again moved forward and crossed the Opequon with the advance of the train before daylight on the morning of the 13th.

Board adjourned to meet at 9 a. m. on Monday, September 12.

MONDAY, September 12, 1864.

Board met pursuant to adjournment. All present, General Stevenson presiding.

The examination of General Kenly was resumed, as follows:

General KENLY: Before I left Berryville the train was still coming in smoothly and in order. From a personal inspection, and judging from the number of wagons reported to me by Captain Mann, I felt satisfied at the time I left Berryville that the rear of the train would have left there by 2.30 or 3 o'clock in the morning, as it was my purpose to cross the Opequon before daylight with the head of the train. I personally superintended the crossing of the Opequon by the head of the train, and remained at the stream until some forty or fifty wagons had crossed it. I reached the heights overlooking the town of Winchester with the head of the train shortly after sunrise. I could discover no sign of a camp or any evidence whatever that our troops were at or near Winchester. Not a soldier could be seen. I immediately ordered a halt and directed Captain Russell to park his train, which was in the advance. Captain McGonnigle was with me. I told him that I thought he had better ride into town to ascertain what was to be done with the train, and when he learned to notify me. I awaited the return of Captain McGonnigle for from one and a half to two hours, during the whole of which time the train was coming in smoothly and being parked on the hills overlooking Winchester and in sight of it, when I received a note from Captain McGonnigle informing me that the army had moved; that Colonel Edwards, commanding a brigade of the Sixth Corps, was in town, and that he had orders for me, and that he, Captain McGonnigle, thought that the train had better be moved into town so that the animals could be fed and watered. I sent the note to Captain Russell, [informing him] that the suggestion of Captain McGonnigle was approved, and for him to remove the train into the town, which was promptly done. Before I left the spot, and before the train started, my aide, whom I had left at Berryville, returned and reported to me that the wagons on the road were coming on in order, but that there had been a great deal of trouble in getting the rear of the train started from Berryville. I inquired if Captain Mann was there. He replied that he was. I asked him if Lieutenant-Colonel Miller was there with his rear guard. He replied that he was, and had come to him for instructions; that there was a large train reported as coming up, which must have left Harper's Ferry long after the train which he was guarding, and he wished to know if he should remain to guard that. Mr. Huidekoper informed me that he told Colonel Miller that his, Colonel Miller's, orders were to guard the rear of the train, and he was to remain to guard these wagons now behind, and which were said to be coming up. Colonel Miller informed Lieutenant Huidekoper that the train coming up had no escort. Lieutenant Huidekoper further informed me that there appeared to be no one in charge of one of the cavalry trains in the rear, then lying at Berryville; that after repeated inquiries among the train, of teamsters and others, he was told that the officer who was in charge of the train had not left Harper's Ferry, but had turned it over to some one else, and that the teamsters had received orders to unhitch, feed, and water; that this was told him by several who were with this train. He inquired who gave such orders. They said they did not know. He said it was contrary to orders. I inquired of him if Captain Mann was exerting himself to get the train started. He replied that both Captain Mann and Colonel Miller were hard at work getting the teams hitched up and started. This report was made to me by Lieutenant Huidekoper while I was awaiting the report of Captain McGonnigle, who had gone into Winchester. After starting the train I rode into town to see Colonel Edwards. He gave me orders from General Sheridan's headquarters to turn over the train to him, and to garrison Winchester with my brigade until further orders. Whilst engaged in writing a note to Colonel Forsyth, reporting the arrival of the train, some one came in and said the rear of the train had been attacked. After a few inquiries I mounted my horse and galloped down the Berryville road, passing the train, which was moving slowly through the town. About half way between Winchester and the Opequon I met Captain Mann, who was riding toward Winchester. I hurriedly asked him if it were true that the rear of the train had been attacked. He said that it had; that he could not get it started; that he himself had helped to hitch up the mules; that some of the wagons had been captured, but that the rebels had been driven off. I inquired of him if the rear guard was there at the time of the attack. He replied that it was. My next question was, "How did they behave?" He replied that they behaved well, and that the train was coming on. I told him that the train had been ordered into Winchester to feed and water, and I sent a staff officer with orders to Colonel Brown, commanding the One hundred and forty-ninth Ohio, to move to the support of Colonel Miller, if he needed it, with his whole regiment; that I would hold the crossing at the Opequon with the Third Maryland. In the course of an hour and a half, the train still crossing, my staff officer returned with a report from Colonel Brown that twelve wagons were burned and thirteen more or less injured, and that the mules had been run off; that the rebels had gone and he wanted instructions. Subsequently to this he sent me word that if I would send him the teams he thought he would be able to bring in nearly all the wagons. I immediately sent into town for Captain Mann, with orders to him to send all the teams that he could spare from the train to bring up the wagons from which the mules had been run off. Captain Mann could not be found, and I unhitched the teams of my own train and sent them back to Colonel Brown, who with them brought up nineteen loaded wagons when he came up in the evening with his command, and what was left of the One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio. I also received information that there were some killed and wounded men lying at Berryville (in the attack on the train six of the rear guard had been killed and nine wounded), and a paymaster, with his funds, who wished to be brought to Winchester. I sent ambulances out, brought in such of the wounded as could be moved, and the paymaster and his funds.

At this stage of the proceedings General Kenly filed the original orders issued by him to Colonel Gilpin and the other commanding officers of the escort before the train started. The two other regiments other than Colonel Gilpin's (the Third Maryland) were 100-days' men, and have since been ordered to Columbus, Ohio, to be mustered out of service. The following is a copy of the original order referred to:

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS KENLY'S BRIGADE,
Halltown, Va., August 12, 1864.

* The brigade will march at once to escort the trains of the army to Winchester by the Berryville pike. The trains will march in the following order: First, trains of the Sixth Army Corps; second, trains of the Nineteenth Army Corps; third, trains of the Army of West Virginia; fourth, trains of the Cavalry Corps; fifth, trains of Kenly's brigade. The troops will march and be distributed in the following order:

1. Two companies of the Third Maryland Potomac Home Brigade, and the remaining companies of this regiment between every twenty wagons of the train.

2. The One hundred and forty-ninth Regiment Ohio National Guard will be distributed by company between every thirty wagons next following those guarded by the Third Maryland Regiment.

3. The One hundred and forty-fourth Regiment Ohio National Guard will be distributed in the following manner: two companies to follow the rearmost wagon as a rear guard, and the remaining companies between every twenty wagons, counting from the rearmost.

Should the battery belonging to General Emory's command report for duty it will march as follows: one section in rear of the two leading companies; one section in the center of the train, in rear of a company of infantry, and one section in the rear of the train, in front of the two rear companies of the One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio National Guard. Commanding officers of regiments and the officer commanding the battery will personally attend to the posting and distribution of their commands in accordance with these orders, and will give their personal supervision to the safe escort of the train to Winchester. For this purpose they will have entire control of the march of the train under their escort, subject to the orders of the brigadier-general commanding, who will be habitually at the head of the train.

It is of importance that the train should reach Winchester as speedily as possible. Commanding officers will be held responsible that no unnecessary delays occur. Should the train be attacked or any serious obstacle intervene to its march regimental commanders will transmit the intelligence promptly to the brigadier-general commanding, and give to each other such support and assistance as may be needed.

By command of Brigadier-General Kenly:

WILL. W. PEABODY,
Captain and Acting [Assistant] Adjutant-General.

[Indorsement.]

HDQRS. THIRD MARYLAND VOLUNTEERS, POTOMAC HOME BRIGADE,
Maryland Heights, September 9, 1864.

I hereby certify that the within is the original order issued by Brigadier-General Kenly, commanding Separate Brigade, to be executed in guarding the trains from Halltown to Winchester.

CHAS. GILPIN,
Colonel, Commanding Third Maryland Volunteers.

Board adjourned to meet at 2 o'clock the following day, Tuesday, 13th.

TUESDAY, September 13, 1864.

Board met pursuant to adjournment, but owing to illness of Lieutenant-Colonel Cook transacted no business, and adjourned to meet at 9 a. m. on Wednesday, the 14th.

WEDNESDAY, September 14, 1864.

Board met at 9 a. m. pursuant to adjournment, General Stevenson presiding, and Colonel Graham and Lieutenant-Colonel Cook both being present.

Captain Mann, quartermaster First Division, Nineteenth Army Corps, was duly sworn, and testified as follows:

On receiving orders from chief quartermaster I ordered the several trains to hitch up in readiness to move. There were in the neighborhood of 525 wagons in the train to go forward. The advance left Harper's Ferry about 10.30 a. m. August 12, and from some reason unknown to me the cavalry trains did not follow promptly. We marched until about 11 p. m. without feeding or watering men or animals, when we arrived at a small creek about one mile this side of Berryville. At that point Captain McGonnigle, acting chief quartermaster Middle Military Division, was present and ordered the trains to be parked long enough to water the animals and make coffee for the men—the Sixth Corps train parked on the right side of the road; the Nineteenth on the left; the Army of West Virginia, Eighth Army Corps, on the right of the Sixth Corps, I think; the Cavalry Corps to the rear of the place where the Sixth Corps had parked, and partially on the same ground. The train required about two and a half hours to pass a given point. The Sixth Corps train moved out between 12 and 1 a. m., leaving, consequently, before the cavalry train arrived. They were followed by the Nineteenth Corps in regular order, and this followed by the train of the Army of West Virginia. When the train commenced moving General Kenly gave me the following orders, in presence of Captain McGonnigle, chief quartermaster: “I consider this the most dangerous point in the route. I desire you to remain here, therefore, until every wagon has passed.” When the wagons of the Army of West Virginia were moving out my chief wagon-master reported to me that the cavalry trains were unhooked and feeding their stock. I immediately went to those trains, roused the officers in charge, ordering them to hook up their teams and start immediately, telling them we were in danger of an attack. Upon passing among the trains I discovered one train that was not being hooked up, and I endeavored to find some officer in charge, but without effect. I then passed through the train again to find a wagon-master, but was unable to do so. It was now nearly daylight and I dismounted and woke up the drivers myself, one by one, ordering them to immediately hook up their teams. I am under the impression that the animals of this train were unharnessed, but I am not positive. The drivers were so long in getting this train ready that the sun had fairly risen when the enemy opened fire upon us, throwing three shells. Upon the explosion of the second shell I reported to the lieutenant-colonel commanding the rear guard for instructions. At this time the train was not entirely hooked up, the lead and swing mules being harnessed to their wagons, and the wheel mules in the act of being hooked. Upon the explosion of the first shell many of the drivers mounted their saddle mule, which was ready saddled, and fled. When I reported to the lieutenant-colonel he was rallying his men and forming them in line. I should think there were about seventy-five of them. I reported to the lieutenant-colonel that it was impossible to move the train to corral it, and asked for instructions. He replied he had none to give. I told him the rebel guns held the road, and if he had no instructions for me I would go around the hill and hurry the balance of the train away. He said, “Very well.” By this time the enemy’s cavalry, clothed mostly in blue, led by a man in civilian dress, wheeled into line from sets of fours and commenced firing with carbines and advancing toward the train. At this point I left the train, passed around the hill, and rejoined the balance of the train beyond Berryville. About three miles beyond Berryville I met two squadrons of cavalry going toward Berryville upon a trot. I gave them what information was in my power and hurried on with the balance of the train, which I reported to General Kenly near Winchester.

I am unable to give an accurate statement of the losses, as I had no report from the officer in command of the train lost, and did not again visit the place of disaster.

By the BOARD:

Question. In your opinion, did the rear guard do all that they could do to defend and save the train?

Answer. At the time I left I considered them doing their full duty. The lieutenant-colonel had drawn his men up in line and was perfectly cool and collected, although the force of the enemy in view outnumbered the rear guard.

Question. Did that portion of the cavalry train captured park and unharness their teams without orders, and who was the officer in charge?

Answer. They unhooked and fed without orders, or even reporting to me. I was unable to find any officer in charge of said train, either commissioned officer or wagon-master.

(The train here referred to, the one destroyed, was the Third Brigade Cavalry Reserve train.)

Question. What officer was placed in charge of that train?

Answer. The officer reported to me was Lieut. William Dean, acting assistant quartermaster of the Cavalry Reserve Brigade.

Question. Did the infantry rear guard return the fire of the enemy?

Answer. I did not see them fire, but heard return firing along the line.

Question. What was the strength of the rear guard?

Answer. I do not know, but there were about seventy-five men rallied by the lieutenant commanding.

Question. Were the men of the rear guard at the time of the attack held together as a body?

Answer. At the time of the attack they lay around promiscuously, asleep on the ground.

Question. Were there any pickets established for the protection of the train from surprise while parked?

Answer. There were none to my knowledge.

ORDERS TO CAPTAIN MANN.

Captain MANN,

Assistant Quartermaster :

DEAR SIR: The respective trains of the Sixth and Nineteenth Corps, trains of General Crook's command and cavalry, will start at once for Winchester, via Charlestown and Berryville, with proper loads, as directed by chief quartermasters of corps or commands. The trains will start in the following order on road: (1) Sixth Army Corps train; (2) Nineteenth Army Corps train; (3) Army and Department of West Virginia train; (4) Cavalry Division train; and must all arrive at Winchester this evening; trains to be escorted by Brigadier-General Kenly's command. Make your arrangements for starting trains, and call on me at office of Captain Gardner.

A. J. MCGONNIGLE,

Captain and Acting Chief Quartermaster.

After which the Board adjourned to 10 o'clock the following day.

Copy of report of the amount of transportation awaiting orders from the front, under charge of Capt. J. C. Mann, assistant quartermaster.

| Name of detachment.      | Number of wagons. | Quartermaster.               | Remarks.    |
|--------------------------|-------------------|------------------------------|-------------|
| General Crook's command: |                   |                              |             |
| First Brigade.....       | 45                | Lieut. H. H. Hornbrook ..... |             |
| Second Division .....    | 40                | Lieutenant Merrill.....      |             |
| Cavalry Division:        |                   |                              |             |
| Third Brigade.....       | 33                | Lieutenant Pinkham.....      |             |
| Reserve Brigade .....    | 50                | Lieutenant Dean.....         | Hay.        |
| First Brigade.....       | 41                | Lieutenant Ballard.....      |             |
| Second Brigade.....      | 25                | Lieut. C. A. Evarts.....     |             |
| Sixth Corps.....         | 243               | Capt. W. E. Morford.....     |             |
| Nineteenth Corps:        |                   |                              |             |
| Headquarters.....        | 12                | .....                        | Ammunition. |
| First Division .....     | 75                |                              |             |
| Second Division .....    | 25                |                              |             |
| Kenly's brigade.....     | 15                |                              |             |

THURSDAY, September 15, 1864.

Board met; full attendance, General Stevenson presiding. On account of absence of witness adjourned to following day.

FRIDAY, September 16, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to Wednesday, 21st, as Lieutenant-Colonel Cook was ordered to Hagerstown for some days on public business.

WEDNESDAY, September 21, 1864.

Board met pursuant to adjournment, but again adjourned to wait for witness.

THURSDAY, September 22, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following day.

FRIDAY, September 23, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following day.

SATURDAY, September 24, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following Monday.

MONDAY, September 26, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following day.

TUESDAY, September 27, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following day.

WEDNESDAY, September 28, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following day.

THURSDAY, September 29, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following day.

FRIDAY, September 30, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following day.

SATURDAY, October 1, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following Monday.

MONDAY, October 3, 1864.

Board met and adjourned to following day.

TUESDAY, October 4, 1864.

Board met; all present, General Stevenson presiding.

First Lieut. William Dean, First U. S. Cavalry, regimental quartermaster and acting assistant quartermaster of Cavalry Reserve Brigade train, being duly sworn, testified as follows:

Lieutenant DEAN: On or about the 12th of August I received orders from Captain Mann for all the army trains to move to Winchester. This order assigned the Cavalry Corps train a place in the order of march in the rear of the whole train. On this I went and consulted the quartermasters of the First and Second Brigades of my division to determine the order of our brigade trains. The determination was: The Second Brigade to take the lead, the First Brigade the second place, and the Cavalry Reserve Brigade the rear, thus placing it in the rear of all. Up to this time I had not been able to get forage to load my forage train—forage train of the brigade, seventeen wagons. Captain McKinney, the commissary of the brigade, had all his supplies loaded. On this I considered it best for the public service to send forward those wagons that were loaded with subsistence stores, &c., under the charge of Captain McKinney, the commissary of subsistence of the brigade, and I would remain behind with the forage train, empty, and hasten the loading of it, and have it ready, if possible, to go to the front under escort of General Duffié, who, I understood, was to go next morning; and, if possible, to bring on the proper supply train of the brigade, which was on its way from Washington to Harper's Ferry, and expected to arrive every moment. I was, however, unable to get my forage train loaded until on or about the 14th of August. In the meantime I heard that the train had been attacked and destroyed, and Captain McKinney wounded.

By the BOARD:

Question. Were the forage and subsistence trains both under your charge?

Answer. They were.

Question. For what reasons were the trains separated, the subsistence train being sent forward and the forage train remaining behind, and why did you remain behind with the forage train?

Answer. Because the forage train was not loaded. I considered it was necessary to send the rations forward to the command, and as it is my special duty to obtain forage I remained behind to hasten the loading and bring it forward as soon as possible. I had tried to get it loaded for two days previous, but the demand for forage was so great, owing to the unusual number of cavalry coming in, I did not succeed.

Lieutenant DEAN: I will here state I received, while the trains were being prepared, a note from General Kenly, addressed to quartermasters in charge of trains, stating that he was at Charlestown with his command waiting to take charge of trains going to the front, and wishing to be informed when the last train would arrive at Charlestown. I informed Captain McKinney, in charge of the rear train, of the contents of this note, and also Lieutenant Evarts, in charge of the Second Brigade train, who was to take general supervision of the three brigade trains, cavalry, and requested Captain McKinney to send word to General Kenly when his train would be up.

Board adjourned to meet at 10 o'clock the following day, Friday, 7th.

FRIDAY, October 7, 1864.

Board met; all present; issued an order or subpoena to Captain McKinney, commissary of subsistence, Cavalry Reserve Brigade, to appear before them at their next sitting, on Monday, October 10 instant, or as soon thereafter as practicable, and afterward adjourned to 10 o'clock on Monday, October 10.

MONDAY, October 10, 1864.

Board met and for want of witness again adjourned to meet on the call of the president.

SATURDAY, November 13, 1864.

Board met on call of the president, and having heard all the testimony that was available to elucidate the subject-matter of inquiry, find the following facts: That the guard was insufficient for the number of wagons constituting the train; that the loss of wagons was occasioned by the officer in charge, Capt. E. P. McKinney, commissary of subsistence of the Reserve Brigade, who, at the instance of First Lieut. William Dean, acting quartermaster, assumed to take charge of the train, failing to look after his train personally, and without orders permitting the train to go into park, the drivers to unhitch and unharness their animals and lie down and go to sleep, so that when attacked the wagons could not be moved.

The Board cannot, from the testimony, fix negligence upon any individual officer of the train guard, but is of opinion that there was no sufficient picket established whilst the train halted to prevent surprise or resist sudden attack. The testimony is conflicting as to the extent of the losses. The Board affirm the statement of Brigadier-General Kenly as closely approximating the losses.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,

Brigadier-General of Volunteers, President of the Board.

S. GRAHAM,

Colonel Fifth Artillery New York Volunteers.

R. ELLSWORTH COOK,

Lieut. Col. First Maryland Regt. Potomac Home Brigade Vols.

No. 4.

Reports of General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army, of operations August 13, October 4 and 14.

CHAFFIN'S BLUFF, August 16, 1864.

Colonel Mosby reports that he attacked the enemy's supply train near Berryville on the 13th; captured and destroyed 75 loaded wagons and secured over 200 prisoners, including several officers, between 500 and 600 horses and mules, upward of 200 beef-cattle, and many valuable stores. Considerable number of the enemy killed and wounded. His loss 2 killed and 3 wounded.

R. E. LEE,
General.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CHAFFIN'S BLUFF, October 9, 1864.

Colonel Mosby reports that a body of about a thousand of the enemy advanced up the Manassas road on the 4th [with] trains of cars loaded with railroad material and occupied Salem and Rectortown. He attacked them at Salem, defeating them, capturing fifty prisoners, all their baggage, camp equipage, stores, &c., and killed and wounded a considerable number. His loss, two wounded. Enemy is intrenched at Rectortown with two long trains of cars. The railroad is torn up and bridges burned in their rear and all communications cut.

R. E. LEE.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

CHAFFIN'S BLUFF, October 16, 1864.

On the 14th instant Colonel Mosby struck the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad at Duffield's; destroyed U. S. military train consisting of locomotive and ten cars, securing twenty prisoners and fifteen horses. Among the prisoners are two paymasters with $168,000 in Government funds.

R. E. LEE.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

No. 5.

Reports of Lieut. Col. John S. Mosby, Forty-third Virginia Cavalry Battalion.

HDQRS. 43D VIRGINIA PARTISAN RANGER BATTALION,
September 11, 1864.

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit, for the information of the commanding general, the following brief report of the operations of this command since the 1st day of March last:*

* For portion of report here omitted, see Vol. XXXIII, p. 248, and Vol. XXXVII, Part I, p. 2.

On August 9, with a detachment of thirty-seven men, I defeated a body of 100 cavalry at Fairfax Station, killing the captain commanding and 6 men, and capturing 21 prisoners and 34 horses. Two detachments sent out at the same time in Fairfax brought in 6 more prisoners and horses; another detachment of five sent to Duffield's Depot brought in 10 prisoners with their horses, &c.

On the morning of August 13 I attacked, near Berryville, the enemy's supply train, which was guarded by some 700 or 800 infantry and cavalry, under command of Brigadier-General Kenly. Completely routed the guard, with a loss of over 200 prisoners, including 3 lieutenants, besides several killed and wounded. Captured and destroyed 75 loaded wagons, and secured over 200 head of beef-cattle, between 500 and 600 horses and mules, and many valuable stores. My loss 2 killed and 3 wounded. My force numbered something over 300 men, with two mountain howitzers. One howitzer became disabled before being brought into action by breaking of a wheel; the other after firing a few rounds was rendered useless also by breaking of the carriage.

Too much praise cannot be awarded to Captains Richards and William Chapman, commanding their respective squadrons, for the bravery with which they scattered largely superior forces of the enemy. The gallant Capt. Sam Chapman, commanding Company E, although burning for the strife, was prudently held in reserve.

A few days after this Lieutenant Glascock, with fourteen men, captured 29 prisoners, including several officers, with their horses, arms, &c., near Kernstown. At the same time Captain Richards, with a small squad, killed a captain and captured 7 or 8 men and horses near Charlestown.

About August 20 I crossed with my command at Snicker's Gap, the enemy being near Berryville, sending the larger portion, under Capt. William Chapman, to operate around Berryville and restrain the enemy from devastating the country. With a small detachment I went to their rear, near Charlestown, and captured 12 prisoners and 10 horses. Captain Chapman, coming upon a portion of the enemy's cavalry which was engaged in burning houses, attacked and routed them. Such was the indignation of our men at witnessing some of the finest residences in that portion of the State enveloped in flames that no quarter was shown, and about 25 of them were shot to death for their villainy. About 30 horses were brought off, but no prisoners.

On Friday, September 3, with a squad of six men, I attacked the enemy's outposts in Fairfax, mortally wounding 1 and capturing 6 men and 11 horses.

On Sunday, September 5, I sent Capt. Sam Chapman, in command of Companies C and E, to harass the enemy around Berryville, while I made a detour to gain their rear near Charlestown. Arriving at the river, I left the two companies that were with me (A and B), under Lieutenant Nelson, on the east bank of the river, while, with six more, I went on a reconnaissance across previous to carrying my whole force over. Some time after a force of the enemy's cavalry crossed the mountain in their rear, surprised and stampeded them, killing 1, wounding 3, and capturing 3. One of the enemy's cavalry was killed and 5 wounded. With the six men with me I succeeded in capturing and bringing out safely about 25 prisoners, 2 ambulances, and 18 horses. Captain Chapman routed a largely superior force near Berryville, killing and wounding some 15 or 20, besides securing over 30 prisoners, including a captain and lieutenant, with their horses, arms, &c.

On September 8, with about thirty men, having gained a position in the enemy's rear near Charlestown, I divided the command for greater safety. One portion, under Captain Richards, captured a captain and 12 men, with their horses, &c.; with mine I captured a lieutenant and 5 men, with their horses, &c.

I have made no attempt, for it would be impossible, to embrace in this report a full recital of the innumerable affairs with the enemy in which the heroism of both men and officers of this command has been illustrated; yet the fame of their deeds will still live in the grateful remembrance of those whose homes and whose firesides their valor has defended.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. S. MOSBY,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

Lieutenant-Colonel TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
September 19, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to the Adjutant and Inspector General, for the information of the Department.

Attention is invited to the activity and skill of Colonel Mosby, and the intelligence and courage of the officers and men of his command, as displayed in this report. With the loss of little more than 20 men, he has killed, wounded, and captured during the period embraced in the report about 1,200 of the enemy and taken more than 1,600 horses and mules, 230 beef-cattle, and 85 wagons and ambulances, without counting many smaller operations. The services rendered by Colonel Mosby and his command in watching and reporting the enemy's movements have also been of great value. His operations have been highly creditable to himself and his command.

R. E. LEE,
General.

—
NEAR UPPERVILLE, VA., October 23, 1864.

GENERAL: I desire to make an explanation in reference to the capture of my artillery, which you have probably seen in Secretary Stanton's official bulletin. After the enemy had accumulated such a force on the Manassas road that I could no longer oppose their progress in front, I withdrew my command inside their lines north of the road, in order to be in a position to assail both Sheridan's communications in the Valley and also to strike the road whenever opportunity offered. My artillery was sent out to a place of concealment in Fauquier. Unfortunately one of my men deserted and guided the enemy to where it was. They captured no men or horses with it. Since their advance up the railroad we have killed and captured over 300 of them. My loss so far has been only four wounded and one captured.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. S. MOSBY,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

General R. E. LEE.

AUGUST 21, 1864.—Skirmish in Loudoun County, Va.

Reports of Lieut. Col. Roger E. Cook, First Maryland Potomac Home Brigade Infantry, commanding U. S. forces at Sandy Hook, Md.

HEADQUARTERS,
Sandy Hook, Md., August 22, 1864.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that agreeably to instructions from headquarters, a scouting party of the Loudoun (Virginia) Rangers crossed the river early in the morning of August 21, under command of Lieutenant Atwell, and proceeded in the direction of Leesburg, where they encountered a detachment of White's battalion; routed them, with a loss of three men mortally wounded. Thence proceeded to Dry Hollow and Grove Meeting-House, where they found five of Mosby's command; captured one, supposed to belong to the quartermaster's department; the other four made their escape. They had just murdered a sick, paroled Federal soldier. They then returned to camp by the way of Goose Creek Meeting-House, Harmony, and Waterford. Heard of no enemy in force north of Rectortown. Longstreet's command reported at Sperryville Gap and Front Royal. Four companies of White's and Mosby's commands are the only troops supposed to be in Loudoun County.

I am, captain, most respectfully, &c.,

R. E. COOK,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

Capt. H. M. BURLEIGH,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Harper's Ferry, Va.

HEADQUARTERS,
Sandy Hook, August 22, 1864.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to state that the report of a scout into Loudoun County, Va., by a detachment of the Loudoun Rangers on the 21st instant, forwarded to headquarters this date, embraces the operations and is the report of the scout ordered to Aldie. The reason of their failure to fully execute the order is not stated in their written report to these headquarters, but have since learned from the lieutenant commanding the scout that it was in consequence of detachment of White's or Mosby's command, 100 strong, lying at or near that place, and he, having only about twenty men, did not feel safe in attacking them.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. COOK,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding, &c.

Capt. H. M. BURLEIGH,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Harper's Ferry, Va.

AUGUST 22, 1864.—Affair at Cove Point, Md.Report of Lieut. George D. Odell, Fifth Massachusetts Colored Cavalry.*

AUGUST 23, 1864.

Maj. C. H. RAYMOND,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of Washington:

MAJOR: I have the honor to send a copy of a telegram received by me to-day. The party was sent by me to investigate the facts in relation to a complaint, referred to me from headquarters, of T. H. Quinan:

LEONARDTOWN, MD., August 23, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report, and give a particular and detailed account of the bushwhackers, as at present lies in my power:

On receiving your dispatch on the morning of the 16th relating to Doctor Quinan and the blockade-runners, I sent a sergeant and six men, with three days' rations, to Millstone Landing, with orders to leave their horses there, cross the Patuxent in a boat, and find Doctor Quinan, in Calvert County, and from him learn how to proceed further. It appears that he referred them to the provost-marshal, a civilian, at Drum Point, who retained them in that locality until yesterday morning. Expecting a schooner in to take on board some negroes, soon after daylight they got in a boat and went up to Cove Point, eight miles, and while some were eating breakfast on the beach the others were fired into a few rods from them by three men in a ravine near the road, and as the rest of the sergeant's men appeared, about a dozen more appeared from the ravine and said, "Come on, you Yankee sons of b—s," and fired another volley, which our men returned, though the sergeant fell and two men were wounded. My men then commenced falling back, and were closely followed by the bushwhackers, who now appeared in still stronger force, decorated in gay uniforms and armed mostly with carbines. My men became separated, and two struck out for the Government farms, supposing that the nearest point to Leonardtown, and arrived here about 1 o'clock this morning on foot, their horses being at Millstone Landing. I have re-enforced the squad at Millstone Landing and sent two men over to Calvert County again to learn more of the affair. My men and horses cannot stand a long march at present, or I should have gone myself with a squad. I have but fifteen present for mounted duty. I would respectfully recommend you to have a gun-boat and small force of infantry sent up to Drum Point for a few days. Cove Point is about thirty-five miles from here. I will make another report when my men get back.

I remain, very respectfully,

G. D. ODELL,
Lieutenant, Commanding Mounted Patrol.

Brigadier-General BARNES,
Commanding.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES BARNES,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

AUGUST 24, 1864.—Skirmish at Annandale, Va.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Lieut. Col. Henry H. Wells, Twenty-sixth Michigan Infantry, Provost-Marshal-General of Defenses South of the Potomac.

No. 2.—Capt. Joseph Schneider, Sixteenth New York Cavalry.

No. 1.

Report of Lieut. Col. Henry H. Wells, Twenty-sixth Michigan Infantry, Provost-Marshal-General of Defenses south of the Potomac.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., August 24, 1864.

My cavalry has just returned. Mosby, with about 250 men, attacked the stockade at Annandale at 5 o'clock. Posting his two pieces of artillery on the right and left of the road just out of carbine range, say twenty rods, fired once and sent flag to demand surrender; fired again, deploying his cavalry around the stockade, and again demanded a surrender. This was repeated three times and as often promptly refused, and on the last time he was told that if he sent a flag of truce again it would be fired on. His artillery firing was very wild, and though continued at intervals for over an hour no one was hit. We had one horse killed. A sergeant and two men on picket were captured. Mosby retreated and was pursued by Major Horton with a detachment from Falls Church. The enemy went out by the Warrenton road.

Respectfully,

H. H. WELLS,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Provost-Marshal-General.

Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

No. 2.

Report of Capt. Joseph Schneider, Sixteenth New York Cavalry.

HDQRS. DETACH. SIXTEENTH NEW YORK VOL. CAV.,

Annandale Stockade, Va., August 25, 1864.

SIR: Inclosed I have the honor to forward a report of the repulse of Mosby's forces in an attack on the stockade at Annandale, Va.:

Wednesday morning, at 13 minutes to 5 o'clock, the camp was alarmed by three shots fired by the picket on the Fairfax Court-House road; immediately after which the rebels who had taken the picket, consisting of one sergeant and three men, fired about three shells into our camp; then a detachment of about 100 men charged up toward our entrance; being received there by a volley, they swerved to the south, surrounding the south and east side of our camp. A flag of truce was sent demanding, in Colonel Mosby's name, the surrender of our camp. Under cover of this flag of truce they advanced their two pieces (field) to within 300 or 400 yards of our camp—one on the southwest, the other on the northwest corner. The question of surrendering being answered in the negative in the most decisive terms they commenced to bombard our camp in good earnest, one piece throwing shell, the other one grape. After firing nearly a dozen more shots they sent another flag of truce on the northwest side, where Captain Mickles had charge of the defenses, who told them not to come with any more flags of truce, as he would not respect them, which same answer two bearers of flags of truce received from me on the east side of the camp during a tour of inspection I made around the abatis. Finding their persuasions, both in shelling and negotiating, of no account, they, being probably warned of the approach of re-enforcements, after some further demonstrations, sent their field pieces up the Fairfax Court-House road, and then they themselves slowly retired. I had seen about 250 or 300 men and had no means of ascertaining their correct number, and thought it only a feint when they left; therefore I did not make any demonstrations to pursue them, although Companies B and C had their horses in readiness. The attack lasted nearly one hour and a half, and they fired from thirty to forty cannon shots, besides some small-arm practice. They wounded two horses of Company A and deranged some of our quarters and Company C's stable (old barn). The casualties on the rebel side, as far as we can learn, were one man and three horses killed and three men wounded. We also learned that their force was over 400 men when they passed the Court-House. Mrs. Tennison, who lives east of the camp, refused the laundresses to come in her house, and told them "get away from here into your camp," harboring at the same time some of the rebel leaders with whom she was acquainted. Finally, I have to state, that both officers and men, with but very few exceptions, behaved splendidly.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. SCHNEIDER,

Captain, 16th N. Y. Cav., Comdg. Detach. 16th N. Y. Vol. Cav.

N. B.—The re-enforcements arrived too late to be of any service to us, as it was two hours and ten minutes from the first shot to their arrival, under Major Horton, Sixteenth New York Volunteer Cavalry.

J. S.

First Lieut. E. Y. LANSING,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Cavalry Brigade.

SEPTEMBER 14, 1864.—Skirmish near Centerville, W. Va.

Report of Capt. Harrison H. Hagans, First West Virginia Cavalry.

BUCKHANNON, W. VA., September 15, 1864.

With sixteen men I pursued and overtook thirty horse-thieves thirty miles above this place. I killed four, wounded several, and drove them out. Another squad of twelve has made its appearance in another direction to-day. I have sent men after them. My loss in fight yesterday, one man wounded and two horses killed. The country is infested, and unless I have more force will be overrun.

H. H. HAGANS.

Colonel WILKINSON,

Commanding, Clarksburg, W. Va.

SEPTEMBER 17-28, 1864.—Witcher's expedition into West Virginia, including skirmishes at Buckhannon (27th-28th).

REPORTS.

No. 1.—General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army.

No. 2.—Lieut. Col. Vincent A. Witcher, Thirty-fourth Battalion Virginia Cavalry.

No. 1.

Report of General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army.

HEADQUARTERS,

Chaffin's Bluff, October 5, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel Witcher has returned from his expedition to Western Virginia. He visited Bulltown, Jacksonville, Westover, Buckhannon, Walkersville, and Weston. Reports that he destroyed a million dollars worth of stores, captured 300 prisoners, with their horses and equipments, brought out 500 horses, and 200 beef-cattle, and sustained no loss.

R. E. LEE.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON.

No. 2.

Report of Lieut. Col. Vincent A. Witcher, Thirty-fourth Battalion Virginia Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY COMMAND,
Lewis' Mill, Greenbrier County, W. Va., October 5, 1864.

CAPTAIN: In obedience to orders from department headquarters, I started with my command (Thirty-fourth Virginia Cavalry Battalion) from Jeffersonville, Tazewell County, Va., on the 17th day of September, passing by way of Narrows of New River to Lewisburg, Va., where I was joined by Capts. P. J. Thurmond's, W. D. Thurmond's, W. H. Payne's, J. Bungard's, [and] J. W. Amick's companies, making in all 523 men effective, 267 of which were infantry.

I left Lewisburg on the 22d instant, passed over the mountain by the Cold Knob route. I captured Bulltown on the evening of the 25th instant. This place was well fortified. The home-guard garrison was soon dispersed and the fortifications and cabins burned. Left Bulltown on the 26th instant. Here it was found that the infantry were so much worn down that it would be impossible for them to get to Weston (twenty-five miles) that day, which was all-important. I therefore dismounted the cavalry command and mounted as many of the infantry as there was horses (though a great many of the horses had broken down and been abandoned on the mountains) and let them ride ten miles, which brought the command to within fifteen miles of Weston. At this point the horses were again changed and the infantry was pushed on to within five and a half miles of Weston. They were then left under command of Capt. W. D. Thurmond to come up as fast as possible. I pressed the mounted men forward as rapidly as possible and got possession of Weston about 5 p. m. The surprise was complete. The home-guard pickets knew nothing of the advance until they were prisoners. In Weston there was a large amount of stores of all kinds, the useful articles being turned over to the command. Besides the stores the Exchange Bank was captured, the funds, amounting to $5,287.85, were turned over to Lieut. J. W. Branham, aide-de-camp, who will turn them over to the proper authorities for the use of the Confederate Government. Here I detached Capt. William H. Payne, with his company, and ordered him to proceed to Janelew, a point seven miles from Weston on the Clarksburg road. At this place he destroyed some stores, arms, and the telegraph.

On the 27th I left Weston and proceeded to Buckhannon. About five miles from that place we encountered one company of cavalry, which was driven at a charge through the town and out on the Clarksburg road. After remaining in Buckhannon a short time I passed out on the French Creek road to a point a mile; there went into camp and rested until 2 a. m. I then informed the battalion commanders that we would again take Buckhannon. The command moved off, and at daylight they charged and surrounded the town, capturing Maj. T. F. Lang, Third [Sixth] Virginia (bogus) Cavalry (Averell's brigade), 100 men and horses, with equipments complete. As soon as it was daylight I ordered the Government stores destroyed. They consisted of a very large quantity of quartermaster's, commissary, and medical stores, besides 1,000 stand of small-arms.

I have returned with 400 fresh horses, 200 beef-cattle; captured and paroled 300 prisoners. I mounted all the infantry.

The road traveled was a bridle-path for sixty miles. My men and horses suffered very much on the mountains for rations. I lost only one man; he was captured.

My thanks are due to Captain McFarlane, commanding Thirty-fourth Battalion Virginia Cavalry, also to Capts. P. J. and W. D. Thurmond and W. H. Payne, all of whom did their whole duty. Cadet Buffington behaved in a very gallant and soldiery manner during the raid.

I would most respectfully call the attention of the general commanding to the gallant and meritorious conduct of Lieut. J. W. Branham, aide-de-camp; also to Adjutant Wade, Thirty-fourth Battalion Virginia Cavalry, both of whom were at all times at their posts.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
V. A. WITCHER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

Capt. JOHN L. SANDFORD,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of Southwest Va. and East Tenn.

SEPTEMBER 23-OCTOBER 1, 1864.—Nounnan's expedition into the Kanawha Valley, W. Va., including skirmish at Coalsmouth (September 30).

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Brig. Gen. Jeremiah C. Sullivan, U. S. Army, commanding Kanawha Valley forces.

No. 2.—Maj. James H. Nounnan, Sixteenth Virginia Cavalry, commanding expedition.

No. 3.—Capt. Joshua E. Hobbs, Sixty-fourth Virginia Cavalry.

No. 1.

Report of Brig. Gen. Jeremiah C. Sullivan, U. S. Army, commanding Kanawha Valley forces.

CHARLESTON, October 1, 1864.

A force of the enemy, 150 strong, attacked the post at Coalsmouth at 9 o'clock last night. They were driven off; their loss was five wounded and one killed. The force from Winfield pursued and captured one prisoner.

J. C. SULLIVAN,
Brigadier-General.

Captain BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

No. 2.

Report of Maj. James H. Nounnan, Sixteenth Virginia Cavalry, commanding expedition.

DUBLIN, October 18, 1864.

Maj. J. STODDARD JOHNSTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General, &c.:

MAJOR: I inclose the report of Maj. J. H. Nounnan of an expedition to the Kanawha Valley. The part borne by Captain Hobbs, of Pride-more's regiment, is particularly worthy of notice.

I am, major, very respectfully, &c.,

JNO. ECHOLS,
Brigadier-General.

TAZEWELL COURT-HOUSE, VA., October 14, 1864.

GENERAL: In obedience to your instructions, I moved with the detachment under my command from this place on 23d ultimo in the direction of the Kanawha Valley and attacked the enemy, 100 strong, at Mouth of Coal on 30th ultimo at dark, but owing to the river being past fording, and all the ferry-boats having been removed to the east side of the river, where the enemy were intrenched, I failed to dislodge them, and after skirmishing with them across the river about two hours and securing a large supply of boots, shoes, heavy clothing, worsted goods, and hats from a store-boat on the west side of the river, I withdrew my command, with the loss of two wounded. The loss of the enemy was eight or ten killed and wounded. After leaving Mouth of Coal I moved down the Guyandotte turnpike and encamped at Hurricane Bridge for the purpose of feeding and resting, and went myself with an escort of eight men toward Winfield to secure reliable information concerning the enemy posted there, and if possible to hear from Colonel Witcher. On my way to camp, and when within four miles of it, I suddenly came upon a small squad of the enemy about 3 o'clock in the morning. We came together at full speed and were all mixed up with each other before we knew it, and our meeting was alike surprising to them as to myself. I was immediately unhorsed, and my escort, being greatly outnumbered, were speedily dispersed and four of them captured. Myself and the rest, under cover of the darkness, escaped through the fields, losing two horses. Before it was possible for me to reach camp, Captain Hobbs, the officer in charge, moved the command with unparalleled celerity in the direction of Logan Court-House, marching that day fifty-seven miles. This movement I am entirely unable to explain, for there was no enemy threatening us, and but few of the enemy's scouts to be seen along the roads, and none whatever pursued him. He was either actuated by cowardice or a determination to desert me and return to within our lines. I supposed that he would certainly report to his regiment in this county, but to my surprise and astonishment he crossed the Dry Fork of Sandy twenty-five miles west of this place on last Tuesday week and went in the direction of Lee County, where I understand he has arrived, and has never reported to his regiment. His march for speed is without precedent, and throughout his march he stripped every citizen of horses who happened to fall in his way, and committing some of the most outrageous depredations upon defenseless and loyal citizens.

The object of the expedition was fully accomplished, notwithstanding the course of Captain Hobbs, as the enemy's attention was drawn to the south side of the Kanawha, where they supposed I had a large force. There are nine companies of cavalry in the Valley from Guyandotte to Cannelton—seven companies of Seventh Virginia and two companies of New York cavalry, numbering in the aggregate 700 men. The companies are posted as follows: two at Guyandotte, one at Winfield, one at Coal, one at Charleston, two at Camp Piatt, and two at Cannelton. Situated as they are, 150 men can clear the lower Valley of the enemy, and I would not hesitate to attempt to drive the whole force from there with 200 good cavalry.

I will see you in a few days in person—about Thursday next. I have just arrived here, and am so worn out that I will rest a few days.

I am, general, very respectfully, your friend and obedient servant,

J. H. NOUNNAN,

Major, Commanding Detachment of Cavalry.

Brigadier-General ECHOLS, Comdg. Dept. of S. W. Va. and E. Tenn.

No. 3.

Report of Capt. Joshua E. Hobbs, Sixty-fourth Virginia Cavalry.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT SIXTY-FOURTH VIRGINIA CAVALRY,
Scott County, Va., October 15, 1864.

I was ordered with a detachment of fifty men to report to Maj. J. H. Nounnan, Sixteenth Virginia Cavalry, September 23. The major took command, moving in the direction of the Kanawha Valley, Va., passing through the mountains, and thence to the Valley.

September 30 attacked a Yankee force at the mouth of Coal River, forcing them across the river. We fought them an hour. Not being able to cross the river, as they had possession of the boats, we then retired from the field, intending to attack Winfield next morning at daylight, but finding our ammunition was nearly expended, we concluded to fall back on the James River and Kanawha turnpike near the Hurricane Bridge and encamp till next morning. As we could not hear from Colonel Witcher, Major Nounnan directed me where to encamp, and took a scout of ten men and went in the direction of Winfield to see if he could learn anything from Colonel Witcher; was to report next morning at daylight, at which time if he heard nothing from Witcher he said he intended to make his way out.

I remained in camp till 8 or 9 o'clock next morning, and one of his scouts came in; reported the major and eight of his scouts captured. I resolved to come out by the way of Tug Fork of Sandy. Getting information that the enemy was trying to cut me off at Wyoming Court-House, I thought to come out by the way of Rorick's Gap; but learning the Yankees were in Tazewell County, Va., and probably would cut me off at Jeffersonville, Va., I then struck in the direction of Grundy. When I reached there I found the Yankees were passing back to Kentucky. I managed to cross the Lavica road. Our scouts met. I then came through the mountains to Guest's Station; found a force had passed there just a few hours [before]. My horses were too much jaded, and no artillery to pursue them. I then came to Scott County, Va., where I could feed till I could hear from our regiment. I learn it is at Wytheville, Va., or near there.

Our loss was two wounded, one left in the hands of the enemy; major and eight men captured.

We had about seventy-five men in all. Straggling soldiers joined us as we went down; dodged out as we came back. I have about thirty or forty men with me.

Major, my stock is broke down, and it is impossible for me to march till my horses recuperate. I would be glad if you would permit me to report to Colonel Vandeventer, commanding in Lee County, Va., as there are bushwhackers and Yankee scouts running through the county destroying the crops, &c. If not permitted to report to him, to report to the lame corral in Lee County, Va., from Sixty-fourth Virginia Cavalry, till I can recruit my stock.

Major, I can gather a good many absentees belonging to our regiment in a short time if allowed to remain here a few days. If I am ordered to the regiment now I will be compelled to leave a portion of my stock.

I am, yours, respectfully,

JOSHUA E. HOBBS,

Capt., Comdg. Detachment of Sixty-fourth Regt. Virginia Cav,
 Major JOHNSTON,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Dept. of Southwest Va, and East Tenn.

[Indorsement.]

MAJOR: If Captain Hobbs should be ordered to report to me for a few days I am confident he can do good service. There are a great many absentees in Lee and Scott from Sixty-fourth Virginia and Edmundson's battalion.

Respectfully, &c.,

A. S. VANDEVENTER,
Colonel.

OCTOBER 7-11, 1864.—Operations in Montgomery County, Md.

Report of Brig. Gen. Erastus B. Tyler, U. S. Army, commanding First Separate Brigade, Eighth Army Corps.

HDQRS. FIRST SEPARATE BRIG., EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Relay House, October 13, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to submit the following report of the movements of the troops of my command since I received information of the presence of guerrillas in Maryland:

On the 7th instant I was informed by department headquarters that a small body of guerrillas had made their appearance at Sandy Springs, Montgomery County. I at once ordered Lieutenant-Colonel Knight, commanding First Delaware Cavalry, to proceed with his command to Sandy Springs to intercept them. Orders were also given Smith's Independent Company Maryland Cavalry to proceed to same point and report to Colonel Knight for the purpose of thoroughly scouring that whole country.

On the 8th instant orders were received from Major-General Halleck, through department headquarters, to send all the mounted forces toward Rockville—to call them in from all points for this purpose; also to send Rank's battery (H), Third Pennsylvania Artillery, which had four guns at Monrovia, to join the other forces and to cover the Washington Branch of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, as it was reported that Mosby with 800 men had crossed at Snicker's Gap and was about to make a raid into Maryland. These orders were complied with and the troops concentrated at Rockville.

On the 11th instant, at 5 p. m., I was informed by department headquarters that a telegram from Major-General Halleck had been received stating that Mosby had not crossed the Potomac and probably would not, but that my forces should remain in the field for the present, and that I should be left free to move as I might deem best against any guerrillas I might hear of. Immediately upon receipt of this order Colonel Knight was directed to order Rank's battery to Monrovia and to scour the country thoroughly between the railroad and Potomac; to arrest all persons that could not satisfactorily account for themselves; to have his men instructed so as to concentrate them rapidly at any point, and to report as often as possible to these headquarters. All of which was complied with as promptly as time and distance would permit.

I would respectfully state that the southern boundary of my command is described in orders as being on a straight line drawn from mouth of Monocacy River to Annapolis Junction, passing through Barnesville, Middlebrook, and Mechanicsville. The country south of this line and north of the Potomac is included in the Department of Washington. I have never been informed of the withdrawal of the forces guarding the different fords of the Potomac, except by the order referred to from General Halleck, yet for months past I have kept up daily patrols to the Potomac for my own protection, and when we have found General Augur's pickets withdrawn have guarded the fords as best we could until pickets were re-established. Since the loss of the three infantry regiments my remaining force has been kept nearer the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, with the protection of which I was specially charged. Any other duty or territory it may be the pleasure of my superiors to assign me, I beg to assure you shall receive my prompt attention, and such instructions as may be given me will be complied with if within the scope of my ability and power to accomplish. My entire mounted cavalry force is watching the fords and scouring the country between the Potomac and the railroad, and will continue until ordered to some other duty. Over 200 of the First Delaware Cavalry are without horses and have been since they joined my command. Requisitions have been twice forwarded and the issue strongly urged by my department commander and myself.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

E. B. TYLER,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War, Washington, D. C.

---

OCTOBER 11, 1864.—Skirmish near Petersburg, W. Va.

Report of Capt. Daniel Sheets, Sixth West Virginia Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS POST,

New Creek, Va., October 13, 1864.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that a squad of three "Swamps" have arrived here, 5 o'clock this p. m., in charge of a prisoner, one of Imboden's scouts. They report that the "Swamps," 198 men, under command of Captain Boggs, met the rebels under Harness on the morning of the 11th instant (Tuesday), about two miles south of Petersburg, and a fight took place, lasting about three hours; result not known. Captain Kelley encamped near Greenland Gap last night and moved in direction of Petersburg early this morning; my cavalry following soon after. It appears that the "Swamps" had anticipated the design of the rebels, and had made ample preparations to meet them. Seven deserters have arrived here this day.

Very respectfully, &c.,

DANIEL SHEETS,

Captain, Commanding Post.

Lieut. C. A. FREEMAN,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

OCTOBER 26, 1864.—Skirmish at Winfield, W. Va.

Report of Col. John H. Oley, Seventh West Virginia Cavalry.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., October 26, 1864.

Witcher, with 400 men, attacked Winfield at 3 this a. m., where one company of the Seventh Virginia Cavalry was stationed. He was repulsed and is retreating. Capt. Philip J. Thurmond fell into our hands mortally wounded and has since died. Detachment of the Seventh Virginia are in pursuit. The enemy have retreated from Loup Creek, with loss of three or four killed and several wounded.

JNO. H. OLEY,
Colonel.

Captain BOTSFORD,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

OCTOBER 28-29, 1864.—Operations about Snicker's Gap (28th) and skirmish (29th) at Upperville, Va.

Reports of Maj. Gen. Christopher C. Augur, U. S. Army.

RECTORTOWN, VA., October 29, 1864.

Early yesterday morning I sent a part of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry to near Snicker's Gap to arrest one of Mosby's boarding-house keepers. They have returned with him and 15 of Mosby's men, 17 horses and equipments, and a number of revolvers. The track is taken up to within about a mile of this place. I shall not leave here for White Plains probably until to-morrow.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff.

SALEM, VA., October 30, 1864.

A portion of the Eighth Illinois had a brush with Mosby yesterday near Upperville, and whipped him badly, killing 7 or 8, and capturing 9. The track will be taken up half way between this and Rectortown to-day. They are getting on very slowly—as fast, however, as they possibly can. I go to White Plains this morning.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General.

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff.

OCTOBER 29, 1864.—Action at Beverly, W. Va.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Col. Nathan Wilkinson, Sixth West Virginia Infantry, commanding U. S. forces West of Piedmont.

No. 2.—Lieut. Col. Robert Youart, Eighth Ohio Cavalry, commanding U. S. forces at Beverly.

No. 1.

Reports of Col. Nathan Wilkinson, Sixth West Virginia Infantry, commanding U. S. forces West of Piedmont.

CLARKSBURG, W. VA., October 29, 1864.

Major Hall, with 350 rebels, attacked Beverly this morning at daylight. After two hours' hard fighting the enemy was routed completely, with a loss of 115 prisoners, 2 surgeons, 15 killed. Major Hall is mortally wounded and in our hands. Our loss, Lieutenant Peck and 6 enlisted men killed; Major Shaw, Lieutenant Howell, and 20 enlisted men wounded. The rebels took to the mountains, very much demoralized.

N. WILKINSON,
Colonel, Commanding Forces.

Major-General KELLEY,
Cumberland, Md.

—
HEADQUARTERS FORCES WEST OF PIEDMONT,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Clarksburg, W. Va., November 11, 1864.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to herewith transmit Lieutenant-Colonel Youart's (Eighth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry) report of the action at Beverly, W. Va., October 29, 1864.

The rebels, under Major Hall, with a force of about 360 men, attacked Beverly at daybreak on that morning, and after two hours' hard fighting were splendidly repulsed, with a loss of, as follows: Killed in action, lieutenants, 2; enlisted men, 14. Drowned, enlisted men, 4. Total killed, 20. Prisoners wounded, major (Hall), 1; lieutenants, 2; enlisted men, 22; total wounded, 25. Prisoners uninjured, surgeons, 2; lieutenants, 1; enlisted men, 92; total, 95. Total killed, wounded, and uninjured, 140.

Of the uninjured prisoners, ninety-one have been sent to Clarksburg, and thence forwarded to Camp Chase, via Wheeling, W. Va. An investigation of the list of these prisoners discloses the fact that they represented no less than twenty-one distinct rebel regiments and batteries.

The casualties on our part were 46, as follows: Killed in action, lieutenant (Peck), 1; enlisted men, 8; total killed, 9. Wounded, major (J. W. Shaw, severely), 1; lieutenant (F. Howell, severely), 1; enlisted men—mortally, 1; severely, 13; slightly, 7; total wounded, 23. Missing in action, supposed to be captured, 14. Total casualties, all of the Eighth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, 46.

The force at Beverly was a detachment of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry, some of whom had no arms, and the greater number who were armed had only the Union carbine, which is the worst thing of the kind I have seen, and is an entirely unreliable weapon.

I would respectfully call the attention of the general commanding to the notice made by Lieut. Col. R. Youart of officers of his command who particularly distinguished themselves on that occasion.

I also inclose a list of the prisoners of war taken at Beverly, and received and forwarded from here to Camp Chase; also a list of the prisoners who were detained at Beverly by reason of wounds; also a list of our own killed, wounded, and missing,* and have the honor to be,

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. WILKINSON,
Colonel, Commanding Forces, &c.

Lieut. C. A. FREEMAN,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Cumberland, Md.

---

* Lists omitted.

A D D E N D A .

CEDAR CREEK, VA., *October 31, 1864.*Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland, Md. :

Please extend my thanks to the officers and men at Beverly for their brilliant victory of the 29th instant; a few more such will rid that country of these villains.

Respectfully,

GEORGE CROOK,
Major-General.

---

No. 2.

Report of Lieut. Col. Robert Youart, Eighth Ohio Cavalry, commanding U. S. forces at Beverly.

HDQRS. EIGHTH REGIMENT OHIO VOLUNTEER CAVALRY,
Beverly, W. Va., November 9, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that on the morning of the 29th of October last, about 5 a. m., Major Hall with a force of Confederates, 360 strong, from Jackson's command, made an attack on this detachment of the Eighth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry. They had expected to surprise us and catch the command asleep. As it was, the men were in ranks for reveille roll-call. The rebels had flanked the mounted pickets and patrols and crept up to the inner and dismounted picket-line, 150 yards from camp. At the pickets' challenge they charged with a yell for the camp over an open field. The men of my command at the rebel yell broke into their huts for their arms. The front company, F, was thrown out as skirmishers, but the rebel line swept it back. The other companies had half formed when the rebel fire scattered the 125 unarmed men of my command in flight through the camp and broke up for a time all organization. Then began a struggle among the quarters. In the darkness, friend and foe were hardly distinguishable. Both parties were taking and guarding prisoners at the same time. The rebel force divided and one-half was shifted to the rear of camp. When day broke I with other officers had rallied and formed about fifty men, and ordered a charge on the force in the rear. The rebels were started. Major Shaw fell severely wounded. A second charge routed the rebels. I then turned my attention to the force in front and routed it. I ordered immediate pursuit, which resulted in the capture of nearly all the force operating on the front of camp.

Our loss was: First Lieut. Joshua Peck, Company L, and 7 enlisted men killed; Second Lieut. Folger Howell, Company I, and 3 enlisted men mortally wounded; Maj. J. W. Shaw and 19 enlisted men wounded, and 13 enlisted men captured.

The rebel loss was: Killed in action, Lieutenants Gamble and Kearsley and 14 enlisted men. Four privates were drowned trying to escape. Maj. H. Hall, Sixty-second Virginia Infantry, and Lieut. M. C. Reger, Twenty-fifth Virginia Infantry, were wounded severely. Lieut. L. D. Lorentz, Lurty's (Virginia) battery, slightly, 8 enlisted men mortally and 14 severely and slightly, wounded; all captured. We captured uninjured, Surg. W. T. Hertzog, Forty-sixth Virginia Battalion; Asst. Surg. I. White, Sixty-second Virginia Infantry; Lieut. R. D. Lurty, Wing's [Lurty's] (Virginia) battery, and 92 enlisted men; also 90 stand of arms of various patterns. The prisoners represent eleven different regiments.

The unarmed men by hastening out of the fight and the worthlessness of the Union carbine with which my command is armed greatly endangered my success. I had about 200 men in the action.

Too much praise cannot be awarded the gallantry of the men, fighting an unknown and unexpected foe in the dark, and to the coolness and courage of the officers in hastening from hut to hut, oftentimes knocking over rebels to make their way, and finally organizing a sufficient force to charge and rout the enemy. I desire particularly to mention Maj. J. W. Shaw, Capts. C. H. Evans, R. Lyle, and L. Bechtel—Major Shaw for his gallantry in leading the charge in which he was wounded; Captain Evans, the first officer to check the fleeing men of the command and for forming a rallying point at which to effect organization, and subsequently for his promptness in pursuit; Captains Lyle and Bechtel for efficient assistance rendered; Lieuts. G. W. Cable, J. Peck, F. Howell, and George H. Potter, for setting the men a good example by their coolness and courage in executing orders.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. YOUART,

Lieutenant-Colonel Eighth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry.

Lieut. C. A. FREEMAN,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

NOVEMBER 1, 1864.—Affair at Green Spring Run, W. Va.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Bvt. Maj. Gen. Benjamin F. Kelley, U. S. Army.

No. 2.—Capt. Robert P. Kennedy, Assistant Adjutant-General, U. S. Army.

No. 1.

Report of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Benjamin F. Kelley, U. S. Army.

CUMBERLAND, November 1, 1864.

The post at Green Spring was attacked this a. m. at 4 o'clock by about 200 rebels, believed to be McNeill's and White's guerrillas. The captain was wounded and the first lieutenant killed, and most of the command, with their horses and equipments, captured. The troop train arrived just in time to prevent the capture of the express train west. Trains all safe. Train east has gone forward. The rebels have retreated with their captured property. My cavalry are after them, but I fear will not overtake them. The Twenty-first New York Cavalry left here this a. m. for Martinsburg, via Springfield, Bloomery Gap, Unger's Store, and Shanghai.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

Brigadier-General SEWARD,
Martinsburg.

No. 2.

Report of Capt. Robert P. Kennedy, Assistant Adjutant-General, U. S. Army.

CUMBERLAND, November 1, 1864.

Two hundred guerrillas attacked the railroad garrison of forty of the Fifteenth New York Cavalry at Green Spring Run Station this morning, and captured the greater portion of them. Lieutenant Lyon, in command, was badly wounded, and Lieutenant Hatch. Several of the men were killed and wounded. The guerrillas carried off the greater portion of their horses and arms, &c. No trains captured.

R. P. KENNEDY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Major-General CROOK.

---

NOVEMBER 5-12, 1864.—Witcher's operations in the Kanawha Valley, W. Va., including the capture of the U. S. steamers Barnum and Fawn on the Big Sandy River.

Reports of Lieut. Col. Vincent A. Witcher, Thirty-fourth Battalion Virginia Cavalry, commanding expedition.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
November 8, 1864.

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that I captured and burned two U. S. armed steamers, the Barnum and Fawn, on the 5th instant, with a quantity of small-arms, in Buffalo Shoals, in Big Sandy River. The enemy's loss, two killed and five prisoners. The others were enabled to escape, as I was unable to cross the river. Upon the same day I captured and destroyed a large amount of military stores at Mellonsburg, including the cooking utensils of one brigade, driving the enemy's cavalry under his guns and fortifications at Louisa.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
V. A. WITCHER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

General J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Comdg. Department of Western Virginia and East Tennessee.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
November 28, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded for the information of the Department. Colonel Witcher deserves great credit for the boldness and skill with which he has operated in the western part of this State.

For General R. E. Lee:

W. H. TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS EXPEDITION,
Logan Court-House, November 15, 1864.

GENERAL: Upon my recent expedition I destroyed many stores and two steam-boats upon the Big Sandy River. I also mounted fifty-seven recruits on captured horses. I have also brought out fifty odd head of fine beef-cattle, which are being sent to Mr. Nichols, in Burke's Garden. There are some indications of a cavalry raid to Saltville or Dublin. The enemy has in the Valley the Seventh Virginia Cavalry, at least 800 strong, and the First New York Cavalry, about 600.

I will reach Wyoming Court-House to-morrow, and will remain there ten days to gather up cattle and two companies of recruits organized in Wyoming for me. From that point I will proceed to Mercer Court-House, as it will be impossible to cross New River at any other point at the present state of the water but at the Narrows. I shall go this route, too, with a view of covering the cattle and for the purpose of being in a situation to move in any direction you may desire. However, after getting to Princeton, if I can by any possible means cross the river at Pack's Ferry I shall do so. My own force, if the recruits were armed, is fully capable of taking care of the enemy's force in the Kanawha Valley. My command, too, is in splendid fix; however, I regret to say that many of the men need clothing, and I have very little ammunition. I send my adjutant with this, and authority to make requisitions in my name. Please send all the clothing that can be spared, 300 guns and equipments, and 5,000 rounds of ammunition caliber .54, 5,000 caliber .58, and 5,000 caliber .69, and ammunition for the guns sent me.

I have here with me in camp four companies of recruits. I understand there is also two companies in Wyoming waiting for me. I have also in this county four or five other companies now in process of formation that have each fifteen or twenty men. As the enemy was, when I came here, vigorously drafting in the lower counties, I concluded to let them stay and fill up, with the assurance that they would come to join me. I have just heard from the Kanawha Valley. The enemy's troops say they are going to Pearisburg or Dublin. Should he go this route or to Saltville I will most certainly be on his front or rear. Princeton is the best point for me, should he do either. However, I am inclined to believe they are simply making arrangements to get after me, and to this end will be prepared for him, anyway. Should all of this turn out to be nothing I very much desire to make one more movement into Northwest Virginia this winter, and then dismount my command and act as infantry the balance of it, so as to discipline and organize the command. The whole command needs discipline and organization. I think, too, if this was done the command could be largely recruited this winter. Indeed, in my opinion, were the local organizations in this country disbanded the organization of a new regiment would only be a question of time—I mean a regiment in addition to the command I am now raising for Colonel Swann. My own battalion is already a regiment, and Swann will have, when I gather them together, seven companies, besides five or six unorganized squads. However, the organization of this regiment altogether depends upon the locality of my command this winter.

In conclusion, general, allow me to say that I regard this as a most auspicious time to send your Kentucky command into Kentucky, as I am induced to believe thousands of recruits might be secured out of Morgan's old command and the thousands of guerrillas scattered all over the State, and in consequence of the rigid conscription and the high political excitement now so prevalent all over the State, and I believe if this was done that Vaughn, Pridemore, and myself could be fully able to take care of the department; and I have but little doubt that 500 armed men could go anywhere in the northeastern and central portion of the State.

I am, in conclusion, general, with sentiments of high respect, your obedient servant,

V. A. WITCHER,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

P. S.—If I receive no further orders I will assemble Swann's command at Centerville and organize it. Should I hear nothing rendering it imprudent for me to do so I will also report to you in person at Wytheville, as it will only require about forty-eight hours to do so and return to my command. Should you disapprove of this or wish to communicate with me, I will have a courier at the Narrows of New River after the 19th instant until the command reaches Greenbrier. I will keep scouts constantly in the Kanawha Valley and watch every movement of the enemy. However, I think there is no danger from that direction, as it requires all his forces there for garrison purposes, and I have no doubt but that I could have taken the Valley upon this expedition if I had had two pieces of artillery. The enemy refused to fight me everywhere except from his forts and fortifications. It would have been foolish, you know, to have hurled cavalry against them.

Maj. Gen. J. C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Comdg. Department of Western Virginia and East Tennessee.

[Indorsement.]

HDQRS. DEPT. OF WESTERN VIRGINIA AND E. TENNESSEE,
Wytheville, November 29, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to call attention to that part relating to military operations. None of the suggestions in regard to new organizations, &c., will take effect without proper authority.

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Major-General.

NOVEMBER 6-8, 1864.—Expedition from New Creek to Moorefield, W. Va., and skirmish.

Report of Col. George R. Latham, Fifth West Virginia Cavalry, commanding expedition.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
New Creek, W. Va., November 9, 1864.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that at 9.30 a. m. on the 6th instant I left this place with 225 men of the Fifth and Sixth West Virginia Volunteer Cavalry and one gun of Battery L, First Illinois Artillery. We marched to Greenland Gap by about 5 p. m., where we rested till 9.30 p. m. We then started for Moorefield, which place we reached at 5 a. m. on the 7th instant. My purpose was to surprise the rebel command at that place. The surprise of the place was complete. I surrounded and took charge of the place quietly, before it was known to any of the inhabitants that we were in the neighborhood; but could not ascertain the position of the rebel camp until after it became light, when we were discovered by them. Some light skirmishing then occurred, but the greater portion of the rebels made good their escape. Their force consisted of about 100; was that recently commanded by McNeill, now commanded by Woodson. We captured eight of them, wounding one, all of whom were brought in. We suffered no loss. We captured and brought in the horses of the above-named prisoners and a few others, together with 46 cattle (beef) and 460 head of sheep. A portion of this stock had been driven into the country by the rebels on their raiding expeditions, and the balance belonged to the citizens who are rebel sympathizers. There is yet a considerable amount of stock suitable for army use, and a very large amount of forage in the vicinity of Moorefield, which is being collected and sent off to the rebel army. The rebel force at Moorefield was preparing for a raid upon our lines when we reached the place. We returned to this place at 5 p. m. on the 8th.

The conduct of the troops on the expedition was all that could have been desired.

I will forward a complete report or list of our captures, with descriptions, &c.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

GEO. R. LATHAM,

Colonel Fifth West Virginia Cavalry.

Lieut. C. A. FREEMAN,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Cumberland, Md.

---

NOVEMBER 27-28, 1864.—Skirmishes at Moorefield (27th and 28th), affair at New Creek (28th), and skirmish (28th) at Piedmont, W. Va.

REPORTS.

- No. 1.—Maj. Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, U. S. Army, commanding Middle Military Division.
- No. 2.—Maj. C. Seaforth Stewart, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, of the defenses of New Creek.
- No. 3.—Bvt. Maj. Gen. Benjamin F. Kelley, U. S. Army, commanding U. S. forces on railroad west of Hancock, Md.
- No. 4.—Col. George R. Latham, Fifth West Virginia Cavalry, commanding U. S. forces at New Creek, W. Va.
- No. 5.—Lieut. Col. Rufus E. Fleming, Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, of operations November 27.
- No. 6.—Maj. Peter J. Potts, Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, of operations November 26-December 1.
- No. 7.—Capt. John Fisher, Sixth West Virginia Infantry, of operations November 28.
- No. 8.—Capt. George W. Harrison, Assistant Quartermaster, U. S. Army, of property captured and destroyed November 28.
- No. 9.—Quartermaster Agent H. L. Winants, of operations November 28.
- No. 10.—General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army.
- No. 11.—Brig. Gen. Thomas L. Rosser, C. S. Army.

No. 1.

Report of Maj. Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, U. S. Army, commanding Middle Military Division.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

December 12, 1864.

GENERAL: Inclosed please find detailed report of the capture of the post of New Creek. The place had a sufficient garrison to resist an attack of from 5,000 to 7,000 men, but it was disgracefully given up. The expedition sent out by General Kelley to Moorefield was without my knowledge, and was on the bragging system, which always embraced too many combinations, and turns out to be bad strategy after guerrillas in a mountainous country.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, U. S. Army.

Brig. Gen. L. THOMAS,
Adjutant-General U. S. Army, Washington, D. C.

---

No. 2.

Report of Maj. C. Seaforth Stewart, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, of the defenses of New Creek.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
December 9, 1864.

SIR: In accordance with instructions received from the commanding general on the 5th instant, I proceeded to New Creek, Va., and have the honor to make the following report:

The position of New Creek is at the intersection of the valley of the New Creek with that of the Potomac, the general direction of the former being from southwest to northeast, and of the latter from northwest to southeast, or nearly at right angles. The New Creek valley is bounded on the east by a range of abrupt wooded hills or mountains, some 800 or 900 feet high, immediately at the base of which the creek runs. This stream is in general shallow, with stony bottom, of very variable width, from twelve to forty feet or more, and is reported easily crossed at most points. The main road or approach from the southward follows the west or left bank, and is said to be for miles good at all seasons. On the west of creek and road the ground is low, level, and cleared for a width of some 300 or 400 yards, then rises gradually for about the same distance to a range of steep wooded hills or mountains, forming the western boundary of the valley, the practicable width of which averages probably half a mile. At the northern extremity of this valley, and nearly at right angles to it, is a ridge some 200 feet high, separating it from the valley of the Potomac. This ridge is about 500 yards long, and closes the New Creek valley, leaving, however, at each of its extremities a gap some 300 or 400 yards in width. The one at the west end affords passage-way for a wood road; the other is nearly closed by a spur or lower continuation of the ridge, at one point leaving merely room for the main road and the bed of the New Creek. To the northward of the ridge, and parallel to it, is the Potomac valley, a mile and a half in length by from one half to three-quarters of a mile in width, the river being on the north side. Beyond the Potomac the ground rises rapidly to a wooded table-land about 250 feet above the river. This plateau is terminated at the eastward and westward by the ranges bounding the New Creek valley, which also closes the Potomac valley, leaving a passage for the river, the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad (which bisects the valley), and for a road to Piedmont, &c. The Potomac is from forty to sixty yards in width, rapid, and fordable at three or four points in the valley, the bottom stony. At one ford the depth was about three feet. The village is at the east end of the valley,

The ridge spoken of heretofore as crossing and terminating the New Creek valley commands it and the Potomac valley, forming a strong position. The southeastern summit is occupied by a work of moderately strong profile, the length of the interior crest being upward of 350 yards. This work sees the approach from the southward for upward of two miles, and also overlooks the valley of the Potomac. At the western extremity of the ridge is a one-gun epaulement, and some thirty or forty yards below it is a rifle-pit around this end, commanding the wood road referred to before; 600 or 900 men ought to hold the position against any party likely to be sent there by the enemy. The work is commanded from the top of the high hill about three-quarters of a mile to the eastward, but the approach to this hill is very difficult, and the enemy having attempted, in the fight of August 4, 1864, to occupy it, was, it is said, easily driven from it. This hill was formerly occupied by us, and a rifle-pit constructed part way down its southern slope. A road from the Potomac valley leading to the summit was then built by us along the northern slope. From portions of this hill a mountain road from Romney to the east end of the Potomac valley is seen and well commanded. Extensive repairs are needed in the scarp revetment of the fort at New Creek. The gorge should be closed, leaving merely a passage to be obstructed when required by a barrier. The four iron guns (two 12-pounders, one 6-pounder, and a rifled ordnance gun) were spiked by the enemy in the late raid. This work might be strengthened by an abatis. A tracing made to show the battle-field of August 4 gives roughly the general features of the position.

Respectfully submitted.

C. SEAFORTH STEWART,
Major of Engineers.

Bvt Brig. Gen. J. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff.

---

No. 3.

*Report of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Benjamin F. Kelley, U. S. Army, commanding
U. S. forces on railroad west of Hancock, Md.*

HDQRS. FORCES ON RAILROAD WEST OF HANCOCK, MD.,
Cumberland, Md., December 7, 1864.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following report of the operations of this command from the 26th to the 29th ultimo:

Information having been received on the 25th ultimo that the commands of McNeill and Woodson, rebel partisans, were operating in the vicinity of Moorefield, Hardy County, Va., I directed Col. G. R. Latham, Fifth West Virginia Cavalry, commanding at New Creek, to detach a portion of his force and attack, capture, or drive them off. To this end I instructed him to send a detachment up New Creek valley to approach Moorefield from the west, and another, via Romney and the Grassy Lick road, to strike the Moorefield and Winchester turnpike and approach Moorefield from the east, both to arrive before the place at daylight on the morning of the 28th. The State troops of Pendleton County to the number of 150 were also directed to cross (from North Fork) the Fork Mountain and occupy South Fork, for the purpose of cutting off the enemy if he attempted to escape via Brock's Gap up South Fork valley. The expedition moved as directed, Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming, Sixth Virginia Cavalry, with 120 men and one gun, proceeding up the valley, and Major Potts, of the same regiment, with 155 men, via Romney. Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming approached Moorefield in accordance with his instructions, but found the place, on the evening of the 27th, occupied by a large force of the enemy under General Rosser, and was driven back, with a loss of twenty men, his gun, one wagon, and one ambulance. Major Potts, also, who arrived the next morning, was compelled to retire after charging that portion of the rebel force left to guard the place, and brought off his command in comparative safety, crossing the mountains and avoiding all large detachments of the enemy, and arriving at a station on the railroad about thirteen miles west of New Creek on the 29th. Reference is made to the detailed reports of these officers, herewith submitted, which set forth the particulars of their operations.

Upon being advised, on the 27th, of the presence of the enemy in large force in the valley, and of the result of Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming's operations, I felt assured that the enemy would follow up the advantage he had gained by attacking New Creek or Cumberland, or both, and at once to guard against the possibility of a surprise, telegraphed to Colonel Latham, at New Creek, advising him of my belief, and ordering him to take measures for the defense of the post. To this dispatch, at midnight, Colonel Latham replied that, "he was prepared for them." With this assurance, I entertained no fears of a disaster. New Creek had been well fortified and was garrisoned at the time by about 700 men of all arms, principally dismounted cavalry, with three pieces of Battery L, First Illinois Light Artillery, and four pieces in the fort, and, in my judgment, could be successfully defended against any cavalry force the enemy could probably bring against it. The events justified my opinion as to the movements and intentions of the enemy, but failed to justify my reliance in the vigilance of the commanding officer of the post. The rebels, numbering probably 2,000 men, under Generals Rosser and Payne, after leaving strong detachments at Moorefield and Claysville, moved down the valley at once, following Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming; arrived before the place at 11.30 a. m. on the 28th, and after capturing all the pickets, charged the works and captured the artillery, without meeting scarcely the slightest resistance. The officers and men were apparently in their quarters and the horses in the stables, and "confusion worse confounded" at once ensued. No successful attempt was made to rally the men, and the Government buildings and property were in a few minutes in rebel hands. These buildings were at once fired, and the property therein collected destroyed, together with several houses and considerable merchandise, and other effects owned by private parties. A force was then detached from the main command, under a Major McDonald, formerly a resident of New Creek, and sent to Piedmont, five miles west of New Creek, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, to capture the small garrison and destroy the engine and machine shops at that place. This detachment, however, signally failed in its operations. The small force, numbering thirty-five men, defending the town, was collected together by the commanding officer, Captain Fisher, of the Sixth West Virginia Infantry, met the enemy, and fought him until compelled to give way, when it fell back to a position commanding the important buildings, and kept up a sharp fire on those attempting to fire them, compelling them, eventually, to retreat without accomplishing their object. They then rejoined the main rebel column at New Creek, and late in the evening the whole force moved rapidly up the valley, via Greenland Gap, Petersburg, and South Fork, to Brock's Gap. Major Potts, with his command, arriving at New Creek the next day, was promptly sent after the enemy to harass his rear, and recapture, if possible, a portion of the spoils, but failed to overtake him in his hurried retreat. Until authentic information of this retrograde movement was received, it was believed that an attack would also be made on Cumberland, and measures were at once taken to strengthen the garrison with a view to a successful defense. The limited available force of my command, east of the place, was hastily concentrated, forming a garrison of about 500 men. The additional arrival the next a. m. of three small regiments, ordered to me by the commanding general of the military division, placed Cumberland out of any threatened danger, and enabled me to take measures at once for the recapture and reoccupation of New Creek. A reconnaissance made in the morning with iron-clad cars having, however, indicated that the enemy had retreated the previous evening, but two regiments were sent to New Creek, which at once occupied the works.

I inclose herewith copies of the correspondence with Colonel Latham previous to the disaster, Colonel Latham's own report, and the report of Captain Fisher of the operations at Piedmont.

Regarding the losses at New Creek, I regret that this report must necessarily be left for the present incomplete. No detailed statement of the losses sustained by the regiments and detachments has yet been procured, owing principally to the fact that many of the commanding officers, with all their papers and books, were captured and carried off. The losses sustained by the Government stores forwarded to that point for issue have been ascertained and are enumerated in the statement* herewith submitted of the quartermaster and commissary of subsistence at that depot. A more full report will be made as soon as the necessary data can be procured. I submit for the present a statement of losses, which is believed to be approximately correct.

In prisoners there were taken about 450 officers and men. Of these it is believed that near 150 have since escaped during the hurried retreat of the enemy, and returned to their commands.

In artillery there were captured and carried off, four pieces of Battery L, First Illinois Artillery, one taken near Moorefield, the others at New Creek, two caissons, and most of the horses and harness of the two sections. The four pieces in the works were spiked, though not effectually, and will be rendered serviceable.

The horses captured, belonging to the cavalry and artillery commands, will probably reach 250.

No damage was done to the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, either to track or bridges, at or near New Creek or at Piedmont, and but little to the valuable and important works of the company at the latter place.

The losses in stores at the depot belonging to the quartermaster's and commissary departments, as shown by the accompanying statements, are as follows, in moneyed valuation:

|                                           |             |
|-------------------------------------------|-------------|
| Quartermaster's stores .....              | $72,000 00 |
| Commissary stores .....                   | 18,382 54   |
| Government building (original cost) ..... | 33,000 00   |
| Total .....                               | 123,382 54  |

New Creek since 1861 has been regarded as a suitable depot for stores intended for issue to the troops on line of railroad and at interior points, and to this view the place has been fortified and the needed buildings erected. As it was the only station on the line of the railroad west of Harper's Ferry where stores in considerable quantities were usually kept, I did not feel authorized to direct the establishment of a new depot, although doubting the policy of collecting there superfluous stores and supplies. I have ever labored to keep the quantity reduced to the minimum required and have protested against the recent directions of the chief supervising commissary of the Departments of Ohio and West Virginia to establish there the depot of the department, regarding this as an invitation to rebel raids, and thereupon the commissary stores not needed by the troops along the line of road were removed to a safer point and there issued. As it was, however, knowing that considerable stores were necessarily there, I so arranged the small force assigned to guard the western portion of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad as to allow a permanent garrison at the point indicated of about 800 effective men, thus constituting it the only post at which any considerable force was stationed in my command.

* Omitted.

In concluding this report, I feel constrained to add that, in my judgment, this disaster to our arms should not have occurred, but resulted from the failure of the commanding officer at the station to take the necessary precautions against surprise. It was his plain duty, with the information he possessed, waiving any question of orders, to place his command under arms and in or near the works, to there remain while there was the least probability of an attack, instead of relying on the pickets to give timely notice of the approach of the hostile force. Had a proper degree of vigilance been exercised the place could, in my judgment, have been successfully defended and a victory achieved. Entertaining this belief, I placed Colonel Latham in arrest and ordered him to Grafton, W. Va., to await trial by general court-martial.

The gallant conduct of Captain Fisher and his small command is commended to the favorable consideration of the major-general commanding the department. The stubborn resistance he interposed to the rebel incendiary force was the means of preserving nearly all the valuable buildings and other property of the railroad company at Piedmont, and entitles him to great praise.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

Capt. R. P. KENNEDY,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of West Virginia.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

CUMBERLAND, November 25, 1864.

Col. GEORGE R. LATHAM,

New Creek:

I will send the scout to Romney, with orders to move up the Trough road. Have you made arrangements with the "Swamps" to occupy South Fork above Moorefield? Direct the officer in command to inform the people of Moorefield and South Branch Valley that if they continue to harbor and feed McNeill's men that the whole valley will be laid waste like the Shenandoah Valley.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

NEW CREEK.

Major-General KELLEY:

Your dispatches received. The "Swamps" will occupy the South Fork Valley. I will investigate the matter when the expedition returns.

GEO. R. LATHAM,
Colonel.

[Inclosure No. 3.]

NEW CREEK, November 27, 1864—10.20 p. m.

Major-General KELLEY:

Colonel Fleming is defeated near Moorefield; his force routed. Rosser is said to be in command of rebels. Major Potts, with 150 men, has gone, via Hanging Rock, the Wardensville road, and is therefore in their rear. Will give particulars as I get them.

GEO. R. LATHAM,
Colonel.

[Inclosure No. 4.]

CUMBERLAND, November 27, 1864.

Colonel LATHAM,
New Creek:

Where did Colonel Fleming meet the enemy, and what was his principal strength—was it cavalry or infantry, or artillery?

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

[Inclosure No. 5.]

Brevet Major-General KELLEY,
Cumberland:

The fight commenced at the ford, about four miles from Moorefield; the rebels showed about 800 mounted men, nothing else.

GEO. R. LATHAM,
Colonel.

[Inclosure No. 6.]

CUMBERLAND, MD., November 27, 1864.

Colonel LATHAM,
New Creek:

Put your post in the best possible condition for defense, as it is probable that the rebels will attack you. Give me all the information you have of Fleming's defeat.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

[Inclosure No. 7.]

NEW CREEK, [November] 27, 1864—12.15 midnight.

General B. F. KELLEY:

Colonel Fleming has arrived. He thinks he has lost about twenty men; lost one gun, one wagon, and one ambulance. I am prepared for them.

GEO. R. LATHAM,
Colonel.

No. 4.

Report of Col. George R. Latham, Fifth West Virginia Cavalry, commanding U. S. forces at New Creek, W. Va.

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
New Creek, W. Va., December 1, 1864.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that I directed an expedition against the enemy at Moorefield, which started from Burlington on the 26th and 27th ultimo. Supposing at the time that there were about 150 men at Moorefield, under Woodson and McNeill, my force was divided into two parties, Major Potts taking 155 men via Romney to intersect the Wardensville road, ten miles east of Moorefield, and Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming, Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, taking 100 mounted men and one piece of artillery (of Battery L, First Illinois) on the direct road to Moorefield. I had also engaged the State scouts to the amount of 150 to occupy the South Fork Valley above Moorefield. These forces were to concentrate on the morning of the 28th. The rebel General Rosser, with his cavalry division, reached Moorefield on the 27th, and defeated Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming, capturing his artillery and about 20 men. Major Potts proceeded on his route without knowing Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming's fate until he arrived at Moorefield at the appointed time. I respectfully refer you to the accompanying reports of Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming and Major Potts for a further account of their operations. Permit me to say, however, that they both did very well under the circumstances. Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming's mounted men were armed with Enfield rifles and could not load on horseback, while the enemy's forces were elegantly mounted and equipped for mounted service. Major Potts, in my opinion, deserves much credit for his management, resulting in bringing his force successfully around Rosser's entire command. As soon as I learned of the defeat of Lieutenant-Colonel Fleming (about 9 p. m. 27th) I extended and strengthened my pickets and had the post put in proper state for defense.

On the morning of the 28th I took still further precaution, having pickets and patrols eight miles out, and was preparing a party of twenty mounted men to proceed to Burlington (twelve miles), when, about 11.30 o'clock, the camp was completely surprised by the enemy and captured almost without resistance. The enemy's advance were dressed in Federal uniforms and had taken all my pickets, who had mistaken them for Major Potts and his command. There were about 700 men here—200 artillerymen and about 500 cavalry—principally dismounted, including forty men of the Sixth West Virginia Infantry. Of these men there were about 160 armed, and they principally with arms which had been condemned. There were three field pieces of Battery L, First Illinois Artillery, and four pieces—two 12-pounders and two small pieces—in the fort, which was manned by Battery H, First West Virginia Artillery. The artillery was all taken first and the men were charged impetuously by a heavy column of the enemy; they were stampeded; to rally was impossible, and would have been certain capture. The place was then captured and much property lost.

I have 4 men wounded—do not know of any killed—and, from the best information I can get, there were 443 captured, at least 100 of whom have since escaped, and are still coming in. The enemy had 3 killed, among them an officer, and others wounded. I have lost much more heavily in proportion of officers than of men.

The rebel force consisted of three brigades, two of which were in this place with Generals Rosser and Payne, and one brigade remained several miles back. Their force is variously estimated, but according to the most reliable information I can get, I believe they had about 2,000 here and 1,000 kept back; about 1,000 to the brigade. They destroyed almost the entire town, private as well as public buildings, and some store-houses with large stocks of goods. The fort was not injured nor the guns taken from it; the field pieces were taken off; nor was the railroad destroyed. They left here about 4 p. m. and marched to Greenland, where they camped until the morning of the 29th, then moved on. I feel most deeply the disaster, and especially the stigma of a surprise, but without standing picket myself I cannot see that I could have been more vigilant.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

GEO. R. LATHAM,

Colonel Fifth West Virginia Cavalry, Commanding.

Capt. R. P. KENNEDY,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of West Virginia.

A D D E N D A .

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
New Creek, W. Va., November 30, 1864.

Capt. R. P. KENNEDY,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of West Virginia:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following: The loss of New Creek on the 28th instant, considering the manner of its loss, seems a disgraceful affair. The surprise was complete, and being the commanding officer I will have it to answer for. This I desire to do, as I claim to be able to establish that I had taken unusual precautions to obtain notice of any advance by the enemy. I had directed and instructed the advanced picket guards myself, and had pickets and patrols eight miles out on the road by which the enemy advanced. They, knowing that Major Potts of my command was out with about 150 men, provided an advance of about the same strength, dressed in Federal uniforms, and in this way deceived each picket—four several posts—and marched into camp without being recognized as an enemy, until, at a given signal, they drew their pistols and commenced firing on my men, both officers and men believing them to be Major Potts' command. They thus got possession of the artillery, and, having but 160 armed men in camp, they were almost immediately overpowered, as the whole rebel column, some 2,000 strong, dashed impetuously upon them. The panic and stampede became in a few moments hopelessly general; to rally was impossible.

This is the first disaster I have ever suffered in over three years' active service, and if there is blame attached to my management of the affair I most respectfully request that there be no peremptory orders affecting me without an investigation. I will forward a report to-morrow.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

GEO. R. LATHAM,

Colonel, Commanding.

[First indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS FORCES WEST OF HANCOCK,
Cumberland, Md., December 1, 1864.

Respectfully transmitted to headquarters Department of West Virginia.

Colonel Latham, for permitting the garrison at New Creek to be surprised by the enemy on the 28th ultimo, has been placed in arrest and ordered to Grafton to await further orders; this by orders of this date from these headquarters.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

[Second indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
December 4, 1864.

Respectfully forwarded to headquarters Middle Military Division.*
GEORGE CROOK,
Major-General.

---

No. 5.

Report of Lieut. Col. Rufus E. Fleming, Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, of operations November 27.

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH WEST VIRGINIA CAVALRY,
New Creek, W. Va., November 28, 1864.

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following report of the action which took place near Moorefield, W. Va., yesterday, 27th of November, 1864:

I marched out of Burlington on the morning of the 27th of November, 1864, with 120 men, cavalry and artillery. Two of the companies were armed entirely with Enfield rifles, and had never been in action. The other company was armed partly with revolvers and partly with Enfield rifles. I moved on until I was within about five miles of Moorefield, when the scouts reported a picket-post near the ford. From all the information I could frame, General Rosser was either at Moorefield, or would be there against the morning of the 28th. Under the circumstances, I thought best to throw a skirmish line across the river, and, if possible, ascertain if General Rosser was there before encamping for the night, and also for the purpose of opening communication with Major Potts, who had gone up the other valley. I then brought up the artillery and planted it at the ford, three miles this side of Moorefield, and formed two companies for a support. I then sent Lieutenant Blue, with six men, armed with revolvers, and about twenty-five men of the Fifth West Virginia Cavalry across the ford, at the same time placing a picket up the river for the purpose of ascertaining what might take place in Moorefield.

---

* Colonel Latham was tried by a general court-martial on the charges of "neglect of duty, disobedience of orders, and conduct to the prejudice of good order and military discipline;" found guilty, and sentenced to be dismissed the service of the United States. See General Orders, No. 7, Middle Military Division, January 11, 1865. By General Court-Martial Orders, No. 80, War Department, Adjutant-General's Office, March 19, 1865, this dismissal was revoked, and he was honorably mustered out of service, upon his own request, to date March 9, 1865.

When the force had crossed the river and had gone about one quarter of a mile a column of about 100 men emerged from the woods and charged it. At the same time a force of about 100 men charged the road from Moorefield. The advance at once fell back on the reserve, hotly pursued by the enemy. I then opened on them and drove them from the ford, but they turned at once and made for the lower ford. At the same time another column of 100 men emerged from the woods lower down, and also made for the lower ford. I saw that they were making for the pass, and gave orders at once to fall back, at the same time protecting my rear and right flank as well as I could under the circumstances. When opposite the lower ford I again unlimbered my artillery, but as soon as I got the range of the ford they commenced crossing, both above and below. I then moved off the advance and left the rear to skirmish, but while skirmishing with one portion of them another portion flanked them and got in the mouth of the gap. It then became a hand-to-hand fight with the rear. I intended to make a stand at the gap, but was so hotly pursued that I could not rally any portion of the men until it was too late. The gun lost one wheel and broke one axle at this end of the gap, and we were compelled to abandon it. We were also encumbered with one wagon and one ambulance, which were lost.

I cannot at the present ascertain the entire loss, but 20 men will cover it, 6 or 8 of whom were wounded and killed.

The picket which was placed up the river report a column of 500 men, which never moved out of Moorefield.

I desire to compliment the officers and men for their stubborn resistance against vastly superior numbers.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
R. E. FLEMING,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

[Col. GEORGE R. LATHAM.]

---

No. 6.

Reports of Maj. Peter J. Potts, Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, of operations November 26-December 1.

NEW CREEK, W. VA., November 30, 1864.

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that according to instructions from post headquarters, through Lieut. Col. R. E. Fleming, I proceeded from Burlington, W. Va., at 9 p. m. on the 26th instant, with 155 men; marched to Romney; camped for the night. Moved in the morning at 4 o'clock 27th instant; took the Grassy Lick road, leading across the mountains to Northwestern turnpike, which leads to the town of Moorefield, county seat of Hardy County, W. Va.; then moved along the Northwestern pike until within a few miles of Moorefield; camped for the night. Moved at 4 a. m. 28th instant; reached Moorefield at sunrise; captured some rebel pickets. A portion of my command charged the town (Moorefield), but was met by a superior force of the enemy's cavalry, and was driven from the town. Learning that the enemy had received large re-enforcements, I withdrew my command; crossed the river; traveled a mountain path leading to or near the town of Williamsport. From thence I proceeded to the left; crossed the mountain at Harrison's Gap; proceeded along a mountain path which leads to Elk Garden road, which road leads to Piedmont, but finding a large force of the enemy camped in my front, thought best to withdraw from that road and did so, and took a path leading across the mountain to the left of Bloomington to a small station on Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. When within a few miles of the station I camped for the night, leaving it (the camp) at 4 a. m. 29th instant, and arrived at Frankville, on Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, at 10 a. m., from thence, via Piedmont, to New Creek.

My command, being much wearied, behaved nobly. Lost one man, captured; but two wounded slightly; captured one rebel lieutenant and twelve men; also a number of horses, &c.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
P. J. POTTS,

Major Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, Commanding Detachment.

Col. GEORGE R. LATHAM,
Fifth West Virginia Cavalry.

—

NEW CREEK, W. VA., December 3, 1864.

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to submit the following report of my recent scout to Petersburg, &c.:

I started on the evening of the 30th from this post, by order of Colonel Latham, to open, if possible, communication with the cavalry force of the Valley, supposed to be then at Moorefield. I started with ninety men, and had to send some eight or ten back before I reached Greenland Gap, from the fact that their horses were then unable to travel farther, leaving me but eighty men. I arrived at Petersburg at about 12 m. on 1st, and there met a Union citizen just from Moorefield, who stated that our cavalry, about 3,000, entered Moorefield on the evening of the 30th, and left on the morning of the 1st in the direction of Brock's Gap. The rebels left Petersburg on the morning of the 30th, and went in the direction of Brock's Gap, leaving Moorefield to their left. Some little firing was heard in the direction of the gap on the evening of the 1st; know not the result or cause. McNeill's and Woodson's commands are in the vicinity of Moorefield; about 150 men. I ran some twenty of them out of Petersburg; they went in the direction of Moorefield. As my horses were so fatigued from a forced march of six days, and our cavalry having twelve hours start of me, believing that I could not reach or open communication with our cavalry, I returned to New Creek via Burlington. Rosser took all the property he could get, such as horses, cattle, even cows, calves, sheep, &c. I was bound to leave three or four horses on the road from Petersburg to Burlington, which gave out.

Hoping that this may be satisfactory, I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. J. POTTS,
Major Sixth West Virginia Cavalry.

P. S.—Our cavalry only went a few miles above Moorefield, then returned to the Valley, so persons state who escaped from Brock's Gap.

P. J. POTTS,
Major.

Capt. T. MELVIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Cumberland, Md.

No. 7.

Report of Capt. John Fisher, Sixth West Virginia Infantry, of operations November 28.

HDQRS. COMPANY A, SIXTH WEST VIRGINIA VOL. INFTRY.,
Piedmont, W. Va., November 30, 1864.

GENERAL: I have the honor of making the following report of the engagement at Piedmont, W. Va., on the 28th of November:

About 1 o'clock I learned that New Creek was surprised and captured. I was confident that the enemy would send a force here for the purpose of destroying the railroad shops and machinery. I ordered my detachment of twenty men from Bloomington here, which made my force number thirty-five effective men. The enemy, not less than 300 strong, under Major McDonald, approached the town about 2 p. m., on the New Creek road. I commenced skirmishing with them on this road, but finding that I was greatly outnumbered in force, I fell back across the river on the hill, where my position was more safe. This position gave me a good command of the town. They attempted to cross the river twice, but were repulsed each time. I fought them three hours, when they retreated on the Elk Garden road. They only succeeded in burning one of the round-houses of the shops. They left one man killed and one mortally wounded. I cannot give you the true number of wounded, but I think they had ten or fifteen wounded.

My command fought well and deserves the greatest praise. A large portion of them were recruits, and the first time they were under fire.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN FISHER,

Captain Company A, Sixth West Virginia Volunteer Infantry.

[General B. F. KELLEY.]

---

No. 8.

Report of Capt. George W. Harrison, Assistant Quartermaster, U. S. Army, of property captured and destroyed November 28.

DEPOT QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,
Cumberland, Md., December 3, 1864.

CAPTAIN: In answer to your letter of 2d instant relative to the destruction of Government property at New Creek, W. Va., on the 28th ultimo, by the rebel raiders, I find it will be impossible, at present, to give you an accurate list of the property lost or destroyed, owing to the loss of the papers and books at New Creek. I give below a list of the principal articles which is as correct as can be ascertained at this time:

Clothing, camp and garrison equipage: 225 hats, 300 caps, 160 dress coats, 1,400 uniform jackets, 1,200 trowsers (mounted), 500 trowsers (foot), 400 blouses, 1,500 flannel shirts, 1,500 pairs drawers, 500 pairs boots, 2,000 pairs stockings, 750 great coats (mounted and foot), 330 woolen blankets, 250 rubber blankets, 250 knapsacks, 250 haversacks, 300 canteens, 100 axes, 100 spades, 100 shovels, 100 camp-kettles, 100 mess-pans, 50 hatchets, 4 camp colors, 23 guidons, 4 wall-tents, 500 shelter-tents, 350 pickaxes and handles, 54 Sibley tent stoves, 150 company and regimental books, 8 hospital tents, &c. The approximate value of clothing, camp and garrison equipage lost would not exceed $34,000. A considerable portion of the above stores were to have been issued in a day or two.

Quartermaster's stores—consisting of fuel, stationery, hospital and office furniture, building materials, veterinary tools and horse medicines, blacksmiths' tools, carpenters' and miscellaneous tools, saddlers' tools; stores for expenditure, including horseshoes, horseshoe and cut nails, iron, rope, steel, wagon-tongues and hounds, spokes—would not exceed $5,000. This estimate I consider full large.

Means of transportation: 76 single sets of horse and mule harness, worn; 4 four-horse wagons, 21 two-horse wagons, 3 ambulances, 39 mules, 118 horses, all serviceable; 169 horses unfit for service, and a large portion of same worthless. Approximate value, $30,000.

Forage: 25 tons hay, 1,600 bushels grain. Money value would not exceed $3,000.

Buildings: The buildings which were erected by Captain Loomis, assistant quartermaster, under the direction of Major-General Frémont, in the spring of 1862, then commanding this department, were the finest in the department, and at the time of erection probably cost $33,000. I would respectfully call your attention to a copy of letter inclosed from Mr. H. L. Winants, assistant quartermaster's agent at New Creek post.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. W. HARRISON,

Captain and Assistant Quartermaster.

Capt. THAYER MELVIN,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Cumberland, Md.

---

No. 9.

Report of Quartermaster Agent H. L. Winants, of operations November 28.

ASSISTANT QUARTERMASTER'S OFFICE,

New Creek, W. Va., December 3, 1864.

CAPTAIN: The disaster at this post on the 28th ultimo is already known to you with such details of the destruction of property as could be gathered from the ruins of papers and memorandums. Very little property of any kind belonging to the quartermaster's department was saved from the destruction or plunder by the rebel raiders. The surprise was complete and successful. But a few minutes elapsed after the first alarm that the enemy was in the fort before they had entire possession of the station, the Government buildings, and property. The force employed by this department, so far as I can learn, were all at their posts. The clerks were at work at their desks in the office and were captured, but succeeded in making their escape subsequently. The heads of the several positions were all present and attending to their usual duties. Had there been twenty minutes' notice all our serviceable stock at the post could probably have been saved by moving it off; as it was, most of the men in charge of the animals were captured in the corral or stables. The business office was soon in possession of the raiders and the property destroyed. The books and papers were captured near the river, a few hundred yards in rear of the office, while being conveyed to a place of safety by an employé. I inclose you such vouchers for the month of November as I have been able to gather up from the point where the papers were captured. All the public buildings at the post were burned, with the exception of the saddler's shop, one blacksmith shop, and one small stable. The amount of clothing, camp and garrison equipage in the warehouse was not large, and a considerable portion of it would have been issued in a day or two. The amount of quartermaster's stores on hand was smaller than that of the clothing, camp and garrison equipage, but were destroyed or taken away by the rebels. The transportation at the post was limited and was employed principally in hauling hay from the region of Burlington for the use of the post, but were in camp when the attack was made, and were all captured, as were also the post teams usually busy in serving the hospital and troops. What stores can be gathered from the ruins are being placed in safe positions to be accounted for. An office has been opened for business and such supplies being procured for the troops remaining as requisitions are made for by the proper officers.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. L. WINANTS,
Assistant Quartermaster Agent.

Capt. GEORGE W. HARRISON,
Assistant Quartermaster, Cumberland, Md.

---

No. 10.

Reports of General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army.

PETERSBURG, December 2, 1864.

General Early reports that General Rosser, with Payne's and his own brigade, encountered, on the 27th ultimo, near Moorefield a small party of enemy; captured 40 prisoners, 1 piece of artillery. On 28th surprised and captured Fort Kelley, at New Creek, 4 field pieces, 4 siege guns, between [700 and] 800 prisoners, a large number of horses, mules, and 8 stand of colors; destroyed 200 wagons, a very large amount of quartermaster, commissary, and ordnance stores. He brought off the field pieces, some wagons; spiked the siege guns, destroyed the carriages. He captured Piedmont; destroyed all Government buildings, including a number of engines; burned several bridges, and did considerable damage to railroad, and collected several hundred head of cattle. His loss 2 killed and 2 or 3 wounded. The boldness and energy exhibited by General Rosser and the conduct of his men deserves much praise.

R. E. LEE.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
December 8, 1864.

SIR: I have received from General Early some of the particulars of the recent expedition of General Rosser. The fort at New Creek, which was deemed very strong by the enemy, was completely surprised, although the attack was made in the daytime. So well were General

Rosser's measures taken, and so skillfully executed, that the enemy's pickets were captured and the fort charged before the presence of our troops was known. The enemy did not fire a single piece of artillery. The fort, prisoners, the colors of the Fifth and Sixth West Virginia Cavalry (Federal), the garrison flag, and five guidons were captured by Payne's brigade, consisting of the Fifth and Sixth Virginia Cavalry. Captain Fitzhugh, of the Fifth, by whom the flags were transmitted to the Department, led the assault on Fort Kelley, and was the first to enter the works and pull down the flag. General Rosser states that the stores destroyed filled several large warehouses. The machine shops at Piedmont had been repaired and enlarged since they were burned by Captain McNeill. They were thoroughly destroyed by Major McDonald, of Rosser's brigade, together with nine engines and a number of cars.

The whole number of prisoners captured was 700, but in bringing them out through the mountains at night between 200 and 300 escaped. Between 1,200 and 1,500 horses and about the same number of cattle were secured.

The expedition was conducted with great skill and boldness, and reflects great credit upon General Rosser and the officers and men of his command.

I forward herewith some papers that were taken, which show what the enemy contemplated doing and the treatment intended for our citizens on the northern border.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

Hon. SECRETARY OF WAR,
Richmond, Va.

[Inclosure No. 1.]

HEADQUARTERS,
New Creek, W. Va., November 24, 1864.

[Lieut. Col. R. E. FLEMING:]

DEAR COLONEL: I have sent instructions to the State troops to be on the South Fork, at the junction of the Howard's Lick road, four miles above Moorefield, at daylight next Monday morning. I propose to send 150 men by Romney and the Hanging Rock to strike the Wardensville road ten miles east of Moorefield at the same time, and that 100 men go into Moorefield by the road we came out at the same time. The parties on these other roads will then intercept any rebels who may be frightened away from Moorefield. I propose that you execute this plan. I will send out what supplies are needed and one piece of artillery. After concentrating at Moorefield, General Crook desires that everything fit for army use be either brought off or destroyed while returning. Take all the time needed to give a thorough raking to the entire country, and leave nothing but what is absolutely needed for family use. Give certificates for everything—even that destroyed. You can give such for forage destroyed as "by virtue of instructions from department headquarters." You can ascertain the distances and the consequent time needed to make the destined points at the appointed hour. I would move some on Sunday and make the night trip as short as possible. Keep a good lookout. I learn that Rosser is foraging in the South Fork Valley. Adjutant Parker will return to you with additional forces and a thorough verbal understanding on Saturday. You may start Major Potts, via Hanging Rock, on Saturday morning, if necessary, before the adjutant arrives, as he will be sure to come with sufficient other force for the direct road. Generals Kelley and Crook are both pleased with the move. General Crook has ordered the consolidation. I think there is some stock in the vicinity of Williamsport that ought to be brought off.

Very truly, yours, &c.,

GEO. R. LATHAM,
Colonel, Commanding.

[Inclosure No. 2.]

NEW CREEK, W. VA., November 26, 1864.

[Lieut. Col. R. E. FLEMING:]

COLONEL: The citizens here from the South Branch Valley propose to take measures to rid the country of McNeill's men and to co-operate with us for that purpose. This will be better than their destruction. I inclose to you General Kelley's telegram, which will supersede your previous instructions with regard to the destruction of property. You will, however, bring out the stock. There are some serious complaints of robberies committed by the men. Please preserve discipline, and permit nothing to be done without responsible authority.

With best wishes for your success, I am, yours, &c.,

GEO. R. LATHAM,
Colonel, Commanding.

P. S.—Please send courier in from Moorefield, and I will have supplies meet you at Burlington if desired.

[Sub-inclosure.]

CUMBERLAND, MD., November 25, 1864.

Col. G. R. LATHAM:

I will send the scout to Romney, with orders to move up the Trough road. Have you made arrangements with the "Swamps" to occupy South Fork above Moorefield? Direct the officer in command to inform the people of Moorefield and South Branch Valley that if they continue to harbor and feed McNeill's men that the whole valley will be laid waste like the Shenandoah Valley.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

No. 11.

Report of Brig. Gen. Thomas L. Rosser, C. S. Army.

HEADQUARTERS ROSSER'S DIVISION,
Near Petersburg, November 30, 1864.

GENERAL: After capturing the artillery and wagons at Moorefield, on the 27th I moved on New Creek by a night march and surprised and captured the garrison about 10 o'clock next morning, which embraced between 700 and 800 prisoners, eight pieces of artillery, four of which were siege guns, a large number of horses and mules, and destroyed a vast amount of commissary, ordnance, and quartermaster stores. I destroyed also about 200 wagons, bringing off only a few. I brought off the field battery, blowing up the caissons. I then sent a force up to Piedmont, which succeeded in destroying an immense amount of property there, all the Government buildings, and all the machine shops, &c., connected with the railroad. I damaged the railroad considerably, destroying several small bridges. I have gathered up 400 or 500 head of cattle and some sheep, and am now on my way to camp, and all the captured property is now beyond the reach of the enemy and safe. The siege guns at New Creek were spiked and the carriages destroyed; the magazine of Fort Kelley was blown up and the telegraph wires destroyed. I captured eight colors, one of which was a tremendous garrison flag, which I hauled down from over Fort Kelley. My total loss is 2 men killed and 1 or 2 wounded. The enemy suffered in killed and wounded severely in the assault.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

THOS. L. ROSSER,
Major-General.

[Lieut. Gen. J. A. EARLY.]

---

NOVEMBER 28, 1864.—Skirmish at Goresville, Va.

Report of Capt. Daniel M. Keyes, Independent Battalion Virginia Cavalry (Loudoun Rangers).

HEADQUARTERS INDEPENDENT (LOUDOUN, VA.) RANGERS,
Point of Rocks, Md., November 29, 1864.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report that a detachment of this command of thirty-four men, under the command of Lieut. Robert Graham, left camp on the 28th instant, between 5 and 6 a. m., crossed the river at Cheek's Ford, proceeded toward Leesburg, crossed the Leesburg road at Big Spring, there struck the Catoclin Mountain, crossed the Winchester pike at Clark's Gap, then proceeded to Dry Mill, south of Leesburg, there took the road to Leesburg; heard that a small force of fifteen or twenty rebels were in the town; charged through the town and captured Captain Smith, adjutant-general on Major-General Gordon's staff; also captured one private belonging to the Loudoun Cavalry. Left Leesburg and took the road leading to Point of Rocks. Met Mosby's command at Goresville, numbering from 150 to 200 men, where a small skirmish took place. Lieutenant Graham and Lieutenant Rhodes and five or six privates are still missing.

The loss of the enemy was Captain Mountjoy killed, who, it was said, was in command; one lieutenant wounded, and two privates killed.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DANIEL M. KEYES,
Captain, Commanding Independent (Loudoun, Va.) Rangers.

Lieut. S. F. ADAMS,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Harper's Ferry, Va.

NOVEMBER 28-DECEMBER 3, 1864.—Expedition from Winchester into Fauquier and Loudoun Counties, Va.

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Bvt. Maj. Gen. Wesley Merritt, U. S. Army, commanding First Cavalry Division.

No. 2.—Lieut. Col. Casper Crowninshield, Second Massachusetts Cavalry, commanding Reserve Brigade.

No. 1.

Report of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Wesley Merritt, U. S. Army, commanding First Cavalry Division.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
December 6, 1864.

MAJOR: In compliance with instructions received direct from army headquarters, I marched with the division, via Ashby's Gap, to the east of the Blue Ridge, for the purpose of destroying all mills, barns, forage, driving off stock, and capturing and dispersing the guerrilla bands in a district of country described in orders. After passing through Ashby's Gap two regiments of the Second Brigade were ordered to move to the north along the foot of the mountains, spreading out well over the country toward Bloomfield, carrying out the orders, while a regiment of the First Brigade, for the same purpose, was sent, via Grigsby's Store, to the west of Piedmont. These regiments were ordered to meet the division the same evening near Upperville, where it encamped on the night of the 28th of November.

The following morning the First Brigade was ordered to march to Rectortown, whence it was ordered to send out strong columns to Salem and White Plains, and, marching across the country, collect its strength at Middleburg, the forces from White Plains and Salem to pursue separate routes to that place. From Middleburg the entire force was to move to Philomont and thence to Snickersville, keeping out strong flanking columns on the right toward Millville and to the left through Bloomfield to the foot of the mountains. In this manner the country as far north as the Little River turnpike was thoroughly swept over and destroyed by the evening of the second day.

Early on the morning of the third day the Second Brigade was ordered to march via Philomont, Circleville, Hamilton, Waterford, and along the Catoctin Creek to the Potomac, and meeting, at Lovettsville, a force of the Reserve Brigade which was ordered to move east of the Blue Ridge and between the ridge and Short Mountain to the Potomac, both columns to return along the pike from Lovettsville through Hillsborough and Purcellville. Both these commands reached Snickersville on the evening of the fourth day. On the third day a force of the Reserve Brigade was ordered to march down the Shenandoah, between that stream and the Blue Ridge. This force went as far down the river as Rockford. The First Brigade marched on the third day, with its collected cattle, to Snickersville, from Philomont sending out parties to complete the work of destruction.

On the morning of the fourth day four regiments of the First Brigade were detached, two in the direction of Millville and Middleburg, to complete any unfinished work in that country, and the other two to move, one on the crest of the mountains and the other along the foot, keeping up connection, when possible, by a line of mounted men and marching as far as Ashby's Gap. These regiments were ordered to return across the country to the pike near Philomont and watch the mouth of the valley until the return of the columns from the Potomac, making dispositions to capture or destroy any guerrillas who might be moving in advance of these columns.

In all these movements the orders from army headquarters were most fully carried out; the country on every side of the general line of march was in every instance swept over by flankers from the columns, and in this way the entire valley was gone over. The guerrillas were exceedingly careful to avoid any encounter with any of the parties, even the smallest, that were out on this duty. Efforts were made to run them down or capture them by stratagem, but these in most instances failed. The sides of the mountain bordering Loudoun Valley are practicable throughout their entire extent for horsemen, and the guerrillas, being few in numbers, mounted on fleet horses and thoroughly conversant with the country, had every advantage of my men.

I transmit herewith reports of brigade commanders, as also tabular statements of the destruction done and cattle driven off. Large numbers of the cattle were destroyed or consumed. Most of the fatted hogs were destroyed on the march to camp.

W. MERRITT,

Brevet Major-General, Commanding.

Maj. WILLIAM RUSSELL, Jr.,

Asst. Adjt. Gen., Hdqrs. Cavalry, Middle Military Division.

---

No. 2.

Report of Lieut. Col. Casper Crowninshield, Second Massachusetts Cavalry, commanding Reserve Brigade.

Report of operations of the Cavalry Reserve Brigade during the expedition in Loudoun County, Va.:

Pursuant to instructions received from the brevet major-general commanding the Cavalry Corps to move my brigade to Snickersville and communicate with Brevet Major-General Merritt, I broke camp at Stephenson's Depot on the 29th of November at 3 a. m. and marched to Snickersville. Leaving the Sixth U. S. Cavalry and thirty men of the Second Massachusetts Cavalry to hold the gap, I marched to Bloomfield, expecting to meet Brevet Major-General Merritt near that point. At Bloomfield my advanced guard was fired upon by some of Mosby's men, and two of the First U. S. Cavalry were slightly wounded. Here I learned that our cavalry had moved toward Union. I followed on to Union, thence to Philomont, and finally joined Brevet Major-General Merritt at Snickersville, where the brigade encamped that night, picketing the gap, the mountain road, the Bloomfield road, and to the left as far as the Snickersville and Aldie pike. 30th, the Second Massachusetts and Second U. S. Cavalry were sent through Wood Grove and Hillsborough to Cave Head, on the Potomac, and thence along the river road to Lovettsville, destroying all grain, forage, mills, distilleries, &c., and driving in all stock in that part of the country; at Lovettsville they joined Brevet Brigadier-General Devin's brigade. The Sixth U. S. Cavalry was sent up on the west side of the Blue Ridge, between the ridge and the river, going as far as Rockford, and returning at night to Snicker's Gap, where they remained. The balance of the brigade remained in camp and guarded the herds which had thus far been driven in.

December 1, the First and Sixth U. S. Cavalry drove the herds across the river and went into camp near the river. The Second United States and Second Massachusetts returned to Snickersville and went into camp. 2d, the Second U. S. and Second Massachusetts Cavalry rejoined the brigade. One regiment of the brigade assisted in driving the herds and the balance of the brigade marched in rear of the division. The brigade went into camp with the division near Stone Chapel and picketed the country in its front, connecting on the left with General Devin's and on the right with Colonel Stagg's pickets. During the march one of the First U. S. Cavalry, who had straggled from the column, was killed by a bushwhacker near Berryville. 3d, marched in the same order as yesterday and went into camp near Kernstown.

The following is a list of the property destroyed and captured by the brigade:

| List of property.                  | Number. | Average value. | Total value. |
|------------------------------------|---------|----------------|--------------|
| CAPTURED.                          |         |                |              |
| Horses .....                       | 87      | $100 00       | $8,700 00   |
| Beef-cattle .....                  | 474     | 30 00          | 14,220 00    |
| Sheep .....                        | 100     | 6 00           | 600 00       |
| Total .....                        |         |                | 23,520 00    |
| DESTROYED.                         |         |                |              |
| Barns .....                        | 230     | 100 00         | 23,000 00    |
| Mills .....                        | 8       | 200 00         | 1,600 00     |
| Distilleries .....                 | 1       | 1,000 00       | 1,000 00     |
| Hay .....                          | 10,000  | 30 00          | 300,000 00   |
| Grain .....                        | 25,000  | 2 50           | 62,500 00    |
| Total .....                        |         |                | 388,100 00   |
| Total captured and destroyed ..... |         |                | 411,620 00   |

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
C. CROWNINSHIELD,
Lieutenant-Colonel Second Massachusetts Cavalry, Comdg. Brig.
Maj. A. E. DANA,
Assistant Adjutant-General, First Cavalry Division.

NOVEMBER 29, 1864.—Skirmish at Charlestown, W. Va.

Report of Capt. Nathaniel Payne, Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry.

HDQRS. TWELFTH PENNSYLVANIA VOLUNTEER CAVALRY,
Charlestown, W. Va., November 30, 1864.

LIEUTENANT: I have the honor to report to you that, in accordance with information of yesterday, our reserve post was attacked by the rebels last night between the hours of 11 and 12 o'clock, killing two men, wounding one, and capturing five of our men and nineteen horses. The enemy lost in killed one man (a young Bailey) and three wounded.

The enemy, about 200 strong, attacked the post from different directions, dismounted. They were commanded by a major. Lieutenant Baylor was also with them, as his name was frequently mentioned by them at the time of the attack. Information was obtained from citizens this morning to the effect that the enemy intend to make another attack on the camp, which renders it very desirable that we should obtain re-enforcements. A call was made on the detachment of infantry stationed above this place last night, to which they did not respond. We have now only twenty men and horses available.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
NATHANIEL PAYNE,
Captain, Commanding Camp.

[Lieut. S. F. ADAMS,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, Harper's Ferry, Va.]

---

DECEMBER 19-22, 1864.—Expedition from Kernstown to Lacey's Springs, Va., and action at Lacey's Springs (21st).

*Report of Bvt. Maj. Gen. George A. Custer, U. S. Army, commanding Third Cavalry Division.**

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
December 23, 1864.

In obedience to the instructions of the major-general commanding, I submit the following report of the recent expedition of this division up the Valley:

Late on the evening of the 18th instant I received instructions from the chief of cavalry to move with my division up the Valley pike at an early hour on the morning of the 19th. A copy of my orders have already been forwarded to you. My command was supplied with three days' rations and forage for one day. At 7 a. m. on the 19th my command left camp and moved to Newtown, when it followed the pike. Upon arriving at Strasburg I learned that a force of about fifty of the enemy had passed through Strasburg up the valley, having come from the direction of Front Royal. When within about six miles of Woodstock two scouts of the enemy were discovered in front of the advance. Several attempts were made to effect their capture, but without success. They continued in sight of the column until the command had reached Woodstock, when, my impression is, they conveyed the intelligence of our approach to the force stationed near New Market, from which point the report was forwarded by telegraph to Staunton and Waynesborough. In Woodstock I learned there was no force of the enemy north of Staunton, except a picket force of three companies, which were posted so as to watch the three roads—pike, Middle and Back roads—the right of the line resting near Edenburg, the left extending to Little North Mountain.

At daylight on the morning of the 20th my command moved from Woodstock; a small force of the enemy continued to annoy my advance, but without causing any damage to be inflicted. My instructions from the chief of cavalry were evidently written under the impression that I would meet the enemy in force at some point not far south of New Market, if not sooner. This is inferred from the amount of supplies ordered for my command by the chief of cavalry. From the information I derived along the line of my first day's march, which was confirmed by the report of scouts, that the enemy had retired all his forces beyond Staunton, I believed that if the enemy permitted my command to reach Staunton without serious opposition, I could, with reasonable hope of success, continue my movement to Lynchburg, trusting to the supplies in the country beyond Staunton upon which to subsist my command, and had it not been for the advantage the enemy derived from his telegraphic communication with New Market my impressions would have proven correct. As it was, Rosser, who, with his division, was camped between Staunton [sic], was informed of my presence at Woodstock before 10 p. m. of the 19th, and, as stated by prisoners, his command received orders at 1 a. m. of the 20th to get ready to move. My command, after leaving Woodstock at daylight, moved without serious molestation to Lacey's Springs, nine miles from Harrisonburg, where I encamped during the night. The encampment was at the junction of the road leading from the Keezletown road to the pike, and of the road from Timberville to the pike. Pennington's brigade encamped in front, and on the left of the pike, one regiment, the Third New Jersey, was posted one mile and a half in advance on the pike to picket in the direction of Harrisonburg. Another regiment of the same brigade, the First Connecticut, was sent out on the road leading to the Keezletown road and picketed the country to the left of the pike. The First New Hampshire, of General Chapman's brigade, was posted on the Timberville road to picket in the direction of the latter point. One battalion of the Fifteenth New York, about 200 strong, was ordered to its support. The Eighth New York picketed the country in front and between the Timberville road and the pike, while the two remaining battalions of the Fifteenth New York, numbering upward of 400 men, were posted on the pike about one mile and a half in rear of the camp of the division. It will thus be seen that of the nine regiments composing my command five were on picket.

---

* See also Lee's dispatch of December 23, p. 679.

In the orders sent to brigade commanders, soon after reaching camp, reveille was ordered at 4 o'clock and the command was to move promptly at 6.30, Chapman's brigade taking the advance. In conformity with these instructions, General Chapman called in his pickets at the proper time and the Eighth New York, the regiment farthest in advance in the direction of the Middle road, having formed in columns of squadrons and mounted, had begun to move off by fours when a brigade of the enemy (Payne's) which, under cover of the darkness and the withdrawal of our pickets, had advanced to within a very short distance of the regiment, charged in the direction of the camp-ground of the Second Brigade. The attack was heard by the entire command, and although Pennington's brigade was the rear in the order of march, it was at once mounted and placed in position to receive the enemy. The Eighth New York, although somewhat astounded by this attack, behaved well under the circumstances and opened an effective fire upon the enemy. At the same time an attack was made upon the First New Hampshire, which regiment was mounted and had a line of skirmishers in advance. The enemy did not attempt to engage either of the regiments with determination, but acted as if the intention was to surprise a sleeping camp. Charging past the Eighth New York and First New Hampshire, they moved at the top of their speed in the direction of the pike and to our rear. General Chapman had, at the first attack, moved the First Vermont and Twenty-second New York from the left of the pike, and when the column of the enemy advanced near enough attacked with the First Vermont. The enemy, after his first attack upon the Eighth New York and First New Hampshire, was completely bewildered and acted as if his only object was to get safely away. He did not attempt to engage any of my troops, although by the cheering kept up by my command he could easily have determined their locality. One regiment, the Sixth Virginia Cavalry, charged Pennington's brigade, but was met by one of his regiments which was already advancing and repulsed, with little or no fighting, in which Pennington suffered no loss, while the enemy suffered a loss of several in killed, wounded, and missing. Ten of the enemy were left dead on the ground. Chapman attacked the enemy wherever he could be found, and with one regiment, the First Vermont, drove him over a mile in the direction from which the attack had come. The division was in position to give or receive battle, and waited until after daylight, but the enemy made no further demonstrations at that point.

My loss in prisoners, although not officially reported to me yet, will not, I think, reach twenty. I have thirty-two of the enemy taken in the fight. My loss in wounded is twenty-two; most, if not all, are saber cuts, as the enemy had orders to charge with the saber. As my men used the carbine alone, and at short range, I am confident, from the number of dead left on the ground by the enemy, and from the verbal reports of brigade and regimental commanders, that the enemy's loss in wounded was more than treble my own. I do not think that more than one or two of my command were killed.

From prisoners I learned that the enemy had left their camps, five miles beyond Staunton, at 10 a. m. the day previous, marched until 10 p. m., then halted two miles beyond Harrisonburg until 1 a. m., when the march was resumed in the direction of New Market. At Harrisonburg Payne's brigade marched on the Middle road; Rosser's old brigade and Wickham's moved on the Back road. Payne's brigade attacked the Eighth New York and First New Hampshire immediately upon arriving in front of them. The prisoners reported that the halt did not last over five minutes, and that the enemy was under the impression that reveille had not been sounded yet in my camp, and that by charging upon us the men would be asleep and taken by surprise. Instead of this they found the command in the saddle, and they became the surprised party. I do not think the entire loss of the enemy will fall short of 100.

I was confident of my ability to defeat Rosser, although he had three brigades; and although some of [the] prisoners stated that a division of infantry was expected to follow them, I knew that infantry could not march to that point from Waynesborough in time to be of any assistance to Rosser, but I was influenced by the following reasons: My command would exhaust their rations that night and no opportunity would be afforded to procure any short of two days. Another and stronger reason was my unprepared state to take charge of a large body of wounded, particularly under the inclement state of the weather. In addition, I was convinced that if it was decided to return, the sooner my return was accomplished the better it would be for my command. Accordingly, my command began the return march soon after daylight and reached their present encampment yesterday p. m.

As the object of your communication yesterday seemed to be to obtain an explanation as to "how it happened that" my "camp was charged by the enemy," I have gone into the details of that affair more than I otherwise should, particularly as my previous dispatches contained all the information which I deemed of value or interest.

I will forward a list of casualties as soon as obtained from brigade commanders.

Respectfully submitted.

G. A. CUSTER,

Brevet Major-General, Commanding Third Division.

Brevet Brigadier-General FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division.

---

DECEMBER 19-28, 1864.—Expedition from Winchester to near Gordonsville, Va., including skirmishes at Madison Court-House (21st), at Liberty Mills (22d), and near Gordonsville (23d).

REPORTS.

No. 1.—Bvt. Maj. Gen. Alfred T. A. Torbert, U. S. Army, commanding expedition.

No. 2.—General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army.

No. 1.

Report of Bvt. Maj. Gen. Alfred T. A. Torbert, U. S. Army, commanding expedition.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY CORPS, ARMY OF THE MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION, Winchester, Va., December 28, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to report that I started from Winchester on the 19th of December, with the First and Second Divisions of Cavalry, without artillery, about 5,000 men, across the Blue Ridge. On the night of the 19th I camped in Chester Gap, having marched about twenty-two miles, via Front Royal, crossing both branches of the Shenandoah River. It rained nearly all day. December 20, crossed the Blue Ridge, marched, via Little Washington, Gaines' Cross-Roads, and Sperryville, in the direction of Criglersville; marched about twenty-nine miles, Second Division camping on the Hughes River and the First Division on the Hazel. This night it hailed and sleeted all night. During the day the enemy's vedettes were driven before the advance. December 21, at daylight the march was resumed, in a hail and snow storm which lasted all day, via Criglersville, to Madison Court-House, over one of the worst roads I ever traveled. The First Division went to Madison Court-House, had an engagement with Jackson's brigade of rebel cavalry, driving them from the town, with slight loss. Second Division camped on Robertson's River near Criglersville. December 22, at daylight the march was resumed, Second Division leading, on the pike in the direction of Liberty Mills and Gordonsville. The enemy's cavalry—Generals Jackson's and McCausland's brigades, General Lomax commanding—were driven rapidly before my advance and across the bridge over the Rapidan, at Liberty Mills. On my advance reaching the bridge, which they did under a severe fire from men behind breast-works on the opposite bank, they found some of the flooring of the bridge had been removed. Immediately after reaching the river the bridge was fired by an explosion and soon destroyed. The ford, which was a bad one, was barricaded and defended by men in rifle pits and artillery in position behind earth-works. It was impossible to effect a crossing in front. Some delay was caused by having to send through the country to find parties who knew the roads to fords above and below Liberty Mills, so that I could cross and flank them out of their position. Finally two columns were started, one to the right and one to the left. Two brigades of the First Division—First and Second, Second Brigade leading, commanded by Colonel Kellogg, Seventeenth Pennsylvania Cavalry—were to cross at Willis' Ford, about two miles above Liberty Mills, and come down on the Stanardsville and Orange Court-House road. One brigade Second Division, Colonel Capelhart commanding, was to cross at Cave's Ford, about three miles below Liberty Mills, and come up on the Orange Court-House and Stanardsville road. It was represented that both of these fords were good, and that the detour of these columns would be about four miles, when, in fact, the column at Willis' Ford could only cross by twos and had to march about eight miles before getting to Liberty Mills, and the column by Cave's Ford could only cross by file and had to march about seven miles before getting to Liberty Mills. This caused an unexpected delay, and it was not until just dark when the right column came in sight and immediately charged the enemy, driving them across the Gordonsville pike and in the direction of Orange Court-House; here they were met by my left column, and the enemy withdrew by a country road in the direction of Gordonsville. The fighting was all after dark, and not being able to tell friend from foe, and my own men having fired into each other, the firing was ordered to cease and hold their positions for the night. This day and night was intensely cold. December 23, at daylight the enemy was again engaged and all their artillery—two pieces—taken from them. and driven to within two miles and a half of Gordonsville to the top of the gap in Southwest Mountain. Here the pass was narrow and the enemy were strongly posted behind rails and earth breast-works, where a few men could hold three times their number in check. I attacked the position with nearly half of my force, but could not carry it, and I immediately started a column to flank them on the left by crossing the mountain several miles to the north. While waiting to hear from this column, which had got well on its way, the cars were heard about ten o'clock to arrive at Gordonsville, and about an hour after infantry was seen to file into the breast-works and relieve the cavalry. After becoming fully satisfied of the presence of infantry (Pegram's division), I concluded it was useless to make a further attempt to break the Central railroad. I had at this time six or eight men killed and about forty wounded, more than I could transport, and the worst cases were left behind. I decided to withdraw and at once crossed to the north bank of the Rapidan. That afternoon and evening I marched to Madison Court-House and Robertson's River. About thirty prisoners were taken, but having no provisions, and it being very difficult, if not impossible, for them to keep up, I paroled them. The guns, two 3-inch rifled, were brought to camp. December 24, at daylight started from Madison Court-House, marched, via James City, Griffinsburg, and Stone-House Mountain, to near Rixeyville. December 25, at daylight marched to the Fauquier White Sulphur Springs, crossing in the meantime the Hazel and the Rappahannock Rivers, the former with great difficulty indeed. December 26, march resumed at daylight, Second Division leading. On reaching Warrenton the Second Division went in the direction of Salem and Piedmont, camping near Paris. At Warrenton the First Division marched in the direction of New Baltimore, Georgetown, White Plains, and Middleburg, camping near the latter place. December 27, the Second Division marched, via Paris, Ashby's Gap, and Millwood, to camp near Winchester; First Division marched, via Middleburg, Upperville, Paris, and Ashby's Gap, to Millwood. December 28, First Division marched to camp near Winchester.

The country through which we passed was thoroughly cleaned of stock and forage. The command was obliged to live on the country for six days. Altogether it was an extremely hard trip on men and horses on account of the intense cold and bad weather. For six days out of the ten it either rained, hailed, or snowed, and sometimes all three.

A. T. A. TORBERT,

Brevet Major-General, Chief of Cavalry, Commanding.

Brevet Brigadier-General FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff, Headquarters Army of the Shenandoah.

Report of casualties in the Cavalry, Middle Military Division, on the late raid, from December 19 to December 28, 1864.

| Division.             | Killed. | Wounded. | Missing. | Accidentally hurt. | Aggregate. | Horses lost. |
|-----------------------|---------|----------|----------|--------------------|------------|--------------|
| First Division .....  | 6       | 34       | 27       | 7                  | 74         | 143          |
| Second Division ..... | 1       | 4        | 20       | 3                  | 28         | 115          |
| Total .....           | 7       | 38       | 47       | 10                 | 102        | 258          |

HDQRS. CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
January 9, 1865.

No. 2.

Reports of General Robert E. Lee, C. S. Army.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
December 23, 1864.

On the 20th General Early reported one division of enemy's cavalry, under General Custer, coming up the Valley, and two divisions, under General Torbert, moving through Chester Gap, with four pieces artillery and thirty wagons. On the 22d Rosser attacked Custer's division, nine miles from Harrisonburg, and drove [him] back, capturing forty prisoners. This morning Torbert attacked Lomax near Gordonsville, and was repulsed and severely punished. He is retiring and Lomax preparing to follow.

R. E. LEE.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,

December 24, 1864.

General Fitz Lee reports that the force which attacked Lomax yesterday consisted of two divisions of enemy's cavalry, under General Torbert. Lomax was posted across the Madison turnpike two miles and a half from Gordonsville. The enemy was handsomely repulsed, and retired about 3 p. m., just as re-enforcements were getting in position, leaving some of his dead on the field. He traveled too rapidly last night to engage his rear, having passed Jack's Shop, twelve miles from Gordonsville, one hour after dark. Thirty-two prisoners, captured at Liberty Mills on the 22d, being unable to keep up on their retreat, were liberated. Lomax's loss slight.

R. E. LEE.

Hon. JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

DECEMBER 26-27, 1864.—Scout from Fairfax Court-House to Hopewell Gap, Va.

Report of Capt. John Sargent, Eighth Illinois Cavalry.

FAIRFAX COURT-HOUSE, December 27, 1864.

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report of the recent scout made by me with 400 men of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry:

In obedience to orders from brigade headquarters I left camp at 8 p. m. December 26, and proceeded, by way of Thoroughfare Gap, to the house of Mrs. Lewis, which I was ordered to search. At Mrs. Lewis' I captured two rebel soldiers, who reported themselves as belonging to the Fourth Virginia Cavalry. From Mrs. Lewis' I moved in the direction of Hopewell Gap, where I arrived at daylight this morning. During the march both of the prisoners, who were under the charge of Company C, managed to make their escape. At 9 a. m. I passed through Hopewell Gap, and arrived at camp at 5 p. m.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. SARGENT,
Captain, Commanding Scouts.

Maj. J. D. LUDLAM,
Commanding Eighth Illinois Cavalry.

CORRESPONDENCE, ORDERS, AND RETURNS RELATING SPECIALLY TO OPERATIONS IN NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
WEST VIRGINIA, MARYLAND, AND PENNSYLVANIA,
AUGUST 4, 1864, TO AUGUST 31, 1864.*

UNION CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.

CITY POINT, VA., August 4, 1864—12 m.
(Received 7 p. m.)

A. LINCOLN,

President of the United States:

Your dispatch of 6 p. m. just received. I will start in two hours for Washington and will spend a day with the army under General Hunter.†

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

WASHINGTON, August 4, 1864—10 p. m.

Lieutenant-General GRANT,

City Point, Va.:

Had you asked my opinion in regard to Generals Hunter and Sheridan it would have been freely and frankly given; but I must beg to be excused from deciding questions which lawfully and properly belong to your office. I can give no instructions to either till you decide upon their commands. I await your orders, and shall strictly carry them out, whatever they may be.‡

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Washington City, August 4, 1864. (Received 11.40 a. m.)

Governor BOREMAN,

Wheeling, W. Va.:

Your telegram§ of yesterday has been received. The Government is taking all the measures within its power to protect your State from the rebel forces. Much might be done by the loyal people to impede any advance if it should be attempted by cutting down trees and blocking the roads and destroying bridges. If you would give attention to this subject and induce your people to do something themselves they could in the way suggested accomplish a good deal for their own protection and aid our forces in following and destroying the rebels.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

---

* For Correspondence, etc., from September 1, 1864, to December 31, 1864, see Part II.

† See Lincoln to Grant, August 3, 6 p. m., Vol. XXXVII, Part II, p. 582.

‡ See Halleck to Grant, and Grant to Halleck, August 3, 1864, Vol. XXXVII, Part II, pp. 582, 583.

§ See Boreman to Stanton, Vol. XXXVII, Part II, p. 587.

WHEELING, W. VA., August 4, 1864.

(Received 9.30 p. m.)

E. M. STANTON:

Your telegram received. I had ordered out the State militia before dispatching you on yesterday. *They will do all that undrilled men can to obstruct the advance of the enemy. I have no further news. I request that you give orders to the proper officers to issue commissary and quartermaster's stores to the militia while in actual service.

A. I. BOREMAN.

WAR DEPARTMENT,

August 4, 1864—10 p. m.

Governor BOREMAN,

Wheeling, W. Va.:

Your telegram received. Orders to the commissary and quartermaster at Wheeling will be issued immediately, as requested. Your militia, with their axes and crowbars, can, by obstructing the roads and destroying bridges, accomplish immense results toward protecting your State. We have a large force rapidly organizing for the field under command of Major-General Sheridan. A few hours of delay occasioned by the industrious labors of your militia on the roads may accomplish the destruction of the enemy. Spare no efforts on this point, and see that the work is effectually done on every road and pass.

EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,

August 4, 1864.

General HARDIN,

Commanding Division:

The Hon. M. Blair, Postmaster-General, is visiting at his place near Silver Spring. I wish to have the officer commanding the cavalry picket at Leesborough instructed to have him (Blair) informed of the presence of any portion of the enemy's force in the vicinity of that place. I think you had better have a small picket established here and in front of Silver Spring, with a special reference to his (Blair's) presence at the latter place.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. C. AUGUR,

Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,

August 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General TORBERT,

Commanding Division, Cavalry Corps:

GENERAL: I am instructed to inform you that you are authorized to retain your troops in camp in the position now occupied by them or its vicinity.

I am, general, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

MUDDY BRANCH, August 4, 1864.

(Received 11.10 a. m.)

Maj. C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: All quiet this morning. There are only about thirty of the enemy in the timber in the vicinity of Rockville and Darnestown, who interrupt small squads.

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

---

MUDDY BRANCH, MD., August 4, 1864.

(Received 6.10 p. m.)

Maj. C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: Officer in charge of my right sends word:

I hear from various sources that Imboden's brigade is in vicinity of Leesburg. Am scouring the country between here and Darnestown and Rockville for bushwhackers and shall continue it day and night. All quiet along my lines.

J. M. WAITE,
Major, Commanding.

---

ALEXANDRIA, August 4, 1864.

(Received 8 p. m.)

Colonel TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: Last night I sent a scouting party to look after certain guerrillas said to be in the neighborhood of Burke's Station. They scouted the country thoroughly, but could find nothing.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Provost-Marshal-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 4, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that no intelligence has yet been received from the force sent to the Rappahannock two nights since. Messengers came in last night from the party sent to Thoroughfare Gap and the valley beyond. They had not reached their destination, but report the vicinity of Bristoe Station and Manassas as free from any force. The party sent to the Catoclin Mountains, west of Leesburg, came in this morning. They bring information direct from the vicinity of the gap near Hillsborough. A part of Bradley Johnson's cavalry, 400 strong, are lying near the gap. Mosby has in that vicinity on this side about 350 men, and is operating in concert with Johnson's troops and those beyond the Blue Ridge. Mosby is reported to have had two companies badly cut up on his last trip across the river. He returned from Maryland on Sunday. The messengers sent from above Leesburg night before last were attacked and driven back by a party of rebels. In consequence information failed to reach here.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Vol. Cav., Comdg. Cav. Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 4, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to inform you that Lieutenant Tuck, sent to the Rappahannock with a small party of observation, has just returned. He reports that, substantially, matters in the vicinity of the Rapidan and Culpeper Court-House remain in about the same state as formerly reported at your headquarters; that there are at the Rapidan railroad crossing about 100 men, infantry and cavalry, with cavalry pickets out and pickets toward Orange Court-House; that there are at Culpeper Court-House nearly 200 men, infantry; that trains travel daily from Culpeper, carrying supplies and forage south. Mosby, he also reports, was at Culpeper about one week or more since with about 150 men. Lieutenant Tuck went to the Rappahannock River, and received his information from several sources in that vicinity.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Vol. Cav., Comdg. Cav. Brigade.

WASHINGTON, August 4, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER,
Monocacy, Md.:

I have seen General Kelley's dispatch* to you of last evening, and think that he should be immediately re-enforced by cavalry. General Sheridan's cavalry is beginning to arrive, and will be sent forward soon.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

MONOCACY JUNCTION, August 4, 1864—4.30 p. m.
(Received 4.40 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

The enemy is reported moving in two columns, one by way of Charlestown and one by Shepherdstown, on Harper's Ferry. I have ordered General Emory's corps to re-enforce the troops at Harper's Ferry.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

MONOCACY JUNCTION, August 4, 1864.
(Received 7 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

At 4.30 p. m. our pickets were driven away from Antietam Ford and the enemy commenced crossing with cavalry and infantry. One of my aides reports the enemy are sending cavalry over into Loudoun County, I suppose by way of Key's Ford.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

* See Vol. XXXVII, Part II, p. 587.

MONOCACY JUNCTION, MD., August 4, 1864.
(Received 9 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK, Chief of Staff:

The following just received from General Kelley:

CUMBERLAND, MD., August 4, 1864—3 p. m.

Major-General HUNTER:

General Duffié reports that a force of about 2,000 rebels crossed Cherry Run this a. m. and was marching toward Hancock. It is possible Early's whole force is to move into and escape via the South Branch Valley.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

---

MONOCACY JUNCTION, MD., August 4, 1864—9 p. m.
(Received 10 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK, Chief of Staff:

Following just received from General Howe:

HARPER'S FERRY, August 4, 1864—9 p. m.

General HUNTER:

The indications at dark were that this place would be attacked in the morning, both on the Virginia and Maryland side of the river. If the enemy attacks on both sides at the same time I think there should be 3,000 men sent besides those you say you have sent. None have reached here yet.

A. P. HOWE,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, VA., August 4, 1864—10.15 p. m.
(Received 10.20 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. D. HUNTER, Monocacy Junction:

Colonel Blakely, Fourteenth Pennsylvania, just reports that cavalry, infantry, and artillery have crossed at the Shepherdstown ford and at Dam No. 4; that at 6 o'clock he had a skirmish with them at Antietam bridge, and would have to fall back to this place. Troops are arriving.

A. P. HOWE,
Brigadier-General.

---

Major-General HALLECK:

Above just received from General Howe.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 4, 1864—9 a. m.

Col. JAMES A. HARDIE, Inspector-General:

Have been here since Tuesday; get very little news of enemy. When I get through here intend to return to General Hunter if practicable.

WM. SINCLAIR,
Assistant Inspector-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 4, 1864—8 p. m.

Col. JAMES A. HARDIE:

Cavalry officer at Antietam Creek reports that he was driven away at 4.30 p. m., and enemy were crossing infantry and cavalry at Shepherdstown; in what force is not known. Was on Bolivar Heights at sundown; saw dust about vicinity of Shepherdstown. Cavalry officer on Winchester road reports Imboden at Charlestown, with two guns and 1,200 cavalry.

WM. SINCLAIR,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 4, 1864.
(Received 10.25 p. m.)

Col. JAMES A. HARDIE,
Inspector-General:

Another orderly has arrived from cavalry officer at Antietam Creek; reports that [they] had a skirmish with enemy and had to fall back. Enemy crossed at Shepherdstown and Dam No. 4, with infantry, cavalry, and artillery; numbers not known. Signal officer stationed at McClellan's Gap reports that enemy crossed cavalry and had infantry on Virginia side when he left his station. This must be the signal station used by General McClellan during the battle of Antietam.

WM. SINCLAIR,
Assistant Inspector-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
No. 58. } Monocacy Junction, Md., August 4, 1864.

Maj. Gen. Julius Stahel, U. S. Volunteers, having recovered from his wounds received in action at Piedmont, W. Va., and reported for duty, is announced as chief of cavalry, and will be attached to the staff of the major-general commanding the department. Major-General Stahel will make frequent inspections of the cavalry of this command, and present such suggestions as his experience may warrant looking to its increased efficiency.

By command of Major-General Hunter:

THAYER MELVIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,
August 4, 1864—11.55 p. m.

By direction of the department commander the corps will be held in readiness to move at daylight to-morrow morning upon the receipt of orders to that effect. The order of march will be as follows: first, Second Division; second, Third Division; third, artillery not assigned to divisions; fourth, First Division; fifth, the trains, to which the commander of the First Division will assign a brigade as guard. The ambulances and headquarters trains will accompany the divisions to which they belong; corps headquarters wagons will follow immediately after the artillery.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. A. WHITTIER,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SANDY HOOK, August 4, 1864.

Major-General EMORY:

All quiet on the railroad.

E. L. MOLINEUX,
Colonel, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

Major-General HUNTER,

Commanding:

You will see my advance is at Sandy Hook.

W. H. EMORY,
Brevet Major-General, Commanding.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 4, 1864—9.35 p. m.

General EMORY:

Have reported, and am going into bivouac at my position.

E. L. MOLINEUX,
Colonel, Commanding.

---

MONOCACY, August 4, 1864—3.40 [p. m.].

Brigadier-General HOWE:

I am sending you re-enforcements; if you don't need them I wish you would inform me.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 4, 1864—4.15 p. m.

Major-General HUNTER,

Monocacy:

Signal officer reports the enemy moving on this place from Shepherdstown on the Virginia side with cavalry and infantry.

A. P. HOWE,
Brigadier-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 4, 1864—6 p. m.

Major-General HUNTER,

Monocacy:

Our cavalry officer at Antietam Creek reports, at 4.30 p. m., he was driven away, and the enemy were crossing cavalry and infantry.

A. P. HOWE,
Brigadier-General.

---

MONOCACY, August 4, 1864.

(Received 8.30 a. m. 5th.)

General KELLEY:

General Averell has been ordered to pursue the enemy at once, and obey such orders as you may give him.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General, Commanding.

CUMBERLAND, MD., August 4, 1864.

(Received 9 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. D. HUNTER,
Monocacy, Md. :

The enemy have just attacked New Creek. I have sent all the force I can spare to its support. Averell is yet at Bath. I have urged him for God's sake to move at once.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

(Copy forwarded to Halleck, 9 p. m.)

---

HANCOCK, August 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

The report that the rebels had crossed at Cherry Run is untrue. There are none on this side of Potomac.

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Hancock, August 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General DUFFIÉ:

GENERAL: I have the honor to request that you will remain at this point and picket the roads and fords from this place to Williamsport, sending small scouting parties across the river to penetrate as far as possible, and informing General Hunter and General Kelley of anything that may occur. I have also the honor to request that you will direct 500 of the most serviceable mounted men of your division to report to me for duty. This command is entirely too weak for the enterprise which is contemplated. It will return in two or three days.

Very respectfully,

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
August 4, 1864—9 a. m.

Major-General HUNTER,
Monocacy Junction :

Patrols report no troops have passed on the Romney grade, east or west. Early's forces between Bunker Hill and Winchester. Deserters report they have orders to move to Richmond.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 4, 1864.
(Received 8.20 a. m.)

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

Have you any news this morning?

WM. W. AVERELL.

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

Nothing new this a. m. The enemy were still at Springfield last night.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 4, 1864.

(Received 8.35 a. m.)

General B. F. KELLEY:

My command is crossing the river. General Duffié will remain in person at this place. As soon as possible send a train with 10,000 rations and 40,000 pounds forage down to the break where the load can be transferred to the train on this side. Also have a wagon train ready to run to Springfield with half the above amount upon notice from me.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

Patrol just returned from Unger's Store reports no rebels seen, none in the gap, and Early's command between Bunker Hill and Winchester. No troops passed on the Romney grade.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

AUGUST 4, 1864—9.20 a. m.

Brigadier-General KELLEY,
Cumberland, Md.:

Cannot the South Branch bridge be strengthened and the road repaired immediately?

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

A force has gone down this a. m. to repair the road at Green Spring Run and South Branch bridge. Will push the work as rapidly as possible. If no rebel force has passed west McCausland and Johnson will not stay at Springfield. Have sent a scout there this a. m.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

SIR JOHN'S RUN, August 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

Upon arrival at Bath I received a report from an officer commanding a patrol toward Hedgesville, that 3,000 infantry had crossed at Cherry Run, and were advancing up both sides of the canal toward Hancock; that our pickets at Millstone Point had been driven in. I am awaiting here until the strength and intentions of the enemy are known. In the meantime can you not send us some forage and rations very soon, as my command is out of both?

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

SIR JOHN'S RUN, August 4, 1864.

General KELLEY,
Cumberland:

Report proved false. I have ordered the arrest of the officer who sent it, together with his pickets. If you can send me some rations and forage now I shall lose nothing by the delay, as I desire to be out three or four days and we are destitute. Answer.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, [August] 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

Your request will be promptly complied with.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 4, 1864.
(Received 12.30 p. m.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

The enemy have crossed at Cherry Run, 2,000 strong, marching toward Hancock. General Duffié is here. General Averell is gone to intercept McCausland.

JNO. A. BYERS,
Aide-de-Camp, Second Cavalry Division.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864—1.30 p. m.

J. A. BYERS,
Aide-de-Camp:

What force has General Duffié?

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

[HANCOCK, August 4, 1864.]

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

About 1,300 men and five pieces artillery, and good position. He says he can whip them.

J. A. BYERS,
Aide de-Camp.

CUMBERLAND, [August] 4, 1864.

J. A. BYERS,
Aide-de-Camp:

Nothing for the general. My scouts have not reported from Springfield to-day yet. Please tell the general to push on with all practicable speed. I will have forage and rations in readiness for him.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, [August] 4, 1864.
(Received Alpine 2 p. m.)

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

A dispatch, just received from New Creek, informs me that the pickets have been driven in at that place. I presume it is McNeill's and a portion of McCausland's force. Please push on as rapidly as possible.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864.
(Received Alpine 3 p. m.)

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

New Creek is attacked by McCausland's force. Push on with all possible speed. I cannot spare force from here to support New Creek.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

SIR JOHN'S RUN, August 4, 1864.

General B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland:

I will move as fast as I possibly can. Send dispatches after me advising me of all news, so that I may direct my course right. You cannot expect me to help New Creek.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864—3 p. m.
Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Hancock:

Duffié says he can take care of the force that is threatening him. For God's sake move forward as rapidly as possible.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864—4 p. m.
(Received 6.30 p. m.)

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

The wires have ceased to work [west]. If the enemy take New Creek they will attack me from the west. I shall rely on your being within supporting distance to-morrow morning.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, [August] 4, 1864—4.50 p. m.

(Received 6.30 p. m.)

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

Push forward to Springfield without delay. I will have forage and rations for you there. Wires have ceased to work to New Creek. I fear the worst.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864—9 p. m.

(Via Hancock.)

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

New Creek is yet holding out. I hope they will be able to beat the enemy off. Imboden joined them this a. m. at Romney with a small force. Push on as fast as you possibly can. A citizen reports that if they were successful at New Creek they would try Cumberland from the west.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

NEW CREEK, August 4, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

The company of the Eleventh Virginia that went out on scout over Inskip road reported at New Creek, and say that McNeill passed up with a lot of cattle toward Moorefield. Have not heard of anything else. The blockade of the road was not removed only in places they reblockaded.

J. F. HOY,
Colonel.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON, New Creek:

Put your force in position and fight to the last. It must be McNeill's force only. Will send the Eleventh to you.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON, New Creek:

Fight them to the last. Major Simpson is on the way to you.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CLARKSBURG, W. VA., August 4, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER, Beverly:

The enemy attacked New Creek this afternoon at 4 o'clock; result unknown. Keep your pickets well out and be on the alert night and day.

N. WILKINSON,
Colonel.

CHARLESTON, W. VA., August 4, 1864.

Maj. W. P. RUCKER,
Gallipolis, Ohio:

Nothing from Ballard. Captain Ramsay's company was attacked two days ago and all the men in the fort taken prisoners by Thurmond; about twenty. Ramsay was away with most of his company. Since horses have been so scarce there is some new order about officers buying Government horses which forbids, I think.

JOHN H. OLEY,
Colonel, &c.

---

MONOCACY JUNCTION, August 4, 1864.

Maj. Gen. L. WALLACE:

Everything quiet along our line. Major Waite, at Muddy Branch, reports that men in citizens' clothing are patrolling the Potomac, and when they find our men separated from their commands they bush-whack them. These men are supposed to belong to a Lieutenant Mobberly's gang of outlaws. I have instructed my command not to bring any of them to my headquarters except for interment. I think the Potomac, up to Point of Rocks, well guarded, except against a large force. My men are throwing up earth-works at Monrovia and Mount Airy to protect themselves against cavalry. We have a large force at this point.

E. B. TYLER,
Brigadier-General.

---

PITTSBURG, PA., August 4, 1864.

(Received 11.50 a. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

General Kelley telegraphs me that the enemy are at Springfield, McCausland [and] Johnson, awaiting re-enforcements. He wants me to send him troops, but do not think it advisable to send him those at Camp Reynolds, 300 to 400. By three days I hope to have an organization of all the able-bodied men in this city.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

---

PITTSBURG, PA., August 4, 1864.

(Received 9.20 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Enemy attacked New Creek at 4 p. m. Still fighting, according to General Kelley, at 7 p. m. He estimated it to be the same force which attacked Cumberland, 5,000 strong. I hope to be ready to meet them if they come north.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

PITTSBURG, August 4, 1864.

(Received 12 midnight.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY,
Cumberland :

I did not receive your telegram of yesterday.* I hope to have a large force organized shortly, but perhaps will not immediately be able to give you much assistance. Shall send out this morning to have the mountain passes fortified. If you can give information as to what points are threatened it would be advisable.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 4, 1864—5.30 p. m.

Major-General COUCH,
Pittsburg :

The enemy attacked New Creek, twenty-five miles west of this, at 4 p. m. this evening. Are now fighting. If they succeed in capturing the garrison there is nothing to prevent them from going to the Ohio River unless you can raise a force to stop them.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

HARRISBURG, August 4, 1864—9.30 p. m.

Maj. Gen. D. N. COUCH:

Lieutenant Thayer reports from Casey's Knob that General Averell crossed at Hancock on a reconnaissance, and doubtless in recrossing frightened the inhabitants. I know of no officer to send as engineer from here except Colonel Mather. I have ordered two companies to barricade roads and defend them.

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.] HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Pittsburg, Pa., August 4, 1864.

TO THE COUNTY COMMISSIONERS OF ——— COUNTY:

GENTLEMEN: It is necessary that you should be apprised that raiding parties of the enemy may at any time endeavor to invade the limits of your county, to prevent which and to inflict all possible damage to the foe, the following directions are issued for your guidance:

The roads passing over the mountains or through gorges into your county must be strongly fortified for defense, and you are requested to use the power of your official position to accomplish that end by furnishing men, tools, and, if deemed necessary, an armed force for the defense of the works erected. If necessary, arms will be furnished for any organized force by making timely application to these headquarters.

Inclosed herewith you will find special instructions as to the character of the work and the leading points to be defended. You will use your judgment as to placing obstructions over other roads. A force of men willing and ready to defend their homes should be immediately organized to hold the passes and furnish early information of the movements of the enemy.

* See Kelley to Couch, Vol. XXXVII, Part II, p. 590.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

CIRCULAR.] HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Pittsburg, Pa., August 4, 1864.

TO THE PEOPLE OF THE SOUTHERN TIER OF COUNTIES OF PENNSYLVANIA:

Your situation is such that a raid by the enemy is not impossible at any time during the summer and coming fall. I, therefore, call upon you to put your rifles and shotguns in good order, also supplying yourselves with plenty of ammunition. Your corn-fields, mountains, forests, thickets, buildings, &c., furnish favorable places for cover and at the same time enable you to kill the marauders, recollecting if they come it is to plunder, destroy, and burn your property.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

---

MONOCACY, MD., August 5, 1864—8 p. m.
(Received 11 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

I have ordered the concentration of all available force under General Hunter to be concentrated at once at Harper's Ferry and to follow the enemy promptly wherever he may go. If it is found, as I suspect, nothing but a small raiding force is north of the Potomac, then he is to move up the valley after the main force, detaching sufficient to attend to that left north of him by the enemy. Unless otherwise ordered, send all the cavalry yet to arrive as fast as brigades are complete, by Leesburg and the south side of the Potomac to reach the main army.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

MONOCACY, August 5, 1864—11.30 p. m.
(Received 12.40 a. m. 6th.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

Send Sheridan by morning train to Harper's Ferry, calling here on his way to see if General Hunter has left. Give him orders to take general command of all the troops in the field within the division. General Hunter will turn over to him my letter of instructions.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

WASHINGTON, August 5, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding:

General Grant directs that you will move with your cavalry without delay to the Monocacy, crossing by the Rockville and Frederick pike. Unless other instructions are given on your arrival by General Grant, you will report to General Hunter for orders.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

CITY POINT, VA., August 5, 1864—11 a. m.
(Received 7 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. M. C. MEIGS,
Quartermaster-General:

The last of Torbert's division of cavalry left here at 9 this morning; it numbered 5,000. I am now shipping the ammunition train and will be loading and sending wagons constantly. Shall begin to embark Wilson's division to-day. We can embark them as rapidly as the returning transports will permit.

RUFUS INGALLS,
Brig. Gen. and Chief Quartermaster, Armies before Richmond.

|                 |   |                             |
|-----------------|---|-----------------------------|
| SPECIAL ORDERS, | } | HDQRS. DEPT. OF WASHINGTON, |
| No. 192.        |   | TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS,   |
|                 |   | August 5, 1864.             |

2. The six companies of the Fourth Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps and four companies of the Tenth Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps now at Cliffburne Barracks, D. C., having been reported at these headquarters, will be reported without delay to Brigadier-General Hardin, commanding division, for duty.

By command of Major-General Augur:

C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS HARDIN'S DIVISION,
TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS, DEPT. OF WASHINGTON,
Washington, D. C., August 5, 1864.

Colonel HAYWARD,
Second Brigade:

By inclosed order, No. 192,* another regiment of Veteran Reserve Corps is assigned to our division, and by orders, No. 92, assigned to Second Brigade. General Hardin thinks you had better assign the Seventh Regiment of Veteran Reserve Corps to Stevens and Slocum, and this new regiment Veteran Reserve Corps to Totten, Slemmer, and Bunker Hill, in the proper proportion. The provisional battalion under Captain Pope will move to First Brigade as per orders, 92, inclosed. Please see that the proper disposition is made, and send report of the same as soon as practicable. This new regiment will be at Fort Totten about 2 p. m.

* See next, ante.

Very respectfully,

R. CHANDLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

ALEXANDRIA, August 5, 1864.
(Received 9.15 p. m.)

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: The patrols report all quiet to-day. I have sent a party of dismounted men below Occoquan to-night.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel, &c.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 5, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that a party sent to the vicinity of Thoroughfare Gap and beyond have just returned, reporting no force in that vicinity this side of Chester Gap, except small scouting parties down in the vicinity of Warrenton and below the gap on Little River pike. The Sixth Virginia Cavalry is reported to be at Chester Gap; it is about 250 strong. Scouts sent beyond Warrenton have not been heard from. Two messengers sent last night from the vicinity of Thoroughfare Gap failed to reach here up to this hour. No intelligence has been received from a small force between Leesburg and Aldie. It is expected that messengers from there will arrive to-night.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Vol. Cav., Comdg. Cav. Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Muddy Branch, August 5, 1864. (Received 9.20 p. m.)

Maj. C. H. RAYMOND:

All quiet on my lines to-day. Bushwhackers are making their escape across the Potomac by night.

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
In the Field, Monocacy Bridge, Md., August 5, 1864—8 p. m.
Major-General HUNTER,
Commanding Department of West Virginia:

GENERAL: Concentrate all your available force, without delay, in the vicinity of Harper's Ferry, leaving only such railroad guards and garrisons for public property as may be necessary. Use in this concentration the railroad, if by so doing time can be saved. From Harper's Ferry, if it is found that the enemy has moved north of the Potomac in large force, push north, following and attacking him wherever found; following him, if driven south of the Potomac, as long as it is safe to do so. If it is ascertained that the enemy has but a small force north of the Potomac, then push south with the main force, detaching, under a competent commander, a sufficient force to look after the raiders and drive them to their homes. In detaching such a force, the brigade of cavalry now en route from Washington, via Rockville, may be taken into account. There are now on the way to join you three other brigades of the best of cavalry, numbering at least 5,000 men and horses. These will be instructed, in the absence of further orders, to join you by the south side of the Potomac. One brigade will probably start to-morrow. In pushing up the Shenandoah Valley, as it is expected you will have to go, first or last, it is desirable that nothing should be left to invite the enemy to return. Take all provisions, forage, and stock wanted for the use of your command; such as cannot be consumed, destroy. It is not desirable that the buildings should be destroyed; they should rather be protected; but the people should be informed that so long as an army can subsist among them recurrences of these raids must be expected, and we are determined to stop them at all hazards. Bear in mind the object is to drive the enemy south, and to do this you want to keep him always in sight. Be guided in your course by the course he takes. Make your own arrangements for supplies of all kinds, giving regular vouchers for such as will be taken from loyal citizens in the country through which you march.

Very respectfully,

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 5, 1864. (Via Monocacy.)

Major-General HUNTER:

Keep me advised of your movements and those of the enemy, so that Sheridan may know where to go to join you.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

---

MONOCACY JUNCTION, August 5, 1864—10.30 a. m.
(Received 12 m.)

ADJUTANT-GENERAL U. S. ARMY:

General Emory is at Harper's Ferry with his corps. Colonel Lowell, who is guarding the river from Point of Rocks to Edwards' Ferry, made a reconnaissance as far as Hillsborough, in Loudoun County, Va., and reports no enemy in Loudoun and none moving across from Key's Ferry. No rebel force has approached Harper's Ferry to-day. General Howe reports a considerable rebel force of cavalry and artillery, with a train, moving northward from Shepherdstown on the Maryland side of the river. The main body of my forces remains in this vicinity, from which place I will not move until there are further developments of the enemy's intentions.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

MONOCACY, MD., August 5, 1864—11 a. m.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Following just received from General Howe, dated 10 a. m. 5th:

No movements observed this morning Charlestown way. A large force of cavalry and a large wagon train reported on the Maryland side, moving toward Sharpsburg.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 5, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER,
Monocacy:

About 2,000 of General Sheridan's cavalry will move out this afternoon by the Rockville and Frederick pike. The remainder will follow as soon as it arrives and is supplied. It is reported that the rebels are in Hagerstown.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

---

MONOCACY JUNCTION, August 5, 1864—4.45 p. m.
(Received 6.30 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Following just received from one of my aides, dated Harper's Ferry, 3.45 p. m.:

The rebel force crossed appears to be mostly cavalry. About 6,000 reported crossed up to this hour. Their immense wagon train would seem to denote a raid for plunder. Would it not be well to watch Loudoun closely?

D. HUNTER,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, VA., August 5, 1864—3 p. m.
(Received 3.30 p. m.)

Col. JAMES A. HARDIE,
Inspector-General:

The signal officer on Maryland Heights reports having seen three divisions of infantry cross at Shepherdstown this morning, but thinks they have not gone far from the river; also, about 300 wagons, which moved to Antietam, guarded by cavalry and a battery, scattering at that point, and can be seen in small numbers through the country procuring supplies. A portion of the Nineteenth moved up on Maryland Heights this morning.

WM. SINCLAIR,
Major, &c.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 5, 1864.
(Received 11.15 p. m.)

Col. JAMES A. HARDIE,
Inspector-General:

Lieutenant Wyckoff, First New York (Lincoln) Cavalry, has just arrived from Antietam Creek. He was at the Mountain House in the forenoon and on the hill just below the bridge where General Burnside crossed, from 2 p. m. until dark. Reports that enemy left Sharpsburg on Hagerstown road, with about 2,000 cavalry and 200 wagons, at daylight; no infantry. About 2,000 infantry and 150 wagons were left near Sharpsburg during the day. Their wagons were engaged in gathering wheat from farmers near Sharpsburg. When he left could see no signs of a force advancing on Virginia side.

WM. SINCLAIR,
Assistant Inspector-General.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
Harper's Ferry, August 5, 1864.

Captain BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Monocacy Junction:

I have telegraphed for Dudley to bring his cavalry up, but get no answer. If there is no objection, ask the general to let it come. I can ascertain nothing definite without it.

W. H. EMORY,
Brevet Major-General, Commanding.

MONOCACY, MD., August 5, 1864.

Major-General EMORY,
Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

I will send the escort to-night. Have just received the telegram. The agent of the road is anxious to have the number of men of your command passed over the road. If I shall give the number, please transmit it.

O. O. POTTER,
Captain and Chief Quartermaster, Nineteenth Army Corps.

HEADQUARTERS NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
Harper's Ferry, August 5, 1864.

Capt. O. O. POTTER,
Chief Q. M. 19th A. C., at Gambrill's, Monocacy Junction:

I will send the numbers faithfully as soon as it is proper. Let me know if Colonel Dudley's command has started; if not, send him by railroad, if possible. We are greatly in want of cavalry here.

W. H. EMORY,
Brevet Major-General.

MONOCACY, MD., August 5, 1864—8 p. m.

Major-General EMORY:

Colonel Dudley started at 4 p. m. with his command.

O. O. POTTER,
Captain and Quartermaster.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
Harper's Ferry, August 5, 1864.

Col. N. A. M. DUDLEY,
Commanding Cavalry:

You will come to this place with your cavalry with all possible dispatch. Your presence is much needed here. This supposes you have received no instructions from General Hunter; if you have, show him this.

By command of Brevet Major-General Emory:

D. S. WALKER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 5, 1864.

General MERRITT:

You can camp just beyond Tennallytown to-night, and move on at 5 o'clock in the morning.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General Volunteers, Commanding Division.

---

HDQRS. MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 5, 1864—9 p. m.

Major-General HUNTER,
Monocacy:

Scout just come in from Winchester; reports no force there except sick and guards; citizens there generally report that Early's army moved yesterday to again cross the river. Signal officer reports, at 6 p. m., no troops in sight in Maryland, but three parks of wagons, two of them near Sharpsburg and one near Hagerstown.

A. P. HOWE,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 5, 1864.

Col. W. P. MAULSBY,
Commanding Brigade, Maryland Heights:

COLONEL: In accordance with instructions from headquarters Military District of Harper's Ferry, the general commanding directs that you move at once the regiment and battalion of a regiment in your command now lying on the plain of Maryland Heights into the breast-works near the Spur battery. The troops of Major-General Emory will form on the left of your troops. The regiment of your command on the heights near Stone Fort will remain there.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

S. F. ADAMS,
First Lieutenant and Aide-de-Camp.

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 5, 1864.

Col. SAMUEL GRAHAM,
Commanding Fifth New York Artillery:

COLONEL: You will have the detachment of the One hundred and seventieth Regiment Ohio National Guard, under your command, in readiness to march at 6 o'clock to-morrow morning, the detachment to be provided with two days' rations. You will also make a sufficient detail immediately to-night to relieve the one officer, two sergeants, and seventy men of the One hundred and seventieth Ohio National Guard, now on guard duty at Sandy Hook, these men to report to their detachment commanders at Camp Hill, Va.

By order of Brig. Gen. Max Weber, commanding:

S. F. ADAMS,
First Lieutenant and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEFENSES OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 5, 1864.

Maj. JOHN H. HUNTLEY,
Second Potomac Home Brigade Maryland Volunteers:

MAJOR: You will have all of the detachments of infantry regiments of the Sixth Army Corps and Major-General Crook's division now under your command ready to march at 6 a. m. to-morrow, the 6th instant. They will be provided with two days' rations.

By order of Brig. Gen. Max Weber, commanding:

S. F. ADAMS,
First Lieutenant and Aide-de-Camp.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 5, 1864—7.30 p. m.

Major-General HUNTER,
Monocacy:

I have just returned from New Creek. The enemy were severely punished and are retreating as rapidly as possible toward Moorefield. I think they will go up the South Fork and through Brock's Gap into the Shenandoah Valley at Harrisonburg. It was the intention, however, undoubtedly of McCausland and Johnson to have gone into West Virginia if they had not been repulsed here and at New Creek. No damage done to the railroad west of this, and very little east this side of Back Creek. Trains from the west will come in to-night, and in a day or two will run east to Hancock. No account of General Averell yet. I fear the enemy will get away before he reaches the South Branch Valley.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

PITTSBURG, August 5, 1864—12.10 p. m.
 (Received Cumberland 10.25 a. m. 6th.)

General KELLEY:

The success of your forces at Cumberland and New Creek is exceedingly gratifying to the people of this city. Three regiments of infantry and two of cavalry entered Hagerstown from Shepherdstown at 9.30 this morning. I have sent artillery and infantry to Uniontown.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

HANCOCK, August 5, 1864.
(Received 10.30 a. m.)

General B. F. KELLEY:

The report of the rebel cavalry being on the Bath road is incorrect; it was General Averell's men. They have just come in from a scouting expedition, and say no rebs on the Bath road.

C. C. YEAKLE,
Operator.

---

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Hancock, Md., August 5, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

SIR: The report is that the enemy have crossed in force at Williamsport with wagon train of from 300 to 500 wagons. This is twice reported by our signal officer who is at Fairview. They commenced crossing at 10 o'clock, and continued crossing until 12 o'clock this day.

Respectfully, &c.,

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

(Copy to General Kelley.)

---

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
Hancock, Md., August 5, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER:

SIR: I send to you the following telegram from General Kelley:

CUMBERLAND, August 5, 1864.

We again defeated the enemy at New Creek yesterday. Their loss severe; ours not heavy.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

No enemy crossed the Potomac yesterday, as reported. He has withdrawn his picket from the other side of the river.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

Nothing new from General Averell.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 5, 1864—9.10 a. m.

Brigadier-General DUFFIÉ:

Your telegram just received. Scouts report that General Averell overtook the enemy beyond Moorefield and captured his artillery and 500 prisoners. This is not official; yet, I hope it is so. Your train, &c., arrived here yesterday morning. All quiet here. Will run trains to Hancock to-morrow if all right below you.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 5, 1864.

Brigadier-General DUFFIÉ,
Hancock:

If there is a squad of rebels on the Bath road, can't you drive them off or capture them? Rations and forage loaded and ready to go as soon as South Branch bridge is repaired.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

SPRINGFIELD, August 5, 1864.

(Received 8.45 a. m.)

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland:

I expected to find some information here from you of the enemy to guide my movements, but have received nothing. Will you please furnish me with all the intelligence of the enemy that you have?

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 5, 1864.

(Received 6 a. m. 6th.)

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Springfield, Va.:

Enemy repulsed at New Creek last night. Are retreating rapidly toward Moorefield. Forage and rations were sent you this a. m. to Green Spring, also teams to haul to Springfield. Do not delay to pursue them with vigor; they are short of ammunition.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

NEW CREEK, August 5, 1864.

General KELLEY:

The rebels left here during the night. We are now hunting them; cannot tell which way they have gone. I will keep you advised of every movement. It may be the rebels have gone west.

ROBT. STEVENSON,
Colonel, Commanding Forces.

NEW CREEK, [August 5,] 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

All right this morning; rebels left. We are going in pursuit; will keep you advised. Re-enforcements arrived safe. We had a hot fight all afternoon. Cannot tell yet our loss; not heavy. Captured one prisoner; says the forces of McCausland and Johnson are going out toward Parkersburg, and will go on to the road west of this place. I have confidence in the man and his father; he belongs to the First Virginia (rebel) Cavalry. Telegraph wire down west of here.

J. F. HOY,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

CUMBERLAND, August 5, 1864.

Colonel WILKINSON,
Clarksburg, W. Va. :

New Creek O. K. - Enemy repulsed and driven off.

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

CLARKSBURG, August 5, 1864.

(Received 3.40 p. m.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

I have ordered Company P, Sixth Virginia, from Wheeling to Rowlesburg, temporarily. Have also requested General Bunker to send three companies State militia. Have a detachment of Carlin's men here to man the 6-pounder brass gun. The Gilmer County affair was Chewning's horse-thieves. All quiet in front, so far as I know.

N. WILKINSON,
Colonel.

WEST UNION, W. VA., August 5, 1864.

Colonel WILKINSON:

COLONEL: I would most respectfully report to-day everything quiet. After our pickets were fired upon we sent out detachments of our company, who scouted the country for ten miles around and found that the whole affair was occasioned by a supposed gang of horse-thieves, who were prowling around and happened to run on our pickets. I will do all in my power to have them captured. Mail-carrier from Glenville reports all quiet there.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

M. DONOHUE,
*Lieutenant, Comdg. Company G, Fifth West Virginia Cavalry.*HEADQUARTERS, Cumberland, August 5, 1864.Maj. Z. SOUTH,
153d Ohio National Guard:

MAJOR: Cars will be sent to North Branch this a. m., and you are directed to load the men of your command and proceed without delay along the line of railroad, distributing your force at the different points along the route, the details of which will be indicated by Colonel Stough, who accompanies the train.

By order of Brigadier-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

GRAFTON, August 5, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

My brigade is ordered out. Can you advise me of the locality or movements of the enemy?

E. E. BUNKER,
Brigadier-General, Third Brigade.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. 8TH ARMY CORPS, MIDDLE DEPT.,
 No. 194. } Baltimore, August 5, 1864.

1. The Twentieth Regiment Pennsylvania Militia, assigned by paragraph 2, Special Orders, No. 189, current series, to the Third Separate Brigade, Eighth Army Corps, will hereafter be known as the One hundred and ninety-second Regiment Pennsylvania Militia (100-days' service).

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAMUEL B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

PITTSBURG, PA., August 5, 1864.
 (Received 6 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War:

I last night recommended to the Governor to call out 10,000 men. He has called for 30,000. I have notified him that all presented by him as organized would be armed, subsisted, clothed, and transported by the United States. There being nothing apparently to detain me here, after having made all proper dispositions with General Rowley, I intend leaving for Harrisburg to-night. Nothing later from New Creek since my dispatch of 12 m. to Major-General Halleck.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

PITTSBURG, PA., August 5, 1864.
 (Received 1 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK, Chief of Staff:

The following telegram was received by me from General Kelley this morning:

CUMBERLAND, MD., August 5, 1864—9 a. m.

My forces repulsed the enemy again yesterday at New Creek. General McCausland and Bradley Johnson's forces attacked that post 3 p. m. The fight continued until long after dark. The enemy retreated during the night, leaving their killed and wounded. Their loss severe; ours about 25 killed and 50 wounded. The garrison made a most gallant defense under Colonels Stevenson and Hoy and Major Simpson.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

I am sending infantry and artillery to Uniontown. Will leave to night for Harrisburg.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

GREENCASTLE, August 5, 1864.

Maj. J. S. SCHULTZE:

Since my last dispatch I have heard from station on Casey's Knob. They say it was a very small force of cavalry that entered Hagerstown, and that it has not moved out toward Greencastle. I think it is only a reconnoitering party that crossed, though there is evidently quite a force on the other side.

THAYER,
Lieutenant and Signal Officer

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
No. 181. } Harrisburg, Pa., August 5, 1864.

1. Capt. M. Hastings, commanding Keystone Battery, 100-days' Pennsylvania volunteers, will proceed without delay by railroad with his command to Huntingdon, Pa. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Couch:

J. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

GREENCASTLE, August 5, 1864.

Maj. J. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have retreated to this place. My scouts skirmished with the enemy this morning at Williamsport and at Hagerstown. The enemy holds the latter place. From reliable scouts, they are crossing in force at Williamsport this morning or opposite there. They were called out in line and had mock service instead of divine, after which the doxology was played by their band, and then took up the line of march for the river ford. I am having my scouts at work; will give you all possible information as to further movements of the enemy. I have not the means of determining their positive direction yet, but will soon be able to give you the direction of march. I am fully confident their aim is to come down this way.

LOT BOWEN,
Major, Commanding Third Virginia Cavalry.

---

HARRISBURG, PA., August 5, 1864.
(Received 3 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON:

Three regiments of rebel infantry and two of cavalry crossed at Shepherdstown this morning and came by the Boonsborough road. Their movements indicate that it is a foraging expedition. Our men on signal station on Casey's Knob have just left mysteriously, and it is impossible to find out anything more definite.

GEORGE CADWALADER,
Major-General.

---

HARRISBURG, PA., August 5, 1864.
(Received 4.30 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

The enemy occupied Hagerstown this morning with the three regiments of infantry and two regiments of cavalry, of the approach of which I have already advised you.

GEORGE CADWALADER,
Major-General.

HARRISBURG, PA., August 5, 1864.

(Received 11.30 a. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

The following received since my dispatch: .

Governor CURTIN:

Rebels entered Hagerstown at 9.40.

A. G. CURTIN.

CONFIDENTIAL.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
*August 5, 1864.*Governor CURTIN,
Harrisburg:

Your telegrams have been received. A force believed by General Grant to be adequate for the occasion is being directed by him against the enemy.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
*Secretary of War.*MONOCACY, MD., *August 6, 1864—10 a. m.*Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

From the dispatches received by General Hunter it appears to me evident there is no great force of the enemy, likely not more than 2,000 men, north of the Potomac, and they engaged in gathering and moving off stock and produce. I believe they will be gone before our troops can get near them.

U. S. GRANT,
*Lieutenant-General.*WASHINGTON, D. C., *August 6, 1864—11.30 a. m.*Lieutenant-General GRANT,
Monocacy:

One brigade of Torbert's division of cavalry left last night and another will start this morning for Harper's Ferry, via Monocacy. As your telegram of last night says, "Send all cavalry yet to arrive," &amp;c., I presume you allude to the division expected from City Point. Do you want an order issued making a military division of the four departments, or shall it await your return here?

H. W. HALLECK,
*Major-General and Chief of Staff.*MUDDY BRANCH, August 6, 1864.

(Received 8.10 p. m.)

Maj. C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: My line undisturbed. Guerrillas getting shy; a few yet on this side. Have furnished guard for telegraph post at Darnestown, and would place post at Rockville to better protect communication on the pike if I had men enough.

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

ALEXANDRIA, August 6, 1864.

(Received 9 p. m.)

Colonel TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General :

The patrols report all quiet to-day. The party sent out last evening went to Dumfries, but found nothing.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieut. Col. and Prov. Mar. Gen., Defenses South of the Potomac.

WASHINGTON, August 6, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER,
Monocacy, Md., or Harper's Ferry, W. Va. :

The Cavalry Bureau has requested that all unserviceable cavalry horses in your department be sent to the depots at Gallipolis, Ohio, and Giesborough, D. C. I have directed that every possible effort be made to mount your cavalry.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
 No. 60. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 6, 1864.

Maj. Gen. P. H. Sheridan having arrived is hereby placed in immediate command of all the troops within the department.

By command of Major-General Hunter:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
 No. 146. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 6, 1864.

* * * * *

5. Brig. Gen. J. C. Sullivan, U. S. Volunteers, having reported for duty at the expiration of his leave of absence, will proceed to Charleston, W. Va., and assume command of the troops in the Valley of the Kanawha.

6. In compliance with orders from Lieutenant-General Grant, Brig. Gen. A. P. Howe and staff will return at once to Washington, D. C., and report to Major-General Augur, commanding Department of Washington.

By order of Major-General Hunter:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, August 6, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Willard's Hotel :

General Grant directs that you go to Harper's Ferry this morning to assume general command of all the troops in the field. You will call at Monocacy to ascertain if General Hunter has left. Formal orders will be sent to you at Harper's Ferry.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

General, I am also requested to say that there is a battalion of convalescents belonging to the Sixth and Nineteenth Corps, perhaps some belonging to regiments in your division, at Convalescent Camp, south side of the Potomac.

HALLECK,
Major-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, VA., August 6, 1864—7.30 p. m.
(Received 8.40 p. m.)

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT,
Washington, D. C.:

I have the honor to report my command here. I find affairs somewhat confused, but will soon straighten them out. I have had a great many reports of the enemy's movements. There is not much doubt but that some cavalry and infantry marched from Sharpsburg toward Hagerstown this morning. I hope to be able to-morrow to get more definite information, and have ordered Colonel Lowell, with a portion of his command, to make a reconnaissance on the south side of the river in the direction of Martinsburg. I am anxiously awaiting the arrival of General Torbert's command. General Averell has all the cavalry that belongs here and is following up the enemy from Springfield in the direction of Moorefield. I have no good reason to think that the enemy reported as going toward Hagerstown is formidable.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

MONOCACY, August 6, 1864—12.30 a. m.

Major-General EMORY:

Move with your whole corps at daylight to Halltown. The Sixth Corps will embark to-night to join you. Until further orders [wait] at Halltown.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
Halltown, Va., August 6, 1864.

Captain BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General to General Hunter:

The advance of my column reached here early this morning, and now, at 9 a. m., my whole command is up. My cavalry will be here in two hours. I have not heard anything of my artillery or wagons, but suppose they have been ordered forward. Nothing definite of the enemy.

W. H. EMORY,
Brevet Major-General.

HDQRS. DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
Halltown, Va., August 6, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER,
Commanding:

A cavalry patrol sent to Charlestown has returned without [meeting] any enemy. As far as Colonel Jones, who commanded the patrol, could learn the enemy are moving toward Sharpsburg. He learned that General Early moved his headquarters yesterday morning eastward toward the river.

Very respectfully,

W. H. EMORY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

MONOCACY, August 6, 1864.

(Received 10.15 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. W. H. EMORY:

One of my scouts reports passing General Merritt's cavalry and two batteries at Clarksville at 12 m. to-day. They have not yet reached here. There are no others in this vicinity. I will hurry these up as soon as they arrive.

E. B. TYLER,
Brigadier-General.

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 6, 1864.

Brigadier-General GROVER:

GENERAL: The officers and men with your division belonging to other divisions of the Nineteenth Corps and to the Sixth Corps, near Harper's Ferry, will be forwarded by rail to their proper commands. If there are not a sufficient number of officers to properly take charge of the men you will detail some from your division, to return to you as soon as the men are turned over to their proper corps. Please state about the number of officers and men to go forward.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. KELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 6, 1864—2.30 p. m.

(Received 2.40 p. m.)

Brigadier-General TORBERT,
Ebbitt House:

General Sheridan directs that you hurry up your Second Brigade and send word to General Merritt to push on and report to him here. As soon as you have started your Second Brigade you will report in person at this place. You will come here by railroad.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Harper's Ferry, August 6, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. MERRITT,
Comdg. Reserve Brigade, First Division, Cavalry Corps:

General Sheridan directs that you push on with your command so as to report to him at this place by to-morrow evening.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 6, 1864.

Colonel LOWELL,

Commanding Cavalry, Near Point of Rocks:

You will please come to this place, and bring with you 1,000 cavalry. It is important that you be here at daylight to-morrow. Acknowledge receipt.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

---

POINT OF ROCKS, August 6, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER:

Order to report received.

C. R. LOWELL, JR.,
Colonel, Commanding Cavalry.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 6, 1864.

Brig. Gen. A. P. HOWE,

Commanding Military District of Harper's Ferry:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you send one company of infantry, numbering about fifty effective men, to Weverton to guard the fords near that place, so as to render more secure the rebel prisoners now there.

I am, general, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 6, 1864.

Capt. T. MELVIN,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Monocacy:

General Averell arrived at Springfield last night. I have ordered him to pursue the enemy and attack him as soon as he overtakes him. The enemy is short of ammunition.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 6, 1864.

Governor BOREMAN,

Wheeling:

I think it is not necessary to call out the militia of Ohio and adjoining counties, but would suggest a proclamation directing them to hold themselves in readiness to respond at a moment's notice.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
McConnellsburg, Pa., August 6, 1864.

Maj. Gen. D. HUNTER,

Comdg. Dept. of West Virginia, Monocacy Junction, Md.:

SIR: I learned this morning that the rebel force which crossed at Williamsport yesterday were moving in this direction. To-day I moved to this point hoping to strike their flank or head them off. To-night I learn from the signal officer at Fairview, Md., that the rebels are recrossing the Potomac. The force crossed yesterday is estimated at some 800 cavalry, 6,000 infantry, some artillery, and 200 or 300 wagons. If I find they are positively retreating I shall return to Hancock to-morrow. My men have been without rations two days. Hope to obtain at Hancock. If you have any orders for me, send here to-morrow morning.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

---

HANCOCK, August 6, 1864.

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,

Commanding, Cumberland, Md.:

The enemy have positively crossed, and are camped this side of the river near Williamsport. Their cavalry are advancing toward Mercersburg; their infantry on the Boonsborough road. I must have some rations for my men; send them to me immediately if possible; can do nothing without rations. I will send you my wagon train with my led horses. I do not know the number of the enemy, but they are reported strong, say, 7,000 or 8,000.

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General.

---

SPRINGFIELD, August 6, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER,

Commanding Department of West Virginia:

Received your dispatch of the 4th instant.* Enemy gone toward Moorefield. Lost 100 horses yesterday broken down; have 1,600 left. Enemy has double that number. I will follow and fight him if he stands if it kills every horse and man in the command; but it cannot be expected that I can overtake him if he chooses to keep away. Enemy says re-enforcements will join him at Moorefield.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

SPRINGFIELD, August 6, 1864.

(Received 11.35 a. m.)

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

Your dispatch dated yesterday was received at 6 a. m. to-day. Train arrived late in the night. About 100 horses were lost yesterday by breaking down. They cannot march long without rest or change without being lost. I have now but 1,600 mounted men. The enemy has about twice that number. To expect me to overtake him with this command in its present condition is absurd, but I will follow and fight him if he stands if it kills every horse and man in the command. Will you please have another train of forage and rations ready day after to-morrow to send out.

---

* Not found.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 6, 1864.
(Received 2 p. m.)

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

A dispatch just received from Colonel Stevenson at New Creek reports that the enemy retreated via Burlington to the Junction, and thence via the Mill Creek road to Moorefield. Should you desire supplies, I think it will be the most practicable and safest route to supply you from New Creek. I will send a regiment of infantry to occupy Greenland Gap, which will be a great safety to your trains. I presume the enemy will retreat via the South Fork if they return to Early. If they are going to Kanawha or Beverly, they will go up the South Branch to Franklin and Monterey.

The enemy is in bad condition; has been constantly marching and fighting for more than a week. I think you can whip if you can catch him. I have 200 horses I can supply you. Would suggest if you stop in the neighborhood of Moorefield to send in 200 of your poorest horses and exchange them for fresh ones. The men might come in on a scout, exchange horses, and return. Just received a dispatch from Duffié that the enemy has crossed into Maryland again, 7,000 or 8,000 strong, and that they occupy Hagerstown. I think it doubtful. Write me, by Colonel Thompson's returning scout, and inform me where you will have supplies sent and from what point.

Very respectfully, yours,

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

ROMNEY, August 6, 1864.

Major WORK:

You will [move] at once from this point via Grassy Lick to Moorefield and Wardensville turnpike, reaching the pike at a point as near Wardensville as possible. If you ascertain that the enemy has not passed eastward on that road you will at once effectually blockade it by felling trees or other means, and defend the same should the enemy approach, which you will ascertain by sending [a] patrol toward Moorefield, until it meets the enemy. If the enemy has passed you will communicate the fact to these headquarters at Moorefield at once, and endeavor to cut them off at some other point. Should you learn the enemy had taken the Howard Lick road you will endeavor to get upon it in advance of him and stop his progress. Should you hear the sound of cannon, which might indicate an engagement between the main body and the enemy, you will proceed at once by the shortest route toward the scene of action and attack the enemy.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 6, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON,
New Creek:

What news have you from the army this morning? By what roads were they then retreating toward Moorefield? General Averell is in Springfield this a. m.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

NEW CREEK, August 6, 1864.

General KELLEY,
Cumberland:

My scouts have just returned. They report the enemy at Oldfields, near Moorefield.

ROBT. STEVENSON,
Colonel.

---

NEW CREEK, August 6, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 2.20 p. m.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

Our scouts report the enemy leaving Burlington for Moorefield on Mill Creek road. A number of citizens confirm this statement.

R. STEVENSON,
Colonel, Commanding.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 6, 1864—8 p. m.

Colonel STEVENSON,
New Creek:

Direct Major Simpson to hold his command in readiness to move to Greenland Gap promptly on receiving the order. General Averell is pursuing the enemy.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 6, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER,
North Branch:

You will send a scout of forty men to escort Captain Byers, of General Averell's staff, to Mechanicsburg Gap. The scout will go up Patterson's Creek to Sheets' Mill, and thence via the Knobly road. If General Averell has passed the gap the squad will proceed with Captain Byers till he overtakes General Averell. Send the dispatches to me that General Averell may send back.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

FORT PENDLETON, MD., August 6, 1864.

General KELLEY,
Cumberland, Md.:

GENERAL: Since my last letter I have constantly had scouting parties out in the direction of Greenland Gap. Sometimes things looked gloomy enough. The country people on the east side of the Alleghany were very much excited, but as yet nothing of importance has occurred. On last Thursday my scouts pursued three of McNeill's men from the Junction to Elk Garden, but were unable to bring them to a halt. On Tuesday two men came to my camp representing themselves to be Captain Yocum's men, and had his pass. They said they were in pursuit of a horse-thief. They were truly suspicious in appearance. I sent them under arrest to New Creek. I was under the impression from their actions and manner generally that they were spies, but they proved to be all right. My scouts to-day fell in with a detachment of the Ringgold Cavalry not far from Foley. All is quiet to-day as far as the gap. I shall continue to be vigilant, and if attacked I will do the best I can to hold my position.

I am, general, very respectfully, yours,

GODWIN,
Captain.

GRAFTON, August 6, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 1 o'clock.)

Lieut. W. B. KELLEY,
Aide-de-Camp:

Have you any information of locality of enemy?

E. E. BUNKER,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 6, 1864.

Brigadier-General BUNKER,
Grafton:

The enemy is reported retreating toward Moorefield. I think this is reliable.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General

BALTIMORE, August 6, 1864.

Captain CHURCHMAN,
Westminster, Western Maryland Railroad:

Have you any information of the movements of the enemy? Make frequent reports. Any scouts from Gettysburg to-day?

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WESTMINSTER, MD., August 6, 1864.

Col. S. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I have no reliable information of any movement of the enemy. I have information from an officer who left Gettysburg at 2 o'clock this morning, and he reports that no rebels were supposed to be near there. I have a scouting party patrolling the country between Middleburg and Liberty, and will inform you of any movement of the enemy. Please place an operator in Baltimore office all night.

CALEB CHURCHMAN,
Captain, Commanding Scouts.

[First indorsement.]

HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPARTMENT, EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Baltimore, August 6, 1864.

Respectfully referred to Brigadier-General Lockwood for his information.

Please return these papers, with report as to whether you have any scouts between Westminster and Gettysburg.

By command of Major-General Wallace:

JAMES R. ROSS,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Second indorsement.]

HDQRS. THIRD SEPARATE BRIG., EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Baltimore, August 6, 1864.

In General Lockwood's absence I take the liberty of stating that there are no scouts out, other than those under Captain Churchman, the entire cavalry force of this brigade, excepting Smith's company, on the Eastern Shore, being comprised in that officer's command.

Very respectfully,

J. C. MULLIKIN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

BALTIMORE, August 6, 1864.

Brigadier-General LOCKWOOD,
Commanding Third Separate Brigade:

GENERAL: I am directed by Major-General Wallace to request you to make report to these headquarters of the cavalry in the vicinity of Westminster and beyond. Please state to what point the patrols extend and the last instructions given by you; also give the last information received from Westminster.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. THIRD SEPARATE BRIGADE, EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Baltimore, August 6, 1864.

Lieut. Col. S. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Eighth Army Corps:

COLONEL: In reply to your note of this morning, making inquiries as to the number and operations of my cavalry scouts at Westminster, I have the honor to report that this force consists of Company A, Second Delaware Cavalry (Captain Milligan), and thirty men of the First Delaware Cavalry, making in all 120 men, under the command of Captain Churchman, First Delaware Cavalry.

The following is an extract from Captain Churchman's report of yesterday, the 5th instant, received this morning:

I have scouted this [country] from Liberty through Middleburg to Emmitsburg and Hanover, and all is quiet. I have not seen anything of General Couch's scouts. I will keep a sharp lookout in the direction of Hagerstown, as there is supposed to be a rebel force there.

Inclosed is also a copy of the instructions given this officer.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY H. LOCKWOOD,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

HDQRS. THIRD SEPARATE BRIGADE, EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Baltimore, July 30, 1864.

Captain CHURCHMAN:

In accordance with the direction of Major-General Wallace, commanding the department, you will proceed, without delay, with your company to Middleburg and strengthen the patrols of the First Regiment Delaware Cavalry, now operating in that locality. You will take command of the whole patrol composed of your company, and the detachment of thirty men of the First Delaware Cavalry, unless that detachment shall be found to be commanded by an officer senior to yourself, in which event you will receive orders from him. The country must be efficiently patrolled between Liberty and Middleburg and as far up as Hanover, unless General Couch's cavalry is performing this duty in sufficient strength between Middleburg and Hanover. Captain Milligan will make frequent report by telegraph to these headquarters. A telegraph operator will be constantly on duty at Westminster and intermediate points between that place and Baltimore. In case of necessity, the cavalry patrol will retire in the direction of Baltimore, unless otherwise directed. Should you find an officer senior to yourself in charge of the patrol, you will communicate these instructions to that officer, who will carry them out to the letter.

By command of Brigadier-General Lockwood:

GEO. V. MASSEY,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HARRISBURG, PA., August 6, 1864—3 p. m.
(Received 6.30 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,

Chief of Staff:

Lieutenant Thayer, signal officer at Greencastle, reported at 2 p. m. to-day that it was said a large force of the enemy's cavalry crossed at Williamsport yesterday and went in direction of Boonsborough. One of his servants, sent to Fairview yesterday, is just in at Greencastle and says the force that crossed as above reported is from 6,000 to 8,000, with two batteries, mostly mounted. Was three hours in crossing. Hope my scouts at Emmitsburg will find out something of their direction.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

HARRISBURG, PA., August 6, 1864—8.30 p. m.

(Received 10 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Scouts again report the number of rebels that crossed at Williamsport yesterday not less than 6,000, and are encamped in the vicinity of Antietam battle-ground. No report from my scouts below Morgantown, W. Va.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

---

GENERAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 240. } Washington, August 7, 1864.

1. The Middle Department and the Departments of Washington, of the Susquehanna, and of West Virginia will constitute the Middle Military Division.

2. Maj. Gen. P. H. Sheridan is assigned by the President to the temporary command of the Middle Military Division.

* * * * *

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

WASHINGTON CITY, D. C., August 7, 1864—12 m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding, &c.:

Do not hesitate to give commands to officers in whom you repose confidence, without regard to claims of others on account of rank. If you deem Torbert the best man to command the cavalry, place him in command and give Averell some other command, or relieve him from the expedition, and order him to report to General Hunter. What we want is prompt and active movements after the enemy in accordance with instructions you already have. I feel every confidence that you will do the very best, and will leave you as far as possible to act on your own judgment, and not embarrass you with orders and instructions.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 7, 1864—12.15 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding, &c., Harper's Ferry, Va.:

The Departments of Washington, the Middle, the Susquehanna, and of Western Virginia, have been formed into a military division called the Middle Division, and you have been assigned to the temporary command. Orders will be sent to you by mail at once. You can assume command without further authority.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 7, 1864—2 p. m.

(Received 2.30 p. m.)

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT,
Washington, D. C.:

I am well satisfied that there is no large force of the enemy north of the Potomac. Early crossed the river and took dinner at Sharpsburg, but returned immediately to Winchester. The enemy are collecting wheat about Sharpsburg. I have thought it best to let them go on until I can get Torbert's division here, then I will strike for Winchester, which is the key, and pick up the parties on the north side of the Potomac.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 7, 1864—8. p. m.

(Received 8.45 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

The evidence which I have this evening is conclusive that there is no rebel force north of the Potomac. A small force crossed and 300 cavalry made their way to Hagerstown; they recrossed yesterday evening at Williamsport. I think that it is probable that two or three regiments of infantry crossed to the north side on the 5th instant to make a diversion in favor of the force that Averell fell in with yesterday and this morning. The whole of Early's army was reported on the north side, but the report was untrue. A detachment of our cavalry has been in Hagerstown since 10 o'clock to-day. I shall move from here as soon as I can get another brigade of cavalry up here.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
 No. 1. }

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 7, 1864.

The following-named officers are announced, until further orders, on the staff of the major-general commanding; they will be obeyed and respected accordingly: Inspector-general's department—Lieut. Col. James W. Forsyth, assistant inspector-general and chief of staff; Maj. F. C. Newhall, aide-de-camp and acting assistant inspector-general; adjutant-general's department—Capt. E. B. Parsons, assistant adjutant-general; quartermaster's department—Capt. A. J. McGonnigle, acting chief quartermaster; subsistence department—Capt. William H. Hosack, acting chief commissary of subsistence; aides-de camp—Capt. M. V. Sheridan, aide-de-camp; Capt. T. W. C. Moore, aide-de-camp; Capt. Joseph O'Keeffe, aide-de-camp; Maj. G. A. Forsyth, Eighth Illinois Cavalry, acting aide-de-camp; Captain Crowninshield, First Massachusetts Cavalry, acting aide-de-camp.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
 No. 2. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 7, 1864.

The following will be the amount of transportation allowed for the movement of troops of this command: Headquarters major-general commanding, two wagons and one spring wagon; headquarters of army corps, two wagons and one spring wagon; headquarters of division, two wagons and one spring wagon; headquarters of brigade, one wagon and one spring wagon; for infantry regiments, one wagon to each regiment; for batteries, two wagons for forage to a battery.

No other vehicles, excepting the ammunition wagons of the artillery, infantry, and those carrying the necessary intrenching tools, and ambulances and medical wagons will be allowed to accompany the troops. The foregoing transportation, which is to move with the troops, will be governed by the corps commanders.

The supply trains will move under special instructions from these headquarters.

All wagons will be so loaded that in case of a move they will carry ten days' short forage for the teams.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
 No. 1. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 7, 1864.

I. In compliance with General Orders, No. 240, dated War Department, Washington, August 7, 1864, the undersigned hereby assumes command of the Middle Military Division, comprising the following military departments: Middle Department, Department of Washington, Department of the Susquehanna, Department of West Virginia.

II. Until further orders the headquarters of the Middle Military Division will be at Harper's Ferry.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

BLOODY RUN, August 7, 1864.
 (Received 5 p. m.)

Col. M. N. WISEWELL,
Military Governor:

Scouts at Hancock report rebels crossed river at Williamsport. Force not yet known. General Duffié, at Hancock, about to go to McConnellsburg.

J. R. O'BEIRNE.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 7, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that a party of observation sent out from here, consisting of twenty men, was attacked by the enemy between 8 and 9 o'clock Friday evening in the vicinity of Frankville. It is thought by the officer in command that the attacking force was large. It was at first supposed that most of them were lost, but it has since proved that the officer in command gave the order for his men to disperse into the woods, and the night being dark they all escaped and have found their way safely into camp. Our loss amounts to but three horses, two of which are known to be disabled. The party reports a force of from 500 to 600 men, consisting of Mosby's and White's battalions, Mosby in command, in the neighborhood of Leesburg, and there is a considerable amount of plunder at that place. Parties of observation are still out, having been sent toward Leesburg, toward Thoroughfare, and the gaps beyond. I have nothing to report from them; they have not been heard from.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,

August 7, 1864.

Captain LEIPER,

Commanding Detachment:

You will at once report, with your detachment, to Brigadier-General Merritt, commanding brigade near Sandy Hook.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. A. WHITTIER,

Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS,

Harper's Ferry, August 7, 1864.

Major-General EMORY,

Commanding Nineteenth Corps:

GENERAL: I am in receipt of your note. I will send some cavalry to your front in the morning; meantime look out. The rebels have had no force of any moment on north side of Potomac, and what they had crossed at Williamsport yesterday. I have cavalry at Shepherdstown and scouts at Hagerstown. They all report the recrossing of the Potomac yesterday, and the force not large. Please send me all information you may be able to obtain, and oblige,

Yours, respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,

Major-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 7, 1864—10 p. m.

General CUSTER,

Comdg. Brigade Cavalry, Metropolitan Hotel, Washington, D. C.:

The general commanding directs that you join him at this place or wherever he may be with your command. You will move as soon and as rapidly as possible. General Howe, commanding at Harper's Ferry, will be able to inform you of the whereabouts of General Sheridan. Answer.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 7, 1864—5.45 p. m.

His Excellency A. LINCOLN,
President of the United States:

In sending the rebel citizens and their families beyond our lines I was obeying the order* of Lieutenant-General Grant, communicated through General Halleck, your Chief of Staff. With several thousand wealthy rebel spies in our midst, constantly sending information and supplies to the enemy, and pointing out Union men to their vengeance, it is impossible to conduct the affairs of any department successfully. I most humbly beg that I may be relieved from command of the Department of West Virginia.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
Washington, D. C., August 7, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER,
Harper's Ferry:

General Grant directs that Brigadier-General Howe and staff return to Washington and report to General Augur. Please order accordingly.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

---

CUMBERLAND, MD., August 7, 1864.

Capt. THAYER MELVIN:

I have reported for duty by letter to-day.

J. C. SULLIVAN,
Brigadier-General.

---

|                   |                                                |
|-------------------|------------------------------------------------|
| GENERAL ORDERS, { | HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,                 |
| No. 63. }         | Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 7, 1864. |

Col. William B. Tibbits, Twenty-first New York Cavalry, commanding First Brigade, First Cavalry Division, having been highly complimented by his division commander for "gallantry in action and efficiency under all circumstances in the field," and having been recommended as a competent, faithful, and gallant officer, worthy of promotion to the rank of brigadier-general of U. S. Volunteers, the major-general commanding takes pleasure in commending to the command the conduct of Colonel Tibbits and in approving the recommendation for his promotion.

By command of Major-General Hunter:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

* See Halleck to Hunter, July 17, Vol. XXXVII, Part II, p. 366.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 7, 1864.

(Received 6 p. m.)

Lieut. Col. R. E. COOK,

Point of Rocks :

Captain McAteer's command has been ordered to proceed to Berlin, Md., immediately, 100 strong.

CHAS. HAMLIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

POINT OF ROCKS, MD., August 7, 1864.

(Received 8 p. m.)

Capt. H. M. BURLEIGH,

Assistant Adjutant-General :

Captain Hewett, provost-marshal, Berlin, reports Mosby, from 400 to 500 strong, in his front. Their pickets extend down to near this point. They are pressing teams and removing forage, probably their only object.

R. E. COOK,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

WHEELING, August 7, 1864.

(Received Cumberland 9.40 p. m.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY :

I have a large portion of two brigades of militia under arms for active duty, under Brigadier-Generals Bunker and Core. It is damaging to the farming interests to keep so many of the militia from their work at this time. It has occurred to me that it would be well to disband a part of each regiment and retain a part on duty. Can you give me such information this evening as will enable me to decide; or will you write me by to-morrow's mail?

A. I. BOREMAN,
Governor.

CUMBERLAND, August 7, 1864—11 p. m.

Governor BOREMAN,

Wheeling :

I think you may with safety disband one-half of each regiment, and I hope the other half can be relieved in a few days. I trust General Averell will overtake the enemy at or near Moorefield.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 7, 1864.

Capt. T. MELVIN,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Monocacy :

Scouts report that McCausland and Johnson are retreating toward Wardensville from Moorefield. General Averell is pursuing. A portion of his force was sent from Romney, via the Grassy Lick road, to get in their front and blockade the road. The people in the southwest part of West Virginia are becoming alarmed, fearing a raid. I most respectfully suggest you order a competent officer to the Kanawha region to assume command if you have one to spare.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS U. S. FORCES,
Harper's Ferry, August 7, 1864—3.30 p. m.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division, Cumberland, Md.:

Concentrate your cavalry command at Hancock, and join me without delay by the shortest and most practicable route. You can ascertain where I am by telegraphing to General Howe, commanding at Harper's Ferry.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

(Same to Brigadier-General Duffie.)

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 7, 1864—9 p. m.

Major-General COUCH,
Comdg. Department of the Susquehanna, Chambersburg:

The enemy have all recrossed the Potomac back to Virginia.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

FORT MONROE, VA., August 8, 1864—12 m.
(Received 8 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

To supply the places of troops going out of service in the Middle Division, the Nineteenth Corps, or so much of it as may be necessary, can be taken after Early's forces are expelled. This will obviate the necessity of sending troops from City Point, unless a whole corps is required.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 8, 1864—4.10 p. m.
(Received 4.50 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Brigadier-General Kelley reports that a scout has just arrived at New Creek and reports that General Averell overtook the enemy near Moorefield yesterday and attacked him, capturing all of his artillery and 500 prisoners. Nothing official has been received from General Averell, however.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, August 8, 1864—11.50 p. m.

Major-General HALLECK,

Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C.:

The following is the substance of an official dispatch just received from Brigadier-General Averell, dated Moorefield, August 7, 1864:

General Averell overtook the enemy near Moorefield yesterday. They were under the command of McCausland, Johnson, Gilmor, and McNeill, about 3,000 strong. Attacked him at daylight on the 7th instant; number of enemy killed and wounded not known, but large. General Averell captured 3 battle-flags and all the enemy's artillery (4 pieces), 420 prisoners, including 6 field and staff, 32 cavalry officers, also a large quantity of small-arms, and 400 horses and equipments. Colonel Peters, Twenty-first Virginia (rebel) Cavalry, mortally wounded. The enemy were broken and pursued for ten miles. Our loss was 7 killed and 21 wounded. Major Conger and Lieutenant Clark, Third Virginia Cavalry, were killed whilst leading a charge. Captain Kerr was severely wounded whilst trying to penetrate the enemy's lines. McCausland fled to the mountains. General Averell says that the enemy's command is greatly scattered.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
 No. 2. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 8, 1864.

The troops under the command of Bvt. Maj. Gen. George Crook, serving in this army, will be designated and known as the Army of Western Virginia.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

J. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
 No. 3. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 8, 1864.

The headquarters Department of Western Virginia, Maj. Gen. D. Hunter commanding, will be established without delay at Cumberland, Md.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[AUGUST 8, 1864.—For General Orders, No. 4, Middle Military Division, announcing Brig. Gen. A. T. A. Torbert as chief of cavalry, see p. 501.]

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
 No. 2. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 8, 1864.

Leave of absence for the period of twenty days is hereby granted to the following-named officer: Maj. Gen. David Hunter, U. S. Volunteers.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 8, 1864.

Lieutenant-General GRANT,
City Point, Va.:

General Halleck informs me that you may send some of the heavy artillery regiments for duty in the forts here. As Colonel Whistler is now commanding a brigade in these works, I should be glad to have his regiment sent, if it can be spared.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
Washington, D. C., August 8, 1864.

Major-General AUGUR:

GENERAL: Major-General Halleck directs that the Second Division, Nineteenth Army Corps, General Grover commanding, report to you for temporary duty. The division is composed of the following regiments: Ninth Connecticut, Fourteenth New Hampshire, Third* and Twenty-sixth Massachusetts, Twelfth and Fourteenth Maine, Seventy-fifth, One hundred and thirty-first, One hundred and fifty-sixth, One hundred and fifty-ninth, and One hundred and seventy-third New York.

J. C. KELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 8, 1864—noon.
(Received 12.40 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR:

As soon as General Wilson is ready to move his division, order him to join me via Leesburg and Snicker's Gap. I am exceedingly anxious to have him join me with as little delay as possible.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, August 8, 1864. (Received 4 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR:

What force have you at Edwards' and Noland's Ferries? Where is Colonel Lazelle posted? Mosby has about 200 cavalry at or near Point of Rocks.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

* Cavalry (dismounted).

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 8, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Division:

Colonel Lazelle is posted at Falls Church, and pickets from the Potomac near Difficult Creek to Orange and Alexandria Railroad. Major Waite has near 600 cavalry along the Potomac from Great Falls to the mouth of the Monocacy, watching the different fords.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General.

Wilson has just arrived with a portion of his division. I showed him your telegram. He will make all possible haste.

C. C. A.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, August 8, 1864—4.10 p. m.
(Received 4.50 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR:

Can the Eighth Illinois Cavalry be spared? I find that the cavalry has been so scattered up here that it is no wonder it has not done well.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 8, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Division, Harper's Ferry:

The Eighth Illinois Cavalry is scattered worse than anything you have—the headquarters of six companies are in General Wallace's department; Major Waite, with four companies, is guarding the Potomac between Great Falls and the Monocacy; another company is near Port Tobacco, and another portion is with the Army of the Potomac. I do not see how Major Waite's command can be spared, as I have no cavalry to replace it. I do not know about that part of the regiment with General Wallace. Will you be at Harper's Ferry tomorrow? If so, I will go, or send to meet you, with a roster of this command, if you wish it.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 8, 1864.
(Received 11.30 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,
Commanding Department of Washington:

Your dispatch in reference to the Eighth Illinois Cavalry received. Colonel Lowell left about 600 men of Gregg's cavalry division in support of Major Waite. They moved this morning toward the mouth of the Monocacy and will remain in that vicinity. Will you please order them where you may think they can be of the most service? I will not change the Eighth Illinois Cavalry for the present. I will be here to-morrow.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 8, 1864.

Major WAITE,
Commanding on Upper Potomac, Poolesville, Md.:

General Sheridan reports that Mosby, with about 300 men, is at or near the Point of Rocks. Look out well for him.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

ALEXANDRIA, August 8, 1864.
(Received 7.50 p. m.)

Colonel TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: It is reported that three of the Sixteenth New York Cavalry stationed at Annandale were captured to-day near Burke's Station. Patrols report all quiet.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieut. Col. and Prov. Mar. Gen., Defenses South of the Potomac.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 8, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report all quiet in this vicinity. A picket-post, supplied from the detachment of the Sixteenth New York Cavalry, at Annandale, consisting of one corporal and three men, stationed on the old Braddock road about three miles southeast of Annandale was surrounded and captured by a party of about fifteen rebels this morning between 5 and 6 o'clock. Four horses and three of the men were taken by the enemy. The corporal alone escaped to bring the tidings to camp. I have nothing to report from advance scouts.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
Washington, D. C., August 8, 1864.

Brigadier-General GROVER,
Commanding Division, Nineteenth Corps:

GENERAL: Major-General Halleck directs the assignment of your division temporarily to the command of Major-General Augur, to whom you will report.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. KELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 8, 1864.

(Received 11 p. m.)

Brigadier-General WILSON,

Commanding Third Cavalry Division:

Do not lose a moment in getting your division to join me. If it will take five or six days to get your other brigade up, get McIntosh ready at once and order him to join me on the north side of the river at this place, and by the shortest road. If you can get the whole of your division ready within three days, join me, via Leesburg, Snicker's Gap, and Berryville.

P. H. SHERIDAN,

Major-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,

August 8, 1864.

Brigadier-General WILSON,

Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs me to inform you that Major-General Sheridan, commanding Middle Military Division, desires you to join him with your division with as little delay as practicable, via Leesburg and Snicker's Gap.

I am, general, very respectfully,

J. H. TAYLOR,

*Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.*WASHINGTON, D. C., August 8, 1864—3 a. m.

Colonel FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff to General Sheridan:

Your dispatch of 10 p. m. [7th] received. My brigade leaves Tennallytown early in the morning for Harper's Ferry.

G. A. CUSTER,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,

Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 8, 1864.

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN,

Comdg. Middle Military Division, Harper's Ferry, W. Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inform you that there are at present within this department eleven regiments of Ohio National Guard (100-days' men) whose term of service will expire in six or eight days. Sending these troops home to be mustered out at the expiration of their term of service will leave the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad and the Kanawha Valley in an almost defenseless condition.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. HUNTER,

Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
No. 64. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 8, 1864.

In pursuance of instructions from the commanding general Middle Military Division, the headquarters of the Department of West Virginia will hereafter, until further orders, be at Cumberland, Md.

By command of Major-General Hunter:

T. MELVIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
No. 147. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 8, 1864.

* * * * *

4. Battery D, First West Virginia Artillery, now at Parkersburg, W. Va., awaiting guns, will proceed to Wheeling, W. Va., to enable it more readily to refit, as well as to recruit its numbers.

* * * * *

10. During the anticipated absence of the major-general commanding Maj. Gen. J. Stahel, U. S. Volunteers, the next senior officer, will exercise command of the Department of West Virginia.

11. The headquarters of this department having been removed to Cumberland, Md., the members of the staff now on duty here will proceed to that place, via Baltimore, Harrisburg, and Bedford, that being at present the most available route.

* * * * *

By order of Major-General Hunter:

T. MELVIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIL. DIST. OF HARPER'S FERRY,
No. 59. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 8, 1864.

In accordance with Special Orders, No. 146, dated August 7, 1864, from headquarters Department of West Virginia, Brigadier-General Howe having been relieved from duty in this department and ordered to Washington, D. C., I hereby assume command of the Military District of Harper's Ferry. All existing orders will remain in force until countermanded.

MAX WEBER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

CUMBERLAND, August 8, 1864—10 a. m.

Major-General HUNTER,
Monocacy:

A scout has just arrived at New Creek. Reports that General Averell overtook the enemy near Moorefield yesterday morning; attacked him; took all of his artillery and 500 prisoners.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 8, 1864—11 a. m.

Major-General HUNTER, Monocacy:

I have stopped at different points on my line, and have now here in camp over 900 stragglers from General Crook's command. Shall I hold them here till I can send them back by rail?

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General

(Copy to Major-General Sheridan.)

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Harper's Ferry, August 8, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 10 p. m.)

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

Hold the stragglers of General Crook's command at Cumberland until further orders.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 8, 1864.

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY, Cumberland:

Retain stragglers from General Crook's command until they can be sent by rail.

By order of Major-General Hunter:

T. MELVIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 8, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER, Harper's Ferry:

Captains Duncan and Kelly, of Fourteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry, captured near Martinsburg two weeks since, made their escape from the prisoners' camp near Winchester and came into my lines at Paw Paw to-day. They report that Early broke camp at Bunker Hill on Friday last and moved to Doctor Hammond's farm near North Mountain Station; that Union citizens reported to them that the rebels were sending their stock up the Back Creek Valley, having heard that Sheridan was moving down the Shenandoah Valley with a large force. The prisoners' camp near Winchester, on the Front Royal road, was guarded by only sixty men; there were over 600 prisoners. No reinforcements had been sent to Early.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 21. }

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, Md., August 8, 1864.

* * * * *

III. The detachment of Battery H, First West Virginia Light Artillery, on duty in the fort at this place, will be placed en route, without delay, to rejoin their company at New Creek, W. Va. The quartermaster's department will furnish necessary transportation.

By order of Brigadier-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY DIVISION,
Hancock, August 8, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER:

General Sheridan has telegraphed me to join him. He telegraphs via Harper's Ferry. Is it by your order?

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Hancock, Md., August 8, 1864.

Maj. Gen. PHILIP SHERIDAN,
Commanding Cavalry:

(Via Harper's Ferry, Va., care General Howe.)

SIR: General Averell has 500 of my best cavalry on expedition. I expect him back in twenty-four hours or less. So soon as he returns I will move to join you. I have telegraphed General Howe to know where you are.

I am, general, very respectfully, &c.,

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

HEADQUARTERS,
Hancock, August 8, 1864.

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland:

If you know where Brigadier-General Averell is you would oblige me by directing him to order the detachment of the Twenty-second Pennsylvania Cavalry and First New York (Lincoln) Cavalry, now with him, but belonging to my command, to report to me at once at this place. I am ordered by Major-General Sheridan to immediately concentrate my command at this place and join him.

I am, sir, &c.,

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
No. 26. } DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Hancock, Md., August 8, 1864.

Col. L. B. Pierce, Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry, will proceed immediately to Harper's Ferry, W. Va., and will collect together in camp all men of the First Cavalry Division now at or near that point.

By command of Brig. Gen. A. N. Duffié:

E. W. CLARK, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[AUGUST 8, 1864.]

Major-General HUNTER,
Commanding Department of West Virginia:

Major Green, chief engineer on the staff of General Ewell, serving with Early, was captured at Moorefield. McCausland had received orders to march to Winchester at 2 a. m. 7th. No information of re-enforcements to Early has been gained. The order for the burning of Chambersburg was given by Early. McCausland's expedition was considered of great importance; parts of other cavalry divisions were dismounted to fit him out.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

NEW CREEK, W. VA., August 8, 1864.
(Received 1.50 a. m. 9th.)

Major-General HUNTER,
Harper's Ferry :

I have brought prisoners, guns, and property to this place. I request that my division be ordered to assemble at Hagerstown, or some other point, for a few days to reorganize, remount, and equip. I can double the strength of my command by it.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

NEW CREEK, August 8, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 8 p. m.)

General KELLEY,
Commanding :

McCausland waited at Moorefield, and I attacked him there at daylight yesterday morning, completely routing his command, capturing his artillery, 420 prisoners, over 400 horses and equipments, 3 battle-flags, and a quantity of small-arms. The number of the enemy killed is unknown, but large. General Johnson was captured, with his colors and three of his staff, but subsequently escaped. Colonel Peters, Twenty-first Virginia (rebel) [Cavalry], was mortally wounded. McCausland escaped to the mountains. The enemy was pursued toward Wardensville, Howard's Lick, and up the South Branch from ten to twenty-five miles. My command was so wearied with the chase and so encumbered with prisoners and captured property that I thought it best to bring it here. My loss was 7 killed and 21 wounded.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

(Copy forwarded to Major-General Hunter.)

CUMBERLAND, August 8, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
New Creek :

I most heartily congratulate you and your gallant command.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

NEW CREEK, August 8, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY :

According to the order of General Sheridan, it will be necessary that I take that portion of the Eighth Ohio now at Beverly to Hancock.

Will you please issue the necessary orders at once. Will you also direct that cars for the transportation of my command to Hancock be furnished at once. I thank you for your congratulation.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 8, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
New Creek :

I will have cars sent you as soon as possible. It will be impossible to relieve the Eighth Ohio until General Hunter can give me some troops to take their place.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

NEW CREEK, August 8, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY :

Please order cars for the prisoners. There are thirty-eight officers among them. What shall be done with the guns? McCausland received orders at 2 o'clock yesterday morning to march to Winchester.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 8, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
New Creek :

Cars will be at New Creek to-morrow morning at 8 o'clock for your prisoners. Colonel Stevenson will furnish a guard to take them to Wheeling if you wish it. You will receive an order this evening from General Sheridan which I very much regret I do not understand. General Hunter has not advised me in regard to it. The guns you may send here. I will send Captain Harrison, assistant quartermaster, to New Creek to-morrow to provide for your wants.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. SECOND BRIG., SECOND CAV. DIV.,
No. —. } New Creek, W. Va., August 8, 1864.

The colonel commanding congratulates the officers and men of the brigade upon the part borne by them in the brilliant success achieved by them through the united efforts of the officers and men of the division on the morning of the 7th instant at Moorefield, W. Va., over an enemy twice our number, and with every advantage in his favor. The conduct of the command was all that could have been desired. You did your duty as good and faithful soldiers, and your efforts were not in vain. The result was glorious—the honor of which is, as the labor was, equally shared between you and your sister brigade and division commander. But in the midst of our exultations over our victory we were called upon to mourn the loss of our brave and gallant comrade in arms, Maj. S. B. Conger, Third West Virginia Cavalry, who fell while leading his regiment against the enemy. In his death the regiment lost an able, brave, intelligent, and energetic officer, and one who ever watched over its interests with jealous care. May he who succeeds him, and the officers of this command, emulate his example and that of the gallant Lieut. L. Clark, who fell at the head of his company at the same time.

The thanks of this brigade are especially due to the Third West Virginia Cavalry Regiment for their gallantry and bravery displayed in the charge across the South Branch of the Potomac River, near Moorefield, under a very heavy fire from the enemy's line of battle on the banks of the river in their front, and for the three successive charges made by them (in the second of which they lost their gallant commander), putting the enemy to flight in confusion to the mountains. May their efforts and success on that occasion stimulate them to more daring and nobler deeds in the future.

The thanks of the brigade are also due to the First West Virginia Cavalry for the timely support given to the Third West Virginia Cavalry at a time when the enemy seemed conscious of our weakness, and attempted to rally their forces and to repel the advance of our lines, and for its joint operation with the Third Virginia Cavalry, driving the enemy into the mountains for a distance of twelve miles, killing, wounding, and capturing many, also capturing one battle-flag and two pieces of artillery. Thanks are also due to the First New York (Lincoln) Cavalry, commanded by Captain Jones, for the support rendered in operating on our right, driving three times its number before it in utter rout, while the First Virginia Cavalry and the Third Virginia Cavalry were driving the enemy on our left. The Second Regiment Virginia Volunteer Cavalry, having been held back by the general commanding as a support for the battery, was not engaged. The colonel commanding desires to compliment in the highest terms the conduct of the entire brigade in saying: that you were called upon to fight twice your number; you fought well, and gave the enemy a severe whipping, driving him from his position, his guns, and from his battle-flag, because we were united and made the attack fully determined to "conquer or die."

W. H. POWELL,
Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

CUMBERLAND, August 8, 1864.

Brigadier-General SULLIVAN,
Oakland:

The following just received.* I am very much gratified. I wish to see you before you go. Will try to go up to-morrow or next day. Scouts report that Averell overtook the enemy and captured all his artillery and 500 prisoners.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 197. } Baltimore, August 8, 1864.

5. Capt. T. M. Bartholomee, commanding detachment Twelfth Maryland Infantry (100-days' service), having reported to these headquarters, in obedience to orders of Maj. W. S. Harlan, One hundred and fifty-ninth Ohio National Guard, commanding Camp Bradford, is hereby ordered to return to Camp Bradford and await further orders.

* See paragraph 5, Special Orders, No. 146, Department of West Virginia, August 6, 1864, p. 709.

Captain Bartholomee will make requisition at once for arms and accoutrements, sixty rounds of ammunition per man, and all authorized articles needed for field service.

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HARRISBURG, August 8, 1864—9.30 p. m.
(Received 1.30 a. m. 9th.)

Maj. T. M. VINCENT:

I don't think that 500 men have responded to the Governor's call, and doubt if 3,000 will. Men have organized for home defense at York, Carlisle, Altoona, Johnstown, Harrisburg, &c. I ordered all able-bodied citizens of Alleghany County to be enrolled. Don't believe they would come into this valley in any ordinary emergency. Have made no call under this proclamation of the Governor. Am not raising men for Federal or State service, unless my appeal to border counties is so construed. It is understood that Colonel Crosman was only notified to have clothing for 15,000 ready, when Breckinridge was supposed to be moving west. My calls, &c., will be sent by mail. I think the people are waiting to see what the Legislature will do.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

---

CITY POINT, August 9, 1864—12 m.
(Received 10 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN,
Harper's Ferry:

Information derived from deserters, refugees, and a man sent from here to Richmond, all corroborating, locate every division and brigade of Hill, Longstreet, and Beauregard's forces. Not one brigade has been sent from here. I shall endeavor to hold them, and rather create a tendency to draw from your front than allow them to re-enforce.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 9, 1864—8.30 p. m.
(Received 9 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

I will move from Halltown up the Valley. Early broke up his camp at Bunker Hill on last Friday and drew in the small detachments he had at Williamsport and the 300 cavalry which went as far as Hagerstown. He learned that General Grant was at Monocacy and that I was in command of a large force. He moved from Bunker Hill to North Mountain Station and was sending stock up Back Creek Valley. I have found things here in confusion. The cavalry were all scattered, but I have collected a large number. Duffié's command has been doing nothing up about Hancock. It has been ordered to join me; Averell also. Torbert's two brigades came in this morning and his last brigade this evening.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 9, 1864—8 p. m.
(Received 9 p. m.)

Colonel HARDIE,
Inspector-General:

I have most urgently to request that Capt. John Kellogg, commissary of subsistence, U. S. Army, be ordered here as chief commissary of subsistence. If he can be sent I should like to have him come at once.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 6. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

I. Brigadier-General Weber, commanding at Harper's Ferry, will have Colonel Schoonmaker's command of dismounted cavalry moved to Pleasant Valley and camped near Major Congdon's command. Colonel Schoonmaker will assume command of all of the dismounted cavalry. Colonel Maulsby, commanding Maryland Heights, will at once order all the dismounted cavalry with him to report to Major Congdon.

II. The dismounted cavalry will be armed, and kept armed, as fast as possible with carbines and pistols.

By order of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 7. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

In addition to General Orders, No. 1, headquarters U. S. Forces, August 7, 1864, the following officers are announced on the staff of the major-general commanding: Asst. Surg. F. H. Patton, Twelfth Virginia Infantry, as acting medical purveyor; Maj. H. W. Owings, Second Eastern Shore Maryland Volunteers, as acting medical director.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 8. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

Capt. Thayer Melvin, assistant adjutant-general, is relieved from duty at the headquarters of Department of Western Virginia, and is hereby assigned to duty at these headquarters.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 9. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

During the temporary absence in the field of the major-general commanding, the office of this military division at Harper's Ferry will be in charge of Capt. T. Melvin, assistant adjutant-general, and all communications from headquarters not moving in the field will be sent to him at this point until further orders.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 3. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

1. Maj. Gen. Julius Stahel is hereby relieved from duty in the Department of Western Virginia, and will report in person for orders to Maj. Gen. L. Wallace, commanding Middle Department.

* * * * *

3. Bvt. Maj. Gen. George Crook, in addition to his present command of the Army of Western Virginia, will, during the temporary absence of Maj. Gen. D. Hunter, assume command of the Department of West Virginia.

4. First Lieut. John R. Meigs, Engineer Corps, having reported to these headquarters for orders, will report to Bvt. Maj. Gen. George Crook, commanding Department of Western Virginia, for assignment to duty.

* * * * *

8. Brig. Gen. Max Weber, commanding Military District of Harper's Ferry, will retain of the artillery now at this place six complete batteries for the garrison of this point. All surplus artillery will be at once sent to Washington, D. C. The officers commanding the batteries sent to Washington will on the arrival at that point report to Brigadier-General Howe, chief of artillery, U. S. Army.

9. The Third Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, now under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Jones, will be dismounted, under the supervision of Capt. E. V. Sumner, First U. S. Cavalry, and the horses, arms, equipments and transportation will be turned over to the dismounted men belonging to this military division. As soon as the regiment is dismounted and the property properly disposed of, Lieutenant-Colonel Jones will proceed with his men to Washington, D. C., and report to Major-General Augur to be mustered out. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

ORDERS.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

I. The command, now at or near Halltown, will move to-morrow morning in the following order, and at the following hours:

II. At 4 o'clock General Torbert will move his cavalry command from its present position near Charlestown, via Summit Point, and along the western base of Limestone Ridge, until he arrives at the intersection of the pike from Millwood to Winchester with the pike from Millwood to White Post. In this movement General Torbert will send out strong parties to the crossings of Opequon Creek, and will leave Colonel Lowell's command at Summit Point with directions to report to the major-general commanding through a staff officer. After arriving at the above-named intersection, the movements of the cavalry will be in compliance with special instructions furnished from these headquarters. General Torbert will be required to send frequent reports of the position of the enemy, and information obtained, to the major-general commanding.

III. The Sixth Corps will move at 5 o'clock from its present camp, via a dirt road on the north side of the Berryville pike, until it reaches Clifton, where it will take position unless otherwise ordered. General Wright will communicate all information obtained of the enemy's movements to the major-general commanding.

IV. The Nineteenth Corps will move at 5 o'clock by the Berryville pike, until it arrives at the intersection of the pike or road from Clifton with the Berryville pike, about one mile and a half or two miles from Berryville, where it will take position, unless otherwise ordered, and open communication with General Wright at Clifton. General Emory will communicate all information obtained of the enemy's movements to the major-general commanding.

V. The Army of Western Virginia, Brevet Major-General Crook commanding, will move at 5 o'clock on a dirt road on the left of the Berryville pike, via Kabletown, until it arrives at Berryville, where it will take position, unless otherwise ordered, and open communication with General Emory at a point near Berryville. General Crook will communicate all information obtained of the enemy's movements to the major-general commanding.

VI. The transportation permitted by General Orders, No. 2, to accompany the troops, will be subject to the orders of corps commanders.

VII. The subsistence trains which have been parked near Bolivar Heights will remain there until otherwise ordered from these headquarters.

VIII. The brigade of General Kenly, now attached to the Nineteenth Corps, is hereby detached from that corps and will remain in camp at Halltown, but will be held in readiness to move on orders from these headquarters.

IX. The headquarters of the major-general commanding will be with the Nineteenth Corps, on the Berryville pike.

By command of Maj. Gen. P. H. Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 9, 1864—8 p. m.

(Received 8.40 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,

Washington:

Will you have the kindness to hurry General Wilson up and get him started out as soon as possible? I have no important news to communicate. Have heard nothing from Mosby to-day. The small detachments that Early had about Williamsport and Shepherdstown were drawn in, and from the best information that I have, he broke up his camp near Bunker Hill last Friday and moved to Doctor Hammond's house, near North Mountain Station, and was sending stock up Back Creek Valley. He had learned that General Grant was at Monocacy on Friday, and that I was advancing with a large force. I will leave here to-morrow. I have not been able to learn that there were more than 300 cavalry on the north side of the Potomac, with a few wagons.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 9, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Division, Harper's Ferry:

General Wilson informs me that his division will not be here ready to move before Thursday afternoon. He is all ready to move as soon as his men arrive.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WASHINGTON,
No. 195. } TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS,
August 9, 1864.

* * * * *

2. Brig. Gen. A. P. Howe, U. S. Volunteers, having reported for duty in this department, is hereby assigned to duty as specified in paragraph 47, Special Orders, No. 96, War Department, Adjutant-General's Office, February 29, 1864.*

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Augur:

C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HAGERSTOWN, August 9, 1864.
(Received 11 p. m.)

Military Governor WISEWELL:

Left Cumberland 7th. Johnson and Kelley engaged 5th at New Creek. Johnson defeated and retreating westward. Arrived Frankfort 7th. Captain McNeill passed through on 4th with forty men, on his way to join Johnson. I arrived Springfield same date. Averell passed through Springfield 6th, in close pursuit. Arrived Green Spring same date. Johnson's force 3,500 strong. From Green Spring to Gilpintown. No signs of enemy from Springfield to Hagerstown. What course shall I take next? Request major to bring War Department headings for authority. Answer.

C. BOSTICK.

* See Vol. XXXIII, p. 617.

MUDDY BRANCH, August 9, 1864.

Maj. C. H. RAYMOND:

All quiet on my line up to this time. Considerable cavalry seen over the river opposite right of my line yesterday. Contents of the general's dispatch* known the length of my line before daylight and all upon the alert.

J. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

ALEXANDRIA, August 9, 1864.
(Received 10 a. m.)

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: About forty guerrillas attacked my pickets near the telegraph road last night at 11 o'clock. Charged on a small reserve and captured two horses and two men of the Sixteenth New York. They then retreated toward Burke's Station. I am not yet satisfied that the officer in charge of the picket or the men composing the reserve did their duty, but am investigating and shall report to-day.

Respectfully,

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., August 9, 1864.
(Received 8.50 p. m.)

Lieutenant-Colonel TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I learn that yesterday about 4 o'clock Mosby attacked about sixty of the Sixteenth New York Cavalry near Fairfax Station and whipped them badly. Some six or eight only have thus far returned to their camp.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel, &c.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 9, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that two parties sent out from this command, consisting of thirty men each, met yesterday afternoon at Fairfax Station, and that while united and acting together were attacked by a force of rebels, variously estimated at from forty to fifty men, and were completely dispersed and routed. Citizens agree in reporting that Mosby himself was in command of the rebels. So far as known our loss is as follows: Capt. J. H. Fleming, Sixteenth New York Cavalry, missing; thirty-three men missing; thirty-nine horses missing. The number of these killed and wounded is not yet known. Captain Fleming, who, at the time of the attack, had command of the party, is reported killed; no other officers are lost. I have nothing to report except disgraceful mismanagement and consequent complete rout of our men, and a second Aldie disaster. A board of investigation has been called to ascertain who is responsible, and examine into and report upon the facts in the case; it will be forwarded with a complete statement in regard to the affair as soon as possible. A strong party was sent out this morning to the scene of the disaster to pick up stragglers and what wounded men could be found. Nothing has been heard from the force sent above Leesburg; they had orders to communicate any intelligence of importance.

* See Augur to Waite, August 8, p. 729.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS,
August 9, 1864.

Capt. E. B. PARSONS,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Middle Military Division:

SIR: In obedience to order I have the honor to submit the following field return:

| Command.             | Present for duty. |        |            |
|----------------------|-------------------|--------|------------|
|                      | Officers.         | Men.   | Aggregate. |
| First Division.....  | 246               | 4,601  | 4,847      |
| Second Division..... | 218               | 3,851  | 4,069      |
| Third Division.....  | 158               | 2,632  | 2,790      |
| Artillery.....       | 27                | 709    | 736        |
| Total.....           | 649               | 11,793 | 12,442     |

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. G. WRIGHT,

Major-General, Commanding.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,
August 9, 1864.

The corps will move to-morrow at 5 a. m., via a dirt road on the north side of the Berryville pike, to Clifton. A guide will be sent from these headquarters to Brigadier-General Ricketts, commanding the leading division, to indicate the road to be taken and to accompany him. The following will be the order of march: first, Third Division; second, First Division; third, Reserve Artillery, and the transportation allowed by General Orders, No. 2, headquarters U. S. Forces, with the exception of wagons for regimental baggage, which will be sent to the supply train; fourth, Second Division. The ambulances will accompany the divisions to which they belong.

Division commanders will send a staff officer to these headquarters to-night for the corps' time.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. H. WHITTELSEY,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,
August 9, 1864.

Brigadier-General RUSSELL,
Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding the corps directs that when the corps moves to-morrow the Forty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers shall be left behind. It will move to the vicinity of the supply train and remain there until further orders. The supply train will be parked on the other side of the works on Bolivar Heights. This regiment is left behind on account of the prevalence of varioloid among the men.

Very respectfully,

C. A. WHITTIER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, SIXTH CORPS,
August 9, 1864.

Colonel Edwards, commanding Third Brigade, will send the Forty-ninth Pennsylvania Volunteers to report, in compliance with the above order, to-morrow morning.

By command of Brigadier-General Russell:

HENRY R. DALTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,
Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: There will be an advance movement of the command to-morrow morning. The order for the movement will reach you this evening.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864—7.30 a. m.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. GEORGE CROOK,
Commanding Army of West Virginia:

GENERAL: Supply your command with at least three days' rations from to-morrow morning, to be carried on their persons, and then have your supply trains parked inside the lines of works at Bolivar Heights.

I am, very respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

(Same to General Emory.)

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. CAVALRY, MID. MIL. DIVISION,
No. 1. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

Pursuant to General Orders, No. 4, headquarters Middle Military Division, the undersigned assumes command of the cavalry of the Middle Military Division.

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General Volunteers and Chief of Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864—8 a. m.

Brigadier-General TORBERT,
Chief of Cavalry:

GENERAL: Have the division of General Merritt and the command of Colonel Lowell at once supplied with three days' rations from to-morrow morning, to be carried on the person, and two days' forage for the animals (this amount will be required to last five days). Then send all your wagons, "except one wagon for division headquarters and one wagon for brigade headquarters," inside the line of works at Bolivar Heights, to be there snugly parked, and to rejoin when ordered from these headquarters.

I am, very respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding Reserve Brigade:

SIR: Brigadier-General Torbert directs that you send a strong scouting party to Middleburg to collect information of the enemy, and make a report of the same as soon as possible.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. H. GOLDSMITH,
Lieutenant and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

Brigadier-General MERRITT:

Inclosed you will find the order of march for to-morrow. Be in readiness to move at the time specified. I will be out some time to-night. Send for Colonel Lowell and give him his instructions.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General Volunteers, Chief of Cavalry.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

General MERRITT,
Commanding First Division:

Have your command at once supplied with three days' rations from to-morrow morning and two days' forage (this amount to last five days). All of your wagons, except one wagon and light wagon to division headquarters, and one wagon and ambulance to brigade headquarters, will be sent inside of the works at Bolivar Heights, to be snugly parked, to join us when sent for from these headquarters. A good officer will be left in charge of the train. Colonel Cole, with his regiment of Maryland cavalry, will be, or has been, ordered to report to Colonel Lowell. Be ready to move to-morrow morning.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General Volunteers, Chief of Cavalry

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 9, 1864.

Brig. Gen. J. H. WILSON,

Commanding Third Cavalry Division, Washington, D. C.:

(Care of Maj. Gen. C. C. Augur, commanding Department of Washington.)

Do not lose a moment in getting your division ready to join me. If it will take five or six days to get your other brigade up, get McIntosh ready at once and order him to join me on the north side of the river at this place, and by the shortest route. If you can get the whole of your division ready within three days, join me via Leesburg, Snicker's Gap, and Berryville.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

May it not do as well to have the dispatch sent yesterday, sent to General Wilson care of General Augur?

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel, &c.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 9, 1864—9 p. m.

Brig. Gen. J. H. WILSON:

(Care of General Augur.)

Have you received my last telegram, through General Augur, in relation to your movements? Also my telegram through the War Department? Please answer.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 9, 1864.

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN,
Harper's Ferry:

Have received all your telegrams, and as they contained definite instructions did not think it necessary to reply, but intended to make every exertion to get off the entire command within the three days. I think, from appearances, I can leave day after to-morrow, time enough to make a day's march. Will do my best, but if the troops do not get here shall I wait longer, or go on with what I may have? You know my command is small at best. What about forage in the Valley? How much should I start with?

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 9, 1864—10 p. m.

Brigadier-General WILSON,

Commanding Cavalry Division:

I have just received another telegram from General Sheridan, requesting me to hasten your departure as much as possible. Will you be good enough to inform [me] when you will be able to move with your division, and if there is anything I can do to facilitate your preparations.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 9, 1864.
(Received 11.14 a. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

I have leave of absence for twenty days from General Sheridan. Please telegraph me at Barnum's Hotel, Baltimore, permission to visit my family in Washington.

D. HUNTER,
Major-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 9, 1864—12.11 p. m.
Major-General HUNTER,
Barnum's Hotel, Baltimore:

You have permission to visit Washington.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
No. 65. } In the Field, August 9, 1864.

In accordance with Special Orders, No. 3, from headquarters Middle Military Division, the undersigned assumes temporary command of the Department of West Virginia. All communications for these headquarters will be sent to Harper's Ferry until further orders.

GEORGE CROOK,
Brevet Major-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 9, 1864.

Captain PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Middle Military Division:

CAPTAIN: After consultation with engineer officers regarding the railroad bridge, I have ascertained and have the honor to report that the bridge will be completed and ready for the passage of troops and trains within three days. Such necessary materials as are wanting have been ordered by telegram and are expected here daily. Permit me to state that in my opinion a good pontoon bridge is very necessary, in addition to the railroad bridge, and for the reason that the railroad bridge is not reliable in case of high water. On two occasions since I have been in command here the trestle-work of the railroad bridge has been swept away, the river rising after heavy rains. In such case it is impossible to commence rebuilding until low water, and after the water has fallen two days' time at least is required to put the bridge in repair. In this way communication may be cut off for six or seven days. A pontoon bridge can be relaid as soon as the river begins to fall, and communication opened within a few hours.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

MAX WEBER,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 9, 1864.

Brigadier-General DUFFIÉ,
Hancock :

General Averell is now embarking his troops on the cars at New Creek and will be at Hancock to-morrow.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, August 9, 1864.

Brig. Gen. A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Commanding First Cavalry Division, Hancock, Md. :

General Sheridan is at Harper's Ferry.

H. M. BURLEIGH,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

NEW CREEK, VA., August 9, 1864.

Major-General HUNTER :

I request that the detachment of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry at Beverly be relieved by Ohio National Guard and join the division.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 9, 1864—4 p. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
New Creek :

General Duffié is at Hancock. Major-General Sheridan has been appointed to command all the troops in the three following departments: Department of West Virginia, the Middle Department, and the Department of the Susquehanna, with headquarters at Harper's Ferry.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 9, 1864—4 p. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
New Creek :

Captain Harrison could not leave to-day. Make requisition on his agent at New Creek, Mr. Winants, for whatever you may need. Have the cars arrived from the west to transport your troops? Mr. Lyon, the agent at New Creek, will render you prompt assistance in moving your command. Please send for him and inform him what you want done. The cars are on their way to you.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

[AUGUST 9, 1864.—For Averell's congratulatory orders, see p. 505.]

---

CUMBERLAND August 9, 1864—12 m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Harper's Ferry:

I reported to General Hunter at 11 p. m. last night General Averell's dispatch to me. He arrived at New Creek yesterday evening and is now awaiting cars to move his command, in obedience to your orders. A portion of his troops will move this evening. I send you copy of General Averell's dispatch of the 8th.*

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 9, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 8.40 a. m. 11th.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

The news of Averell's success reached me by your telegram last night and was at once transmitted to Washington. I want you to commence repairing the telegraph this way as far as Martinsburg and I will order General Weber to repair the line from this direction to that place. I think after to-morrow there will be no danger.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 9, 1864.

Governor BOREMAN,
Wheeling:

Brig. Gen. J. C. Sullivan has been ordered to assume command of all the forces in the Kanawha Valley, with headquarters at Charleston.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 9, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER SIXTH WEST VIRGINIA CAVALRY,
North Branch:

The general commanding directs that you send, without delay, a scout, to consist of forty men, in charge of a reliable officer, to Frankfort, thence via Springfield to Romney, W. Va. A prompt report of all matters of interest will be expected.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

* See p. 734.

CLARKSBURG, August 9, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 10.30 a. m.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

Scouts sent toward Monterey report no rebel force of importance in that vicinity, but 300 or 400 are said to be at Franklin.

N. WILKINSON.

CLARKSBURG, August 9, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 9.30 p. m.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

At 9 p. m. I have the following:

BUCKHANNON.

Cannonading has been heard to-day in direction of Beverly. The wire between here and that place is down. I have mounted part of my force for scouts.

H. H. HAGANS,
Captain.

N. WILKINSON.

CLARKSBURG, August 9, 1864—9.30 p. m.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

Am in communication with Beverly. The cannonading is east of there; supposed at Winchester or Moorefield.

N. WILKINSON,
Colonel.

WASHINGTON, August 9, 1864—3.20 p. m.

Major-General WALLACE,
Commanding:

Select three 100-days' Pennsylvania regiments of your command and order one to each of the following points: Johnson's Island, Ohio; Rock Island, Ill.; Chicago, Ill. In addition, send a Massachusetts 10 -days' regiment to Indianapolis, Ind. Report to this office when regiments will start, and inform Major-General Heintzelman, commanding, Columbus, Ohio, of departure of each.

By order:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

BALTIMORE, MD., August 9, 1864.
(Received 12 p. m.)

Col. E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The four regiments will be put en route at once in accordance with your orders. Major-General Heintzelman will be informed of time of departure.

LEW. WALLACE,
Major-General of Volunteers.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
 No. 198. } Baltimore, August 9, 1864.

* * * * *

5. The several companies of the Seventh Regiment Delaware Volunteer Militia (thirty-days' service) will be relieved from duty by other troops of the Third Separate Brigade and ordered to report to the commanding officer at Wilmington to be mustered out and paid off at the expiration of their term of service in accordance with the mustering regulations of the army. Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

* * * * *

9. In accordance with orders from the War Department, the Sixtieth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Militia (100-days' service), Col. A. D. Wass commanding, will be put en route at once to report to the commanding officer at Indianapolis, Ind. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brigadier-General Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

10. In accordance with orders from the War Department, the One hundred and ninety-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia (100-days' service), Col. J. B. Clark commanding, will be put en route at once to report to the commanding officer at Johnson's Island, Ohio. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brigadier-General Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

11. In accordance with orders from the War Department, the One Hundred and ninety-seventh Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia (100-days' service), Col. J. R. Haslett commanding, will be put en route at once to report to the commanding officer at Rock Island, Ill. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brigadier-General Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

12. In accordance with orders from the War Department, the One hundred and ninety-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia (100-days' service), Col. Harmanus Neff commanding, will be put en route at once to report to the commanding officer at Chicago, Ill. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brigadier-General Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

EXECUTIVE CHAMBER,
Harrisburg, August 9, 1864.

TO THE SENATE AND HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES OF THE COMMONWEALTH OF PENNSYLVANIA:

GENTLEMEN: I have called you together in advance of your adjourned session for the purpose of taking some action for the defense of the State. From the commencement of the present rebellion Pennsylvania has done her whole duty to the Government. Lying, as her southern counties do, in the immediate vicinity of the border, and thus exposed to sudden invasion, a selfish policy would have led her to retain a sufficient part of her military force for her own defense. In so doing she would have failed in her duty to the whole country. Not only would her men have been withheld from the field of general operations, but the loans and taxation which would have become necessary would have, to a large extent, diminished the ability of her people to comply with the pecuniary demands of the United States. She would also have necessarily interfered with and hampered all the military action of the Government and made herself, to some extent, responsible for any failures and shortcomings that may have occurred. In pursuance of the policy thus deliberately adopted this State has steadily devoted her men to the general service. From the beginning she has always been among the first to respond to the call of the United States, as is shown by her history, from the three-months' men and the Reserve Corps to the present moment.

Thus faithfully fulfilling all her own obligations, she has a right to be defended by the national force, as part of a common country; any other view would be absurd and unjust. She, of course, cannot complain when she suffers by the necessary contingencies of war. The reflections that have, in too many quarters, been made upon the people of her southern counties, are most unfounded. They were invaded in 1862, when a Union army much superior to any force of the rebels (and on which they had of course a right to rely) was lying in their immediate vicinity and north of the Potomac. They were again invaded in 1863, after the defeat of the Union forces under Milroy at Winchester, and they have again suffered in 1864, after the defeat of the Union forces under Crook and Averell. How could an agricultural people, in an open country, be expected to rise suddenly and beat back hostile forces which had defeated organized veteran armies of the Government? It is of course expected that the inhabitants of an invaded country will do what is in their power to resist the invaders, and the facts hereinafter stated will show, I think, that the people of these counties have not failed in this duty.

If Pennsylvania, by reason of her geographical position, has required to be defended by the national force, it has only been against the common enemy. It has never been necessary to weaken the army in the field, by sending heavy detachments of veterans to save her cities from being devastated by small bands of ruffians composed of their own inhabitants. Nor have her people been disposed to sneer at the great masses of law abiding citizens, in any other State, who have required such protection. Yet, when a brutal enemy, pursuing a defeated body of Union forces, crosses our border and burns a defenseless town, this horrid barbarity, instead of firing the hearts of all the people of our common country, is actually, in some quarters, made the occasion of mocks and gibes at the unfortunate sufferers, thousands of whom have been rendered houseless, and these heartless scoffs proceed from the very men who, when the State authorities, foreseeing the danger, were taking precautionary measures, ridiculed the idea of there being any danger, sneered at the exertions to prepare for meeting it, and succeeded to some extent in thwarting their efforts to raise forces. These men are themselves morally responsible for the calamity over which they now chuckle and rub their hands. It might have been hoped—nay, we had a right to expect—that the people of the loyal States, engaged in a common effort to preserve their Government and all that is dear to freemen, would have forgotten, at least for the time, their wretched local jealousies and sympathized with all their loyal fellow-citizens wherever resident within the borders of our common country. It should be remembered that the original source of the present rebellion was in such jealousies, encouraged for wicked purposes by unscrupulous politicians. The men who, for any purpose, now continue to encourage them, ought to be held as public enemies—enemies of our Union and our peace—and should be treated as such. Common feelings, common sympathies, are the necessary foundations of a common free government. I am proud to say that the people of Pennsylvania feel every blow at any of her sister States as an assault upon themselves, and give to them all that hearty good will, the expression of which is sometimes more important, under the infliction of calamity, than mere material aid.

It is unnecessary to refer to the approach of the rebel army up the Shenandoah Valley on the 3d day of July last; to the defeat of General Wallace on the Monocacy; their approach to and threatening of the capital; or to their destruction of property and pillage of the counties of Maryland, lying on our border.

These events have passed into history, and the responsibilities will be settled by the judgment of the people. At that time a call was made upon Pennsylvania for volunteers, to be mustered into the service of the United States, and “to serve for 100 days in the States of Pennsylvania and Maryland, and at Washington and its vicinity.”

Notwithstanding the embarrassments which complicated the orders for their organization and muster, six regiments were enlisted and organized, and a battalion of six companies. The regiments were withdrawn from the State, the last leaving the 29th day of July. I desired that at least part of this force should be confined in their service to the States of Pennsylvania and Maryland, and made such an application to the War Department. As the proposition did not meet their approbation it was rejected and the general order changed to include the States named and Washington and its vicinity.

No part of the rebel army at that time had come within the State. The people of the border counties were warned, and removed their stock, and at Chambersburg and York were organized and armed for their own protection.

I was not officially informed of the movements of the Federal armies, and, of course, not of the strategy of their commanders; but it was stated in the newspapers that the rebel army was closely pursued after it had crossed the Potomac, and was retiring up the Valley of the Shenandoah. Repeated successes of our troops were also announced, and the people of this State had just cause to believe that quite a sufficient Federal force had been thrown forward for its protection upon the line of the Potomac.

On Friday, the 29th day of July, the rebel brigades of Johnson and McCausland, consisting of 2,500 to 3,000 mounted men, with six-guns, crossed the Potomac at Clear Spring ford. They commenced crossing at 10 a. m. and marched directly on Mercersburg. There were but forty-five men picketed in that direction, under the command of Lieutenant McLean, U. S. Army, and as the enemy succeeded in cutting the telegraph communication, which from that point had to pass west by way of Bedford, no information could be sent to General Couch, by telegraph, who was then at Chambersburg. The head of this column reached Chambersburg at 3 a. m. on Saturday, the 30th.

The rebel brigades of Vaughn and Jackson, numbering about 3,000 mounted men, crossed the Potomac at about the same time at or near Williamsport—part of the command advanced on Hagerstown; the main body moved on the road leading from Williamsport to Greencastle.

Another rebel column of infantry and artillery crossed the Potomac simultaneously at Shepherdstown and moved toward Leitersburg. General Averell, who commanded a force reduced to about 2,600 men, was at Hagerstown, and being threatened in front by Vaughn and Jackson, on his right by McCausland and Johnson, who also threatened his rear, and on his left by the column which crossed at Shepherdstown, he therefore fell back upon Greencastle.

General Averell it is understood was under the orders of General Hunter, but was kept as fully advised by General Couch as was possible of the enemy's movement on his right and to his rear. General Couch was in Chambersburg, where his entire force consisted of sixty infantry and forty-five cavalry and a section of a battery of artillery, in all less than 150 men. The six companies of men enlisted for 100 days remaining in the State and two companies of cavalry had, under orders from Washington (as I am officially advised), joined General Averell. The town of Chambersburg was held until daylight by the small force under General Couch, during which time the Government stores and train were saved. Two batteries were then planted by the enemy, commanding the town, and it was invested by the whole command of Johnson and McCausland. At 7 a. m. six companies of dismounted men, commanded by Sweeney, entered the town, followed by mounted men, under Gilmer. The main force was in line for battle. A demand was made for $100,000 in gold or $500,000 in Government funds, as ransom, and a number of citizens were arrested and held as hostages for its payment. No offer of money was made by the citizens of the town, and even if they had any intentions of paying a ransom, no time was allowed, as the rebels commenced immediately to burn and pillage the town, disregarding the appeals of women and children, the aged and infirm, and even the bodies of the dead were not protected from their brutality. It would have been vain for all the citizens of the town, if armed, to have attempted, in connection with General Couch's small force, to defend it. General Couch withdrew his command, and did not himself leave until the enemy were actually in the town. General Averell's command being within nine miles of Chambersburg, it was hoped would arrive in time to save the town, and efforts were made during the night to communicate with him. In the meantime the small force of General Couch held the enemy at bay. General Averell marched on Chambersburg, but did not arrive until after the town was burned, and the enemy had retired. He pursued and overtook them at McConnellsburg, in Fulton County, in time to save that place from pillage and destruction. He promptly engaged and defeated them, driving them to Hancock and across the Potomac.

I commend the houseless and ruined people of Chambersburg to the liberal benevolence of the Legislature, and suggest that a suitable appropriation be made for their relief. Similar charity has been heretofore exercised in the case of an accidental and destructive fire at Pittsburg, and I cannot doubt the disposition of the Legislature on the present occasion.

On the 5th day of this month a large rebel army was in Maryland, and at various points on the Potomac as far west as New Creek, and as there was no adequate force within the State I deemed it my duty on that day to call for 30,000 volunteer militia for domestic protection. They will be armed, transported, and supplied by the United States; but as no provision is made for their payment it will be necessary, should you approve my action, to make an appropriation for that purpose.

Feeling it to be the duty of the General Government to afford full protection to the people of Pennsylvania and Maryland by the defense of the line of the Potomac, I united with Governor Bradford in the following letter to the President, dated July 21, 1864:

STATE OF MARYLAND, EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT,
Annapolis, July 21, 1864.

His Excellency ABRAHAM LINCOLN,
President of the United States:

SIR: The repeated raids across the Potomac River made by portions of the rebel army, and the extent of the damage they have succeeded so frequently in inflicting, have most injuriously affected the people of Maryland and Pennsylvania in the neighborhood of that river, and many of them, it is believed, as the only security against such losses in the future, are seriously considering the propriety of abandoning their present homes and seeking safety at the north.

It seems to us that not merely in this sectional aspect of the case, but in its national relations, the security of this border line between the loyal and rebellious States is an object justifying and requiring a disposition of a portion of the national force with an especial view to its defense. The Potomac River can only be crossed, in its ordinary state of water, at some five or six fords, and we propose to enlist from our respective States a volunteer force that shall be sufficient, with the aid of the fortifications which the force itself can speedily construct, to effectually guard them all. We ask of the Government that the recruits so raised shall be credited to the quotas of our several States, on the call last made, and be armed, equipped, and supplied as other volunteers in the service.

We are aware that, as a general rule, well-founded objections exist to the enlistment of a force to be exclusively used for home or local defense; but we regard such a service as we now suggest as an exceptional case, and the complete protection of this part of our frontier as of admitted national importance.

Soon after the outbreak of this rebellion the importance of a special defense of the region bordering on the upper Potomac was recognized by the Government, and the Hon. Francis Thomas, of Maryland, was authorized by it to raise three regiments with a view to the protection of the counties on either side of that river. These regiments were raised, but the subsequent exigencies of the service required their employment elsewhere, and they therefore afford at present no particular security to that region beyond other troops in the service.

The necessity, as we think, for some peculiar provision has now become so obvious that we would with great respect, but most earnestly, urge upon Your Excellency the expediency of acceding to the suggestions we have made, and we will immediately set about raising the forces required, and we have no doubt they will be promptly procured.

We have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient servants,
A. W. BRADFORD.
A. G. CURTIN.

The following letter from the assistant adjutant-general, dated August 1, A. D. 1864, is the only reply received by me up to this time:

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., August 1, 1864.

HIS EXCELLENCY THE GOVERNOR OF PENNSYLVANIA,
Harrisburg:

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of the joint letter from yourself and the Governor of Maryland, dated July 21, 1864, asking authority to raise a volunteer force in your respective States, to be exclusively used for home or local defense and for guarding the fords of the Potomac.

In reply I am directed by the Secretary of War to inform you that the proposition has been fully considered and that the authority asked for cannot be granted.

In this connection please see the act of Congress approved February 13, 1862, as promulgated in General Orders, No. 15, series of 1862, from this office.

I have the honor to remain, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
THOMAS M. VINCENT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

MEMORANDUM.—Similar letter sent His Excellency the Governor of Maryland this date.

How the reason given for the refusal to act on this proposition can be made consistent with the enlistment of men for 100 days, to serve in Pennsylvania, Maryland, and at Washington and its vicinity, it is hard to perceive.

On the suggestion made by citizens of the border counties the following communication, dated July 22, 1864, was made by Major-General Couch to the Secretary of War:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., July 22, 1864.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: During the recent raid into Maryland the citizens of Chambersburg turned out with a determination to stand by the few soldiers present and hold the town against any cavalry force that might assail it. Five hundred citizens of York, irrespective of party, volunteered, were armed, and went down the Northern Central Railroad to guard the bridges or hold their town. This is stated in order to show you that the "border citizens" are beginning to realize that by a united action they have the strength to protect themselves against an ordinary raiding party. Inclosed I invite your attention to a letter addressed to the Governor, together with his indorsement, upon the subject of forming a special corps from the six border counties most exposed.

If 10,000 men can thus be organized, its existence would be a protection and give confidence.

I am informed that the general sentiment of the people in question is in favor of something being done at once, and, as a military measure, think it will be of essential service to the General Government, and recommend that the War Department encourage the movement by authorizing the loan or issue of uniforms, provided the law in question is enacted.

It is believed that the new militia law of this State will practically prove of no value, excepting that an enrollment will probably be made.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 4, 1864.

A true copy.

Respectfully furnished for the information of His Excellency Governor A. G. Curtin.

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

On the same day I approved, in writing, of the proposition and expressed my opinion that the Legislature would pass an act in accordance with it at its adjourned session on the 23d of August. I am furnished with an official copy of the following reply, dated August 1, 1864, to the proposition of General Couch:

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, D. C., August 1, 1864.

Maj. Gen. D. N. COUCH,
Commanding, &c., Harrisburg, Pa.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of the 22d of July relative to the United States providing uniforms for a "special corps" of militia from certain border counties of Pennsylvania.

In reply I am directed to inform you that the subject has been carefully considered by the Secretary of War, who cannot sanction the issue of the clothing in question.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

THOMAS M. VINCENT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 6, 1864.

A true copy.

Respectfully furnished for the information of His Excellency Governor A. G. Curtin.

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

In each of the three years, 1862, 1863, and 1864, it has been found necessary to call the State militia for the defense of the State, and this has been done with the assent and assistance of the General Government. From the want of organization we have been obliged to rely exclusively on volunteer militia, and, with few exceptions, to organize them anew for each occasion. This has caused confusion and a loss of valuable time, and has resulted in sending to the field bodies of men in a great measure undisciplined. The militia bill passed at the last session is, I think, for ordinary times, the best militia law we have ever had, but under the existing extraordinary circumstances it seems to require modification. I suggest that the assessors be directed to make an immediate enrollment, classifying the militia as may be thought best; that the officers be appointed by the Governor, on the recommendation approved by him of a board of examination composed of three major-generals for each division, of whom the major-general of the division shall be one, the other two to be designated by the Governor, from adjoining divisions, or in such other mode as the Legislature may think fit; that in all cases the officers shall be selected by preference from officers and men who have been in service and shall have been honorably discharged by the United States; and that effectual provision be made for drafting the militia when required.

The recommendation in regard to appointments is made to avoid the angry dissensions and too often political jealousies which divide military organizations by the election of officers, and to secure the services of the most deserving and competent men.

The election of officers in the volunteer forces in the field has been found to be injurious to the service, while promotions by seniority and appointments of meritorious privates have produced harmony and stimulated to faithfulness. In the enlistments of new organizations the plan adopted of granting authority to officers to recruit companies has been found to be the best policy.

I also recommend that the Governor be authorized to form (either by the acceptance of volunteers or by draft in such parts of the State as he may deem expedient) a special corps of militia, to consist in due proportion of cavalry, artillery, and infantry, to be kept up to the full number of fifteen regiments, to be styled "Minute Men," who shall be sworn and mustered in the service of the State for three years, who shall assemble for drill at such times and places as he may direct, who shall be clothed, armed, and equipped by the State, and paid when assembled for drill or called into service, and who shall, at all times, be liable to be called into immediate service for the defense of the State, independently of the remainder of the militia. As this force would be subject to sudden calls, the large part of it should be organized in the counties lying on our extreme border, and as the people of those counties have more personal interest in their protection, the recommendation is made to authorize the Governor to designate the parts of the State in which it shall be raised, and to save the time, expense of transporting troops from remote parts of the State, and the subsistence and pay in going to and from the border. A body of men so organized will, it is believed, be effective to prevent raids and incursions. The expenses of clothing, arming, and equipping such a force cannot be correctly ascertained, but the quartermaster-general has been directed to make approximate estimates for your information, which will be independent of pay and subsistence. The State should provide at least six four-gun batteries of field artillery, with all the modern improvements. The suggestion has been frequently made by unreflecting persons that the State should raise a force and keep it permanently in the field for her defense. Apart from other considerations it is to be observed that the expenses of such a measure would be quite beyond the present ability of the State.

To raise and maintain an army of fifteen regiments would involve an annual expenditure of more than $15,000,000, and any smaller force would be inadequate. The plan which I have above proposed would, I think, give the State efficient protection, and if the Legislature should think fit to adopt it the expense can be readily provided for by law or otherwise. Having an organized force under the control of the authorities of the State, and mustered into the service for domestic protection, we would not, as heretofore, lose time in arranging for transportation and supplies with the National Government when it became necessary to call it into the field. When thoroughly organized it should be in all its appointments an army which could be increased by drafts made from our enrolled and classified citizens.

The plan which I have above suggested is the result of reflection and experience which I have had during the last three years, and I have felt it to be my duty to submit it for your consideration for the purpose of providing for the effectual defense of the State. I, of course, cannot doubt your approval. If the Legislature should prefer the adoption of any other plan more efficient and economical than the one which I have herein proposed it will give me pleasure to co-operate heartily in carrying it into effect.

In accordance with the act of May 4, 1864, I have appointed for the eastern armies Col. F. Jordan as agent at Washington, and Lieut. Col. James Gilliland as assistant agent at that place, and also for the southwestern armies Lieut. Col. James Chamberlin as agent at Nashville. These agents are now actively engaged in the performance of their duties, and it is desirable that our people should be aware that a part of them consists in the gratuitous collection of all claims by Pennsylvania volunteers or their legal representatives on the State and National Governments. Volunteers having claims on either of these governments can have them collected through these agents without expense, and thus be rescued from the extortions to which it is feared they have sometimes heretofore been subjected.

Having received information from the agents of the State that our sick and wounded were suffering greatly from the want of comforts, and even necessities, I have been recently compelled to call on the people to contribute supplies, mainly in kind, for their relief, and it gives me pleasure to say that this appeal has been cheerfully responded to, as have been all my former appeals to the same end. It seems impossible to exhaust the liberality of our generous people when the well-being of our brave volunteers is in question.

In my special message of the 30th of April last I stated the circumstances attending the advance by banks and other corporations of funds for the payment of the militia called out in 1863; in consequence the Legislature passed the act of May 4, 1864, authorizing a loan, for the purpose of refunding, with interest, the amount thus advanced in case Congress should fail to make the necessary appropriation at its then current session. I regret to say that Congress adjourned without making such appropriation.

The balance in the treasury being found sufficient to reimburse the funds so advanced, without unduly diminishing the sinking fund, I have deemed it advisable not to advertise for proposals for the loan, and I recommend the passage of an act directing the payment to be made out of the moneys in the treasury.

As the omission of Congress to act on this subject involved an unprecedented disregard of the good faith of the national authorities, I recommend that the Legislature take measures for procuring an appropriation at the next session of Congress.

The revenue bill passed at the last session has been found to be defective in several points, and I recommend a careful and immediate revision of it.

The bounty bill passed at the last session is found to be defective and unjust in many of its provisions, and from the manner in which it is administered in some parts of the State oppressive on the people, I, therefore, recommend a careful revision of it.

As the present session has been called for the consideration of matters of vital public importance, I commend them to your earnest and exclusive attention.

A. G. CURTIN.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 183.

HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 9, 1864.

* * * * *

5. All mounted and dismounted cavalry, belonging to Brigadier-General Averell's command of the Department of West Virginia, in the Brandywine District, will be sent without delay to Harper's Ferry, W. Va., under command of their own officers, and in case there are none, officers and a suitable guard will be detailed to take charge of them. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Couch:

J. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, August 10, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va.:

General Augur has shown me your telegram* about General Grover's command. It was directed by General Grant that this command garrison Washington until other troops could be sent here for that purpose.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., August 10, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN:

Major Kellogg, commissary of subsistence, U. S. Army, will be ordered to report to you, as requested in your telegram of the 9th instant.

J. A. HARDIE,
Colonel and Inspector-General.

* See Sheridan to Augur, p. 761.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 10, 1864—7.30 p. m.

(Received 8.10 p. m.)

Maj. T. T. ECKERT:

Orderly just returned from front. General Sheridan near Berryville at 4 p. m. Had slight skirmishing with enemy as he advanced. Doing well.

G. J. LAWRENCE,
Cipher Operator.

CITY POINT, August 10, 1864.

(Received 10.30 p. m.)

Captain LEET:

We had some information here yesterday that troops, supposed to be over a regiment, left Richmond last Saturday evening by the Central railroad, going north. The attention of the men sent by Colonel Sharpe should be carefully drawn to them to ascertain which way these troops have passed from Gordonsville, and their number.

T. S. BOWERS.

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Berryville, Va., August 10, 1864.

The three days' rations drawn by the troops of this command before starting will be required to last four days from the date of issue, with such additional issue of fresh beef as may be necessary. The general headquarters to-night is established on the right of the turnpike going into Berryville, within 100 yards of the town.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

F. C. NEWHALL,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Berryville, Va., August 10, 1864.

Corps and other independent commanders will have their commands in readiness to move at 5 a. m. to-morrow. Special instructions in regard to their movement will be sent during the night.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

F. C. NEWHALL,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

ORDERS.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Berryville, August 10, 1864.

I. The command will move from its present position to-morrow morning in the following order and at the following designated hours:

II. The Sixth Corps will move at 5 o'clock and on the pike opposite General Wright's headquarters until it arrives at a point where that pike intersects the Berryville pike; it will then oblique and cross the fields until it reaches the pike leading from Berryville to Winchester; then up that pike to the crossing of Opequon Creek. If the enemy's infantry is encountered on this latter pike it will be driven across the creek and the crossing secured.

III. The Nineteenth Corps will move at 5 o'clock on the Berryville pike until it reaches Berryville, when it will move on the Millwood pike for the distance of a mile, then turn to the right and move in the direction of Opequon Creek and parallel to the Berryville and Winchester pike, striking a dirt road leading to Opequon Creek. If it meets the enemy it will drive him across the creek and secure the crossing.

IV. The command of General Crook will move at 5 o'clock across the country until it strikes the Millwood pike beyond the point where the Nineteenth Corps turns to the right, when it will march out the Millwood pike a mile and a half beyond where the Nineteenth Corps leaves said pike, and then turn to the right until it reaches a dirt road which leads to a crossing of Opequon Creek. If it meets any enemy in this movement it will drive him across the creek and secure the crossing.

V. The cavalry force under command of Brigadier-General Torbert, excepting the brigade of Colonel Lowell, will move at 5 o'clock toward Winchester up the Millwood and Winchester pike until it reaches the crossing of Opequon Creek. If it meets any enemy in the movement it will drive him across the creek, secure the crossing, and open communication with the left of General Crook's command.

VI. If, on arriving at Opequon Creek, no enemy is found the whole cavalry force, excepting Colonel Lowell's command, will march in the direction of Stephensburg and secure that point if possible. If it is found that the enemy has gone up the Valley from Winchester, the entire infantry force will march in the direction of Stephensburg to support the cavalry.

VII. In case that the enemy's infantry has moved from the position occupied this p. m., Colonel Lowell's command will move across the country, via Limestone Ridge, until it reaches the dirt road that leads from Clifton to Winchester, when it will move up that road to the crossing of Opequon Creek, opening communication with the right of the Sixth Corps, which will be at or near the crossing of Opequon Creek, on the Berryville and Winchester pike.

VIII. The general commanding especially requires of General Torbert that he threaten the road from Winchester to Strasburg, and ascertain if possible if there are any movements from Winchester up the Valley, and report fully all information obtained.

IX. In the parallel movement of the corps to-morrow, corps commanders will keep open communication with each other, and in case of being engaged with the enemy on this side of Opequon Creek, they will close in to the right in line of battle.

X. The transportation permitted by General Orders, No. 2, will be subject to orders of corps commanders.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, August 10, 1864. (Received 8.50 a. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,

Commanding Department of Washington:

Send the balance of the Nineteenth Army Corps now in Washington to Harper's Ferry. Direct General Grover to report his arrival to me here by letter.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 10, 1864—10 a. m.

(Received 10.10 a. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,
Washington, D. C.:

General Sheridan has ordered concentration of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry at Muddy Branch to picket the river from Monocacy to Washington. The river is well guarded from the mouth of the Monocacy to Harper's Ferry. Lowell has been attached (commanding a brigade) to Torbert's division. He carries the Second Massachusetts Cavalry with him. General Sheridan desires Wilson's division to organize and move as soon as practicable. I leave here at 1 p. m. to-day. Captain Melvin, assistant adjutant-general, is left here in charge of the office—headquarters Middle Military Division. General Weber in command of defenses of Harper's Ferry.

J. H. TAYLOR,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 10, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to inform you that since last evening's report the following wounded from the disaster at Fairfax Station have been brought in: Thirteenth New York Cavalry, five; Sixteenth New York Cavalry, three. Five men are known to have been killed, but their regiment cannot be ascertained, as they were buried before our relieving party reached them. Capt. J. H. Fleming, Sixteenth New York Cavalry, in command, was killed. His body was found by the roadside, stripped of much of its clothing, and was brought into camp last evening and buried this morning in the old church yard at Falls Church. Captain McMenamin, Thirteenth New York Cavalry, had three balls through his clothing and a slight skin wound in the knee. A full report of the affair will be sent to-morrow. Nothing has been heard from a party of thirty men sent to Leesburg on Sunday last, and nothing from the party sent to reconnoiter in vicinity of Goose Creek.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,
August 10, 1864.

In accordance with orders from headquarters Middle Military Division, this corps will be held in readiness to move to-morrow at 5 a. m. Special instruction in regard to the movement will be sent to-night, as soon as received from headquarters Middle Military Division.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. A. WHITTIER,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,

August 10, 1864.

1. All commanders will habitually remain with their division, brigade, or regiment, as the case may be, on the march and in camp, and not leave them except upon permission from the corps commander, approved by the intermediate.

2. The habitual order of march, unless otherwise ordered, will be to march one hour and halt ten minutes, and whenever a halt is made regiments of each brigade will double up in parallel columns and the ambulances, artillery, and wagons will habitually go into park to the right or left of the road if practicable, the object being to shorten the distance between the rear and head of the column.

3. Whenever convenient the troops, instead of being marched upon the dusty road, will be marched upon the right and left of the road, and a staff officer will precede each column with instructions to have all obstructions removed.

4. Whenever a fordable stream is to be crossed the men will be marched directly through without breaking step or column.

5. Canteens will be habitually filled in the morning before starting on a march and at the noon halt.

6. Division commanders will be held responsible for the execution of this order.

By command of Brevet Major-General Emory:

DUNCAN S. WALKER,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,

August 10, 1864—11.30 p. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,

Commanding First Brigade, Third Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: You will detail two squadrons of your command to move at once as far as Great Falls, where they will find pontoon-boats, which they will escort by the line of the canal to Berlin or Harper's Ferry. The escort will there rejoin the division at or near Major-General Sheridan's headquarters.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 10, 1864.

Brigadier-General DUFFIÉ,

Hancock:

It is rumored that our troops occupy Martinsburg. Will you send a cavalry scout via Cherry Run to Hedgesville and ascertain if this is so. I wish to send down the timbers and a force to repair Back Creek bridge if Martinsburg is occupied.

B. F. KELLEY,

Brigadier-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 10, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

Your dispatch concerning men with General Kelley and notification of the capture of Major Green, chief engineer, General Early's staff, received. Your report of engagement with McCausland and Johnson was received. General Kelley has been ordered to send the 400 men of Eighth Ohio back to your command.

J. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

[HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,]

August 10, 1864.

General AVERELL:

I have directed General Torbert to move to the Front Royal pike to-night; Lowell's brigade to Summit Point. The infantry I will move to Summit Point and Berryville. I send out Captain O'Keeffe, of my staff, to see you. Give him all the items.

Yours, truly,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 10, 1864—9.20 p. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

Scout from Hedgesville has just returned. The enemy left that place yesterday, and they informed the citizens that they were going direct to Winchester. Citizens report that the enemy left Martinsburg this a. m. for Winchester. Will send scout up Back Creek Valley to Martinsburg grade, then toward [sic], to ascertain the truth of report in the morning.

HENRY N. HARRISON,
Aide-de-Camp.

---

NEW CREEK, August 10, 1864.

(Received Cumberland 8.15 p. m.)

General B. F. KELLEY:

Scouting party has just returned from within four miles of Romney. They could learn of no enemy there or in that region.

ROBT. STEVENSON,
Colonel.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 10, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON,

New Creek:

Send two companies of the Eleventh West Virginia, with a squad of cavalry, on a scout to Greenland Gap. Direct them to take five days' rations.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. FIRST SEPARATE BRIG., EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Relay House, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, August 10, 1864.

Lieut. Col. LYNDE CATLIN,

Assistant Inspector General, Eighth Army Corps:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit the following report of location, condition, &c., of the various organizations of the First Separate Brigade, consisting of six companies of the First Regiment Eastern Shore Maryland Volunteers, eight companies of Eleventh Maryland Infantry, five companies Ninety-third New York State National Guard, One hundred and ninety-fifth Regiment (Pennsylvania) Volunteers, detachment of the One hundred and forty-fourth and One hundred and forty-ninth Ohio State National Guard; Company F, One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio State National Guard; Company A, First New Jersey State Militia; detachment Eighth Illinois Cavalry; detachment First Delaware Cavalry, and Rank's (Pennsylvania) battery. These troops are distributed along the line of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad as follows: Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Relay House, brigade headquarters. Fort Dix, Company A, First New Jersey Militia, 76. Relay House, five companies Ninety-third New York State National Guard, 193; two sections Battery H, Third Pennsylvania Artillery, 80; detachment One hundred and forty-fourth and One hundred and forty-ninth Ohio National Guard, 28. Fort Dix, detachment Eighth and Ninth New York Heavy Artillery, 29. Annapolis Junction (Washington Branch), Company F, One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio State National Guard, 72. Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Elysville, detachment One hundred and forty-fourth Ohio State National Guard, 60. Mount Airy, five companies Eleventh Maryland Infantry, 327. Monrovia, three companies and headquarters Eleventh Maryland Infantry, 137; detachment First Delaware Cavalry, 202. Monocacy Junction, One hundred and ninety-fifth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, 860; six companies First Eastern Shore Maryland Volunteers, 431; detachment Eighth Illinois Cavalry, 128; one section Battery H, Third Pennsylvania Artillery, 45.

These detachments are all in good order, considering that they are nearly all new troops and their term of service is so short, but they are very deficient in drill and under poor discipline. This is owing, in a great measure, to the detached condition of the command, and also to the officers, who are not at all well instructed in their duties. This is not the case with the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, First Delaware Cavalry, Rank's battery, and First Eastern Shore Maryland Volunteers. These troops are well organized and able to perform good service. The hospital department of the various detachments is in bad condition, there not being sufficient medical officers to give proper attention to the sick. Since last report Rank's (Pennsylvania) battery, One hundred and ninety-fifth Pennsylvania Volunteers, and detachment of First Delaware Cavalry have been assigned to the command. Captain McNulty, with detachment of First and Twenty-first New York Cavalry, has been ordered to report to Major-General Hunter. The general commanding is constantly engaged visiting the detachments, paying every attention to their wants, and using every endeavor to bring the troops to a proper degree of discipline and drill.

I am, colonel, with respect, your most obedient servant,

FRANCIS I. D. WEBB,

Captain and Acting Assistant Inspector-General.

MONOCACY BRIDGE, August 10, 1864.

Major-General WALLACE:

The only troops at Relay House that can be used to relieve the New Jersey men are the Ninety-third New York. Shall I direct them to garrison the fort or send a company from here? Rumors of rebels, but our scouts have seen none for past two days. Will you send the two companies of Eleventh Maryland now in Baltimore to Monrovia? I think that post should be strengthened. I will name an officer to-morrow for Twelfth Maryland. They should be stationed at Hood's Mill.

E. B. TYLER,
Brigadier-General.

BALTIMORE, August 10, 1864.

Brig. Gen. E. B. TYLER,

Monocacy Bridge, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad:

If you can spare a company send it to Fort Dix; if not, put in some of the Ninety-third New York, and send a competent officer to command. Will try and send you the two companies of the Eleventh Maryland. The Twelfth Maryland is nearly ready to move.

By command, &amp;c.:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 199. } Baltimore, August 10, 1864.

1. Paragraph 10, Special Orders, No. 198, headquarters Middle Department, is hereby revoked. The One hundred and ninety-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia (100-days' service), Col. John B. Clark commanding, will continue to report to Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood, commanding Third Separate Brigade.

2. In accordance with order from the War Department the One hundred and ninety-second Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteer Militia (100-days' service), Col. W. B. Thomas commanding, will be put en route at once to report to the commanding officer at Johnson's Island, Ohio. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Bvt. Brig. Gen. W. W. Morris is charged with the execution of this order.

* * * * *

6. Company A, Second Delaware Cavalry (thirty-days' service), Capt. Robert Milligan commanding, will be put en route without delay to march to Wilmington, Del., to report to Maj. H. B. Judd, commanding at that post, there to be mustered out and paid off at the expiration of their term of service, in accordance with the mustering regulations of the army. Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

* * * * *

8. The Fifth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry, Col. G. H. Peirson commanding, is hereby transferred from the Third Separate Brigade to the Second Separate Brigade, and will report to Bvt. Brig. Gen. W. W. Morris, without delay.

9. Company A, First New Jersey State Militia (thirty-days' service), Capt. R. H. Lee commanding, will be put en route to report to the commanding officer at Trenton, N. J., there to be mustered out and paid off at the expiration of their term of service, in accordance with the mustering regulations of the army. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brig. Gen. E. B. Tyler is charged with the execution of this order.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

BOSTON, August 10, 1864.
(Received 3.30 p. m.)

General J. B. FRY,
Provost-Marshal-General:

General Dix has requested me to keep the forts in Boston Harbor and our other ports on the coast fully garrisoned. For this purpose fourteen companies are required. Since the withdrawal of the heavy artillery they have been garrisoned by three-months' militia, who no sooner become accustomed to their duties than they are discharged. I desire authority to recruit fourteen companies of volunteers for one year on the same terms that one-year regiments were authorized, said companies for service at these posts.

JOHN A. ANDREW,
Governor of Massachusetts.

CITY POINT, VA., August 11, 1864.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

I think it but a just reward for services already rendered that General Sherman be now appointed a major-general, W. S. Hancock and Sheridan brigadiers in the Regular Army. There are three vacancies for major-generals and one for brigadier-general and Sherman's promotion would make the second. All these officers have proven their worthiness for this advancement. I would also recommend the promotion of Brigadier-General Mower to fill the vacant volunteer major-generalship that would thus be created.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

[AUGUST 11, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, &c., see p. 17.]

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
On Opequon Creek, August 11, 1864.

Corps and other independent commanders will have their commands in readiness to move at 5 a. m. to-morrow. Further special instructions will be sent to them during the night.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

F. C. NEWHALL,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 266. } Washington, August 11, 1864.

1. Batteries A and F, First U. S. Artillery, now serving in the Department of Washington, will be temporarily consolidated and remounted. The commanding general Department of Washington is charged with the execution of this order.

* * * * *

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,
August 11, 1864.

The corps will move, left in front, precisely at 5 o'clock this a. m., in the following order—first, First Division; second, Second Division; third, Reserve Artillery; fourth, Third Division; fifth, transportation allowed—on the pike, in front of which the troops now are, until it arrives at a point where that pike intersects the Berryville pike. It will then oblique and cross the fields until it reaches the pike leading from Berryville to Winchester, then up that pike to the crossing of Opequon Creek. If the enemy's infantry is encountered on this latter pike it will be driven across the creek and the crossing secured.

General Russell will throw out strong advance guards and flankers, and General Ricketts will detail a force sufficient to guard the trains. The pickets will be withdrawn by the corps officer of the day in time to join their respective divisions.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. H. WHITTELSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,
August 11, 1864.

Division commanders will post such pickets as may be necessary for their security on the side toward Opequon Creek, and the Second and Third Divisions will also picket on their flank. The commanding officer of the Third Division will send one regiment on the Millwood and Winchester pike to picket that road at the crossing of the Opequon.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. H. WHITTELSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 11, 1864—1 p. m.Brigadier-General TORBERT,
Chief of Cavalry, &c.:

GENERAL: General Crook's command has been ordered to Parkins' upper mill, on the Front Royal road. The Nineteenth Army Corps will also follow. Push your cavalry out toward Stephens City, if it can be done without fighting infantry, watching out well down the Front Royal road, as some of our trains will be parked at White Post. If General Custer should be pressed, General Crook will go to his support after he reaches the Millwood pike. The Sixth Army Corps will move over to the Millwood pike. Colonel Lowell's cavalry will move on Winchester. The major-general commanding will be with the Nineteenth Army Corps.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
*Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.*HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY CORPS,
August 11, 1864—10.45 a. m.

General MERRITT:

I do not think it best to go beyond the Front Royal pike, for there is a good force of infantry in front of Custer, and they would move down and cut you off. If possible occupy the pike and send up a party toward Winchester, and if they can get about three [miles] from the Double toll-gate, it might warrant sending a small party toward Newtown. Send me back now about every fifteen minutes how things are going. There is firing with Custer, but he has sent no report. I have directed him not to engage their infantry till I can hear from you.

Yours, &amp;c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
*Brigadier-General and Chief of Cavalry.*HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY CORPS,
August 11, 1864—11.15 p. m.

General MERRITT:

I will withdraw all of Custer's except one regiment. General Crook's infantry will go out on the road you are on. The head of the column is about a mile from this pike. Do not allow them to turn you. If you have to fall back, come back on the road you went out on. I send you the last dispatch from General Sheridan.*

Yours, &amp;c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Cavalry.* See Forsyth to Torbert, 1 p. m., second, ante.

AUGUST 11, 1864—8.30 a. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,

Commanding First Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: I met the rebel pickets on the edge of the woods, and drove them in. We are skirmishing through the woods, but the rebels are retreating toward Newtown. Twenty-nine wagons loaded with harvest passed here for Newtown early this morning.

Very respectfully, yours,

DI CESNOLA,

Colone. Fourth New York Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST NEW YORK DRAGOONS,

August 11, 1864.

Capt. WILLIAM H. H. EMMONS,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Cavalry Reserve Brigade:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that I have met a force of the enemy, which I judge to be about 1,000 strong. Have driven them thus far, but it is hard work. They are both mounted and dismounted, and the sound of drums can be distinctly heard. My whole force is in, and they extend beyond both my flanks. My scouts report the rear of a force on my left moving up the valley. I judge that I am about one mile from Newtown.

Respectfully, yours,

RUFUS SCOTT,

Major, Commanding First New York Dragoons.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,

August 11, 1864.

Colonel CESNOLA:

Instead of moving to Newtown, as directed in verbal instructions, you will go to White Post and halt with your main command, sending a reconnoissance to the Front Royal and Winchester pike. Remain at White Post until further orders, sending in frequent written reports.

Respectfully,

W. MERRITT,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

While at White Post look well to your flank in the direction of the mountains—Millwood.

Respectfully,

W. MERRITT,

*Brigadier-General.*HANCOCK, MD., August 11, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff, Harper's Ferry:

Would it not be well to send all officers and men of my division at or near Harper's Ferry to this point, with a sufficient number of equipments in wagons? I can procure horses here. They could also bring the Spencer carbines for my division. Answer.

WM. W. AVERELL,

Brigadier-General.

HANCOCK, MD., *August 11, 1864.*Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland :

General Sheridan has directed the detachment of the Eighth Ohio at Beverly to join my command. Will you please hasten them forward as rapidly as possible and inform me how soon they can be here.

WM. W. AVERELL,
*Brigadier-General.*CUMBERLAND, *August 11, 1864.*Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Hancock :

General Sheridan certainly did not understand the importance of guarding the Cheat Mountain pass, or he would not have exposed the people of West Virginia to the incursions of guerrillas and robbers by ordering away the Eighth Ohio without giving me some troops to take their place. I have remonstrated against the execution of the order, asking that it may be suspended for the present.

B. F. KELLEY,
*Brigadier-General.*NEW CREEK, [August] 11, 1864.Capt. WILL RUMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General :

Got all off but the Twenty-second Pennsylvania, which will go in the morning. Battery will go to-day. Will go down myself. Will leave Morris here.

T. GIBSON
*Major.*HANCOCK, MD., *August 11, 1864.*Captain ROYALL, U. S. Army,
Harrisburg, Pa. :

Please send all officers and men with you of the First, Second, and Third Virginia, Fourteenth Pennsylvania, Eighth Ohio, First New York, and Twenty-second Pennsylvania, mounted and dismounted, at once to Hancock, Md. Answer. Where is Brown and train?

WM. W. AVERELL,
*Brigadier-General.*HEADQUARTERS RESERVE CAVALRY CAMP,
*Pleasant Valley, Md., August 11, 1864—10 p. m.*Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Division :

GENERAL: I have at last succeeded in learning the whereabouts of the division since the late engagement at Moorefield, and send this through by special courier to-night to try and find you. I am, by a temporary order from General Sheridan, commanding all the reserve mounted and the dismounted men of his military division encamping in Pleasant Valley, but have permission to join the forces in the field on your arrival here. The command is growing to be a very large one and the duties very laborious. Everything pertaining to our division here is mounted, armed, and equipped, ready to take the field, this being the only mounted command here. There are some 200 men in all. Lieutenant Torbit [?], Third Virginia, has just reported with 120 mounted men from Carlisle in addition to the previous number, and I will have him fitted for the field to-morrow morning. He reports Major Hambleton, Second Virginia, with 400 dismounted men, on the road here from Hagerstown. Our division train is at Greencastle. Major Garland [?] goes to-morrow morning to bring it here. Lieutenant-Colonel Blakely, with 200 mounted men, is with General Merritt, ready to join you on your arrival there. North is here, but goes away for ordnance to-morrow noon. General Sheridan is between Charlestown and Berryville, and expects an engagement to-morrow. Duffié is at Halltown to-night. He says you "gobbled" some of his men.

I have labored very hard, general, since my absence, but in all my labors have had an eye single to our division. It has been well cared for and fitted out. Please send me any word or instructions in advance of your arrival. I hope to join you here.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. M. SCHOONMAKER,
Colonel.

HDQRS. MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 11, 1864—12 m.
(Received 2.10 p. m.)

Capt. E. B. PARSONS,

Assistant Adjutant-General of Major-General Sheridan:

SIR: I have information, from a source always found reliable, that re-enforcements under Hill and Longstreet are within five days' march of Early's present position, moving up the Valley; that, if attacked, Early proposes to show fight and retire until a junction can be formed with the advancing forces. Mosby is already between Harper's Ferry and your command, and last night captured and paroled the Tribune correspondent, as he reports.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

MAX WEBER,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 11, 1864—10 a. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff, Harper's Ferry:

Your telegram dated yesterday just received. I respectfully represent that the detachment of the Eighth Ohio at Beverly are holding the Cheat Mountain pass, and if withdrawn will leave the region west of this point open to the incursion of guerrilla bands. I therefore ask that the order be suspended until a force can be had to relieve this detachment.

B. F. KELLEY,
*Brigadier-General.

BALTIMORE, August 11, 1864—1 p. m.

(Received 1.30 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

A scout named Marsh, sent out by Brigadier-General Tyler, has returned from Virginia and reports as follows: The enemy came 30,000 strong. They now have 15,000 cavalry, the latter under General Vaughn. The officers and men he saw knew of no re-enforcements. He brings a rebel flag, taken while in the mountains near them. The divisions of the enemy are commanded by Ramseur, Rodes, Gordon, Breckinridge, and Vaughn. Breckinridge has but 5,000 men. Marsh will be able to report the condition of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. He brought four deserters from the rebels with him and delivered them to General Duffié. Thinking him reliable I have sent him to Major-General Sheridan.

LEW. WALLACE,
Major-General, Commanding.

BALTIMORE, MD., August 11, 1864.

(Received 11.30 a. m.)

Major VINCENT:

The One hundred and ninety-sixth Pennsylvania Militia Volunteers left at 7 p. m. yesterday for Chicago, Ill.

LEW. WALLACE,
Major-General.

BALTIMORE, MD., August 11, 1864.

(Received 11.30 a. m.)

Major VINCENT,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The One hundred and ninety-seventh Pennsylvania and Sixtieth Massachusetts Militia left this a. m. at 8 o'clock. The One hundred and ninety-second Pennsylvania Militia will leave at 12 m. to-day.

LEW. WALLACE.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
 No. 200. } Baltimore, August 11, 1864.

* * * * *

7. Companies E and H, Eleventh Maryland Infantry, will be put en route without delay to report to Brig. Gen. E. B. Tyler, at Monrovia, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. They will be supplied with sixty rounds of cartridges per man and three days' rations. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 11, 1864.

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

GENERAL: The day I left this place for Pittsburg, August 1, I created the District of the Brandywine, which included from the Cumberland Valley to Philadelphia, and assigned General Cadwalader to the command. The emergency having passed, it seems proper, together with other reasons, to discontinue that district, but before doing so I would like to know if it is the intention of the War Department to continue General Cadwalader in command of defenses of Harrisburg. There does not seem to be any necessity for his being here now, although it is perfectly agreeable for me to have him. My opinion is that after the district is broken up he would prefer returning to Philadelphia, where, in my opinion, his presence is demanded.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 11, 1864.

Col. E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Washington, D. C.:

COLONEL: I respectfully state, in consequence of being absent at Chambersburg and McConnellsburg, I did not see the message* of His Excellency Governor A. G. Curtin, of the 9th instant, to the Legislature of Pennsylvania, until this evening. Therein is a copy of a letter addressed by me to the honorable Secretary of War, dated Harrisburg, July 22, 1864, which came into the Governor's possession and was published in this manner: He applied for a copy of my communication to the Secretary on the subject of organizing the border militia. I telegraphed to Maj. John S. Schultze, assistant adjutant-general, the following:

‡

PITTSBURG, August 4, 1864—9 a. m.

Major SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Harrisburg:

Give the Governor a copy of my letter or plan to organize the militia of the border counties with his indorsement.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

A copy of the letter as above was sent to him by mistake, as accompanying the plan with his indorsement, when only the plan was intended to have been furnished. This is a matter of regret to me, as my official letters and reports to the War Department are never given to any parties.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

* Ante, p. 751.

CITY POINT, VA., August 12, 1864—9 a. m.

(Received 7 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

Inform Sheridan that it is now certain two divisions of infantry have gone to Early and some cavalry and twenty pieces of artillery. This movement commenced last Saturday night. He must be cautious and act now on the defensive until movements here force them to detach to send this way. Early's force, with this increase, cannot exceed 40,000, but this is too much for Sheridan to attack. Send Sheridan the remaining brigade of the Nineteenth Corps. I have ordered to Washington all the 100-days' men. Their time will soon be out, but for the present they will do to stand in the defenses.*

U. S. GRANT,
*Lieutenant-General.*CITY POINT, August 12, 1864—7 p. m.

(Received 11 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

I get constant reports of an intention on the part of the rebels to land arms at Point Lookout to arm the prisoners confined there to aid their escape. I do not think the plan very feasible, but it is probably advisable that they should all be removed to places farther north and more secure.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

[AUGUST 12, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, see p. 18.]

ORDERS.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
On Opequon Creek, August 12, 1864.

The following are the orders for the movement of the command at 5 a. m. to-day:

General Wright will order one brigade of the Sixth Corps via the Millwood pike to Winchester, to occupy that place until the arrival of the trains. The cavalry will follow up the enemy via Stephensburg and Middletown, and will annoy the enemy and, if possible, get in his rear and destroy his trains, &c.

The command of General Crook will move to Middletown and follow in pursuit of the enemy, attacking his rear should occasion offer and driving him down the Valley.

The Nineteenth Army Corps will move from its present camp, following the command of General Crook to Middletown, taking position, unless otherwise ordered, on the left of the Strasburg pike.

The Sixth Army Corps will move in rear of the Nineteenth Army Corps as far as the Front Royal pike, thence move via Stephensburg to Middletown and go into position, unless otherwise ordered, on the right of the Strasburg pike.

---

* As quoted by Sheridan, see p. 43.

General Crook will advance as far as Cedar Creek, go into position, and await the arrival of the Sixth and Nineteenth Army Corps at Middletown.

General Torbert will send out strong parties in the direction of Front Royal, the town of Cedar Creek, and Fawcett's Gap, and obtain information in regard to the enemy's movements. The trains of the command will be moved to Stephensburg after all the troops have passed, and await the orders of the corps commanders.

The headquarters of the commanding general will be with the Nineteenth Army Corps.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

WASHINGTON, August 12, 1864.

Major-General AUGUR,
Commanding:

GENERAL: Major-General Halleck directs that you order the division of the Nineteenth Corps, General Grover commanding, to join the command of General Sheridan by way of Snicker's Gap.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. KELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CEDAR CREEK, W. VA., August 12, 1864—9.30 p. m.
(Received 8 p. m. 14th.)

Major-General AUGUR,
Commanding Department of Washington:

The major-general commanding has ordered all the Eighth Illinois Cavalry now serving in the Middle Department to concentrate at Muddy Branch in your department. General Wallace has been ordered to send them there without delay. Collect all that are in your department at the same point, and order the regiment to operate on the south side of the Potomac and well up toward Middleburg, making frequent reports of any reliable information that they obtain in reference to any movements of the enemy, and to exterminate as many of Mosby's gang as they can.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

POINT OF ROCKS, August 12, 1864.
(Received Washington 2.30 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR:

The rebels, not over 400 strong, still continue to rob the Union men of Loudoun. Can you not send that cavalry force that is now encamped in Montgomery County, Md., to Loudoun County? Let them subsist off the country. Give certificates to loyal men, but none to disloyal. They can subsist from 1,500 to 2,000 cavalry for one or two months, or perhaps longer. Provisions for men are not so plentiful. The Union men would rather your cavalry would get their produce for nothing and haul it rather than the rebels should have it. You can relieve a strictly loyal people who will give you every aid in their power if you do so. Order a squad of the Rangers with each regiment. They know who are loyal and disloyal.

JAS. M. DOWNEY.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 12, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report the return of the scouting party sent out under Major Frazar through the vicinity of Fairfax Station, Chantilly, Herndon Station, Frying Pan, Dranesville, &c. They saw no force of the enemy. One corporal and four men, selected as scouts to go above Thoroughfare Gap, were attacked last night about Frying Pan, and were driven back to camp. Intelligence has been received from the party sent to the vicinity of Leesburg. On attempting to return they found the fords of Goose Creek guarded by White's and Mosby's men, and they turned back and went into Point of Rocks. They have not yet returned here, but will be in to-day, probably. I beg to call your attention to the report of the board of investigation, called to examine into the facts of the late disaster at Fairfax Station. I have to say that since the necessity has existed here for a constant examination of the country toward the Rappahannock and Blue Ridge in at least two directions I have resorted to the expedient (in the entire absence of single scouts conversant with the country) of sending small parties of from twenty-five to forty men each to obtain the information desired. These parties have always been instructed to move at night as rapidly as possible in the desired direction, resting by day, and concealing themselves from any force unless they were confident of success in attacking it. I have also set aside a number of men most conversant with the country as scouts, to relieve as much as possible the brigade from heavy details for parties of observation. On the occasion of the attack at Fairfax Court-House, one of the parties had been ordered to the vicinity of Warrenton and the Rappahannock, and the other to the section between Thoroughfare Gap and Aldie. These parties met at Fairfax Station, and were attacked at that point by a force not equal to their own, and by a misapplication of their weapons were totally routed. While the proceedings of the board fully detail the disaster, they contain much relating to the duties of the men of the brigade, rendered very severe from the unusually small number of men for duty. I inclose a statement,* and I invite your attention to it, in connection with the accompanying proceedings.

The scouting parties and parties of observation sent out have been small in numbers because of the constant demand upon the men. It is certain that the duty assigned to this command cannot be done effectively with the present force. A small scouting party sent to Warrenton and the Rappahannock has returned, reporting that trains are running (irregularly, however) to Culpeper. No increase of force is believed to be in that vicinity that heretofore has not been reported. Mosby's loss at Fairfax Station he reported at Fairfax Court-House as being one lieutenant and two men.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

* Not found.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 12, 1864—3 p. m.

Brig. Gen. J. BARNES,
Point Lookout:

It is reported that arms have been sent from Richmond to some points on the Potomac or bay for the use of prisoners at Point Lookout, and attempts will be made to smuggle them across. This matter should receive your careful attention.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,
August 12, 1864—6.05 a. m.

This command will move at once, left in front, in rear of the Nineteenth Corps as far as the Front Royal pike, thence via Stephensburg to Middletown, and go into position on the right of the Strasburg pike. First, Second Division; second, Third Division; third, artillery in reserve, and trains; fourth, First Division.

Brigadier-General Russell, commanding First Division, will order one brigade of his division, via the Millwood pike to Winchester, to occupy that place until the arrival of the trains. Pickets will be withdrawn by the division commanders.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. A. WHITTIER,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS FIRST DIVISION, SIXTH CORPS,
August 12, 1864—6 a. m.

This division will be held in readiness to move at 7.30 this a. m. Order of march: Second Brigade; Captain McCartney's battery; First Brigade.

The Third Brigade, Colonel Edwards commanding, will move via the Millwood pike to Winchester, to occupy that place until the arrival of the train. The troops will be moved left in front.

By command of Brigadier-General Russell:

HENRY R. DALTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 12, 1864.

Brig. Gen. C. GROVER,
Commanding Division, Nineteenth Corps:

GENERAL: In accordance with instructions from headquarters of the army, the major-general commanding directs that, with your division, you join the command of Major-General Sheridan by the way of Snicker's Gap.

I am, general, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 12, 1864.

Brigadier-General WILSON,
Commanding Division, Cavalry Corps:

GENERAL: In accordance with instructions from headquarters of the army the major-general commanding directs that you hold in readiness a good and reliable regiment of your command to escort Colonel Chipman, aide-de-camp, bearer of dispatches to Major-General Sheridan. The regiment should be fully provided with ammunition, and, if necessary, sufficient must be taken from other regiments to complete its supply. The escort will take the shortest route to and through Snicker's Gap. Colonel Chipman will reach your headquarters this p. m., and it is desirable that there be no delay in the movement of the regiment after he reports.

I am, general, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,
J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CIRCULAR.] HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 12, 1864.

The command will move out on the road toward Washington at 6. p. m. to-day in the following order: First Brigade, General McIntosh, with Fitzhugh's battery, ambulances, ammunition, forage, and subsistence trains; Second Brigade, General Chapman, with Pennington's battery. Brigade commanders will leave responsible officers at Camp Stoneman to superintend and expedite the remounting of the rest of the dismounted men of their commands, to rejoin the division with these detachments as soon as mounted. One officer to every fifty men will be sufficient.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CIRCULAR.] HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 12, 1864—3 p. m.

The command will be in readiness to move at precisely 7 this p. m. in the following order: first, First Brigade, General McIntosh, with Fitzhugh's battery, followed by the ambulance, ammunition, forage, and subsistence trains; second, Second Brigade, General Chapman, with Pennington's battery. All men not fully able yet to march with the command will be left at Camp Stoneman, under charge of one officer to every fifty men. They will expedite the remounting and equipping of these men and rejoin the command as quickly as possible. The line of march will be through Washington, over the Chain Bridge, to Leesburg.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 12, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

SIR: Your order relating to the repairing of the telegraph line to Martinsburg was received. Men will come from Baltimore to-day to replace the poles, and the wires will be here to-morrow morning. The line will be completed as soon as possible. The timber for the railroad bridge is here, and the bridge will be in working order to-morrow. I shall commence repairing the pontoon bridge to-morrow, and afterward use it only in case of necessity. Would it be advisable to repair the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad between here and Hancock? I shall put the railroad between here and Halltown in repair at once, as it will be impossible for the army to draw their supplies from the Ferry proper, on account of the want of room for loading the teams. The train can load at Halltown. Can I be informed of the probable number of horses for which the post quartermaster will be called upon to furnish forage? He is now receiving 5,000 bushels of grain daily, and that number is not sufficient for the calls upon him.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

MAX WEBER,
Brigadier-General.

---

BALTIMORE, August 12, 1864.

(Received 12.45 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Our engineer, who visited Harper's Ferry at 6 last p. m., reports that General Weber is in command there. Pickets have only been sent as far as two miles west of Harper's Ferry, and General Weber states that the time of his entire force, excepting eighty men, namely, three regiments of 100-days' men, will expire on Monday next, and that he, therefore, will have no power to protect or assist in reopening the road. The time of the chief part of the forces, which consist of 100-days' men, under General Kelley, at Cumberland, also expires in a few days. I have ordered men and materials to the destroyed portions of the road east and west, and the company is prepared to proceed with the rapid reconstruction of the line the moment the requisite military protection is afforded. The force of the enemy is reported to consist only of small bands, moving rapidly from point to point in the country betwixt Harper's Ferry and Back Creek. I trust such re-enforcements can be promptly given General Kelley as will restore to the Government and the country at an early period the great advantage of the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. I hope General Sheridan will have it in his power to detail at once an effective force for this purpose. General Averell is reported as moving with his cavalry from Cumberland to Harper's Ferry by turnpike, and is expected to arrive at the latter point to-day or to-morrow. If his command or a portion of it could be used to take possession of Martinsburg and protect the neighboring territory the desired objects could be accomplished.

J. W. GARRETT,
President.

CUMBERLAND, August 12, 1864.

Brevet Major-General CROOK:

The term of service of all the troops I have between Piedmont and Sleepy Creek expires in a few days, except small detachments of the Sixth and Eleventh West Virginia Infantry. Governor Brough is extremely anxious the 100-days' men be promptly sent home. Will you send troops to relieve them? I would prefer Virginia troops, because of their acquaintance with the people and the geography of the country. The people here are anxious to have the Second Maryland sent back.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

HANCOCK, August 12, 1864.

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

Detachment of my cavalry in Martinsburg yesterday. Enemy's stragglers retired through Bunker Hill day before.

W. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 12, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

Have the promise that everything will be forwarded to-day. Shall remain until certain, unless you order me to Hancock.

J. A. BYERS,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 268. } Washington, August 12, 1864.

* * * * *

25. Capt. William R. Howe, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, will report in person without delay to Brigadier-General Averell, U. S. Volunteers, for assignment to duty.

* * * * *

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 201. } Baltimore, August 12, 1864.

1. Capt. T. M. Bartholomee, commanding detachment Twelfth Maryland Infantry (100-days' service), is hereby ordered to put his command en route without delay to proceed to Hood's Mills, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, there to await orders from Brig. Gen. E. B. Tyler, commanding First Separate Brigade. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 12, 1864.

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff, Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to state that the interests of the service [require] that a district should be formed of the mountain region, including from Cumberland Valley on the east to Laurel Hill on the west. The civil officers in the lower part of this section are hostile to the Government, as well as a large number of the inhabitants. There are other reasons purely military which demand it. I am informed that Brig. Gen. O. S. Ferry, of General Butler's command, has a division, the term of service of which will expire this month. If he can be spared without detriment to the service I should like to have him; if not, please send me an officer who is energetic, temperate, discreet, and with good common sense. Such a one would be of as much value to the country on this duty as though he commanded a brigade in the field.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 185. }

HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 12, 1864.

* * * * *

4. Maj. Gen. George Cadwalader, U. S. Volunteers, commanding Brandywine District, will send without delay one company of 100-days' infantry from Chambersburg, Pa., to Scranton, Pa., with orders to report to Capt. S. N. Bradford, provost-marshal Twelfth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, for duty. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

5. Maj. Gen. George Cadwalader, U. S. Volunteers, commanding Brandywine District, will send without delay the company of 100-days' infantry now at Fort Washington to Chambersburg, Pa., with orders to report to Lieutenant-Colonel Stewart, commanding First Battalion (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers, at that place. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

6. Maj. Gen. George Cadwalader, U. S. Volunteers, commanding Brandywine District, will send without delay by railroad twelve mounted men with their horses, under command of a reliable non-commissioned officer, from Capt. George D. Stroud's company of mounted men for 100-days' service (now at Chambersburg), with orders to report to Capt. S. N. Bradford, provost-marshal Twelfth Congressional District of Pennsylvania, for duty. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

7. Capt. C. N. Turnbull, Corps of Engineers, U. S. Army, having completed the duties assigned him in paragraph 1, Special Orders, No. 177, from these headquarters, dated August 1, 1864, is hereby relieved from duty as chief engineer of the Department of the Susquehanna.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Couch:

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS,

*Cedar Creek, August 13, 1864—7.30 a. m. (Received 14th.)*Lieutenant-General GRANT, City Point:

I was unable to get south of Early, but will push him up the Valley. Reports from citizens here, Washington, and Harper's Ferry report Longstreet's corps coming this way from Staunton, but I still rely on your telegram that it is not so. There is nothing in the Valley but wheat and a few fine mules. The sum total of all Early's transportation is 250 wagons. He has not sent off or accumulated any supplies. He was simply living off the country. The Sixth Corps now occupies Strasburg.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
*Major-General.*CEDAR CREEK, VA., August 13, 1864—10 p. m.
(Received 16th.)Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT, Comdg. Armies of the United States:

Your dispatch of August 12 received.* At the time the Sixth Army Corps was occupying the heights of Strasburg the enemy had taken position about three miles beyond and near the base of Signal Mountain. It did not appear that there was more there than their rear guard, with about twelve pieces of artillery. I was making preparations to attack them when your dispatch arrived. It did not appear as though they would make a stand, and looked more like an invitation for me to follow them up. I did not think it best to do so, and have taken position on the south side of Cedar Creek. All the reports that I hear, and have been hearing for some days, confirm your telegram that Longstreet is in the Valley, and that Fitz Lee's cavalry is making its way up the country and when last heard from was at Orange Court-House. So far as I have been able to see, there is not a military position in this Valley south of the Potomac. The position here is a very bad one, as I cannot cover the numerous roads that lead in on both of my flanks to the rear. I am not aware that you knew where my command was when you ordered me to take up the defensive. I should very much like to have your advice. Early accumulated no supplies in this section of the Valley. His trains were very much magnified, and will not number more than 250 wagons. He left at Winchester about seventy-five wounded. There were no supplies accumulated there. I have a large number of 100-days' men whose terms of service expire in a few days. Can they be made to serve for a longer period or shall I allow them to be mustered out? Mosby attacked the rear of my train this morning, en route here from Harper's Ferry, and burned six wagons.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
*Major-General.*WASHINGTON, D. C., August 13, 1864.
(Via Harper's Ferry.)

Major-General SHERIDAN:

General Wilson's cavalry division moved out eleven miles last night. Grover's division, of the Nineteenth Corps, will move to-day by Snicker's Gap.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

* See Grant to Halleck, 9 a. m., p. 775.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 11. } Cedar Creek, Va., August 13, 1864.

Capt. E. V. Sumner, First U. S. Cavalry, special inspector of cavalry for Department of West Virginia, until further orders will make his headquarters at Harper's Ferry and take special control of the mounted cavalry and also the dismounted cavalry, or that portion of it which in his opinion should be remounted. He will consult with General Weber, commanding post, who will render all the assistance necessary to fit these men for the field. He will keep as many officers at the dismounted camp as are absolutely necessary to keep up the discipline of the same, and order all other officers and men to join their regiments as fast as they arrive. General Weber will forward to these headquarters tri-weekly reports of the dismounted camp.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Near Cedar Creek, August 13, 1864.

I. On the arrival of the army trains this evening corps commanders will have the trains of their respective commands parked in rear of their corps.

II. As soon as the trains arrive corps commanders will cause three days' rations to be issued to their commands, which must last four days.

III. All wagons emptied by the issue of supplies will be loaded at the different corps headquarters with the sick and wounded of the corps.

IV. The wagons, as soon as the sick are loaded, will be moved to the rear and parked preparatory to being sent to Harper's Ferry, under escort, for supplies. The corps quartermasters will report to the acting chief quartermaster at these headquarters as soon as the sick, &c., are loaded, and will be notified by him when the trains are to be parked.

By command of Maj. Gen. P. H. Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

ALEXANDRIA, August 13, 1864.
(Received 8.25 p. m.)

Colonel TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

The patrols report all quiet to-day. Citizens report a few guerrillas near Fairfax Court-House to-day.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Provost-Marshal-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 13, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report everything quiet in this vicinity. Beyond this, I have nothing to report.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Commanding Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 13, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report the return of the force sent above Leesburg—to the west and north of it. No considerable body of the enemy is reported in that vicinity. Mosby, with 300 men, passed through Waterford on Sunday last from the mountains, and went toward Upperville. Lieutenant Hutchinson, commanding the party, captured two prisoners. It is reported that there are through this and the adjoining counties many wandering fellows turned loose with passes, like that inclosed,* to remount themselves; the duty is styled "horse detail." We have captured some half dozen of them recently.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Commanding Brigade.

SALISBURY, MD., August 13, 1864.

Capt. GEORGE V. MASSEY, Assistant Adjutant-General:

The Pocomoke Sound and River and the Annemessex swarm with armed pirates and blockade runners. A gun-boat should be at once sent to those waters. Corpl. B. Paradise and three of my men yesterday, between Shelltown, on Pocomoke, and mouth of Annemessex, captured four boats and contents and six prisoners, among them the noted deserter Stewart Tingle. To-day the corporal telegraphs that an armed gang recaptured three of the boats and two of my guards, Henry Swift and Littleton D. Davis. The prisoners will be here to-day. Telegraph me fully.

G. W. P. SMITH,

Captain Smith's Independent Maryland Cavalry, Comdg. Post.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH CORPS,
August 13, 1864—6.45 a. m.

The corps will move at once on the receipt of this order, left in front, to Strasburg, where it will take position and await further orders.

The following will be the order of march: first, Third Division; second, First Division; third, artillery in reserve; fourth, Second Division; fifth, trains.

The pickets will be withdrawn under direction of the corps officer of the day in time to enable them to join their respective divisions.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. H. WHITTELYSEY,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 13, 1864.

Brevet Major-General EMORY, Comdg. Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you detail a brigade of your corps to escort the wagons with sick from this place to Winchester; this brigade must be in readiness to move at 5 a. m. to-morrow. On the arrival of this brigade at Winchester the brigade commander will turn over the trains to Brigadier-General Kenly, and will remain at Winchester and garrison that place with his command until further orders. The brigade commander detailed by you will, between this point and Winchester, have supreme control and management of the train, and will be held responsible for its safe arrival at Winchester.

* Not found.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

NOTE.—The officer commanding brigade detailed will report at these headquarters at 5 a. m. to-morrow in person.

CAMP NEAR MIDDLETOWN, VA., August 13, 1864.

Capt. A. J. MCGONNIGLE,

Chief Quartermaster, Dept. Middle Military Division :

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to transmit herewith a copy of my report in relation to the movements of the transportation of the army.

The trains started from Bolivar at 10.30 a. m., August 12, and were ordered to march in the following order: First, Sixth Corps trains; second, Nineteenth Corps trains; third, Army of Department of Virginia trains; fourth, Cavalry Division trains. The Sixth and Nineteenth Corps left in regular order, followed by the Army of Department of Virginia trains, but, for some unexplained reason, the cavalry trains did not get into position as promptly as they should have done, and did not leave Bolivar until 4 p. m. About one mile before reaching Berryville the trains halted to water, and then moved on at about 11.30 p. m. While the trains were pulling out the Cavalry Division trains came up, unhitched, and fed, without orders. When their turn came to start they were not ready, with the exception of the new brigade train, under charge of Lieutenant Pinkham, acting assistant quartermaster, which I ordered on, and proceeded to raise the officers in charge of the other cavalry trains, ordering them to start immediately. Much time was lost in getting them off, and at about 4 a. m. I discovered that the Reserve Brigade (in charge of Lieutenant Dean) was not ready, and no officer could be found in charge of said train, not even a wagon-master. I immediately commenced awakening the drivers myself, and had them nearly ready to start, when we were fired upon by a party of about 100 men with one piece of artillery. They opened upon us with two shells, and prepared to charge. It was impossible to corral the train, as it was not hitched up, and I reported to the lieutenant-colonel in charge of the rear guard for instructions. He had none to give, and I therefore made a detour of the hills, took charge of the trains already passed, and left in the valley about forty-four teams. I lay the entire blame of having this train delayed, first, to the officers allowing their teams to be unhitched and fed without orders; second, to the absence of any officer in charge of the Reserve Cavalry Brigade train. Had these officers awaited orders, and been ready to move when ordered, the entire train would have been beyond the point of attack. The enemy drove back the rear guard, destroyed a few wagons, and drove off a small herd of cattle. I have not full particulars, and cannot officially give them.

I have the honor to be, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. C. MANN,

Captain and Assistant Quartermaster, First Division, Nineteenth

Army Corps, and Acting Chief in Charge of Transportation.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
September 7, 1864.

Respectfully referred to Board convened at Harper's Ferry for investigation of this matter.*

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

C. KINGSBURY, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, August 13, 1864.

Brigadier-General TORBERT,
Chief of Cavalry:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you order the detachment of cavalry of the Second Division sent here this afternoon as an escort to the major-general commanding, to take post at Berryville, and scout the country in that vicinity, and also around Charlestown and the Opequon Creek. The detachment will move as soon as they are supplied with forage and rations.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 13, 1864—12.30 a. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: You will hold one of your best and most reliable regiments in readiness to escort Colonel Chipman, aide-de-camp, bearer of dispatches to Major-General Sheridan. The regiment must be fully provided with ammunition, and if necessary, sufficient must be taken from other regiments to complete its supply. The escort will take the shortest route to and through Snicker's Gap. Colonel Chipman is expected to arrive here soon.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 13, 1864.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: Complaints reach here that your men are roaming around the country, robbing the orchards, corn-fields, &c. You will please have it stopped, and place safeguards on whatever grounds you may judge necessary, so as to prevent all unlicensed proceedings of any kind.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

* See proceedings of Board, p. 619.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 13, 1864.

Brig. Gen. MAX WEBER,

Commanding Defenses of Harper's Ferry :

GENERAL: Has General Duffié's command arrived at Harper's Ferry?

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
In Camp near Cedar Creek, August 13, 1864.

Brigadier-General WEBER,

Commanding Defenses of Harper's Ferry :

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you have the railroad repaired to Martinsburg as soon as possible. The general also directs that you inform him whether the railroad bridge has been repaired; also whether the wagon road-way on railroad bridge has been put in working order. You will also report the condition of the pontoon bridge.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, { HDQRS. MIL. DIST. OF HARPER'S FERRY,
No. 60. { Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 13, 1864.

The following-named officers are hereby appointed and announced upon the staff of Brig. Gen. Max Weber: Capt. H. M. Burleigh, assistant adjutant-general and acting assistant inspector-general; First Lieut. S. F. Adams, aide-de-camp and acting assistant adjutant-general. They will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

MAX WEBER,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 13, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,

Commanding Cavalry Division, Hancock :

All your men with General Couch and elsewhere have been ordered to Harper's Ferry. Your dispatch relative to horses has been received. The general commanding directs that you concentrate your command at Harper's Ferry, and that you procure all the horses that you can and take them to Harper's Ferry with you.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, August 13, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division, in the Field:

GENERAL: I have just received your message, by special messenger, sent by you from Hancock. General Sheridan, commanding division (military), went to the front three days ago, taking with him the available force then here. General Duffié moved from Halltown this morning to join the column. My latest advices place the forces near Winchester, where skirmishing had taken place, but no serious fighting. General Sheridan, when he left, expected your division, with that of General Duffié, to join him as soon as practicable, and I have received no instructions in the matter other than to assist in forwarding the cavalry as speedily as possible. It might be best, under the circumstances, for you to move direct toward Winchester, thereby saving considerable distance, but this I throw out simply as a suggestion, being satisfied that you can decide better than I on the route which should be taken.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
 THAYER MELVIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
 No. 31. } DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Hancock, Md., August 13, 1864.

II. The Independent Company of Philadelphia Scouts and the detachment of Captain Sanno's company of 100-days' men, now on duty with this division, are relieved from duty with it and will report without delay to Colonel Boyd, commanding at Greencastle, Pa.

The brigadier-general commanding takes this occasion to express his thanks to the officers and men of these companies for their uniform good conduct during the late campaign. The efficient services rendered by them contributed largely to the success of the expedition.

By command of Brig. Gen. W. W. Averell:

WILL RUMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
Hancock, Md., August 13, 1864.

Col. J. M. SCHOONMAKER,
Commanding, &c.:

COLONEL: The general commanding desires me to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of 11th instant. The division will move to-morrow, via Martinsburg, to join General Sheridan, and he desires that everything which is fit for service in the field be sent to join it at Martinsburg. Please see that the men have three days' rations and forty rounds per man of ammunition. The general is anxious that the 1,000 Spencer carbines, which were sent to Harper's Ferry for the use of this command, be taken to Martinsburg to be issued. Will you be kind enough to see that they are sent with the detachment and that plenty of ammunition is sent with them; also bring all the dismounted men that have equipments. We can mount them at Martinsburg. If possible send on the wagons, two sets of horse equipments, and seventy-two sabers and pistols. We have seventy-three unarmed and dismounted men who can be remounted if the equipments can be had. Captain Gardner, assistant quartermaster at Harper's Ferry, will let you have the wagons to go to Martinsburg. They will be sent back from this place with a guard. It is important that the men under your command be at Martinsburg to-morrow with the carbines and other articles. The general wishes that you exert every means to get them there. Lieutenant North, acting ordnance officer, will give every assistance in his power.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILL RUMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

Cedar Creek, August 13, 1864.

(Received Cumberland 8 a. m. 15th.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

You are authorized to retain the detachment of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry now on duty at Beverly, at that point for the present.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff.

---

CEDAR CREEK, August 13, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

Send at once to Winchester all stragglers belonging to this command that are armed, or that can be armed at Cumberland. Let them come as far as possible by rail. Send a list to these headquarters of all the men without arms that they may be charged against them. Send Lieut. Jere Horton, assistant commissary of musters, First Infantry Division, to join his command at once.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CEDAR CREEK, August 13, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

It is impossible to relieve the 100-days' men Ohio National Guard at present. Troops will be sent to take their place at the earliest possible moment.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 202. } Baltimore, August 13, 1864.

* * * * *

II. The companies and detachments of the One hundred and forty-fourth and One hundred and forty-ninth Regiments Ohio National Guard, now on duty in the Second Separate Brigade and District of Annapolis, will be ordered to report at once to Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood, at Baltimore City, there to await the arrival of the balance of the regiments en route to place of muster out of service. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

STRAWBERRY PLAINS, VA., August 14, 1864—10 a. m.

(Received 9 a. m. 15th.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

Last night I moved the Second Corps, about 9,000 men of the Tenth Corps, and Gregg's division of cavalry, to this (north) side of the river to threaten Richmond from the north, and, if possible, to draw back troops from the Valley. We have captured prisoners from four different brigades of Field's division, Longstreet's corps, and also from Wilcox's division, of Hill's corps. Field's division is one that we supposed had gone to the Valley. We know two divisions of Hill's corps to be at Petersburg. This fixes the third division here, as I have heretofore supposed. Pickett's division, of Longstreet's corps, is opposite Butler at Bermuda Hundred. This leaves but one division of infantry to have gone to the Valley. I am now satisfied no more has gone. Please forward this to Sheridan.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

CITY POINT, VA., August 14, 1864—8 p. m.

(Received 3.30 p. m. 16th.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

The move to the north side of the James to-day developed the presence of Field's division, of Longstreet's corps, which I supposed had gone to the Valley. Pickett's division is also here. We captured 6 pieces of artillery and over 100 prisoners. Longstreet's troops were under marching orders, and this move will detain it at least for the present. I think Sheridan is still superior to Early in numbers, but not sufficiently so to attack fortifications.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

CITY POINT, VA., August 14, 1864—8 p. m.

(Received 2 p. m. 16th.)

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Winchester, Va.:

I moved Hancock's corps, Gregg's division of cavalry, and part of the Tenth Corps to the north side of the James last night to surprise the enemy and prevent him from sending troops away. We captured six pieces of artillery and prisoners from four different brigades of Field's division, Longstreet's corps. This is a division I supposed had gone to the Valley. It is now positive that Kershaw's division has gone, but no other infantry has. This re-enforcement to Early will put him nearer on an equality with you in numbers than I want to see, and will make it necessary for you to observe some caution about attacking. I would not, however, change my instructions, further than to enjoin caution.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

CEDAR RUN, VA., August 14, 1864—11 a. m.

(Received 12 m. 15th.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Colonel Chipman arrived here this morning via Snicker's Gap. The information which he brought reached me yesterday about 11 a. m. I have taken up for the present the line of Cedar Run, but will, at my leisure, take position at Winchester. This line cannot be held, nor can I supply my command beyond that point with the ten days' rations with which I started. I expected to get far enough up the Valley to accomplish my objects, and then quickly return. I will destroy all the wheat and hay in the country (there is nothing else), and make it as untenable as possible for a rebel force to subsist. Please telegraph General Grant.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 14, 1864—2.35 p. m.

(Via Harper's Ferry.)

Major-General SHERIDAN:

General Wilson was ordered to telegraph to you on his arrival here, and to obey your instructions. There is much necessary delay when troops arrive by detachments and without transportation and supplies. Grover's division was delayed by changes of orders from General Grant. The Quartermaster-General reports that all troops sent to your command from here were supplied with their full allowance of trains, and that it would now involve much inconvenience, expense, and risk to send into the field duplicate trains for exchange. The Secretary of War concurs in that view. The exchange of trains will therefore be postponed till it can be made with less risk than at present.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

CEDAR CREEK, VA., August 14, 1864—10 a. m.

(Received 6.30 a. m. 16th.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Arrived this a. m. 6 o'clock, having marched ninety miles in twenty-four hours. Mosby's gang hung on our flank between Goose Creek and Snicker's Gap, firing into our rear at the gap. He passed out of the gap to the east with 300 men and two guns at 9 a. m. yesterday, having made a dash on rear of General Sheridan's train at Berryville, capturing some mules and burning six wagons. Could hear of no enemy but Mosby and White's guerrillas east of Blue Ridge. All quiet in front. Enemy intrenching across valley about Strasburg. Trains all up and army in fine condition.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 5. } Cedar Creek, Va., August 14, 1864.

1. Lieut. John R. Meigs, U. S. Engineer Corps, is hereby relieved from duty with the Army of West Virginia, and will report at once to these headquarters.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR, } HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 3. } Near Cedar Creek, August 14, 1864—3.40 p. m.

All the subsistence trains now with this command will be at once moved to the rear, under the direction of corps quartermasters, and parked just this side of Middletown. The ground to be occupied by the different trains will be pointed out by the acting chief quartermaster of this army.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 14, 1864.

Major-General AUGUR:

GENERAL: Batteries K and L, First U. S. Artillery, have been consolidated to form a reserve battery for the cavalry of General Sheridan's command. Major-General Halleck directs that this battery be ordered to join the division under General Grover and proceed with it.

Very respectfully,

J. C. KELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

MUDDY BRANCH, August 14, 1864.
(Received Washington 7.20 p. m.)

Maj. C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: All quiet on my line. A number of squads of rebel cavalry seen on the Virginia side to-day, all along my line from Monocacy down as far as Great Falls. Think they are watching for stragglers or orderlies with dispatches, &c.

Very respectfully,

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, Commanding, &c.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 14, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that a sergeant commanding a party of three men, all of the Sixteenth New York Cavalry, hearing some reports concerning the enemy, ventured out this morning at daybreak on the Braddock road without orders, and beyond an ambuscaded picket of our own, and were ambuscaded and fired into by a party of nine or ten rebels. The sergeant was shot through the head and killed instantly, and one man captured, with his horse; the rest escaped. Parties have been sent out above and below Centerville. I have nothing to report from them.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Col. Sixteenth New York Vol. Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

HDQRS. THIRD BRIG., FIRST DIVISION, SIXTH CORPS,
Heaton House, August 14, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

SIR: I have the honor to represent that a lieutenant of the First Michigan Cavalry, in charge of a train parked in this vicinity, reported at these headquarters through an enlisted man this evening to the following effect: that a detachment of his men in search of forage were fired on by a party of the enemy and one of them killed. Two companies of the Thirty-seventh Massachusetts Regiment of my command were immediately sent to the point designated, a house near the toll-gate on the left hand side of the road, just beyond Middletown going north. The lieutenant-colonel commanding the regiment accompanied the party. He reports that no enemy was found either at the point described or anywhere in the vicinity; that no dead body was discovered, and that the safeguard stated that but one shot was fired in that vicinity during the day, and that at a sheep which was brought in and skinned in his presence. The pickets also report that no firing was heard.

I would respectfully request that the matter be investigated.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. EDWARDS,
Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 14, 1864.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. G. CROOK,
Commanding Army of West Virginia:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that [you] send a force up and take the hill, and that a signal officer accompany the party sent. You will also hold the road at the base of the hill. The general desires that the command sent hold the hill.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS, &C.,
August 14, 1864.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding First Division Cavalry:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you send, if you have not done so, a regiment at daylight in the morning to the point where the Back road crosses Cedar Creek, to hold that point and scout well up the Back road and grade road to Strasburg, at the same time looking well to their right and rear. He hopes to be able to relieve this regiment to-morrow by a division. Direct them to send frequent reports.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Cavalry.

ORDERS.]

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 14, 1864.

The command will move at 3.30 a. m. to-morrow in the following order: first, First Brigade, General McIntosh, with Fitzhugh's battery; second, ambulance, ammunition, forage, and subsistence trains; third, Second Brigade, General Chapman, with Pennington's battery.

General Chapman will guard the train with his command, making such disposition of his troops as he may judge best.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
No. 76. } August 14, 1864.

* * * * *

2. Captain Tarbell, commissary of subsistence of Second Brigade, will act temporarily as division commissary of subsistence, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

3. Brigade commanders will draw from the wagons for their commands, with the least possible delay, two days' subsistence in addition to what the men have now in their haversacks.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 14, 1864.

Lieut. Col. JAMES W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

SIR: The men and guard for repairing the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad to Martinsburg leave here to-morrow morning to commence work. The railroad bridge has been repaired, and the wagon roadway on the railroad bridge is in working order. A new pontoon bridge (16-foot flooring) has been sent from Washington and will be laid, ready for use in two days if the balance of the timbers arrive, which are expected to-morrow.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

MAX WEBER,
Brigadier-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 14, 1864.

Major YELLOTT, or
 COMMANDING OFFICER AT FREDERICK, MD.:

You will send by rail to Harper's Ferry, without delay, four companies of the forces now at Frederick. The cars are now on their way to transport them. They will be provided with three days' rations and sixty rounds of ammunition. Answer.

By order of Brig. Gen. Max Weber:

H. M. BURLEIGH,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

FREDERICK, August 14, 1864.

H. M. BURLEIGH,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Major Pugh, with four companies One hundred and sixty-first Ohio National Guard, are in readiness to move upon arrival of cars. We have just about five rounds of ammunition.

JNO. I. YELLOTT,
Major, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
 DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Newtown, Va., August 14, 1864.

Capt. P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Hdqrs. Army of West Virginia:

SIR: I have the honor to report my command at this place. There is water here. I have gone into camp. There is coming back on the road between this and your headquarters a large wagon train. My supply train is not yet and will not be in until near dark. I have some hay here, and unless you order to the contrary will camp here and join you early to-morrow morning.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Comdg. First Cavalry Division.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 14, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

By the direction of the major-general commanding, you will remain for the present at Harper's Ferry, and in the meantime mount, arm, and equip your command as fast as possible. Report your progress in this matter when you have an opportunity.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Chief of Cavalry.

MARTINSBURG, August 14, 1864.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

When may I expect the detachment of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry from Beverly? The cars can bring them to Back Creek.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

HARRISBURG, August 14, 1864.
(Received 15th.)

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL:

Please leave Capt. George D. Stroud's company at Hagerstown, with directions to report to me for orders. Answer.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS RESERVE CAVALRY CAMP,
Pleasant Valley, Md., August 14, 1864.

Capt. WILL RUMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication from Hancock, Md., dated August 13, and in reply would beg leave to state that I have used every exertion to mount and equip all the men pertaining to our division, and have ready to move this evening a detachment of 350 men under charge of Captain Anderson, Third Virginia Cavalry. The detachment of 212 men which proceeded with Lieutenant-Colonel Blakely, under General Merritt, returned here, Colonel Blakely having been badly wounded by his horse kicking him. Having no officer to take them back, I will send them by Captain Anderson. There are but 100 Spencer carbines here. I have them for the First Virginia by order. Also sixty sets horse equipments, seventy-five sabers and pistols to send you all ready for shipment, but cannot get a single wagon to send them. I have reserved a guard of fifty men to escort them to-morrow morning at daylight (at which time I can get transportation) should it not be too late.

Please send me word if possible to-night in reference to the above, and I will use every dispatch in sending them up. They can be sent by rail twelve miles from here, six miles from Martinsburg. Can you send wagons from there to meet them, or had they better be sent by wagon? The 1,000 Spencers may arrive to-night. In case they do, shall they be sent up to-morrow morning?

I inclose copy of the morning report of the dismounted men of our division, and would beg leave to state that all they require to be fit for duty in the field is horses. If they can be in any way supplied I will fit the men out at once. I have the honor to request that Lieutenant Schoonmaker be temporarily relieved from duty and ordered to report to me if he can be spared, as I am exceedingly short of staff officers, and his father will arrive here to-morrow noon to pay him a visit.

Please communicate with me as frequently as possible and I may be enabled to fulfill the desires of the general commanding more promptly and effectually.

I am, captain, very respectfully,

J. M. SCHOONMAKER,
Colonel.

MARTINSBURG, August 14, 1864.

(Received 7.05 p. m.)

General KELLEY:

After a hard day's work we have got here. Had to make poles and get wire east of here to make it reach. All quiet. General Averell's command has just arrived. Please let me know how long I am to remain here, so I can send up to Back Creek for our rations, as we run out to-morrow.

C. J. HARRISON,
Captain.

CUMBERLAND, *August 14, 1864.*Capt. C. J. HARRISON, Martinsburg:

You will return to Back Creek with your command and await further orders. What news have you from below? When will the telegraph line be ready to work to the Ferry, and when will the road be repaired below?

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

MARTINSBURG, August 14, 1864.

General KELLEY:

I have no reliable news from below. Several of our scouts here say they cannot get through to Sheridan, Mosby having driven them back. They are working on the road; commenced yesterday; it is destroyed eight miles east of here. Mr. Willard can probably make an estimate as to when trains can pass over; think the line will probably be up by Tuesday evening.

C. J. HARRISON,
Captain.

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 14, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER SIXTH WEST VIRGINIA CAVALRY,
North Branch:

The general commanding directs that you send forty men, under a reliable commissioned officer, to proceed, via Frankfort, to Springfield and Romney; thence through Mechanicsburg Gap to Burlington, and return by Patterson's Creek. The command will take two days' rations for men and animals.

By order of Brigadier-General Kelley:

FREEMAN,
Captain and Assistant Inspector-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
In the Field, August 14, 1864—8.30 p. m.

Major-General WALLACE, Commanding:

The general commanding directs that you relieve all the Eighth Illinois Cavalry now serving in your department and order them to Muddy Branch, in the Department of Washington. This regiment must be concentrated at that point without delay.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 203. } Baltimore, August 14, 1864.

1. The One hundred and thirty-seventh Ohio National Guard, Col. Leonard A. Harris commanding, will be put en route, without delay, to report to the commanding officer at Camp Dennison, Ohio, there to be mustered out and paid off, at the expiration of their term of service, in accordance with the mustering regulations of the army. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Bvt. Brig. Gen. W. W. Morris, U. S. Army, is charged with the execution of this order.

2. The One hundred and fifty-ninth Regiment Ohio National Guard, Col. Lyman J. Jackson commanding, will be put en route, without delay, to report to the commanding officer at Zanesville, Ohio, there to be mustered out and paid off, at the expiration of their term of service, in accordance with the mustering regulations of the army. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CITY POINT, August 15, 1864—9 p. m.
(Received 6 a. m. 17th.)

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Military Division, Winchester, Va.:

Our forces north of the James River are still pressing the enemy, and capturing a few prisoners occasionally. The presence of two divisions of Longstreet's corps is undoubted. To-day some prisoners have been taken from W. H. F. Lee's division of cavalry.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

CITY POINT, August 15, 1864—8.30 p. m.
(Received 6.30 a. m. 17th.)

Col. WILLIAM HOFFMAN,
Commissary-General of Prisoners:

You need not move any more prisoners from Point Lookout so long as you deem them safe there.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

POINT OF ROCKS, MD., August 15, 1864.
(Received 10.30 a. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Longstreet, 30,000 strong, and Fitz Lee, 10,000 strong, passed through Warrenton Saturday morning to re-enforce Early. Reliable. A larger force supposed to be following.

SAMUEL C. MEANS.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 12. } Cedar Creek, Va., August 15, 1864.

First Lieut. John R. Meigs, Corps of Engineers, in addition to his duties as chief engineer of the Department of West Virginia, will until further orders perform the duties of an aide-de-camp at these headquarters.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 6. } Cedar Creek, Va., August 15, 1864.

* * * * *

4. Brig. Gen. John D. Stevenson, U. S. Volunteers, having reported to the major-general commanding, in compliance with instructions from the War Department, will report to Brevet Major-General Crook, commanding Department and Army of West Virginia, for assignment to duty.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SALISBURY, MD., August 15, 1864.

Captain MASSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Will send eleven prisoners to-morrow and the balance next day. Am busy on report to send by mail. Corporal at Newtown telegraphs this morning that not having sufficient for guard over captured boat it was taken last night. Supposed to be by citizens. He spared all he could for my large scout through the lower part of Somerset County. Gun-boat should be sent at once to Pocomoke Sound and River to capture and hold small craft.

G. W. P. SMITH,
Captain, Commanding.

MUDDY BRANCH, August 15, 1864—6.30 p. m.

Maj. CARRINGTON H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

MAJOR: All quiet to-day. One of my pickets near Indian Ford was shot and severely wounded last night by bushwhackers inside my line. The country was searched without effect until 12 o'clock.

Very respectfully,

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 15, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that no intelligence has been received from the force sent to the west and south of Centerville in the direction of Thoroughfare Gap and Warrenton. I beg to inclose, for the consideration of the general commanding the department, a copy of to-day's regimental morning reports.* The whereabouts and disposition of the whole number of men of each regiment more satisfactorily appear from them than from the statement sent a few days since with the usual report. It will be seen from these that but about 720 enlisted men are present here at all in both regiments together, and of this number 100 are sick and in confinement. Thus, 620 men are left in both regiments, and of this number 257 are reported on special, extra, or daily duty, leaving 363 men for all the duty men of both regiments.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Volunteer Cavalry, Comdg. Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 15, 1864—7.45 p. m.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,

Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you move your corps at 11 o'clock to-night (the 15th) to Winchester, Va., and garrison that place until further orders. Move your trains in advance of the troops, except a small advance guard. On arriving at Winchester have your trains parked compactly.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 6. }

HDQRS. CAVALRY, MIDDLE MIL. DIV.,
August 15, 1864.

The Reserve and First Brigades, First Division, will be moved to the Front Royal pike, starting at 8 a. m. in the morning. One brigade will march by the road that Colonel Devin marched on and take position near the Second Brigade at Cedarville. The other brigade will take the road from Middletown to Stony Point, the route that General Crook's column came. This brigade will take position at Stony Point.

One large regiment of the Third Brigade will be left at this point, which will relieve the pickets of the First Brigade on the left of the army, and picket so as to watch Cedar Creek, about a mile and a half on the right of the pike. The balance of the brigade will be moved over to the Back road at the crossing of Cedar Creek. Colonel Lowell, commanding Third Brigade, will be directed to report at these headquarters for special instructions. General Merritt will also call for the same purpose before starting.

By command of Brigadier-General Torbert:

GEORGE B. SANFORD,

Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

* Not found.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY CORPS,
Newtown, Va., August 15, 1864.

General MERRITT,
Commanding First Division:

We have heard artillery firing in the direction of Front Royal, and General Sheridan is anxious to know what is going on. Send a dispatch at once to Winchester, up the Front Royal pike, and whether you want any assistance. General Wilson ought to be at Berryville, if not coming toward you.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General and Chief of Cavalry.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 15, 1864.

Brig. Gen. J. H. WILSON,
Commanding Third Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding desires that you report as soon as possible. He is particularly anxious as to the state of your supplies and horses.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, August 15, 1864.

Brigadier-General WILSON,
Commanding Third Division Cavalry:

I send the Fifth New York Cavalry back as far as Snicker's Gap to see if they can communicate with you. From all the information we can get General Fitz Lee's division rebel cavalry is about Front Royal. Colonel Devin's brigade, First Division, is at Cedarville, on the Front Royal pike, and pickets near Front Royal. General Duffié will start to-night with his command (about 900 men) to take post for the present at Berryville. There is a detachment of your division now at Berryville which you will direct to join your command when you get there, and also bring with you the detachment, also there, belonging to Gregg's division, provided General Duffié's command is there. You will come to Berryville from ———, take the Millwood pike as far as a stone church, turn to the right, and in a short distance you will strike the Millwood and Winchester pike; follow this pike to within about half a mile where it crosses the Opequon Creek, then turn to the left, taking the route the army took to the White Post and Newtown road, and in a short distance it crosses the Front Royal and Winchester pike; at this last cross-roads turn to the left and go to Stony Point, about three miles, and take position. Colonel Devin is about three miles beyond, at Cedarville. These instructions are given on the supposition that you will be in the Valley to-night or to-morrow. If you are longer things may be changed. Please report when you get to Berryville; send parties of eight or ten with dispatches. Keep me well advised of your movements as you come up the Valley. Mosby captured near Berryville nearly all of the Reserve Brigade train day before yesterday, and went off with what he could carry through Snicker's Gap. Send these dispatches to General Grover for General Sheridan, if it is possible for you to communicate with him. Don't lose any time in getting up the Valley.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Chief of Cavalry.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 66. }

HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 15, 1864.

Brig. Gen. John D. Stevenson, U. S. Volunteers, having reported to these headquarters in obedience to orders from the headquarters of the Middle Military Division, is hereby assigned to the command of the Military District of Harper's Ferry, headquarters at Harper's Ferry, W. Va.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
In the Field near Middletown, Va., August 15, 1864.

Lieut. Col. A. J. GREENFIELD,
Commanding Second Brigade:

SIR: You will please proceed with the portion of the Twenty-second Pennsylvania Cavalry, now present with the division, to the headquarters of Brigadier-General Torbert, chief of cavalry of Middle Military Division, reporting in person to General Torbert. You will report immediately.

By command of Brigadier-General Duffié:

E. W. CLARK, JR.,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

P. S.—When ready to move you will please report in person at these headquarters.

By order of Brigadier-General Duffié:

E. W. CLARK, JR.,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 11. }

HDQRS. 1ST CAV. DIV., ARMY W. VA.,
*In the Field near Middletown, Va.,
August 15, 1864.*

Col. R. F. Taylor, First New York Veteran Cavalry, having reported at these headquarters, is hereby assigned to the command of the Second Brigade, relieving Lieut. Col. A. J. Greenfield, Twenty-second Pennsylvania Cavalry, now in command of that brigade.

By command of Brig. Gen. A. N. Duffié:

E. W. CLARK, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Martinsburg, W. Va., August 15, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

COLONEL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of yesterday directing me to remain at Harper's Ferry until further orders. My command arrived at this place last evening on its way to join the Middle Division in the field, losing twenty-six horses on its march from Hancock from exhaustion. About 600 mounted men have joined my command this morning from Harper's Ferry, making my command about 2,500 strong. One-third of my horses are totally unfit for further service at present, and would be abandoned should I continue my march at once from this place. I have made arrangements for obtaining 500 horses from Cumberland Valley and 500 from the West during the next three days, and I expect to be able to increase my command to 3,500 within the next five or six days. I am informed that no forage can be obtained from the East at Harper's Ferry, and, as forage can be furnished from the West, I shall remain here unless the major-general commanding particularly desires my command at Harper's Ferry. The repair of the railroad and telegraph will probably be completed in two days. The worn-out condition of one-third of my horses was not caused by want of forage or care, but results solely from the fact that they have marched 1,700 miles since the 1st of May without rest. A large number require shoeing. The facilities for remounting, refitting, and drilling are much better here than at Harper's Ferry. I shall, therefore, remain here until further orders are received from the major-general commanding. I shall use every endeavor to be ready for the field in five or six days.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

OFFICE MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, August 15, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,

Commanding Division, Martinsburg:

GENERAL: Your communication of yesterday I have received. I will do what I can toward sending the mounted men of your command now here to you at Martinsburg, in compliance with your request.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. MELVIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 15, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

General Sheridan has countermanded the order in regard to the Eighth Ohio Cavalry; the detachment will remain at Beverly till further orders.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 15, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

SIR: Your dispatches regarding General Duffié and the bridges were received yesterday and answered. I shall answer all such twice, in case one may be captured. The railroad bridge is completed. Wagons are crossing to-day. The new pontoon bridge from Washington will be ready in two days, if the expected lumber comes up. General Duffié must have joined you. General Averell is at Martinsburg; will be inspected to-morrow by Captain Sumner. Men are at work on the railroad between here and Martinsburg; it will be repaired this week. I must consequently furnish troops to occupy Martinsburg and the different stations between here and Hancock. My infantry force consists of two volunteer regiments and three Ohio 100-days' men. The two volunteer regiments are between here and Frederick, but as it is sufficient to have one regiment on that line I have concentrated the other, and shall move it to Martinsburg if necessary. The three Ohio regiments are not needed on Maryland Heights, and they could be used for guarding the [railroad], did not their time expire this week. Four regiments are needed on the line of the railroad—two in Martinsburg, one between here and Martinsburg, one between Martinsburg and Hancock. As the time of these Ohio regiments is so nearly out, I am anxiously awaiting orders regarding this matter from the general commanding, and as to whether I shall let them go or not at the expiration of their time of service. The distance between Harper's Ferry and the headquarters of the Middle Military Division is now so great that it is difficult to forward dispatches from here with the necessary speed. Can stations be established along the road for the purpose of forwarding with more speed and greater security? I have less than 100 cavalry for all duty, including that of couriers. Can the general commanding spare some hundred or more to report to me for duty, my force being wholly inadequate for the calls upon them.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

MAX WEBER,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 15, 1864.

Capt. P. G. BIER,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

Your telegram of yesterday in regard to stragglers received. The number I have here is 1,200, mostly from your command. Not one out of the whole number is armed. I have no arms here to arm. The railroad is now repaired and working to Martinsburg. Shall I send them? They can be armed, I presume, at Harper's Ferry. I am extremely anxious to get rid of them. They are a great troublesome, worthless party. I am having complete roll made of them and will forward by mail. You can communicate any orders now via Martinsburg. Telegraph is working to that point.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 15, 1864.

Capt. P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I really know not what to do in regard to the 100-days' men. They are unwilling to remain after their time expires. I have no forces to compel them. Besides the necessity of protecting the railroad and the public property, we have 1,500 sick in the hospital, liable to capture by McNeill.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 15, 1864.

Brigadier-General SULLIVAN,
Charleston:

Department headquarters is at Harper's Ferry. No orders have been issued in regard to Ohio National Guard, except they are to be sent to the place where they were mustered in, and will take their arms with them when they go.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPARTMENT, EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Baltimore, Md., August 15, 1864.

Lieut. Col. SAMUEL B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Eighth Army Corps:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit for the information of the general commanding the following report as the result of my investigation into the origin of the picnic recently held near Wilmington, in the State of Delaware, and the effect of the arrest of the managers thereof and their subsequent release:

The avowed object of this picnic was for the benefit of the rebel prisoners confined in Fort Delaware. It is urged in mitigation of the offense that permission was asked of the military authorities. Such, however, appears not to have been the case. One of the parties interested requested an officer of the Board of Enrollment to ask permission. This officer consulted unofficially with the provost-marshal, who disclaimed having any power in the premises, informing him that application must be made to the military commander. No such application was, however, made to him. The holding of the picnic, therefore, is regarded by the loyal men of the State both as an insult to the Government and as an experiment to test the forbearance of the military power and the animus of the disloyalists. As an evidence of the spirit affecting these people, it may be mentioned that the members of the band engaged for the occasion, after performing two national airs, were informed that such music was not desirable; that they wished to hear Southern airs, and unless the band could play such it might leave. The wife of one of the parties desiring to know why they could not hold an entertainment upon their grounds, was answered by another in these words, "Because Abe Lincoln is President."

Other incidents connected with the affair, including the arrest and subsequent release of the managers, as also the ovation paid to them upon their return to Wilmington, have been reported in detail by the officers immediately interested. I beg, however, to inform you that the arrest of the parties above referred to was most salutary in its effects, reassuring and strengthening the loyal, encouraging the wavering, and giving assurance of future protection. The disloyal were proportionately disheartened and terrified. Men whose sympathies and votes go with the stronger side were visibly affected by such a display of energy on the part of the Government, and were rapidly determining in favor of loyalty, while the disloyalists were depressed and augured an unfavorable result in the approaching election. Such was the state of affairs when the return of the parties from their imprisonment reversed the situation. The effect of the release will probably prove fatal to the cause of the Government, regarded as it is as the result of intimidation. The disloyalists are reported to be organizing and arming. Prominent and influential men who have seldom been absent from home at night are now known to leave their premises after midnight, and to ride through the country, returning at daylight, and adopting various means to elude observation and to escape suspicion. These facts, together with many others of the same character, induce the belief that a widely spread conspiracy exists among the disloyal people of the State, and threats are indulged in as to their conduct at the coming election.

A further cause of embarrassment may be found in the want of harmony existing between the military commander and the provost-marshal. The former, being guided by the strict letter of military law, and performing his duty in accordance therewith, has rendered himself unpopular with the loyalists, who regard his absence from their society with feelings of suspicion. I do not, however, regard it in any other light than as a natural result of a desire on his part to keep his acts untrammelled by feelings of personal sympathy, in order that he may the more faithfully discharge his duty to the Government; yet, while believing this to be the case I am forced to the conclusion that he does not enjoy the confidence of the loyal people of the State. The latter (provost-marshal), being a civilian, intermingles freely with the people, acquainting himself with their feelings and disposition, and enjoys, apparently, to the fullest extent, their confidence and esteem. Being thus associated he has means of information not possessed by the military commander, and not deeming himself in any way accountable to him a want of co-operation is the result. In view of the above facts I would respectfully suggest the propriety of largely increasing the military force in the State of Delaware, the same to be under the command of an efficient, experienced, and judicious officer, who shall be military commander and with whom the provost-marshal shall confer on all matters requiring the use of the troops under his command.

Respectfully submitting the above, I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LYNDE CATLIN,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Assistant Inspector-General.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 271. } Washington, August 15, 1864.

* * * * *

27. Maj. Henry B. Judd, U. S. Army, is hereby relieved from the duties of military commander of Wilmington, Del.

* * * * *

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
 No. 204. } Baltimore, August 15, 1864.

* * * * *

6. In obedience to orders of the general commanding Middle Military Division the detachments of the Eighth Regiment Illinois Cavalry, on duty with the First Separate Brigade, will be concentrated without delay at Muddy Branch, in the Department of Washington, and report to Major-General Augur. Brig. Gen. E. B. Tyler is charged with the execution of this order.

* * * * *

9. Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood, commanding Third Separate Brigade, is hereby directed to take immediate steps to mount one company of militia (100-days' service) for duty in this department as mounted infantry. General Lockwood will make requisitions for horses and horse equipments, and forward the same to these headquarters for approval without delay.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

—

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, D. C., August 15, 1864—3.25 p. m.

Major-General COUCH,
Harrisburg:

There is no reason why General Cadwalader should not be ordered back to Philadelphia if you deem proper to do so.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

—

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 15, 1864.

Lieut. Col. JAMES W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, Middle Military Div., Harper's Ferry, W. Va.:

COLONEL: I have the honor to acknowledge receipt of paragraph 10, Special Orders, No. 3, dated headquarters Middle Military Division, Harper's Ferry, August 9, 1864, and in obedience to the same, I herewith transmit a field return of my command, with a roster of the regiments and detachments. The positions occupied and by what troops are as follows:

Brandywine District.—Chambersburg, Pa., one section of artillery from Battery A, First New York Artillery; independent company, Patapsco Guards, Maryland Volunteers; four companies First Battalion (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers. Occupying mountain passes between McConnellsburg and Loudon, one company First Battalion (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers. Occupying mountain passes between McConnellsburg and Mercersburg, one company First Battalion (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers. Between Gettysburg and Green Mountain, one company First Battalion (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers. Hagerstown, Md., one company mounted (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers. Near Mercersburg, Pa., one company mounted (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers. York, Pa., two companies Second Battalion, Veteran Reserve Corps. Philadelphia, Pa., One hundred and eighty-sixth Pennsylvania Volunteers, ten companies Second Battalion, Veteran Reserve Corps, on duty at hospital, &c. Fort Washington, three guns on south bank of river near Harrisburg (20-pounder Parrotts), convalescents; Keystone Battery (100-days'), Pennsylvania Artillery, four guns (20-pounder Parrotts); one company First Battalion (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers; two companies One hundred and eighty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, 300 convalescents.

Monongahela District.—Uniontown, Pa., Battery A, First New York Artillery, four guns (light 12-pounders), two companies Veteran Reserve Corps.

Lehigh District.—Pottsville, Pa., Company D, Twenty-first Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry. Bloomsburg, Pa., one company mounted (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers, one section Keystone Battery (100-days'), Pennsylvania Artillery.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. N. COUCH,

Major-General, Commanding Department.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 15, 1864.

Maj. Gen. GEORGE CADWALADER,

Commanding Brandywine District, Harrisburg, Pa.:

GENERAL: The commanding general requests that you send the two companies of the One hundred and eighty-sixth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, now in Fort Washington, and two companies of 100-days' volunteers, now at Chambersburg, all under command of Lieutenant-Colonel Stewart, to report in person at these headquarters for instructions.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,

Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

WAR DEPARTMENT, ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, August 15, 1864.

COMMANDING GENERAL DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST,
New York City:

SIR: I am directed by the Secretary of War to transmit to you the following orders:

Ordered, That inasmuch as the public safety and necessity for the transportation of troops, ordnance, quartermaster's and subsistence supplies on the Potomac River requires the immediate placing of light-house boats on the Potomac River, that Major-General Dix, commanding the Eastern Department, or in his absence the officer in command, be directed to seize and turn over to the Light-House Board two of the vessels within mentioned, which are now at New Bedford, and were built for light-house purposes, leaving one vessel in the hands of the civil authorities to answer the claim or liens for their construction. And the military commander aforesaid is directed to use such military force as may be necessary to seize and hold said boats and deliver them to the officers and agents of said Light-House Board, at such places as the Board or its officers may direct, and that he also employ such mariners, seamen, tugs, and instruments as may be necessary for the purpose, keeping an accurate account of the expenses incurred in executing this order, and reporting the same and his action to this Department.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

AUGUST 15, 1864.

The inclosed copy of an order signed by Prof. Joseph Henry and B. U. Keyser, esq., chief clerk of the Light-House Board, describe the vessels referred to in the Secretary's order.

I am, sir, &c.,

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure.]

TREASURY DEPARTMENT,
OFFICE LIGHT-HOUSE BOARD,
August 13, 1864.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: In the absence of the other members of the Board, I have the honor to give you the following information in regard to light-vessels for the Potomac, as requested by yourself in our interview of to-day. The Board has been frequently urged to place two light-vessels in the Potomac, one at Upper and the other at Lower Cedar Point, since at present much delay is experienced by transports and other vessels navigating that river on account of the absence of these aids to navigation. We are informed that vessels arriving at these points at night-fall are obliged to come to anchor, and so remain until daylight. These points were prior to the war occupied by light-vessels, which in April, 1861, were destroyed by the enemy. The Board immediately contracted for the construction of three vessels, two of which were intended to replace those destroyed. These vessels were built in accordance with the contract, and on completion were turned over to the Board, and the consideration money, $47,500, paid, but before they could be entirely fitted and removed from the place where they were built, viz, New Bedford, Mass., they were seized by the civil authorities to satisfy certain claims for labor and material on them due by the contractor. This occurred upward of a year ago, and although the Light-House Board has made various efforts to adjust the difficulty, the boats still remain in the possession of the civil officers. The amount of the claims is understood to be about $16,000, to satisfy which either one of the vessels would be amply sufficient, since a single vessel of the same class and description costs now $36,000, as per bids opened to-day.

In view of the foregoing, and also of the fact that a delay of several months must occur before other vessels could be prepared, it does not seem proper that three vessels should be detained from such an important public service when one is sufficient to satisfy the claim.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOSEPH HENRY,
Member Light-House Board.
B. U. KEYSER,
Chief Clerk.

CITY POINT, August 16, 1864—1.30 p. m.

(Received 6.30 a. m. 17th.)

Major-General SHERIDAN,

Commanding, &c., Winchester, Va. :

Fitz Lee's division is not in the Valley. We took quite a number of prisoners from it yesterday north of the James. Kershaw's division has gone to the Valley, and probably two brigades of Wilcox's division. Some cavalry has gone, but I do not know whose. I would not advise an attack on Early in an intrenched position, but would watch him closely with the cavalry, and if he attempts to move north follow him. The 100-days' men will have to be discharged at the expiration of their time unless there is a pressing necessity for detaining them for a few days on account of immediate active hostilities. The families of most of Mosby's men are known, and can be collected. I think they should be taken and kept at Fort McHenry, or some secure place, as hostages for the good conduct of Mosby and his men. Where any of Mosby's men are caught hang them without trial.

U. S. GRANT,

Lieutenant-General.

CITY POINT, August 16, 1864—3.30 p. m.

(Received 8 p. m. 18th.)

Major-General SHERIDAN,

Commanding, &c., Winchester, Va. :

If you can possibly spare a division of cavalry, send them through Loudoun County, to destroy and carry off the crops, animals, negroes, and all men under fifty years of age capable of bearing arms. In this way you will get many of Mosby's men. All male citizens under fifty can fairly be held as prisoners of war, and not as citizen prisoners. If not already soldiers, they will be made so the moment the rebel army gets hold of them.

U. S. GRANT,

Lieutenant-General.

CEDAR CREEK, VA., August 16, 1864.

Major-General HALLECK,

Chief of Staff :

Last night I moved General Emory back to Winchester, and to-day will move Generals Wright and Crook back to this point. I will take position at or near Berryville, holding Snicker's Gap. The enemy extend across the Valley from Fisher's Hill to North Mountain. Lee's cavalry and Imboden are at Front Royal. I have maintained the defensive since the receipt of General Grant's telegram, but cannot stay at this point. I have had nothing later from you than your telegram of 13th notifying me of Generals Wilson and Grover being en route via Snicker's Gap. Nothing from General Grant later than 12th. There has been some little skirmishing about possession of a hill on my skirmish line, but of not much moment. Loss about thirty or forty wounded.

P. H. SHERIDAN,

Major-General, Commanding.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 16, 1864.

(Via Harper's Ferry.)

Major-General SHERIDAN:

The discharge of the Ohio militia leaves West Virginia much exposed to raids, and there are no troops that can be sent for its defense except from your army.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 16, 1864—4.30 p. m.

(Received 7 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Just arrived from Sheridan's front at Cedar Creek, which place I left at 7 p. m. yesterday. The position of the two armies was unchanged at that hour. The enemy was shelling a portion of our picket-line to obtain possession of a position from which General Wright dislodged him the evening before. At Berryville Colonel Hammond, from Winchester, reported to me the Nineteenth Corps broke up camp at 11 p. m. yesterday, and was all in Winchester before daylight this morning. No firing was heard toward Cedar Creek at daylight. Generals Wilson and Grover are at Snicker's Gap and will both be up to Berryville to-night. The re-enforcement of the enemy as telegraphed by you is in many ways confirmed. It is not certain whether that force joined Early or is now in rear of Front Royal; indications of the latter. General Sheridan says his fighting infantry cannot exceed 20,000, exclusive of Grover's; his cavalry not over 7,500, including Wilson's. Averell at Martinsburg this morning at 2 a. m. General Stevenson assumes command of this district to-day. Will leave for Washington to-morrow noon unless to the contrary ordered by you. Guerrillas infest the country between here and Winchester. Trains require strong escorts. A little party twenty minutes ahead of my escort was attacked beyond Charlestown. The lieutenant and two men killed and six captured, one escaped.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 16, 1864—9 p. m.

(Received 9.15 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Captain Page, assistant quartermaster, left Cedar Creek at 8 o'clock this morning and just arrived here, a dense fog being over the Valley, enveloping both armies, and had not scattered when he left. The Sixth Corps and Crook's command hold the same line as yesterday and day before. The Nineteenth Corps is in Winchester. No firing this morning and no indications that the enemy had shifted his line. This information is reliable.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

ORDERS.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 16, 1864.

The Sixth Corps and the Army of Western Virginia will move at 8 o'clock to-night, the 16th instant, from their present position to Clifton, via Winchester. The movements of these troops will be under the direction of Major-General Wright, who will make all the necessary arrangements. The cavalry will move to-morrow morning in accordance with instructions already given by Brigadier-General Torbert, who will send a staff officer to remain with General Wright during the movement. The headquarters of the major-general commanding will be at Winchester until the arrival of the Sixth Corps and General Crook's command. Major-General Crook will report for detailed instructions to Major-General Wright.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 16, 1864.

Col. J. HOWARD KITCHING,
Commanding Sixth New York Heavy Artillery:

COLONEL: The major-general commanding directs that [you] report for duty, with your regiment, to Brig. Gen. M. D. Hardin, commanding division. On application, the chief quartermaster of this department will furnish the necessary transportation.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

ALEXANDRIA, August 16, 1864.
(Received 8 p. m.)

Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: The patrols report all quiet. It is reported by citizens that Mosby, with 500 men and two pieces of artillery, has gone to the Shenandoah Valley. Company H, Sixteenth New York Cavalry, has been ordered to report to their regiment as directed.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel, Provost-Marshal-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 16, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff, Twenty-second Army Corps, Dept. of Washington:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that nothing has yet been heard from the party sent toward Warrenton. I leave to-morrow morning, with every man who can be had of the Sixteenth New York Volunteer Cavalry, for the Rappahannock. I suppose that the whole force will be about 275 men. I should have moved to-day, but the failure to get horseshoes in the Sixteenth, and other delays, rendered it necessary to postpone. I had hoped, too, to have the benefit of whatever information might have been gained by the party now out. They will probably return to-night.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Volunteer Cavalry, Comdg. Brigade.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS,

August 16, 1864.

The following movements are ordered for to-night:

1. At 8 o'clock the Army of West Virginia, Brevet Major-General Crook commanding, will move, via Winchester, to Clifton.

2. The Sixth Corps will follow, taking the same route in the following order: first, the trains; second, Third Division; third, First Division. The ambulances will accompany the divisions to which they belong. The batteries in reserve will be assigned for the march by the chief of artillery and to the divisions, one to each. Brigadier-General Ricketts, commanding Third Division, will detail a strong regiment to accompany the trains as guard.

3. The pickets will be withdrawn under the direction of Colonel Penrose, corps officer of the day Sixth Corps, and the officer in charge of the pickets of General Crook's command, both of whom will report to these headquarters for special instructions at 6.30 this p. m.

4. The Second Division, Sixth Corps, Brigadier-General Getty, will act as rear guard, and follow the route above indicated when all the pickets have been withdrawn and have passed him.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. A. WHITTIER,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS,

August 16, 1864.

Brigadier-General RUSSELL,

First Division:

The commanding general wishes that care be taken to-night that nothing is done to indicate that a movement is to take place, such as striking the tents before dark or by unusual fires after dark.

Very respectfully,

C. A. WHITTIER,

Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. THIRD BRIG., FIRST DIV., SIXTH ARMY CORPS,

Heaton House, August 16, 1864.

Maj. C. A. WHITTIER,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General:

SIR: I have the honor to report that 160 or 200 of the enemy, accompanied by Mosby himself, and clothed in the uniform of U. S. troops, are now a short distance to the left and rear of Middletown. One of the party has been within the limits of our camps to-day, and the movement published for to-night was circulated among the men of my command long before the order concerning it reached these headquarters. The information relative to the presence of these parties, above referred to, comes from a source that cannot be doubted. I forward this communication for the purpose of suggesting the protection of our rear and the bringing up of all stragglers.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

O. EDWARDS,
Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
Winchester, Va., August 16, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Military Division:

GENERAL: I arrived here this morning at 5 o'clock. This place is entirely indefensible; it is a basin surrounded by heights which are commanded by other heights. Unless there is some object which does not occur to me at this time, I would suggest that the crossing of the Opequon is a better position. I am told that a small force of the enemy's cavalry has been seen in the pine woods near Kernstown and to the south of the ford. You will be glad to hear that the cavalry is so near at hand. By my calculations Grover will get no nearer than the Shenandoah to-day.

I am, very respectfully,

W. H. EMORY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Winchester, Va., August 16, 1864—11 p. m.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,
Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you hold your command in readiness to march at 4 a. m. August 17, 1864.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Winchester, August 16, 1864—11 p. m.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,
Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that the subsistence trains of this army move out from this place at 12 o'clock to-night, under the escort of Colonel Currie's brigade, of your corps. Colonel Currie will move the trains out on the Winchester and Harper's Ferry road, via Summit Point, and will park them at Summit Point; he will have entire charge of the trains, and will be held responsible for their safety.

Captain Alexander, acting assistant quartermaster, will report to Colonel Currie to pilot him through to the point designated for the parking of the trains.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS,
August 16, 1864.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. GEORGE CROOK,
Commanding Army of West Virginia:

GENERAL: In transmitting to you the order* for the march to-night I am directed by the major-general commanding to say that, in accordance with custom, the details of the march of your command are left with you.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHAS. A. WHITTIER,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

No copy has been furnished to the officer in charge of your pickets. Will you please direct him to report here as indicated in the order.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Cedar Creek, Va., August 16, 1864.

Brigadier-General TORBERT,
Chief of Cavalry, Middle Military Division:

GENERAL: In compliance with instructions of lieutenant-general commanding, you will make the necessary arrangements and give the necessary orders for the destruction of all the wheat and hay south of a line from Millwood to Winchester and Petticoat Gap. You will seize all horses, mules, and cattle that may be useful to our army. Loyal citizens can bring in their claims against the Government for this necessary destruction. No houses will be burned, and officers in charge of this delicate, but necessary, duty must inform the people that the object is to make this Valley untenable for the raiding parties of the rebel army.

Very respectfully, &c.,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 16, 1864.

General MERRITT:

I am directed by the chief of cavalry to say that General Wilson is at the Shenandoah where the Berryville and Snicker's Gap road crosses the river. If you meet or hear of his column, stop it on the Berryville and Winchester pike.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

ORDERS.] HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 16, 1864.

The command will saddle to-morrow morning at daylight and march at 5 a. m.

1. The First Brigade (General Custer) will move from its present position along the river road to the left of Leedstown Ferry, across Burden and Wolf Marshes, to the south of White Post and Millwood, and, keeping to the right of the Millwood and Berryville pike, halt and await orders near where the Buck Marsh Run crosses the Berryville and Snickersville road.

* See p. 814.

2. The Second Brigade (Colonel Devin) will move from its present position across the country by White Post, Millwood, and Stone Chapel, on Chapel Run, and halt near Berryville.

3. The Reserve Brigade (Colonel Gibbs) will move from its present position on the pike toward Winchester until within two miles west of White Post, when the main body will incline to the northeast, taking the route pursued by the cavalry in making the advance, and keeping to the south of Limestone Ridge direct its march across the country, halting near Berryville for orders. One regiment of this brigade will cross to the left bank of the Opequon Creek, moving down the creek on that bank about a mile from the river, recrossing and proceeding across the country when it arrives at a point northwest from that town, when it will rejoin the brigade.

The above instructions will be deviated from only so far as is necessary to continue the march in the general direction indicated. An intimate connection will be kept up between the columns as they advance, and frequent reports will be made by the commanding officers of the columns on the flanks to these headquarters, which will move with the Second Brigade.

Further instructions will be sent by staff officers.

By command of Brigadier-General Merritt:

A. E. DANA,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Near Winchester and Millwood Pikes, on Berryville and White Post Road, Va., August 16, 1864—9 p. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff:

Your communication of August 15, inclosing orders and dispatches from General Sheridan, was received this morning 8.30. The dispatch for General Grover was forwarded without delay by an escort of one squadron, General Grover having camped on Goose Creek last night. I shall reach Nineveh or Stony Point by 7 in the morning. I have picked up the detachments at Berryville. Have five full days' rations from this morning (will hold out seven) and about one full day's ration of forage. Sent ninety-six wagons this evening for supplies to Harper's Ferry; will reach there to-morrow night. Have 130 rounds of Spencer ammunition and 150 Sharps per man. My horses are in good condition with the exception of a very few, which need shoeing. Please request the major-general commanding to order the return of all men of my division serving with the Nineteenth and Sixth Corps and in the Department of Washington; also that my forges and transportation, which had not arrived at Washington when the division left, to be forwarded with as little delay as possible. The animals furnished in Washington are very poor and the forges indispensable. Captain Whitaker was directed to proceed to your headquarters this morning. Lieutenant Noyes carries this and will bring any orders you may have.

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

CIRCULAR.]

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,

August 16, 1864.

The attention of brigade commanders is again directed to the orders of suppression of marauding and to the illegal seizure of property. The men of the command must not be permitted as individuals to enter houses or inclosures, but when either provisions or forage are necessary the proper staff officers of brigades and regiments, with necessary details of officers and enlisted men, will seize whatever may be needed, giving receipts in accordance with the present regulations of the Quartermaster's Department. On the march men must not be permitted to leave the ranks with their arms, horses, or accouterments, except on duty.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,August 16, 1864.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,

Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: The general directs me to suggest to you to leave some wagons with picked men concealed in them somewhat in rear as a decoy for bushwhackers. He leaves the manner of doing it entirely to your own discretion, but thinks that by this way some of the bushwhackers may be deceived and captured.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. SIEBERT,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,August 16, 1864.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,

Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: The general directs that you send the inclosed dispatch to General Grover, commanding division Nineteenth Army Corps, with one good squadron on the road back toward Leesburg, with instructions to the commanding officer to return to this command as soon as dispatch is delivered. He will find the division of infantry probably between Purcellville and Leesburg. The order to return is based upon the supposition that General Grover may wish to retain cavalry, and is in accordance with instructions from General Sheridan.

Very respectfully, your very obedient servant,

L. SIEBERT,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,

DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,

Berryville, Va., August 16, 1864.

Brigadier-General TORBERT,

Chief of Cavalry, Middle Military Division:

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that I reached this place with my command at 2 o'clock this a. m. Found everything quiet. General Wilson is at Harper's Ferry with his command, having arrived this morning. I am unable to encamp at the precise place indicated by you on account of scarcity of water. No chance to obtain forage from the country for my command. I am encamped about one mile from the town on the Charlestown road. All roads are clear.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 16, 1864.

Brigadier-General DUFFIÉ,
Commanding Division:

GENERAL: In accordance with instructions just received from Major-General Sheridan, I request that all the cavalry now under your command and belonging to this division and the Second Division, Cavalry Corps, be assembled at or near Berryville and turned over to my command as soon as we shall reach Berryville, which will probably be at 2 o'clock this p. m.

I have the honor to be, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding Division.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Martinsburg, W. Va., August 16, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

COLONEL: I have the honor to request that the detachment of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry at Beverly be ordered to join the regiment at this place at once. It is impossible for the enemy to occupy West Virginia west of the Alleghany Mountains until the railroad is repaired west of Staunton. The country is perfectly destitute of supplies, and no force except small parties can operate in Randolph County. There are plenty of discharged soldiers in Barbour and Harrison Counties who can take care of all the guerrillas in that section. It is very important that the 400 men of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry, now at Beverly, should join the regiment at once. It is one of the best veteran regiments in service, but is unfortunately armed with the Union carbine, in which the men have no confidence. I desire to get the regiment together and arm them with Enfield rifles. They are the finest skirmishers and sharpshooters in service. Their separation is detrimental to their discipline and their accounts are in a very disorderly state. In its present position it is of no use; together, it would add greatly to the strength of my division.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,
WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Martinsburg, W. Va., August 16, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

COLONEL: I beg leave to call your attention to the fact that there are at Beverly, W. Va., besides the Eighth Ohio Cavalry, about 200 of the Sixth West Virginia Cavalry, who are acquainted with the country and perfectly able, with the assistance of local organizations, to disperse all marauding parties of the enemy in that section. I mention the fact to show that there is no necessity for the detachment of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry remaining at that place.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Martinsburg, August 16, 1864.

Capt. T. MELVIN,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to call your attention to paragraph 2, General Orders, No. 52, headquarters Department of West Virginia (just received at these headquarters), stating that the guns abandoned by Lieutenant Means, First West Virginia Artillery, were brought off by infantry. I beg leave to state that these guns were found abandoned by myself while my division was covering the retreat of the forces engaged. I dismounted myself and superintended the arrangements for hauling off the guns, and sent them off the field in charge of the sergeant-major First West Virginia Cavalry, who reported with them to my adjutant-general at Martinsburg on the morning of the 25th. At the time I found the guns they were abandoned and no infantry was near them. In view of these facts I have the honor to request that such correction will be made as will give to the men of my division the credit of saving those pieces.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

W. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 16, 1864.

[Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL:]

GENERAL: In pursuance of orders from this military division and Military Department of West Virginia, I have assumed command of this military district. To-day it is developed that the enemy has accumulated between this point and the front, making the vicinity of Charlestown their theater of operations, a force of about 600 or 700 mounted guerrillas; they threaten our communication and jeopardize all trains started from this point. Unless your instructions are definite from General Torbert to remain at Martinsburg, I require at least 1,000 of your command, with such artillery (say, at least, one section) as you have that can be used with the force, to immediately occupy Charlestown. Move there to-morrow morning at daylight and clean the enemy out. Report to me by the couriers whether your command can do this work. Its importance requires a prompt move.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General, U. S. Volunteers.

CUMBERLAND, MD., August 16, 1864.

(Received 4.30 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

The term of service of five regiments of Ohio National Guards expires within the next three days. These regiments constitute my entire force east of Piedmont, except small detachments of the Sixth and Eleventh Virginia Infantry. Officers and men of the 100-days' regiments are extremely anxious to be promptly sent home. General Crook informs me he has no troops to spare me to take their place. Would it be possible to send me three regiments temporarily from Washington or Baltimore? The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad is now in working order as far east as Martinsburg. Besides the protection of the railroad and public property, we have at this point 1,500 patients in hospital.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

(Copy to General Crook.)

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 24. }

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 16, 1864.

* * * * *

III. The detachment of the Sixth West Virginia Cavalry now at Beverly will be placed en route to this point without delay. The mounted portion of the detachment will march via Seneca and Greenland Gap, and the dismounted men will proceed with the baggage, &c., of the detachment to Webster, W. Va., from which point they will be transported by cars. The assistant quartermaster at Grafton will provide transportation.

* * * * *

By order of Brevet Major-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

BLOOMSBURG, PA., August 16, 1864.

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

I have notified deserters from draft of Columbia County that if they reported themselves by Saturday night, 20th instant, the charge of desertion would be remitted by me. I am here with ample force to do what troops can do, but consider the above course as eminently proper. Please notify me quickly if my action is not approved.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

(Same to Col. E. D. Townsend.)

CITY POINT, VA., August 17, 1864—9 a. m.

(Received 7 p. m. 18th.)

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN,
Near Winchester, Va.:

Our movement to the north of the James River has exercised the enemy a great deal, and from statements of prisoners he has lost very heavily; it has, too, undoubtedly prevented sending re-enforcements to the Valley. Richmond is now threatened by no mean force on the north, and Petersburg by a large force on the south. It is highly probable that the constant vigilance I shall compel the enemy to keep up will force him to recall a large portion of Early's force. Watch closely and be prepared to move at any moment. If you find Early sending off any of his troops strike suddenly and hard.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

BERRYVILLE, VA., August 17, 1864—9 p. m.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT,
Commanding Armies of the United States:

All your dispatches have been received. Kershaw's division is here, and Wickham's and Lomax's brigades, of Fitz Lee's cavalry division, also another brigade from Reams' Station. The First Cavalry Division captured 300 prisoners yesterday; most of them belonged to Kershaw's division. One division of A. P. Hill's corps is reported here, but no prisoners taken. The position that I held in front of Strasburg was a very bad one, from which I could be forced at any time precipitately. Winchester is untenable except as a provisioned garrison. I have, therefore, taken a position near Berryville, which will enable me to get in their rear if they should get strong enough to push north. Winchester is now held by the cavalry, with one brigade of infantry of the Sixth Corps to act with it. The cavalry engagement in front of Front Royal was splendid; it was on open ground; the saber was freely used by our men. Great credit is due to Generals Merritt and Custer and Colonel Devin. My impression is that troops are still arriving. Kershaw's and Fitz Lee's divisions came through Culpeper. Mosby has annoyed me and captured a few wagons. We hung one and shot six of his men yesterday. I have burned all wheat and hay, and brought off all stock, sheep, cattle, horses, &c., south of Winchester. The prisoners captured belong to Kershaw's division, and Wickham's and Lomax's brigades, of Fitz Lee's cavalry division.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

[AUGUST 17, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, see p. 19.]

HARPER'S FERRY, August 17, 1864.

(Received 3 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON:

A soldier left as nurse to wounded at Paris some weeks since came in with rebel surgeon's pass to-day for medicine and clothing to take to our men. He left Paris Monday morning 6 o'clock. He heard of no enemy except Mosby and White. They were east of the Blue Ridge. The citizens talked freely with him. He repeats the same thing before stated with regard to re-enforcements, and says a division of rebel cavalry is at Front Royal. General Sheridan's information placed Fitzhugh Lee there. An officer left three miles this side Berryville at daylight. He heard artillery firing toward Winchester. I will have a messenger from Berryville in short time.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 17, 1864.
(Received 9.45 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Just received dispatch from General Averell. I get the same news from other sources and think it correct. One of my couriers saw the prisoners at Winchester. A return escort is due here at 10 o'clock to-night. Hope then to give you further and definite information. Here is Averell's dispatch:

MARTINSBURG, August 17, 1864.

Col. N. P. CHIPMAN,
Aide-de-Camp:

Your dispatches are received and sent forward by a staff officer. One of my scouts brings the report that two brigades of our cavalry fought Hoke's division, of Longstreet's corps, and Wickham's and Lomax's cavalry near Front Royal last evening, capturing three battle-flags and 300 prisoners from the enemy. General Sheridan was at Winchester at 11 a. m. to-day. The enemy's movements seem to be upon Sheridan's left flank. I shall endeavor to ascertain before morning to what extent Early has been re-enforced.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

MUDDY BRANCH, August 17, 1864.

Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: The detachment Eighth Illinois Cavalry, 5 officers and about 130 men, have reported from Middle Department.

Respectfully,

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

---

ALEXANDRIA, VA., August 17, 1864.

Colonel TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: The patrols report all quiet to-day. We have a man who was taken prisoner by Mosby at Berryville, Va., and escaped. Mosby captured at the same time a commissary train and the guard. He took 460 mules and 20 horses. He burned the stores.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Winchester, Va., August 17, 1864—1.20 a. m.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,
Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you march at 4 a. m., with your corps, via the Berryville pike, to Berryville, taking position with your command on the ground camped on by your corps on the evening of the first day's march from Harper's Ferry.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Court-House, Berryville, Va., August 17, 1864.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,
Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: The headquarters of the major-general commanding are established at the court-house, Berryville, Va. Please send three orderlies to remain here to-night, that there may be no mistake in finding your headquarters.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HDQRS. FIRST DIVISION, NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
August 17, 1864.

Maj. D. S. WALKER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Nineteenth Army Corps:

SIR: In compliance with orders from headquarters Nineteenth Army Corps, and for the information of the brevet major-general commanding, in reference to the failure of part of this command to march at the appointed hour this morning, I have the honor to state that the orders to be in readiness to move were transmitted to Colonel Beal, commanding First Brigade, without a moment's delay on the part of these headquarters, as were also the orders to march; that the One hundred and fifty-third New York Volunteers, detailed as advance guard, moved punctually at 4 a. m.; that Colonel Beal's command was encamped distant from the town half a mile or more; that the train, in rear of which Colonel Beal was directed to march, did not move with either punctuality or regularity, owing partly to the fact that the troops of the Second Division blocked the way in town, rendering it extremely difficult for regimental teams to join the main train. The blockading of the streets, as stated, interfered with the movements of the First Maine Battery, Captain Bradbury falling in rear of Second Brigade, Second Division, supposing it to be Second Brigade, First Division. I beg to inclose statement of Colonel Beal in the matter.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILLIAM DWIGHT,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

[Inclosure.]

HDQRS. FIRST BRIG., FIRST DIV., NINETEENTH CORPS,
Berryville, Va., August 17, 1864.

Captain LEEFE,

Acting Assistant Adjutant-General, First Div., 19th Corps:

SIR: I have the honor to make the following report, in answer to your inquiry why the brigade of my command did not move at the hour appointed this morning: Orders were received to march at 4 a. m., and the troops were ready at that hour. About 3.45 orders were received to send one regiment ahead as advance guard. I detailed the One hundred and fifty-third New York, and they started at precisely 4 o'clock. Knowing that some time would elapse before the trains would be made up, I gave the men twenty minutes more to drink their coffee and fill their canteens, then started with the brigade and moved with all dispatch through the streets, which were blocked by wagons and troops of other brigades. I arrived, without very much delay, outside the town, halted a moment while the rear wagons of the train in my front moved out of park, and then proceeded on, without any delay to myself and without delaying others.

Most respectfully, your obedient servant,

GEO. L. BEAL,

Colonel Twenty-ninth Maine, Commanding First Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
Berryville, Va., August 17, 1864.

Brigadier-General GROVER, Commanding Second Division:

GENERAL: You were expected at this place this morning to join the corps; it is very desirable that you do so. The general commanding directs, therefore, that you move here at once.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. S. WALKER,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 17, 1864—11.30 a. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT:

March to Winchester as soon as your command is sufficiently rested.

Yours, &amp;c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,

Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Chief of Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY RESERVE BRIGADE,
August 17, 1864—9.50 a. m.

Capt. A. E. DANA, Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I have reached the cross-roads and find General Wilson's column going up the turnpike toward Winchester. The rear of his command is just passing. I have concluded not to send a regiment up the Opequon, as he will probably sweep that country.

Very respectfully,

ALFRED GIBBS,

Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

No report from the infantry.

A. G.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
 No. 273. } Washington, August 17, 1864.

* * * * *

40. The following assignment of signal officers is hereby made: Capt. O. H. Howard, to the command of the signal detachment, Department of West Virginia.

* * * * *

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
 No. 150. } Berryville, Va., August 17, 1864.

The regiments of Ohio National Guard (100-days' men) now serving in this department will be sent to Columbus, Ohio, to be mustered out of service as rapidly as their respective terms expire. The quartermaster's department will be directed to furnish the necessary transportation.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 17, 1864.
 Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Military Division:

SIR: I assumed command last night. Finding all trains threatened by guerrillas, and that they are in force, largely increased by a concentration of several organizations under Mosby, making the vicinity of Charlestown their theater of operations, I am of opinion that the only safety to our trains and couriers is the posting a force at Charlestown, with General Duffié at Berryville, and 1,000 of Averell's force at Charlestown, with orders by constant scouting to keep the country clear. I think we can send forward everything without loss. As matters now stand no small party or train with small guard is safe. I have written to General Averell requesting him to occupy Charlestown with 1,000 men and one section of artillery, unless his orders are peremptory from General Torbert to remain at Martinsburg. If he does so it will render all communication perfectly secure. Nothing but gross carelessness will enable the enemy to interfere. If you have use for Averell, a force should be provided for Charlestown. The quartermaster, Captain Gardner, informs me that by Saturday night he can have trains running to that point, and will therefore save twenty-four miles to our trains, avoiding the heavy hills between this post and that point. Should your purposes embrace the using of Charlestown as your advance depot I will endeavor to protect the road to that point. Your instructions in regard to this post are being carried out, and perhaps a few days will cure existing evils.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIL. DIST. OF HARPER'S FERRY,
No. 2. } Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 17, 1864.

Captain Faithful, First Maryland Potomac Home Brigade, is hereby appointed assistant provost-marshal of the Military District of Harper's Ferry, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly. Captain Faithful will take the supervision of the line from Sandy Hook to Monocacy, and see that all rules, orders, and regulations are strictly carried out and good order observed. He will make duplicate daily reports to these headquarters and to the provost-marshal, Captain Pratt.

By order of Brigadier-General Stevenson:

H. M. BURLEIGH,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Winchester, Va., August 17, 1864—9.30 a. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: Your communications concerning the change of your battery received. Your letter* inquiring as to whether you shall remain at Martinsburg has been referred to Brigadier-General Torbert, chief of cavalry, Middle Military Division.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Winchester, Va., August 17, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: You will remain at Martinsburg until further orders. In the meantime push matters to fit your command for active service. Send to me an application to have Battery L, Fifth U. S. Artillery, changed to horse artillery, and it will be done if possible. Send up a recommendation for Col. W. H. Powell, Second Virginia Cavalry. I will be at Winchester at least as long as I can stay. Third Division Cavalry, Army of the Potomac, is here, or coming in, and the First Division, Army of the Potomac, will be here to-morrow. Communicate with me directly. I am afraid to write more, under the circumstances. Send me a return of your command.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Chief of Cavalry.

---

[AUGUST 17, 1864.—For Reno to Averell, ordering latter to fall back to Charlestown, &c., see p. 502.]

---

* See Averell to Forsyth, August 15, p. 804.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
Martinsburg, W. Va., August 17, 1864.

Brig. Gen. J. D. STEVENSON,
Commanding District of Harper's Ferry:

GENERAL: By direction of General Averell I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your note of yesterday, reporting the presence of 500 or 600 guerrillas at Charlestown, and directing him to take 1,000 men, with two pieces of artillery, "to clean them out." I am instructed to say, in reply, that this command, having been almost constantly upon the march since the 1st of May, has been halted here to remount and refit. General Averell considers it unnecessary and improper to march 1,000 of his men with two pieces of artillery against 500 or 600 guerrillas. His scouts have already informed him of the presence of these predatory bands in the vicinity of Charlestown, and that General Duffié, with his division, was last evening at Berryville for the purpose of keeping that flank clear. Two hundred men have been sent from this division to communicate with General Duffié and to disperse the guerrillas in the vicinity of Charlestown. I am directed to request that you will be good enough to furnish General Averell with any information that you may obtain of the enemy and his movements.

Respectfully, your obedient servant,

WILL RUMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 17, 1864.

General AVERELL:

Mosby, White, and other bands of enemy are concentrated in vicinity of Charlestown, with view to attack trains and cut off all couriers. Yesterday evening and last night they were in Charlestown. Have you sent any portion of your command to Charlestown? We have large trains to be sent forward, but there is no safety with such guards as I can furnish, unless Charlestown is held with force sufficient to scout country and clear road of guerrillas.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

MARTINSBURG, August 17, 1864.

Brigadier-General STEVENSON:

General Duffié's division was at Berryville yesterday evening. Two hundred of my command have been sent to communicate with him and to capture, kill, or disperse the guerrillas at Charlestown. They should have arrived there before this. I have also scouts in that direction. If they do not succeed in clearing out the place I will send more. There should be a strong picket at Keyes' Ford, which would hinder the enemy. Please inform me if you hear from Charlestown before I do.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 17, 1864—7 p. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Martinsburg, Va.:

Rebels occupy Charlestown with small force this evening. Attacked party of couriers coming in about 5 o'clock, capturing two of them; heard nothing of your command. A large supply train will start from here in morning so as to reach Charlestown by 6 a. m. Have but small guard. If you could have a force at that point before the train, to join escort and move with it to Berryville, it would secure the safety of train. Mosby, with his command, is waiting to attack train and will capture it if possible. The supplies are needed at the front and should be put through by all means.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

MARTINSBURG, August 17, 1864—10 p. m.

Brigadier-General STEVENSON:

My scouts, just returned from Charlestown, report no enemy there, but Mosby between there and Berryville waiting for train. Have heard nothing from 200 men sent out this morning; cannot send any more force in that direction; from all indications shall need it here to-morrow. Scouts from Winchester report that General Sheridan's infantry passed through Winchester this morning toward Harper's Ferry. Nothing but our cavalry in Winchester at 11 a. m. to-day.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

MARTINSBURG, August 17, 1864.
(Received 8.48 p. m.)

General KELLEY:

Enemy reported re-enforced and advancing on both sides of the Blue Ridge. Our cavalry had a fight with them yesterday evening at Front Royal. Our infantry reported out of Winchester. I will keep you posted if any more news.

BRENAMAN,
Operator.

---

CUMBERLAND August 17, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON,
New Creek:

It is reported that McNeill, with a squad of his men, is in or near Mechanicsburg Gap. Send one company of the Eleventh Virginia and a detachment of cavalry—say twenty men—on a scout via Knobly road to Romney, to return via Burlington. The men will take two days' rations.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 17, 1864.

Brig. Gen. THOMAS A. ROWLEY,
Commanding Monongahela District, Pittsburg, Pa.:

GENERAL: The commanding general directs me to inform you that disturbances are apprehended on the Canadian line, and it is possible that they may extend toward Erie. You will please direct special attention to that part of your district, and if there is any sign of danger send to that point Capt. Thomas H. Bates, Battery A, First New York Artillery, and any other troops you may have at your disposal. You will also take with you such arms and ammunition as may be necessary to use in case of emergency. It may be well for you to proceed at once to Erie and quietly make yourself acquainted with the state of affairs in that region and on the opposite shore, reporting the result of your observations, &c., to these headquarters.

I, am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 18, 1864—11 p. m.
(Received 10.45 a. m. 19th.)

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT,
City Point, Va.:

In a previous telegram I informed you that I would give up my position at Cedar Creek and fall back to Berryville. The enemy were massing heavily in Luray Valley, and Cedar Creek was no place for defensive operations. I now hold, with cavalry, the line of the Opequon Creek. A heavy force of the enemy's infantry drove General Torbert out of Winchester yesterday evening about dark. He had Wilson's division of cavalry and a small brigade of infantry. I cannot tell the loss; it will be at least 250. No loss of material. All reports I get are to the effect that troops are coming into the Valley from Culpeper. There has been no advance toward Martinsburg. I destroyed all the wheat, hay, and provisions south of Winchester and Berryville, and drove off all the cattle. The enemy is very much chagrined at it. If the enemy should go north of the Potomac I will follow him up. There is no occasion for alarm. General Grover's division joined me this morning at Snicker's Gap.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 18, 1864—10.30 p. m.
(Received 3.30 a. m. 19th.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

My command is posted as follows: two brigades of cavalry at Berryville; one near crossing of the Opequon, by Berryville pike; one division at Summit Point, holding the crossing of the Opequon to Smithfield; Averell's cavalry at Martinsburg. There has been no advance toward Martinsburg. The infantry is at Clifton, and in rear of it, covering the Berryville, Smithfield, and Summit Point roads to Winchester. All the reports I have are to the effect that troops are still coming over from Orange Court-House into the Valley. General Torbert, with Wilson's division and one small brigade of infantry, was driven out of Winchester. I do not know yet what will be his loss.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 18, 1864. (Received 1.10 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,
Commanding Department of Washington:

The general commanding directs that if you have collected the Eighth Illinois Cavalry at Muddy Branch that you order it to scout well out into Loudoun County.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 18, 1864—10 p. m.
(Received 4 a. m. 19th.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,
Washington, D. C.:

Keep scouts well out in Loudoun County. I have ordered the Eighth Illinois Cavalry to rendezvous at Muddy Branch Station. The position of my troops is as follows: four brigades of cavalry in front at Berryville and well up toward Winchester at the crossing of the Opequon; one division of cavalry at Summit Point; infantry at Clifton and in rear of Clifton. I am in telegraphic communication with Averell, who is at Martinsburg. Everything is all right in that neighborhood. The line of the Potomac should be watched carefully and information be sent to me should any raiding parties attempt to cross.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 18, 1864.

Major WAITE,
Commanding Eighth Illinois Cavalry:

MAJOR: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to inform you that Company L of your regiment has been ordered to report to you, and that Colonel Gamble, commanding Camp Stoneman, has been directed to send to you every officer and enlisted man of the regiment fit for duty, including those at Camp Relief. On the arrival of this company at your camp you will (leaving your regimental property, &c., in charge of a guard of cavalry scouts and dismounted men), with your entire available force, make a thorough scout through Loudoun County, Va., in the direction of and well toward Upperville, Middleburg, and Snicker's Gap. The special object of the scout is to break up and exterminate any bands or parties of Mosby's, White's, or other guerillas which may be met. Mosby is reported to have within reach and control from 400 to 500 men and two pieces of artillery. It will be necessary for you to move with the utmost caution. The nature of the country and the disposition of the inhabitants is such that the safety of your command can only be insured by more than ordinary vigilance on the part of your patrols and guards. It is possible that you may meet from the direction of Culpeper a force superior to your own, it having been reported that a division of Confederate cavalry was moving in that vicinity. It is desirable that you carry no wheels with you, subsisting, on exhaustion of such supplies as you may be able to carry, on what the country offers. Report by telegraph your departure through the command, and return with any information of note you may acquire.

Be pleased to forward to Major Fry the inclosed communication and give him any information he may desire or require concerning the line he is to occupy.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure.]

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 18, 1864.

Major FRY,

Commanding Detachment of Cavalry:

MAJOR: The major-general commanding directs that you consult with Major Waite, commanding Eighth Illinois Cavalry, and learn from him the requirements of the line now occupied by him. During the absence of Major Waite you will, with your detachment, perform the duty now performed by him. Be pleased to report the number of your command and make from time to time such reports as are now made by him.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

ALEXANDRIA, August 18, 1864.
(Received 3.40 p. m.)

Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

Mr. William Davis, from below Occoquan, reports that he met a rebel scout, who informed him that heavy columns of cavalry, infantry, and artillery are en route for the Valley of Virginia. The advance was at Gordonsville on Monday morning. Longstreet is in command. Hill's corps, it is rumored, is to follow.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieut. Col., Provost-Marshal-General, Defenses South of Potomac.

(Copy to General Sheridan.)

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY CAMP,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 18, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Asst. Adjt. Gen., 22d Army Corps:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that all has been quiet here since last report by Colonel Lazelle. The party sent out on the 14th to the west and south of Centerville returned night before last. There is no force reported in the country visited, but there are many soldiers of the Southern army on furloughs and "horse details." The party brought in a prisoner belonging to the Second Virginia Cavalry and two horses. Two escaped prisoners, one of the First United States and the other of the First New York Dragoons, came in here day before yesterday. They report that Mosby on Sunday morning last attacked the wagon train of the First Cavalry Division and Sixth Corps, guarded by a strong force of infantry, on the other side of Snicker's Gap, capturing over 400 mules, 180 prisoners, 300 head of cattle, and burned over 100 wagons. These men state that they were present at the attack and afterward escaped from the enemy. Colonel Lazelle left here yesterday at 10 a. m. with all of the Sixteenth New York that could be got together. The party are provided with three and a half days' rations and forage.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. S. GANSEVOORT,

Colonel Thirteenth New York Volunteer Cavalry, Comdg. Camp.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Clifton, Va., August 18, 1864—2.45 p. m.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,

Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you move your command without delay via Charlestown pike, and take up a position on the left-hand side of the pike, near Mrs. Frame's, on north fork of Bullskin Run.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

GENERAL CROOK'S HEADQUARTERS,
August 18, 1864—6 p. m.

General MERRITT:

DEAR GENERAL: I did intend to come down to see you, but General Sheridan wishes me to go down to Charlestown with him. This is the second time to-day that I have been here from Summit Point. General Wilson's division, or the main body, is at Summit Point, one regiment at Middleway, one regiment at the crossing of Summit Point road and Opequon Creek, and holding down to the road from Summit Point to Berryville as far as where the road turns off to go to Rippon. Breckinridge's corps made me leave Winchester yesterday evening, but I had not the First Division by a long shot. I had about 700 infantry, and some of it was captured. I will tell you about it when I see you. Send a company to Charlestown at daylight in the morning to bring back dispatches.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,

Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Chief of Cavalry,

HDQRS. SECOND BRIGADE, FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,

August 18, 1864—3.30 p. m.

General W. MERRITT,

Commanding First Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: I this a. m. sent a squadron of Ninth New York with orders to strike the Berryville and Winchester pike near the Opequon, communicate with Colonel Lowell, and thence return to the left of my lines, sending scouts to all elevated points where a view could be obtained of the country beyond. The squadron has just returned after communicating with Colonel Lowell and carrying out the other instructions. No enemy could be seen, although views were obtained of miles of the country in front. The Second Cavalry were met establishing a line of vedettes from my right to Lowell's left. I have just made a tour of my lines and found everything quiet.

Very respectfully, yours,

THOS. C. DEVIN,

Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

COLONEL LOWELL'S HEADQUARTERS,

August 18, 1864.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,

Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: The colonel fell back about one mile. No position here for artillery. The enemy is quiet; no firing. Some cavalry and infantry. It appears as if they were reconnoitering. The picket-line of Colonel Lowell has not yet succeeded to connect with General Wilson's. The colonel gave orders for the battery to halt.

N. B.—I went ahead of the artillery.

Very respectfully,

EDW. MYERS,

Lieutenant and Aide-de-Camp.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

Summit Point, Va., August 18, 1864.

General WILSON,

Commanding Third Division:

GENERAL: The chief of cavalry directs that you make dispositions to hold the crossing of the Opequon Creek from Summit Point. The regiment now at the forks of the road at the church be sent to that point.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,

Captain and Chief of Staff.

Frequent reports must be made from this regiment.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,

August 18, 1864—9 a. m.

Captain RENO,

Chief of Staff:

CAPTAIN: A scout has just reached here from General Averell's command by way of Smithfield, from which place he was sent by Captain

McNulty, Twenty-second Pennsylvania Cavalry, with directions to report that General Averell had left Martinsburg this morning, marching to the Shepherdstown road and to within about seven miles of Smithfield, when he met a scouting party going toward Shepherdstown, and immediately turned about his command and marched in the same direction on the Shepherdstown turnpike. Lieutenant-colonel commanding Fifth New York Cavalry has posted his regiment on the Opequon, and reports that a short distance before arriving there he met about twenty rebel cavalry and drove them across the stream. Latest account from him is 5 p. m., at which time there was no apparent indication of the enemy's advancing in this direction. A squadron sent out by General Chapman has just returned, having thoroughly scouted the country between the Opequon and Martinsburg pike, and reports no evidence of the enemy except a few small scouting parties; none of the rebel forces have passed toward Martinsburg, but the commanding officer of this squadron learned of a Quaker farmer that they had been passing in force from Winchester toward Berryville. Colonel Moore, commanding Twenty-second New York Cavalry, at Smithfield, reports that this afternoon two men of the Fifth New York Cavalry, who had remained in Winchester last night came into his camp this evening, having traveled toward Martinsburg on the pike and reached him by striking across the country. They report no force of the enemy in Winchester, but that the troops which were engaged with my division yesterday afternoon had moved toward Berryville. Two officers at about 7 p. m. passed through this place looking for General Torbert's headquarters. They reported that Lowell had been attacked this p. m. and driven toward Berryville. In view of all these facts it seems quite clear that the enemy has directed his movements upon Berryville, and I have therefore directed General McIntosh to look for them in that quarter and to open communication with General Merritt. As soon as anything of importance is learned from that quarter I will communicate it.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding Division.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 18, 1864.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Brigade :

GENERAL: It is reported that Colonel Lowell, commanding brigade, has been driven across the Opequon on the left, and it is supposed that the enemy are now this side the creek. The general commanding directs that you open communication with General Merritt at Berryville to ascertain the correctness of this report, and also that you send word to Colonel Hammond informing him of the above, with directions, if possible, to find out himself. The general desires to hear from Colonel Hammond as soon as possible.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
Summit Point, August 18, 1864—10.45 a. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: According to directions of the chief of cavalry, if you have not already done so, you will without delay strengthen your picket at the stone church on the road over which we advanced this morning, to a full regiment, under a good and responsible officer, and will advance it to the crossing of the Opequon Creek. Having arrived there it will post itself in a most advantageous manner for the purpose of holding that place. The commanding officer will keep pickets out well beyond the crossing and be instructed to communicate frequently with these headquarters; he must also hold his position as long as possible.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

ADJUTANT-GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Washington, August 18, 1864.

COMMANDING GENERAL,
Harper's Ferry, Va.:

The Secretary of War directs that you take and hand over to E. L. Wentz six of the prominent citizen rebels at Harper's Ferry who guided the raiders in their late expeditions. They are to be held as hostages for six negroes taken by the rebels from the railroad force. Report receipt and execution of this order.

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 18, 1864.
(Received 3 p. m.)

General MEIGS,
Quartermaster-General:

Your telegram received. Mosby attacked the wagon train en route for the front at or near Berryville, eighteen miles from this depot, on the morning of the 13th instant. Captured and burned 50 wagons and ran off about 350 mules. The wagons were principally loaded with forage, subsistence, and regimental property of the First Cavalry Division.

Respectfully,

R. S. GARDNER,
Assistant Quartermaster.

---

MARTINSBURG, August 18, 1864.
(Received 4 a. m.)

Brig. Gen. J. D. STEVENSON:

Our forces left Winchester last night. Enemy there in strong force reported by General Torbert. Please send following dispatch to General Sheridan:

Reno reports enemy in strong force at Winchester 8 a. m. yesterday. Will send my train to Williamsport and wait till I see enemy. Please send three signal officers to Williamsport, and with directions for one to establish a station at Fairview. Let a station be established on Maryland Heights. I would suggest that a brigade of cavalry be sent to Shepherdstown, with some artillery.

Answer.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

[AUGUST 18, 1864.—For Forsyth to Averell, directing movements of Averell's command to north side of the Potomac, &c., see p. 501.]

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 18, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

Major-General Sheridan directs [me] to notify you that our cavalry at Winchester had to fall back to Summit Point, and orders that you move your command to the north side of the Potomac, if necessary, and cover the country from Sharpsburg to Williamsport. Answer.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

MARTINSBURG, August 18, 1864.

General STEVENSON:

Nothing seen or heard of the enemy in Back Creek Valley, Bunker Hill, or Gerrardstown. Please send this to General Sheridan.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

Brigadier-General DUFFIÉ,
Charlestown, W. Va.:

Please forward this to General Sheridan.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
Shepherdstown, August 18, 1864.

Brig. Gen. J. D. STEVENSON:

GENERAL: Please communicate the following to General Sheridan as promptly as possible and be good enough to send me his reply:

Received an order from Reno this morning to fall back to Charlestown. On the way received a communication from General Torbert requesting me to occupy Smithfield and Bunker Hill. When near Leetown received dispatch from General Sheridan to cross the Potomac, if necessary, and cover the river from Williamsport to Shepherdstown. My command is now near Shepherdstown, with pickets at Martinsburg, Williamson's Cross-Roads, and Kearneysville, Gerrardstown, Bunker Hill, and Leetown. I should be glad to be informed of the condition of affairs in front in order to determine my course.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Clifton, August 18, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division, Martinsburg:

GENERAL: General Torbert reports this a. m. that you are at Smithfield or Middleway. You report at 4 a. m. to-day that you will remain at Martinsburg and wait for the enemy, falling back, if necessary, to Williamsport, which is all right. Make frequent reports to the commanding officer at Harper's Ferry.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 18, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division, Martinsburg, Va.:

GENERAL: Two dispatches from you have been received to-day. All right. Follow the directions I have given heretofore. I do not consider it safe to notify you by telegraph of the position of the troops. Our cavalry is well out toward Winchester. Communicate with me by express and keep me advised of any movement of the enemy in your direction. Have you a cipher operator?

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

CUMBERLAND, August 18, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Martinsburg:

Rumors are rife of the advance of the rebel force again, largely re-enforced. Please give me your latest information.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 18, 1864.

Governor BOREMAN,
Wheeling:

It is reported that Early has been largely re-enforced and is advancing again on Martinsburg, General Sheridan's force falling back toward Harper's Ferry. The term of service of most of my force has now expired, and the officers and men are determined to go home. Some active measures must be taken to have troops sent me or West Virginia will be overrun.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

MARTINSBURG, August 18, 1864.

General KELLEY:

General Averell is going back by way of Williamsport. He is on Williamsport road. I have no news of the enemy's intentions or doings.
BRENAMAN.

CUMBERLAND, August 18, 1864—3 p. m.

Capt. T. MELVIN,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Harper's Ferry :

I learn that General Averell is falling back from Martinsburg toward Hagerstown. I most respectfully ask that he be ordered to occupy and hold Hancock if not inconsistent with General Sheridan's plans and movements.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 18, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER SIXTH WEST VIRGINIA CAVALRY,

Beverly, W. Va. :

An order was sent in mail this a. m. for you to move with your command to this place. Get ready to move at once.

By order of Brevet Major-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 18, 1864.

Col. N. WILKINSON,

Clarksburg, W. Va. :

It is reported that small squads of rebels are in Gilmer, Roane, Calhoun, and Wirt Counties. You will send out as strong a detachment as you can spare, under command of a reliable officer, with ten days' rations of hard bread, sugar, and coffee, to scout that region thoroughly. The rations will be carried on pack-horses. Advise these headquarters fully by mail if you have any such information.

By order of Brevet Major-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 207. } Baltimore, August 18, 1864.

* * * * *

2. The One hundred and thirty-first Regiment Ohio National Guard, Col. J. G. Lowe commanding, will be put en route, without delay, to report to the commanding officer at Columbus, Ohio, there to be mustered out and paid off at the expiration of their term of service in accordance with the mustering regulations of the army. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Bvt. Brig. Gen. W. W. Morris, U. S. Army, is charged with the execution of this order.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, August 18, 1864—3.20 p. m.

Major-General COUCH,
Bloomsburg, Pa. :

The Secretary of War directs me to say that your action in offering pardon to deserters is not approved, and that you were not justified in taking such action without proper authority. Send to Adjutant-General a copy of your proclamation or notice of such pardon.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

HARRISBURG, August 18, 1864.

(Received 12.50 a. m. 19th.)

ADJUTANT-GENERAL U. S. ARMY,
Washington :

By direction of Major-General Halleck I send you the following copy of a communication to the deserters from the draft in Columbia County:

Col. J. G. FREESE,
Bloomsburg, Pa. :

You are authorized by me to inform those persons in Columbia County who have not reported, as required under previous drafts, and are known as deserters, that the charge of desertion shall be remitted by me, provided they duly report themselves by, on or before 12 p. m., Saturday, the 20th instant. This does not include those charged with the crime of murder.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

General Fry probably received a letter from me to-day upon the subject.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
No. 45. } Harrisburg, Pa., August 18, 1864.

I. The Brandywine District is hereby discontinued.

II. Maj. Gen. George Cadwalader, U. S. Volunteers, will resume command of Philadelphia.

By command of Major-General Couch:

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

WASHINGTON, August 19, 1864—10 a. m.

Lieutenant-General GRANT,
City Point, Va. :

One of General Augur's scouts insists that Longstreet's corps and Fitzhugh Lee's cavalry have passed through Culpeper, on their way to join Early. The information derived from this man has heretofore proved very reliable. If this be true, the enemy is too strong for Sheridan.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

CITY POINT, VA., August 19, 1864—8 p. m.
(Received 2.50 p. m. 20th.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C.:

Fitz Lee's cavalry and Kershaw's division, of Longstreet's corps, have gone from here to the Valley. No other troops have gone, and with the present distribution of troops here the enemy is much more likely to withdraw from the Valley than to send more there. The enemy's loss here this week in killed, wounded, and captured cannot fall much short of 4,000, if it does not exceed this number. They are now so extended that they are forced to keep every man on the watch, and from accounts of prisoners are running their men to death shifting them from one place to another. Sheridan has a force about equal to the enemy, and if the latter advances will have him at an advantage.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

CHARLESTOWN, August 19, 1864—10.30 p. m.

Lieutenant-General GRANT:

All the information received to-day shows a large concentration of the enemy at Winchester. I receive constant reports of the passage of troops across to this Valley from Culpeper. I have taken the defensive until their strength is more fully developed. They have made no attempt to pass down the Valley to Martinsburg, which I hold with a small force of cavalry. If they cross the Potomac they expose their rear and I will pitch into them. I destroyed everything that was eatable south of Winchester, and they will have to haul supplies from well up toward Staunton. Our loss at Winchester will be about 200. Guerrillas give me great annoyance, but I am quietly disposing of numbers of them. The enemy appears to be uncertain as to what course to pursue. The intention so far as I can learn was to send a column direct from Culpeper to the Potomac and Early to advance at the same time from Martinsburg. This was frustrated by Early being compelled to fall back and your operations on the north side of the James. I still think that two divisions of infantry have come here and Fitz Lee's cavalry. My force will have to be weakened to supply the place of the 100-days' men serving at Harper's Ferry and in West Virginia. Grover has joined me. I now can calculate on bringing into action about 22,000 or 23,000 infantry and about 8,000 cavalry.

Respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 19, 1864—10 a. m.
(Via Harper's Ferry.)

Major-General SHERIDAN:

A scout states very positively that Longstreet's corps and Fitzhugh Lee's cavalry have passed through Culpeper to join Early. He says that Mosby told him that he had captured one of your trains of seventy or eighty wagons, with 500 mules and horses. Is that true?

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 19, 1864—5 p. m.

(Received 9.30 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Your telegram of 10 a. m. received. Fitzhugh Lee's division and a portion of Longstreet's corps crossed from Culpeper into the Valley. It is also probable that a division of A. P. Hill's came up. It is rumored that the intention was to move this force from Culpeper and Early to move from Martinsburg. This was frustrated by Early's being forced back and the troops at Culpeper came into the Valley. Mosby captured about forty wagons from one of my trains. The train was escorted by 100-days' men, under General Kenly, and when attacked by seventy of Mosby's guerrillas the 100-days' men ran. About 200 mules were captured. I did not know the extent of the capture until yesterday. It was said everything was recovered except six wagons, but this was not true.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
*Major-General.*HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 19, 1864.

(Received 2 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

The army was disposed as follows: General Merritt, at Berryville, with four brigades, picketing the country from Snicker's Ferry, via Stanley [Stone] Church, on Millwood road, to Opequon; General Wilson is at Summit Point, his left joining Merritt; Sheridan's infantry line crosses the Charlestown pike at North Fork of Bullskin Run and extends to Welch's Spring, on the Summit Point road; Averell is at Shepherdstown, with pickets at Martinsburg, Bunker Hill, Smithfield, and toward Winchester. All quiet at 8 a. m. The enemy appears to work east from Winchester. A scout from Hillsborough says he could hear of no enemy east of Blue Ridge. Line works through to Cumberland yet.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
*Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.*SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 9. } Charlestown, W. Va., August 19, 1864.

1. Major Russell, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, having reported at these headquarters for duty, in compliance with orders from headquarters Armies of the United States, is hereby assigned to duty on the staff of Brig. Gen. A. T. A. Torbert, chief of cavalry.

* * * * *

5. Maj. John Kellogg, commissary of subsistence, U. S. Army, having reported at these headquarters, in compliance with Special Orders, No. 268, from Adjutant-General's Office, War Department, August 12, 1864, is hereby announced as chief commissary of subsistence of the Middle Military Division.

* * * * *

7. Capt. A. F. Hayden, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, is hereby assigned to duty at these headquarters, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

* * * * *

9. Capt. William H. Hosack, acting commissary of subsistence Middle Military Division, is hereby relieved from duty at his own request, and will report to Bvt. Maj. Gen. George Crook, commanding Department and Army of West Virginia.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

E. B. PARSONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 19, 1864.

All able-bodied male citizens under the age of fifty who may be suspected of aiding, assisting, or belonging to guerrilla bands now infesting the country will be immediately arrested by corps and independent commanders and forwarded to these headquarters as prisoners of war, to be confined in Fort McHenry, Md. A written statement should be forwarded in every case.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 19, 1864—11.30 a. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,

Commanding Middle Military Division, Charlestown, W. Va.:

I have just received your dispatch of 10 p. m. yesterday. The Eighth Illinois Cavalry will all be at Muddy Branch to-day and start immediately on their scout, as you have directed. The river meanwhile will be watched by a provisional battalion of cavalry under Major Fry. Lazelle, with his regiment, is on the upper Rappahannock and will return by the gaps. I get the rumor from a rebel scout that Longstreet in person passed with a large number of troops through Gordonsville last Monday. You probably know by this time if the report be true. I will inform you all that I can learn of what the enemy are doing this side the mountains.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 19, 1864—10 p. m.
(Received 9 a. m. 20th.)

Major-General AUGUR,

Department of Washington:

I have the honor to inclose you a copy of a dispatch* received from General Grant in reference to the course to be pursued with the citizens of Loudoun County, Va. You will please order the commanding officer of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry to carry out the provisions of said instructions as far as lies within his power. All persons arrested you will confine as prisoners of war and at such points within your department as you may deem best, or I will authorize the transfer of them to Fort McHenry. The information which I have received confirms your dispatch that the forces sent from Richmond crossed over into the Valley from Culpeper, with the exception that General Anderson is in command instead of Longstreet. You will please forward frequent reports of the information that you may receive.

---

* See Grant to Sheridan, August 16, 3.30 p. m., p. 811.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 19, 1864.

Major WAITE,
Commanding Eighth Illinois Cavalry, Muddy Branch:

MAJOR: Since my communication to you of the 18th instant circumstances have ensued making it necessary that there be as little delay as practicable in your movements. You should be in Loudoun County as soon as possible.

Very respectfully, major, your most obedient servant,
J. H. TAYLOR,
Lieut. Col., Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

MUDDY BRANCH, August 19, 1864—6 p. m.
(Received 6.30 p. m.)

Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: Your communications of 18th and 19th both just received at once. Have just started inclosure to Major Fry, who will not be able to get my line taken up to-night. I will use utmost exertion in getting started.

Very respectfully,
JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, Commanding.

---

MUDDY BRANCH, August 19, 1864—6.30 p. m.
(Received 6.40 p. m.)

Lieutenant-Colonel TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have received no orders to relieve the detachment of cavalry with me from Camp Stoneman. They are not supplied with pistols. Shall I take them with me?

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY FORCE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 19, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Asst. Adj. Gen., 22d Army Corps:

COLONEL: I have nothing to report except that all has been quiet here since yesterday. Nothing has been heard from Colonel Lazelle and party.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. S. GANSEVOORT,

Colonel Thirteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Camp.

---

POINT LOOKOUT, August 19, 1864—9 a. m.

Maj. C. H. RAYMOND:

All quiet. I should like to have the order concerning the One hundred and thirty-ninth Ohio issued as soon as possible fixing the day of leaving. It will have a good effect on the men [to] hear that some of the regiments have already reached home. It will be favorable to re-enlistments.

J. BARNES,

Brigadier-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
August 19, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff:

Mr. Beardsley, sutler of the Twenty-ninth Maine, was captured last night with five or six soldiers at a house on the pike half a mile to our rear, and subsequently made his escape. He ascertained, I think, pretty conclusively, that Mosby's camp was on the Shenandoah, nearly abreast of the place where he was captured. A considerable party of them are also on the road to our right and rear, where they killed and captured one or two stragglers from my camp. I thought it useful to communicate this information that General Duffié, if he is in the neighborhood, may be after him.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

D. S. WALKER,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DETACHMENT 19TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 4. } Near Charlestown, Va., August 19, 1864.

I. In pursuance of verbal instructions heretofore given, one company will be detailed from each brigade of the Nineteenth Army Corps to act as pioneers. They will be equipped with an equal number of axes and spades, according to the strength of the company, and four pick-axes. They will, in addition to these, carry their arms, but will be allowed, at the discretion of the division commanders, to put their knapsacks in the wagons.

II. All detached men in this command will be required to carry their arms. The provost-marshal is directed to arrest all men who are found without arms in violation of this order.

III. All women present with this command will be at once sent to the rear, and none will be allowed to accompany the troops of this command.

By order of Brevet Major-General Emory:

DUNCAN S. WALKER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,

August 19, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel CARR,

Commanding 165th New York:

The general commanding directs that you move, after drawing rations, to Flowing Spring, four miles distant, in time to get there by daylight the 20th instant, to escort a forage train, now at Flowing Spring, to this place. It is important that your command arrive at Flowing Spring sufficiently early to start from there with the forage train at daylight.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

D. S. WALKER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. CAV., MIDDLE MILITARY DIV.,
No. 7. } Charlestown, W. Va., August 19, 1864.

1. Major Russell, assistant adjutant-general of volunteers, having reported for duty at these headquarters, in compliance with Special Orders, No. 9, headquarters Middle Military Division, dated August 19, 1864, is hereby announced as assistant adjutant-general of the command.

* * * * *

3. Lieut. Col. Henry Page is hereby announced as chief quartermaster of the cavalry, Middle Military Division, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

* * * * *

By order of Brigadier-General Torbert:

GEO. B. SANFORD,
Captain and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

Charlestown, W. Va., August 19, 1864.

General W. MERRITT,

Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: The chief of cavalry directs me to send you the following instructions and information: A train with three days' rations and two days' forage have just started. The supplies will be issued as soon as possible and the trains sent to this point with sufficient escort. Ten wagon-loads of small-arm ammunition is on the train. The teams belong to your old train. Send those you have been using, and, in fact, all trains you can dispense with, to this point. Send at once requisitions for artillery ammunition. The artillery ammunition train is here, but will be sent to Harper's Ferry in the morning. All trains sent back by you must be here before daylight to-morrow. Arrest all male citizens between the ages of sixteen and fifty years as prisoners of war, and send them to the rear. Send two regiments from Berryville up the road down which General Crook marched as far as Kabletown, returning to their camps by way of Rippon, on the Charlestown and Berryville pike. This force will arrest all citizens (male) found on their route, and will be kept well in hand. Send scouting parties to the front, and report often any information of the enemy, as the major-general commanding is exceedingly anxious. Mosby's men are in some force on the Charlestown and Berryville pike. Attacked this morning a party of 120.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

General Emory reports that the guerrillas developed a force of sixty men near Kabletown.

M. A. R.

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 19, 1864.

Hereafter brigade commanders will see that armed and organized parties are sent out for forage, and that single persons or small unauthorized squads are not allowed to go out. Several men have thus been captured this morning close to the camps.

By command of Brigadier-General Merritt:

A. E. DANA,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 19, 1864—12.30 p. m.

Colonel DI CESNOLA:

The general commanding directs that you saddle up at once and be ready to move at a moment's notice.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

G. A. GORDON,
Captain, Second Cavalry, Assistant Commissary of Musters.

CIRCULAR.] HDQRS. SECOND BRIG., FIRST CAVALRY DIV.,
August 19, 1864.

Regimental commanders will see that the within orders are complied with.

By order of Colonel Di Cesnola:

H. WHITE,
Captain and Provost-Marshal.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 19, 1864.

General WILSON,

Commanding Third Division Cavalry:

GENERAL: The chief of cavalry directs me to inform you that General Averell is at Shepherdstown with his command, picketing toward Martinsburg, Leetown, and Gerrardstown. There is no further information from General Merritt's command. He also directs that you send in your train of empty wagons if you have not done so already, and also requisitions for artillery ammunition. He also wishes a report from you as to the condition of affairs in your front. Headquarters, if not at this point, will be on the Berryville pike in the vicinity of the Nineteenth Army Corps.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

Send a pretty strong escort with your reports, fifteen men and an officer.

Abstract from field return of Third Division, Cavalry Corps, commanded by Brig. Gen. James H. Wilson, August 19, 1864.

| Troops.                    | For duty fully equipped. |       | Not fully equipped. | Aggregate present and absent. |
|----------------------------|--------------------------|-------|---------------------|-------------------------------|
|                            | Officers.                | Men.  |                     |                               |
| Division headquarters..... | 12                       | 74    | 29                  | 115                           |
| First Brigade.....         | 113                      | 1,876 | 152                 | 2,346                         |
| Second Brigade.....        | 58                       | 1,298 | 117                 | 1,639                         |
| Total.....                 | 183                      | 3,248 | 298                 | 4,100                         |
| Pennington's battery.....  | 3                        | 116   | .....               | 133                           |
| Fitzhugh's battery.....    | 3                        | 106   | .....               | 128                           |
| Total.....                 | 189                      | 3,470 | 298                 | 4,361                         |

HDQRS. FIRST BRIGADE, THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 19, 1864.

Capt. L. SIEBERT,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

The officer in charge of the detachment sent with dispatch to General Merritt has returned, with the information that when the Sixth Army Corps moved Colonel Lowell fell back, and that the enemy now hold the crest of hills this side of the creek.

I am, sir, very respectfully, &c.,

CHAS. H. MILLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS FIFTH NEW YORK CAVALRY,
August 19, 1864.Capt. C. H. MILLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: All has been quiet through the night. Yesterday afternoon an orderly from the Second Massachusetts Cavalry came to me, while I was posting my pickets across country, bringing an order from Colonel Lowell, commanding brigade, to Colonel Cole, First Maryland Cavalry, to fall back gradually, as the enemy were moving up the Berryville pike with infantry, cavalry, and artillery. This orderly said he had come three miles from Colonel Lowell; that Colonel Lowell was then four miles from Berryville toward Winchester and falling back. He said he had not crossed the Opequon Creek.

W. P. BACON,
*Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.*HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 19, 1864.Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Military Division:

GENERAL: This morning a reliable man, who has been used here heretofore, came in from Hillsborough; reports nothing in Loudoun but Mosby's and other guerrillas. I have sent him back to extend his scout down the valley, and make immediate report of any forces of the enemy he may hear of. I have also placed a cavalry force of Cole's (Maryland) regiment at Keyes' Ford, with orders to scout Loudoun Valley. I shall promptly advise you of any information. I am much annoyed about couriers and escorts for trains. The small force detailed here for courier duty is composed of details from Duffié's command. When they are sent to the front on courier duty they are seized by their regimental commanders, and not permitted to return. If this is continued I shall have no couriers. For trains I can furnish no escorts unless I use General Kenly's brigade. He claims to be an independent command, to receive orders alone from your headquarters. The remaining infantry force is on post duty. A small escort of cavalry is all that is required for trains. Having no cavalry I cannot furnish them. The track will be completed, I am advised by Captain Gardner, assistant quartermaster, to-morrow. A considerable number of stragglers are coming in from your command. I have ordered them all to be arrested, and hold them subject to your orders.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JOHN D. STEVENSON,
*Brigadier-General, Commanding.*HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 19, 1864.Brigadier-General STEVENSON,
Commanding District of Harper's Ferry:

GENERAL: Your communication of this date received. I am instructed by the general commanding to inform you that a cavalry force will be immediately ordered to report to you for courier and other duty. General Kenly's brigade whilst at Harper's Ferry is under your command and he will be directed to report to you for duty. The general desires that you continue to arrest all stragglers that may make their way into Harper's Ferry, and as opportunity offers forward them to their respective commands or to these headquarters.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
In the Field, August 19, 1864—10 p. m.

Brig. Gen. J. D. STEVENSON,
Commanding District of Harper's Ferry :

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you order the Twentieth Regiment Pennsylvania Cavalry, now at the dismounted camp, Pleasant Valley, Md., to Halltown, to garrison that place and protect the depot established at that point.

I am, general, very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Shepherdstown, W. Va., August 19, 1864.

Brig. Gen. J. D. STEVENSON,
Harper's Ferry :

GENERAL: The enemy's cavalry, about 1,000 strong, drove my pickets from Martinsburg to Hainesville at 5 p. m. to-day.

Very respectfully,

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

P. S.—Please communicate the above to Major-General Sheridan.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
In the Field, August 19, 1864.

Brig. Gen. MAX WEBER, U. S. Volunteers:
(Through Brig. Gen. J. D. Stevenson,
Commanding District of Harper's Ferry.)

GENERAL: I am directed by the commanding general to inform you that General Orders, No. 66, current series, from these headquarters, assigning General Stevenson to the command of the Military District of Harper's Ferry, did not relieve you from duty in the district, and it was expected that you would be assigned to a command by General Stevenson.

I am, general, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Charlestown, Va., August 19, 1864.

Capt. GEORGE B. SANFORD,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General,
Hdqrs. Chief of Cavalry, Middle Military Division :

SIR: I have the honor to state that an ambulance, with some wounded in it, was captured by guerrillas near Halltown about an hour or two since. The ambulance was without guard, and was passing to Harper's Ferry, having arrived just at the head of a wagon train, with a guard of five men coming in this direction. The five men failed to do anything on the pretense of being too weak. It is impossible for me to take the responsibility for the safety of Halltown and vicinity with the small force of cavalry which I have. I would call your attention to the fact that my reports show only 1,000 men for duty. I have 150 men constantly on picket; about 100 guarding trains at the present time, and about 150 men on scout and patrol duty. Add to this the necessary details for camp duty, and more than half my command is constantly on duty. It is impossible for me, under these circumstances, to insure safety from guerrillas at Halltown.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General.

P. S.—I have just received information that the men, six in number, have been retaken by my troops, but the rebels made off with the ambulance and horses.

I am, sir, very respectfully, &c.,

A. N. D.,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, August 19, 1864—8 a. m.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL, Commanding Cavalry Division :

GENERAL: Your dispatch of 12 p. m. received. General Merritt is at Berryville, with four brigades of cavalry, picketing from Snicker's Ferry, via Stone Church, on Millwood pike, round to the Opequon. General Wilson is at Summit Point, picketing the Opequon country, his left connecting with Merritt. General Wilson has scouting parties on the east bank of the creek, scouting the country between Martinsburg pike and the creek; General Merritt also has scouting parties on the east bank of the creek, on the Berryville and Winchester pike. Latest report last night was that the enemy were moving toward Berryville. Our infantry line crosses the Charlestown pike at North Fork of Bullskin Run, and extends to Welch's Spring, on the Summit Point road. Did you receive dispatch of 1 p. m. yesterday?

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, August 19, 1864—5 p. m.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL, Commanding Cavalry Division :

GENERAL: I want you to look out sharply for a movement of the enemy toward Martinsburg. All the reports from my front indicate a movement in that direction. I want information of any such movement without delay. If they cross the Potomac I don't want them to get back; keep me posted. If you can send me four or five reliable scouts I will be very much obliged. I will pay them well.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 19, 1864.

General W. W. AVERELL,
Commanding Second Division:

The chief of cavalry directs that upon the receipt of this dispatch you start all the men belonging to General Duffié's division to this point; also, that you send as soon as possible a return of your command.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

[AUGUST 19, 1864.—For Averell to Forsyth, relative to serving under orders of General Torbert, &c., see p. 502.]

[AUGUST 19, 1864.—For Forsyth to Averell, authorizing employment of citizens to obtain information, &c., see p. 502.]

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 19, 1864—9.30 p. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Division Cavalry:

GENERAL: An officer of the First New York Cavalry and thirty men have just come in to my headquarters, with orders to go to Millwood, Berryville, and Winchester, and at Winchester meet a party out from the north. As I have a division (First) covering the country from Snicker's Ferry out toward Millwood and White Post, the crossing of Opequon Creek by Berryville and Winchester pike and up to the second crossing of the creek, headquarters of this division at Berryville (General Merritt), and another division (Third) connecting with the First on the left and extending to the right as far as Middleway, holding out to the front, main force and headquarters at Summit Point (General Wilson), I do not think it necessary for him to go any farther on his ordered route. He will return with one of your aides, a major, who came in to-day. From all the information we could get to-day, the enemy was moving a large body of cavalry on the pike toward Martinsburg. I wish you would ascertain if this is true, if possible. Keep strong parties as low down the Martinsburg and Winchester pike as it is safe to do. I started parties for Bunker Hill to-day, but have not heard from [them] yet.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Chief of Cavalry.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Shepherdstown, Va., August 19, 1864.

Major WITCHER,
Third West Virginia Cavalry:

MAJOR: The general desires that you move with your regiment on the north side of the Potomac at Williamsport. You will find Captain McVicker, and direct him to picket the road to Martinsburg south of the river. You will send picket to Dam No. 5 and McCoy's Ferry. You will send patrols in the direction of Martinsburg and Hedgesville, and will make preparations to defend the line of the river as long as possible. Communicate frequently with these headquarters.

Respectfully,

WILL RUMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
In the Field, August 19, 1864.

Brig. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland, Md.:

The 100-days' men ordered to be sent to Columbus, Ohio, as soon as their term of service expires, will be replaced by other troops as soon as the present exigencies will permit.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook.

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 19, 1864.

Lieutenant GOULD,
Comdg. Detach. of Sixth West Virginia Cav., North Branch:

You will send a scout of forty men and one officer, via Burlington and Mechanicsburg Gap, to Romney, returning via Springfield, Frankfort, and Patterson's Creek. A report of this scout will be required, and information is desired as to why no report was made of the last scouting party ordered from these headquarters.

By order of Brevet Major-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 19, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON,
New Creek:

I am not well enough to visit you yet. This I regret very much. I received an order last night from the assistant adjutant-general directing me to hold the 100-days' regiments till he could communicate with the commanding general in the front. You will therefore hold your command ready to move, but will await the order.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE DEPARTMENT,
Baltimore, Md., August 19, 1864.

Lient. Col. JAMES W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

COLONEL: I have the honor to submit for your information a brief statement of the condition of the troops serving in this department:

The First Separate Brigade, commanded by Brig. Gen. E. B. Tyler, with headquarters at the Relay House, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, is composed of four regiments of infantry, for duty about 1,800 men; First Delaware Cavalry, for duty about 190 men; one battery of artillery, for duty about 120 men. The main body of the above command is concentrated in the vicinity of the Monocacy Junction, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. A small garrison from the above is stationed at Fort Dix. General Tyler is at the Monocacy in command.

The Second Separate Brigade, commanded by Bvt. Brig. Gen. W. W. Morris, U. S. Army, includes the four forts, viz, McHenry, Marshall, Federal Hill, Carroll. The entire garrison of the four forts is, one regiment of infantry, about 800 men; two companies Second U. S. Artillery (dismounted), about 75 men. A small regiment of veteran volunteer infantry is daily expected to arrive from New York for duty in the above-mentioned forts.

The Third Separate Brigade, commanded by Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood, is composed and distributed as follows: Detachment of Veteran Reserve Corps, Second Battalion, in defenses of Baltimore and Fort Worthington, about 260 men; one regiment of infantry—four companies at Wilmington and vicinity, six companies on line Philadelphia, Wilmington, and Baltimore Railroad and Havre de Grace, guarding the bridges and depots—about 800 men (one company of this regiment is being mounted); one regiment of infantry on duty as guards on Northern Central Railroad as far as Westminster and guards to depots and hospitals, &c., in this city, about 700 men; one regiment of infantry, at present on duty guarding squads of prisoners from Point Lookout to Elmira, N. Y., and conveying squads of men to the Army of the Potomac, about 750 men; one company of cavalry on duty at Salisbury, Md., protecting telegraph to Fortress Monroe, about 90 men; detachment Second Battalion, Veteran Reserve Corps, at hospitals at Wilmington, Del., Baltimore, and Annapolis.

I send you the above statement to show you that the utmost I can do to strengthen General E. B. Tyler, commanding First Separate Brigade, who will be the most available to render you aid if needed, will be but little.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEW. WALLACE,
Major-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 208. } Baltimore, August 19, 1864.

* * * * *

6. The detachment of the One hundred and forty-fourth Regiment Ohio National Guard, Maj. M. D. L. Buell commanding, attached to the Third Separate Brigade, Eighth Army Corps, will be put en route, without delay, to report to the commanding officer at Columbus, Ohio, there to be mustered out and paid off at the expiration of their term of service, in accordance with the mustering regulations of the army. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

7. The detachment of the One hundred and forty-ninth Regiment Ohio National Guard, Lieutenant-Colonel West commanding, now attached to the Third Separate Brigade, Eighth Army Corps, will be put en route, without delay, to report to the commanding officer at Camp Dennison, Ohio, there to be mustered out and paid off at the expiration of their term of service, in accordance with the mustering regulations of the army. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation. Brig. Gen. H. H. Lockwood is charged with the execution of this order.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 19, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL U. S. ARMY,
Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to state that General Halleck, by telegram of yesterday, directed me to forward you the inclosed copy* which was forwarded you last night by telegraph. Although my action has been disapproved by the Secretary of War, I cannot but think that had he known all of the circumstances connected with the matter, that a course similar to that misadopted by me was due to these misguided men, and would have been approved by him. They are not guilty in comparison to the leaders living in that section, who have taught them that the draft was unconstitutional, and that in resisting it they were acting in accordance with the Constitution. On leaving Bloomsburg I particularly felicitated myself that what had threatened to be a grave difficulty had terminated without bloodshed, and to the honor and dignity of the General Government.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 19, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL U. S. ARMY,
Washington, D. C.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inform you that, nothing preventing, my headquarters will be re-established in Chambersburg on the 22d instant.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

---

* See Couch to Adjutant-General, August 18, p. 840.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 191. }

HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 19, 1864.

* * * * *

6. Capt. E. M. Warren, commanding mounted company 100-days' Pennsylvania volunteers, will march his company from Camp Curtin at 6 a. m. 20th instant, and proceed, via Newville, Newburg, Roxbury, Strasburg, Fannettsburg, and Burnt Cabins, to Bloody Run, where he will make his headquarters and carry out his instructions furnished by the commanding general. The men will be supplied with three days' rations in haversacks and two days' rations and forage for three days in wagons. The command will be supplied with sixty rounds of ammunition each man.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Couch:

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT,
August 20, 1864—5 p. m.

Lieutenant-General GRANT:

There is in Loudoun County a considerable settlement of Quakers favorable to the Union, but never disturbed or conscripted by the rebels. No doubt they would be very willing to have their produce and animals impressed, but ought they not to be personally excepted from the late order to General Sheridan?

C. A. DANA.

---

CITY POINT, August 20, 1864—9 p. m.
(Received 5 p. m. 21st.)

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Charlestown, Va.:

As stated in previous dispatches, no division or brigade has gone from Lee's army to the Valley except Kershaw's and Fitzhugh Lee's. We have had prisoners and deserters fixing every single brigade within the last three days. Warren's corps is now intrenched across the Weldon road. I shall endeavor to stay there and employ the enemy so actively that he cannot detach further. It is probable that a few regiments may have been detached from different divisions and sent against you, but I have no evidence of it.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

CHARLESTOWN, August 20, 1864—10 p. m.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT,
City Point, Va.:

I have nothing important to communicate. The enemy have not gone down the Valley farther than Bunker Hill, and that far only with cavalry. I left everything in that direction for them, but they have not accepted the invitation as yet. I will probably to-morrow learn something of their strength and intentions. Averell this morning moved from Shepherdstown on a stampeding report, and without orders. I don't yet know where he went, but by his movement gives unnecessary alarm. I hope to be able to manage this affair. The enemy do not know exactly what to do, and appear to be in doubt. Can you be certain of what has come here? Taking all the reports which reach me, they are very unsatisfactory.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 20, 1864—10 p. m.
(Received 3 a. m. 21st.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

I have nothing new to report to-night in reference to the intentions of the enemy. General Averell, who was at Martinsburg, moved to Shepherdstown and uncovered the Williamsport crossing. This was satisfactory to me. This morning he reported a brigade of Fitz Lee's cavalry at Martinsburg, but this was an error. There is no enemy north of Bunker Hill. To-day, for some unknown reason and without necessity, he moved from Shepherdstown somewhere without informing me—perhaps to Hagerstown—giving unnecessary alarm by his movement.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 20, 1864—10 p. m.
(Received 3 a. m. 21st.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

General Averell is the senior to General Torbert, my chief of cavalry. This causes a difficulty which can but be overcome by conferring the rank of brevet on Torbert. Will you have the kindness to do so?

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 20, 1864. (Received 3.30 a. m. 21st.)

Maj. T. T. ECKERT:

The following dispatch* was sent to General Halleck in cipher from Cedar Creek to Harper's Ferry. Was it received by you and delivered? The party that carried it is supposed to have been captured by guerrillas.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

(Answered that it was not received.)

* See Sheridan to Halleck, August 16, p. 811.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 20, 1864—5 a. m.

(Received 8 a. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

I have just received the following dispatch from General Averell. All quiet in Sheridan's front at this hour. General Averell's dispatch is dated 2 a. m. to-day and is as follows:

I have just received the following information: At 5 p. m. 19th Gilmor, with forty or fifty men, entered Martinsburg, one brigade of Fitz Lee's cavalry, with two regiments of infantry, being at Big Spring, on the Winchester pike. The remainder of Fitz Lee's command was at Bunker Hill. He has two or three batteries. They say that Early was to pass through Snicker's Gap and join the main body of Lee's army, which was to cross the Potomac at Edwards' Ferry. Fitz Lee's cavalry was to cross at Shepherdstown and look after Averell.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 20, 1864—2.24 p. m.

Colonel CHIPMAN,
Harper's Ferry:

Please report what force is at Harper's Ferry, who is in command, and what is the condition of the troops and defenses.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 20, 1864—8 p. m.

Colonel CHIPMAN,
Harper's Ferry:

Your telegram to-day does not say where Averell is, and omits the place his dispatch is dated from. Accuracy requires this always to be stated. Is the river picketed to Monocacy, and have you any communication with Edwards' Ferry? How far below Harper's Ferry on the river have you means of information?

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 20, 1864—8 p. m.
 (Received 9.40 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

General Stevenson commands at Harper's Ferry. He sent detachment of Loudoun Rangers on scout into Loudoun County this morning. From report just made by Lieutenant-Colonel Cook I glean the following: Detachment crossed Potomac at Mock's Ford; went near Leesburg; heard no enemy; changed direction; crossed mountain at Gray's Gap; went to Waterford; encountered Mosby with twelve of his guerrillas; routed them, captured four. Mosby narrowly escaped by abandoning horse and taking to mountain. A detachment will be sent back with instructions to go as far as Aldie. General Averell's dispatch sent to-day was dated Shepherdstown, where he was when last heard from. General Stevenson pickets to the mouth of the Monocacy. He has a company at Noland's Ferry and one at Point of Rocks. Position of General Sheridan's lines about as last stated. Nothing since 2 a. m. from General Averell. General Stevenson does not extend his pickets above Harper's Ferry more than a mile. Will send statement of forces here in half an hour.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 20, 1864—10 p. m.
(Received 11.30 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Aggregate force reporting to General Stevenson, commanding Harper's Ferry, is 12,394. Of these 3,059 are armed and equipped as infantry and good fighting men; 2,056 are 100-days' men, ordered home, time expired; 1,416 stragglers and convalescents badly armed, disorganized and of little use; 1,900 dismounted cavalry partially armed. Add to this heavy artillery 480 men, 30 guns; 983 light artillery, 49 guns. This includes all outposts, Frederick, mouth of Monocacy, and between there and here and Halltown. The force is thought ample to hold Maryland Heights proper and Fort Duncan on the point of land about 3,000 yards west of Stone Battery, and the 100-pounder Parrott on the heights, and perfectly commanded by them. The guns of Fort Duncan and Maryland Heights command the town of Harper's Ferry, Bolivar Heights, and would make between heights untenable. It is a mistake, therefore, to suppose Harper's Ferry abandoned by retiring to the heights; it is the only way really to hold it. Will send by mail to-morrow morning diagram with detailed report of defenses, strength, and position of batteries, &c. The force here is not well organized except the artillery, but is rapidly being put in fighting condition.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 20, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Division, Charlestown, Va.:

Major Waite, Eighth Illinois Cavalry, left Muddy Branch at 12 m. to-day, on his scout toward the gaps. He has about 650 men. I directed him to carry out the orders of General Grant, which you sent me, as far as he could, but not to let it interfere with his scouting. I have no report yet from Lazelle.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, August 20, 1864.

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,
Commanding Department of Washington:

I have 100 men who will take the contract to clean out Mosby's gang. I want 100 Spencer rifles for them. Send them to me if they can be found in Washington. There is no news here. The enemy are about Winchester; they have not gone toward the Potomac, although I left the road open.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
August 21, 1864.

Approved.
By order of the Secretary of War:

C. A. DANA,
Assistant Secretary of War.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 20, 1864.

General AUGUR:

The chief of ordnance has been directed to issue Spencer rifles to detachments from regiments already armed with them. A Massachusetts regiment of 100-days' men should be sent to-morrow to Fort Delaware to relieve an Ohio regiment there. Notify commanding officer at Fort Delaware when it starts, and also General Wallace, to prevent straggling at Baltimore.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

FORT MONROE, August 20, 1864—10 p. m.
(Received 6.30 a. m. 21st.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

GENERAL: Arrived at 9.20 p. m. in steamer Arago, with the One hundred and third New York Volunteers, from Port Royal, S. C. Report hereby to you as directed. Will await, as ordered, two hours for orders from you, and, none arriving, after that time will proceed to Alexandria, Va., as ordered by General Foster.

W. HEINE,
Colonel 103d New York Volunteers.

[First indorsement.]

AUGUST 21, 1864.

These troops were ordered for duty in Department of Washington. General Augur will have orders sent to Alexandria for their disposition, landing them there or at Washington, as he may deem best.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

[Second indorsement.]

Colonel Wells telegraphed to order Colonel Heine to disembark at Alexandria and await orders from De Russy. De Russy telegraphed to send orders to meet the regiment. Dispatch assigning Heine's regiment to De Russy's division forwarded by messenger to Alexandria.

J. H. T.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 205. }

HDQRS. DEPT. OF WASHINGTON,
TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS,
August 20, 1864.

* * * * *

10. The Sixth Regiment Massachusetts Volunteers is hereby relieved from duty in this department and will proceed without delay to Fort Delaware, Del., and be reported to the commanding officer of that post for duty. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Major-General Augur:

C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 20, 1864.

Col. WILLIAM GAMBLE,

Eighth Illinois Cavalry, Commanding Camp Stoneman:

COLONEL: The major-general commanding directs that the necessary order [be issued] for the movement of the Twenty-fifth New York Cavalry, and such detachments of regiments belonging to the First and Third Divisions, Cavalry Corps, and Reserve Brigade, as are now at Camp Stoneman equipped and prepared to take the field. Major McPherson, Twenty-fifth New York Cavalry, will command the column, and be instructed to report to Major-General Sheridan, commanding Middle Military Division, marching via Harper's Ferry. He should move with three days' rations for man and horse, with the usual allowance of ammunition, and be instructed to escort the train of the Third Division, Cavalry Corps, en route and parked near this city, to the headquarters of that division. Be pleased to report when the troops march and the effective strength of the command.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 20, 1864.

Major WAITE,

Eighth Illinois Cavalry, Commanding at Muddy Branch:

MAJOR: I am directed by the major-general commanding to inclose herewith instructions emanating from headquarters of the army, forwarded by Major-General Sheridan, commanding military division.* He directs that these instructions during your scout be carried out to this extent and in this wise: On your return you will impress, load with forage, and bring to your camp as many wagons as your command is competent to protect; you will also arrest all male "rebel sympathizers" between the ages of eighteen and fifty who come within your reach and forward them to these headquarters under guard, with lists specifying name, place of residence, and character. You will also specify names of persons from whom wagons and forage are taken. This is not to interfere with the requirements of your scout, but to be accomplished on your return.

Your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

YOUNG'S ISLAND, August 20, 1864.

(Received 3 p. m.)

Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff:

I shall cross at this point at 12.30 p. m. with about 650 men, with three days' rations.

JOHN M. WAITE,
Major, &c., Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 20, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report my return this evening from a scout toward the Rappahannock with 280 men of the Sixteenth New York Cavalry. We passed within eight miles of that river, and had it been necessary, should have gone to it. We were informed by general report that no attempts are making by the rebels to use the railroad or any part of it above Culpeper Court-House, and no repairs of it are making above that point. There are at Warrenton about 2,000 infantry and about 500 cavalry, and a large force, 10,000 men (cavalry and infantry), at Culpeper, moving up toward Warrenton. The rebels are using the roads between Warrenton and Chester Gap and Manassas Gap, and passing trains, troops, and supplies over them constantly. One hundred of Kincheloe's band have been sent to do duty in the west of Stafford and east of Culpeper Counties. This leaves about twenty of his party in the vicinity below the Orange and Alexandria Railroad. Straggling guerrillas were seen, a few picked up, and one belonging to the Fifteenth Virginia Regiment brought in with seven captured horses. We returned by way of Brentsville and Manassas. Beyond the above I have nothing to report.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

* See Grant to Sheridan, August 16, 3.30 p. m., p. 811.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 20, 1864.

Major-General EMORY,

Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: I have ordered General Crook to come back to a point in rear of you. The cavalry will remain as heretofore at Berryville, and on crossing of Opequon. There is no movement of the enemy's infantry; they appear to be circulating about Winchester. It is reported that Fitzhugh Lee's cavalry is at Bunker Hill, with advance parties as far as Martinsburg. Should any cavalry movement take place you will at once be notified of it.

Very respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HDQRS. DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,
Near Charlestown, W. Va., August 20, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH, Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter directing that all detachments of cavalry in my command in excess of that authorized from these headquarters be ordered to report to Brigadier-General Torbert, chief of cavalry. I have received no order designating the number authorized from your headquarters, and respectfully request that I may be informed of the number. The only order that I am cognizant of on this subject is an order from the headquarters of General Wright (then commanding U. S. forces) making the following allowance: To each brigade headquarters as orderlies, three privates; to each division headquarters as orderlies, one non-commissioned officer and five privates; to each corps headquarters as orderlies, one non-commissioned officer and ten privates; to each corps headquarters as escort and provost guard, one officer, four non-commissioned officers, and forty-six men. This distribution has been made as far as possible, there being but one officer and twenty-five men for duty as escort and provost guard. I respectfully state that at least that number is necessary for provost duty alone. The company of cavalry detailed by General Torbert to relieve the detachments reporting to me was but forty strong, not enough to relieve the orderlies of the corps. All were relieved, however, that could be spared, leaving but twenty-five men for escort and provost duty. Under the allowance above stated I am deficient twenty men.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

W. H. EMORY,
Brevet Major-General, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 24, 1864.

Respectfully returned.

The escort at corps headquarters, to consist of one squadron, is all the cavalry that is allowed to an infantry corps. All other orderlies, couriers, &c., must be infantry mounted by the quartermaster's department.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

A. F. HAYDEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

In the Field, August 20, 1864—1 p. m.

Brevet Major-General CROOK,

Commanding Army of West Virginia:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you at once move your command back toward Charlestown, via the Berryville and Charlestown pike. As soon as you have given the necessary orders of march for your command, you will ride in advance, so as to reach these headquarters before the head of your column can reach General Emory's position. You will receive instruction on your arrival here as to the position to be taken up by your troops.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

August 20, 1864.

General MERRITT,

Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inclose you copy of order* from General Sheridan's headquarters in reference to house-burning, &c. General Torbert wishes that you would return to General Crook the ambulances belonging to him that you have been using, if you have received your own. General Wilson reports that a party of General Averell's, which started from his headquarters to return to General Averell, were driven back between Middleway and Bunker Hill, and that the enemy were in the latter place in some force.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,

Captain and Chief of Staff.

Gun ammunition goes with this escort. Return the wagons as soon as possible.

SUMMIT POINT, August 20, 1864—12 m.

MY DEAR MERRITT: Everything quiet in this direction. Rebels picketing along the Opequon. Averell's two squadrons were driven out of Martinsburg yesterday (report) by Fitzhugh Lee's division and two regiments of infantry. Reno writes: "They (we) anticipate a movement of rebels in force through Snicker's Gap to join Lee's entire army for an invasion by Edwards' Ferry," which I don't believe. What's going on?

Very truly, yours,

J. H. W[ILSON].

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,

August 20, 1864.

Colonel DI CESNOLA,

Commanding Brigade:

I wish you would send frequently reconnaissances to your front and right front to learn anything of importance with reference to the movements of the enemy. The major-general commanding the army is anxious for information. You will also send out and arrest all male citizens between the ages of sixteen and fifty years in the neighborhood of your camp and lines, and send them to the provost-marshal at these headquarters. It would be well to send well off to your left flank to stir up and kill as many of the bushwhackers as possible who are between you and the river. Give strict orders that no men go more than half a mile from camp, save in organized parties, under officers. The guerrillas have murdered ten or twelve of our men in this neighborhood already.

* See Sheridan to Torbert, August 16, p. 43.

Very respectfully,

W. MERRITT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 20, 1864.

Colonel DI CESNOLA,

Commanding Second Brigade, First Cavalry Division :

COLONEL: I should much rather [that] you remain in command of the brigade until the return of Colonel Devin. I do not know the nature of the order directing your muster-out. If it is not positive, I would recommend you to remain with the brigade for the present.

Very respectfully,

W. MERRITT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding.

Have you heard anything from the reconnaissance toward the Front Royal pike? Report as soon as it returns.

Respectfully,

W. MERRITT.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND BRIGADE,
August 20, 1864—6.43 p. m.

Capt. A. E. DANA,

Assistant Adjutant-General :

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that both parties sent on to reconnoiter, one to Millwood and the other toward Front Royal pike, reported all quiet toward Front Royal. It seems there has not been any movement or passage of troops in that direction since yesterday. At Millwood the reconnoitering party received instructions from me to surround the town and try to capture Mosby's men, who were reported yet to be in those vicinities, but the officer in charge found no armed men there except the five citizens that I sent to the division provost-marshal. I just received information that our pickets were fired into ten minutes ago in the direction of Front Royal, on the right of the stone chapel. I have a regiment standing to horse to meet any emergency if it is the case, but I suppose it is nothing else but some guerrillas who followed the reconnoitering party.

I have the honor to be, your obedient servant,

DI CESNOLA,
Colonel, Commanding Second Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST NEW YORK DRAGOONS,
August 20, 1864.

Capt. WILLIAM H. H. EMMONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Cavalry Reserve Brigade:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to report that, in accordance with instructions from division headquarters, I proceeded to-day with the First New York Dragoons and Second U. S. Cavalry to Mr. Ware's house, on the Snicker's Ferry pike; there turned to the left and advanced to Myersville and Kabletown, where I halted and sent a scouting party of ten men on to the river, where they encountered a party of twelve of Mosby's men, who fired at my men, then ran, crossing the river and dispersing in the hills beyond. I learned from the citizens that Mosby with his men was camped at this point on the river night before last, and that he was through Kabletown yesterday with a small party. I did not cross the river, as my horses were very tired, and there seemed to be no opportunity of bringing the enemy to bay with his numberless mountain roads by which to escape. I would respectfully suggest that if a sufficient force were sent across the river above Kabletown and another at Snicker's Ferry, with orders to cover the roads between the mountains and the river, the former force to move up the river and the latter down, the chances would be much better for capturing his party. I would also report that, in obedience to orders, I arrested the able-bodied citizens found on the route, whom I send you, five in number. In returning through Rippon I struck the rear of our infantry column moving in the direction of Charlestown. Also met Major Starr with the Sixth Pennsylvania about two miles out of this place, establishing a picket-line to cover the Charlestown pike, endeavoring to make connection with the infantry pickets as ordered, which he had not succeeded at that time in doing.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HOWARD M. SMITH,
Major, Commanding First New York Dragoons.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Summit Point, August 20, 1864—9.20 a. m.

Capt. M. A. RENO,
Chief of Staff, Cavalry Forces:

CAPTAIN: Your dispatch in regard to the enemy's intentions, as revealed through General Averell, is just received. I sent you a report from Colonel Moore this morning, indicating movements in the direction of Martinsburg. Have taken measures to ascertain the truth of the reports, and will report. My empty wagons left here last night at 8 p. m. The enemy seems to be picketing the entire line of the Opequon. I have directed a regiment to make a reconnaissance for the purpose of ascertaining the size, position, and movements of all hostile parties on that stream.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HQRS. FIRST BRIGADE, THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 20, 1864.

Brigadier-General WILSON,
Commanding Third Division, Cavalry Corps:

GENERAL: I had already sent to Harkins to send out a patrol and see if Merritt's brigades were on the Berryville and Winchester pike. The patrol reports quite a wagon train passing on the Berryville and Charlestown pike guarded by infantry. The scouts have been sent out toward the Martinsburg pike with directions to go to Martinsburg if possible.

Respectfully,

J. B. McINTOSH,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 20, 1864.

Brigadier-General CHAPMAN,
Commanding Second Brigade:

Please take measures at once to ascertain the truth of the report sent in by Colonel Moore, sending out proper scouting parties toward the Martinsburg and Winchester pikes. If they cannot cross the Opequon directly, let them work in by Middleway or to the north of it. I want the whole line of the creek examined, the size, position, and movements of all rebel pickets reported. One good regiment should be sent. You must ascertain whether or not the enemy is using the Martinsburg pike, and by what forces.

Very respectfully,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 20, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN:

GENERAL: I send you copy of report* of scout made by Loudoun County Rangers as far as Leesburg. By it it would seem that there is no movement of enemy in direction of Leesburg. I have ordered another scout for to-morrow as far as Aldie; shall promptly report result. A cavalry picket strong enough to make a scout through Keyes' Gap should be stationed at Keyes' Ford. You can find men in Cole's (First Maryland) cavalry familiar with the country. Nothing from Averell.

Respectfully, &c.,

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, August 20, 1864.

General AVERELL:

Your dispatch just received. There is no indication of movements on my front. The enemy appear to be at Winchester and this side.

---

* Not found; but see Chipman to Stanton, 8 p. m., p. 858.

Watch the movements toward Martinsburg closely, and when your scouts which you have sent to ascertain the strength and designs of the enemy return let me know.

Yours, truly,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

[AUGUST 20, 1864.—For Sheridan to Averell, relative to movement of latter from Shepherdstown, &c., see p. 503.]

HEADQUARTERS,
Harper's Ferry, August 20, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 5.40 p. m.)

Brigadier-General KELLEY:

The 100-days' men ordered to be sent to Columbus, Ohio, as soon as their term of service expires, will be replaced by other troops as soon as the present emergencies will permit.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.]

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 20, 1864.

It was desired and expected that the regiments of the Ohio National Guard serving in my command would be promptly relieved and sent home to be paid and mustered out of service at the expiration of their term of enlistment, but the exigencies of the public service demand that they remain a few days longer to enable the Government to collect and send troops to relieve them. I regret exceedingly that circumstances require this course toward these gallant regiments which have been so efficient and have rendered so important and valuable service in this department. I have made, and will continue, every effort possible to have you relieved, and I trust your detention will be of but a few days' duration. I therefore appeal to your patriotism to submit to this delay with the noble self-sacrificing devotion to your country you have heretofore evinced.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 20, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON,
New Creek:

It is reported that a force of about 400 rebels were in Springfield this a. m. Keep your scouts active and well out.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 65. } Baltimore, August 20, 1864.

I. The District of Delaware will not be included hereafter in the command of the Third Separate Brigade.

II. Col. S. M. Bowman, Eighty-fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, having been ordered by the honorable Secretary of War to report to the general commanding the Middle Department for duty, is hereby assigned to the command of the District of Delaware, and all troops that are now or may be hereafter assigned to duty in said district. The headquarters will be at Wilmington, Del. This does not relieve Colonel Bowman from the duties to which he was assigned by paragraph 44, Special Orders, No. 70, Adjutant-General's Office, February 12, 1864, as chief mustering and recruiting officer for colored troops in the State of Maryland.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HDQRS. THIRD SEPARATE BRIG., EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Baltimore, Md., August 20, 1864.

Lieut. Col. S. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Eighth Army Corps:

COLONEL: In accordance with instructions just received, I have the honor to forward you, herewith inclosed, a copy of the order assigning Colonel Clark, of the One hundred and ninety-third Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, to the command at Wilmington, Del.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. P. DE WITT,
Colonel Tenth Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps, Comdg. Brigade.

[Inclosure.]

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. THIRD SEPARATE BRIGADE,
No. 33. } EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Baltimore, Md., August 16, 1864.

* * * * *

VII. Col. John B. Clark, commanding at Havre de Grace, will, as soon as relieved by Lieutenant-Colonel Ballentine, of same regiment, proceed to Wilmington, Del., and assume command of that post, in addition to his other duties as commander of the railroad guards. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

By command of Brigadier-General Lockwood:

GEO. V. MASSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CITY POINT, VA., August 21, 1864—10.30 a. m.

(Received 6 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN,
Charlestown, Va.:

In stripping Loudoun County of supplies, &c., impress from all loyal persons, so that they may receive pay for what is taken from them. I am informed by the Assistant Secretary of War that Loudoun County has a large population of Quakers, who are all favorably disposed to the Union. These people may be exempted from arrest.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

CITY POINT, August 21, 1864—5 p. m.
(Received 6.30 a. m. 22d.)

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN, Charlestown, Va.:

We have had prisoners and deserters from every division and brigade of Lee's and Beauregard's armies in the last four days except Fitz Lee's cavalry and Kershaw's division. These we know have gone to the Valley. A man employed by the provost-marshal visits Orange Court-House regularly and gets accurate reports from there. Not a regiment has passed there in the last two weeks going either way. To-day several attacks of the enemy on our forces occupying the Weldon road have been repulsed, with very little loss to us and considerable to them in killed, wounded, and captured. If operations planned for to-morrow are as successful as I hope they will be I think the troops in the Valley, or a portion of them, are more likely to be withdrawn than to be re-enforced from here.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

WASHINGTON, August 21, 1864—3 p. m.
Colonel CHIPMAN, Harper's Ferry, Va.:
What news now?

A. LINCOLN.

---

BOLIVAR HEIGHTS, August 21, 1864—4.30 p. m.
(Received 6 p. m.)

To the PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES:

Without myself having been to the front, from the best sources of information the following is true: Two rebel divisions came down the Martinsburg road; attacked suddenly a part of Sixth Corps at inspection and at first drove them. Our troops rallied and in turn drove the enemy. The force engaged increased on both sides and was apparently kept up pretty hotly for three hours, not extending, however, to general engagement. Artillery firing still continues and seems to have shifted to the left of Charlestown. Cannot hear the musketry at this writing. Will have messenger from the front soon.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel, Aide-de-Camp.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, VA., August 21, 1864—10 a. m.
(Received 11.40 a. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON, Secretary of War:

Averell's scouts, on their way with reports to General Sheridan, say that Averell has gone to Hagerstown. The enemy in force at Martinsburg and moving toward Shepherdstown. Couriers will be sent at once to communicate with Averell.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

BOLIVAR HEIGHTS, August 21, 1864—1 p. m.
(Received 1.40 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War :

A battle is being fought at and to the right of Charlestown. Firing began about 11 a. m. Musketry and artillery heard from these heights, and is quite heavy. Indication of an attempt to turn our right, as firing is confined to that part of the line on Shepherdstown and Charlestown road.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

HARPER'S FERRY, VA., August 21, 1864—6 p. m.
(Received 8.40 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War :

No firing can be heard now. Captain Sheridan left the front at 2 p. m. with orders to General Stevenson. He says up to that time the fight had been but little more than an attempt to develop our force, and was maintained by an increased skirmish and picket line. The artillery firing was by the enemy, except on the left, near Berryville, where our cavalry was fighting. They used a six-gun battery quite lively. The left of infantry line rests a mile beyond Charlestown and a little to the left of the Winchester pike, the right resting on the Leetown road leading from Charlestown to Martinsburg. The cavalry cover from left to Shenandoah and from right along Opequon to Potomac. The enemy showed no battle-line to-day, but General Sheridan thinks his movement a precursor of battle and is ready for him. Trains and all army baggage are being parked in valley this side Bolivar Heights. Harper's Ferry force is in as good shape as it will admit of. No report from Averell or east of Blue Ridge to-day. Averell pickets to Shepherdstown and to Hagerstown and is himself near the latter place.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 21, 1864—9 p. m.

Colonel CHIPMAN,
Harper's Ferry :

You may go to the front if you wish, keeping me advised of the condition of things.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, August 21, 1864—7.30 a. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Comdg. Middle Military Division, Charlestown, Va. :

Lazelle has returned, and reports as follows:

There are at Warrenton about 2,000 infantry and about 500 cavalry, and a large force of 10,000 men, cavalry and infantry, at Culpeper, moving up toward Warrenton. The rebels are using the roads between Warrenton and Chester Gap and Manassas Gap, and passing trains, troops, and supplies over them constantly.

He does not mention how he ascertained these figures. He has most probably depended upon reports of citizens. I will learn more definitely and inform you.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 21, 1864—9.20 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Comdg. Middle Military Division, Charlestown, W. Va.:

Lazelle says he received his information concerning the enemy's forces at Culpeper from a citizen who had just left there. He also informed him about the forces at Warrenton. Colonel Gansevoort, with his regiment, the Thirteenth New York Cavalry, goes out to-morrow to scout in the vicinity of those places. The Forty-first New York arrived here from Hilton Head to-day, about 400 men. Two more regiments on their way.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

FORT CORCORAN, August 21, 1864.
(Received 2.10 p. m.)

Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff:

Colonel Whistler was assigned to duty in these defenses by orders from department headquarters to command the brigade formerly Tannatt's. I respectfully request authority to assign him to the command of the brigade from Richardson to Ellsworth, where I now have a veteran reserve regiment and have to-day ordered the One hundred and third New York Volunteers. His experience and energy will be of the greatest possible avail in instructing that brigade. The Tenth New York Artillery and several old batteries hold the works in this present command.

G. A. DE RUSSY,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 21, 1864.

Colonel LAZELLE,
Commanding Cavalry Brigade, Falls Church, Va.:

Please state more definitely from whom you received the information respecting the enemy's forces and movements, contained in your dispatch of last night, and if you have good reasons for thinking it reliable. Have the other regiment gotten together at once and sent out toward Warrenton, to learn what is going on there. The Eighth Illinois Cavalry left Muddy Branch yesterday to scout toward Middleburg. Report when the Thirteenth leaves.

Yours, &c.,

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 21, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: In reply to the communication from the major-general commanding, requesting a more definite statement concerning the information sent to your headquarters, I have the honor to inform you that the strength of the enemy in Culpeper and Warrenton and their movements were ascertained from a citizen who left Culpeper on Tuesday last. He reports a whole division at Culpeper and 2,500 infantry, besides cavalry, at Warrenton; that relative to the use of the Orange and Alexandria Railroad and the force at Culpeper was obtained from Elkton, from several citizens who talked freely to our men, under the impression that they were rebels, as they were disguised; that that concerning Kincheloe was obtained from one of his own men captured. I regard all the above as reliable. The Thirteenth New York will leave to-morrow morning. They are unable to leave sooner owing to their horses not being shod. Please see communication inclosed.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 21, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report all quiet in this vicinity. Beyond this I have nothing to report.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 21, 1864—3 p. m.

Colonel CURRIE,
Commanding Brigade, Nineteenth Corps:

COLONEL: The major-general commanding directs that you will report to General Stevenson, commanding at Bolivar Heights, with your brigade; also that you will gather together and organize any stragglers that may come into that point.

Very respectfully,

F. C. NEWHALL,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 21, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. MERRITT,
Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: You will move your division back at once to Rippon and take up a line between this place and Bullskin Run. Dispose Colonel

---

* Not found.

Lowell's brigade on the line so that the balance of your command can be used elsewhere. General Wilson is ordered to move in front of General Wright. There is an attack on Wilson's right. Lieutenant Goldsmith will give you more particulars.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 21, 1864.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: The main body of the infantry is passing now. The infantry picket-line will be withdrawn shortly. Send for Colonel Lowell to keep himself posted as to the movements of the infantry in his rear, and have him withdraw to a point near the town, covering the roads on that side. Send a staff officer to report for further instructions.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Summit Point, August 21, 1864—11.10 a. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Berryville:

My outposts on the Winchester and Summit roads and at Middleway have been attacked by strong forces of cavalry. A part of the force between here and the Opequon has taken the road running toward Berryville. There seems to be a strong reconnaissance all along the line of the Opequon.

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Cross-Roads, One mile and a half East of Summit Point,
August 21, 1864—2.25 p. m.

General MERRITT:

Your dispatch* by my messenger just received. I'll hold on on this road till you come in. Have received orders to that effect from headquarters cavalry forces. About noon, my advanced parties having been driven from the Opequon, I was attacked by a division of infantry [and] one regiment of cavalry. At the same moment orders came directing me to fall back from Summit and attack the enemy in Wright's front. My artillery fire has checked the enemy, but he is reported as moving toward Berryville. Move, therefore, as rapidly as possible till we can form a junction. Your train is all right. You had better not stop on the Bullskin, but move till we meet. The enemy may catch you on the flank by some of the cross-roads.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

* Not found.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 21, 1864.

Brigadier-General WILSON,
Commanding Third Division:

GENERAL: There is now firing in front of General Wright, who is in the rear of Welch's Spring. You will move your division at once, in front of General Wright, on the Smithfield (or Middleway) and Charlestown pike. Leave a strong force on the road from Summit Point to this place. I presume the best way to come back to your position is to take the first road to your rear, going north to the pike. Communicate often. Cover all roads to your front and right. Averell has gone across the Potomac.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
Near Summit Point, August 21, 1864—2.05 p. m.

Captain RENO,
Chief of Staff:

CAPTAIN: Just as your orders were received the enemy advanced with infantry against my position, but was checked by skirmishers and artillery sufficiently to allow me to withdraw. I am now at the cross-roads, about one mile and a half east of Summit Point, but as the officers who came through report the direct road already occupied by the enemy, who moved in by Middleway, I have therefore thought it prudent not to leave the direct road to the Berryville and Charlestown pike till I ascertain that I am either not followed or till the direct Charlestown road is clear. I have sent scouting party to ascertain that fact and shall act as soon as I hear the result. In case the enemy is on it, I propose to move to the Berryville and Charlestown pike and form a junction with Merritt, having previously notified him of what is going on, and advised him, if not already ordered, to fall back and connect with me. Have just received a note from him saying Lowell had been attacked and he would do as indicated above.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
On North Fork Bullskin, August 21, 1864—3.50 p. m.

Captain RENO,
Chief of Staff, Cavalry Forces, Charlestown:

CAPTAIN: My division is now here with one regiment at cross-roads this side of Summit; the infantry are also with us. The force which moved in by Summit Point have struck off to the northward. No sign of Merritt yet; have sent to him, and will do all I can to protect his flank till he arrives. I hear artillery in the direction of Clifton. Expect news from him soon. Have sent my train into Charlestown with directions to report for the general's orders. Have parties of observation out in all directions, particularly toward Summit and Middleway.

Only two of the scouts sent out last night have returned; the substance of their report has been sent in; those toward Bunker Hill have not yet been heard of.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

CIRCULAR.] HDQRS. CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 21, 1864.

GENERAL: I am directed by the chief of cavalry to inform you that General Averell has removed his command from Shepherdstown to some point unknown; he left a few pickets at Shepherdstown and a regiment at Sharpsburg. He also directs that any important information you may receive from Smithfield and that direction be sent down the Middleway pike to General Wright's headquarters (which is one mile and a half from Charlestown on that pike) at the same time it is sent to you.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
No. 42. } In the Field, August 21, 1864.

1. The brigadier-general commanding is gratified at the good behavior of the Third New Jersey Cavalry, particularly that of Lieutenant Stickle, in command of a detachment, in the engagements of this morning and on the 17th, at Winchester; it bespeaks an honorable career for the regiment.

* * * * *

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CHARLESTOWN SIGNAL STATION,
August 21, 1864.

General STEVENSON:

There are indications of a fight here. I have sent all wagons inside of Bolivar Heights. There is one brigade infantry with them. You must hold the line of Bolivar Heights. Use dismounted cavalry if necessary.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
In the Field, August 21, 1864.

General STEVENSON:

Send out scouts immediately to Snicker's Gap and report, all as soon as possible.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, Va., August 21, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Military Division:

GENERAL: I have sent scouts to-day in Loudoun as far as Aldie, and another down Blue Ridge as far as Snicker's Gap; shall report as soon as they return. All trains are parked under guns of Camp Hill. I hold Bolivar Heights with strong infantry line as far as Horseshoe, and then on second ridge as far as Shenandoah River. Have in position on my line twenty pieces of artillery. Think I can hold the line easily against attacking force of 10,000 men. You can rely upon a desperate effort to hold everything safe; at least, give yourself no uneasiness that anything will be yielded to the enemy as long as the men last. I send you copy of dispatch just received from Averell.* Its contents I need not repeat. Signal stations are established on Maryland Heights, Camp Hill, and connected line of couriers with Averell.
Respectfully, &c.,

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
In the Field, August 21, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: All the information received is to the effect that the enemy have concentrated their forces in and around Bunker Hill and Winchester. We are picketing the Opequon Creek. The enemy have just made an attack on the regiment at Middleway; does not amount to anything.
Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel, &c.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 21, 1864—11 a. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: I desire very much to be able to communicate to the War Department the precise condition of our right, which you hold, I believe. Your scouts passing here en route to General Sheridan say that you have gone to Hagerstown, and that the enemy are moving toward Shepherdstown from Martinsburg, where they are in force. This information, if true, is very important. I have telegraphed it to the Department, but hope to hear more definitely from you. Your dispatch from Shepherdstown at 2 a. m. yesterday I sent forward. Please reply by return courier. Scout from Leesburg yesterday could hear of no enemy. They encountered a small band of Mosby's guerrillas, put them to flight, captured four, and compelled Mosby himself to abandon his horse and take to the mountains. No changes in General Sheridan's lines. General Stevenson, since your withdrawal from Shepherdstown, has sent pickets off in that direction.

---

* See 7.30 a. m., p. 503.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Fair Play, Md., August 21, 1864.

Major WITCHER,
Third Virginia Cavalry:

MAJOR: The general commanding desires that you will send an officer and twenty men to cross the river at Cherry Run, proceed from there to Bath, and thence to Bloomery Gap. He will return via Hancock and report immediately to these headquarters in writing. Instruct him to get all the information possible of the movements of the enemy. He will make the trip as rapidly as possible.

Respectfully,

WILL RUMSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 21, 1864.

Major-General KELLEY:

Courier just returned from down the river reports all quiet on the Potomac. No rebels crossed into Maryland yet; reports 400 rebels in Martinsburg; small bands scouting the country between Martinsburg and the river. The above is direct from signal officer at Fairview. I will hear from him to-day again. A citizen just in from Hedgesville reports no rebels west of Martinsburg.

E. J. C. HULL.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 21, 1864.

Captain PETRIE,
Hancock:

You will direct the detachment of the Thirty-fourth Ohio to return and guard Back Creek bridge. They will proceed to-morrow morning. They can carry their rations, &c., down on hand-car.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 21, 1864.

Capt. C. J. HARRISON:
(Through Captain Peirpoint, commanding post.)

The general commanding directs that you place your company in readiness to proceed to South Branch and re-enforce the garrison at that point. Make your arrangements to take the cars on the morning of the 23d instant, provided with rations, and report in person to these headquarters before starting for instructions in detail.

I am, respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

NEW CREEK, August 21, 1864.

Major-General KELLEY:

The scout was ordered; had but fifty men to send, leaving only thirty-nine for duty at Clarksburg.

N. WILKINSON,
Colonel.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Charleston, W. Va., August 21, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel HIBBS,
Camp Piatt:

You will have the three companies of the One hundred and fortieth Ohio Guard ready at 6 o'clock to-morrow morning to take the boat that unloads at Camp Piatt and bring them to the headquarters of the regiment preparatory to go to Ohio. You will turn over the command of the post and all public property to the senior officer of the One hundred and sixty-seventh Ohio at your place. You will be careful and see that no damage is done to public or private property by your command on leaving.

JOHN H. OLEY,
Colonel, Commanding.

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 21, 1864.

Major-General WALLACE:

GENERAL: I am instructed to inform you that the Sixth Massachusetts Volunteer Infantry left this city en route for Fort Delaware at 7.15 p. m. this day by Baltimore and Washington railroad. The chief of staff of the army directs this notification, that there may be no straggling of the regiment in Baltimore.

J. H. TAYLOR,
Colonel and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 21, 1864—9 p. m.

Major-General WALLACE:

The One hundred and thirty-ninth Regiment Ohio National Guard left Point Lookout this morning for Baltimore on the supposition that their term of service had expired; it now appears that there is some doubt about it. Will you please detain the regiment in Baltimore until the question is settled at the War Department, which will be done early to-morrow.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General.

GREENCASTLE, August 21, 1864.

Maj. JOHN S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The signal officer on North Mountain reports that he hears quite a rapid cannonading in the direction of Martinsburg. Probably an engagement is progressing in the Valley.

A. M. THAYER,
Lieutenant and Signal Officer.

HALLTOWN, VA., August 22, 1864—10.30 p. m.

Lieut. Gen. U. S. GRANT:

Yesterday morning the enemy crossed Opequon Creek at different points in the vicinity of Smithfield or Middleway and advanced on my position at Welch's Spring, about two miles west of Charlestown. Skirmishing took place during the day in front of both General Crook's command and the Sixth Army Corps. The skirmishing was at one time rather sharp in front of the latter command, as the line was pressed forward and drove the enemy from a crest in our front which they occupied early in the day. The cavalry skirmished some with the enemy at Berryville and Summit Point; this, however, did not amount to much. As my position at best in front of Charlestown was a bad one, and much being dependent on this army, I withdrew my command without loss or opposition last night and took up a new line in front of Halltown. This morning the enemy followed my rear guard and we have been skirmishing with them during the day. My loss yesterday was about 275. None of the enemy have crossed the river. Various reports have come to me in reference to a column of the enemy being at Culpeper and Warrenton, but I place no reliance on the reports. We have disposed of quite a number of Mosby's men.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

[AUGUST 22, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, &c., see p. 19.]

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 22, 1864—1 p. m.
 (Received 3.30 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

I have just returned from the front, where I traversed the entire line. The left of the infantry rests to the left of Charlestown pike and over a mile beyond Halltown. The right is almost directly west of Harper's Ferry, and about two miles from Bolivar Heights. The line runs along a commanding ridge which overlooks a broad valley beyond, and is a position of great natural strength. The intervals to the left and right, connecting the rivers, say a mile each, are not so strong, but the enemy could hardly succeed in a flank movement. The enemy seems to be along the Charlestown pike, but in what force not known. His infantry drove our cavalry this morning after the retrograde movement began. Merritt has been sent up the Potomac toward Shepherdstown to look after the enemy. Scouts report no enemy yesterday sundown at Snicker's Gap or east of there. Party that went to Aldie not returned. Received report from Averell last night at midnight. His headquarters are at Fair Play. He covers the crossing from Antietam Ford to Williamsport and beyond to Cherry Run. He scouts the country around Martinsburg, Hedgesville, and Shepherdstown, and also in Back Creek Valley. Says Fitz Lee and Breckinridge came to Martinsburg on the 19th, but returned again toward Winchester or Pughtown. He has rumors now that they are going west. All quiet in front. Intrenchments are being thrown up along the ridge mentioned.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 22, 1864—8.30 p. m.

(Received 8.40 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Lieutenant Atwell, with twenty Loudoun (Virginia) Rangers, just returned from scout toward Aldie. Crossed at Point of Rocks yesterday morning early; went in direction of Leesburg, where they encountered detachment of White's men; routed them, with loss of three mortally wounded; thence proceeded to Dry Hollow and Grove Meeting-House, where they found five of Mosby's men, who had just murdered a sick paroled Federal soldier; thence returned by way of Goose Creek Church, Harmony, and Waterford. White, with 100 men, being at Aldie, they did not go there, as instructed. No enemy heard of north of Rectortown. Longstreet's command reported at Sparrowsville [Sperryville] Gap and Front Royal. All quiet in front. Has rained most of afternoon. General Torbert is at Shepherdstown. Enemy thought to be in force on Sheridan's left.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 207. }

HDQRS. DEPT. OF WASHINGTON,
TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS,
August 22, 1864.

* * * * *

8. The Seventy-fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers having, pursuant to instructions from headquarters of the army, reported at these headquarters, is hereby assigned to De Russy's division, and will be reported for duty, without delay, accordingly. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

* * * * *

10. The One hundred and third Regiment New York Volunteers, having reported to these headquarters, are hereby assigned to De Russy's division, and will be reported for duty, without delay, accordingly. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Augur:

C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS HARDIN'S DIVISION,
 TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS, DEPT. OF WASHINGTON,
Washington, D. C., August 22, 1864.

Col. J. H. KITCHING,
First Brigade:

The general commanding directs that the Forty-first New York Volunteers will be ordered to Fort Sumner, and that they will be at once put upon instruction in artillery—the company of Ninth New York Artillery now at that fort will instruct them, under your orders; that Knap's battalion be at once ordered to complete the cutting of brush on the left and front of Fort Sumner, or wherever it is needed in that vicinity, and that the pickets detailed from this battalion be withdrawn for this purpose. The commanding officer of Forty-first New York Volunteers will command the post.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. CHANDLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

POINT OF ROCKS, MD., August 22, 1864.
 (Received 5.20 p. m.)

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

Just arrived opposite this point all right without the loss of a man, not even a straggler. Crossed into Loudoun Valley at Aldie. Part of my command charged and drove portion of Mosby's men through Middleburg and well toward Upperville. Went to Philomont and Snicker's Gap, thence down the valley. Brought in about fifty prisoners, number of horses, &c. Met no force of the enemy. Dispatches received after one day out. Horses of my command much in need of shoeing. Move to Muddy Branch to-morrow.

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

---

ALEXANDRIA, August 22, 1864.
 (Received 8.20 p. m.)

Colonel TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: The patrols report all quiet to-day. An attempt was made to burn the railroad bridge this side of Burke's Station last night. The damage done was slight.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Provost-Marshal-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 22, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have nothing of importance to report. Colonel Gansevoort started out about noon with his regiment. Should he obtain any additional information he is instructed to communicate by sending in a small party, if practicable.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 22, 1864—8.45 p. m.

Maj. Gen. H. G. WRIGHT,
Commanding Sixth Army Corps:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that your command be under arms at daylight to-morrow morning. He desires me to say that prisoners captured this afternoon report that the entire force of the enemy in the Valley was in our front yesterday and followed us up to-day, two divisions being on this side of Charlestown and the rest on the other side this afternoon. One prisoner says they will fall back to-night.

Very respectfully, general, your obedient servant,

F. C. NEWHALL,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

(Same to Major-Generals Emory and Crook.)

---

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS,
August 22, 1864.

The troops will be turned out at daylight to-morrow, and kept under arms for one hour.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. A. WHITTIER,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

AUGUST 22, 1864—9 p. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: General Torbert directs that you send two regiments to-morrow a. m. at daylight out on the Smithfield pike as far as Kearneysville, if possible, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. From information received there were 150 cavalry there to-day destroying the telegraph. They also reported that Early was going back to Winchester. Have the regiments sent out obtain all the information they can and report to these headquarters as soon as possible. They must be particularly cautious regarding the roads coming in on their left.

Very respectfully,

WM. RUSSELL, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Near J. Engel's, on Baltimore and Ohio Railroad,
August 22, 1864—2.30 p. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff:

General Torbert has just sent an order from Shepherdstown, directing me in case I am attacked to cross the Potomac at Antietam Ford, provided it is practicable. I have sent scouting parties to the front but have no reports yet. Please let me know if I shall obey these orders, when I may deem it prudent, or wait for final instructions from you. Torbert also reported a force following Cesnola toward Shepherdstown. I've sent to see about it, and if I find it cavalry I am directed to attack it.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Engel's Place, on Baltimore and Ohio Railroad,
August 22, 1864—3.40 p. m.

[Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff:]

COLONEL: I send herewith dispatch just received from General Torbert for you. Scouts say the force which followed Cesnola was about fifty cavalry; also that the enemy have no force yet in neighborhood of Duffield's, his line of infantry not extending over a mile north of the Charlestown pike, and cavalry beginning there, but not in any considerable force. The only movements observed were rather toward your left flank than in this direction. I will continue my observations. I have two pickets of half a regiment each on the Halltown and Shepherdstown road at cross-roads, on right and left of railroad; patrol to Duffield's and to a point toward Shepherdstown where Merritt has a brigade.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 22, 1864—4 p. m.

Brigadier-General WILSON,
Commanding Third Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The general directs me to say that the instructions of General Torbert are all right. Please notify General Torbert that Colonel Lowell reports a column of rebel infantry moving from our left toward Shepherdstown on the Shepherdstown road.

Respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Engel's, Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, August 22, 1864—5 p. m.
Captain RENO,
Chief of Staff:

I am directed by General Sheridan to inform General Torbert that "Colonel Lowell reports a column of rebel infantry moving from our left toward Shepherdstown on the Shepherdstown road." I have two strong picket forces on the Halltown and Shepherdstown road—one where the Zion Church road crosses, the other where the Duffield's road; they connect with each other and Merritt. No further reports from scouts. Am getting two days' forage and two days' rations. Page is sending supplies to you on the north side of the Potomac.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 22, 1864—2.20 p. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
First Brigade:

General Torbert has just sent word from Shepherdstown that a large force had followed Cesnola on the Charlestown and Shepherdstown road, and wishes its character determined. Please send out two or three scouting parties toward Duffield's and beyond, with instructions to ascertain if any troops are moving toward Shepherdstown.

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
J. Engel's Place, August 22, 1864—2.25 p. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: Send patrol party toward and to Antietam Ford, ascertain its character, if our artillery and wagons can cross there, and the best road to it. Keep a close watch on all your front and right flank. Report frequently to me.

Very respectfully,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 22, 1864—8 p. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: The general commanding directs that you have your command saddled at 4 a. m. to-morrow, ready for any emergency, and that you will please notify the battery.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 22, 1864—10.30 a. m.

Brigadier-General CHAPMAN,
Commanding Second Brigade:

I have just sent a staff officer to you with an order to send out three small scouting parties. This means of communication was taken to prevent delay. Instead of complying with the order you profess to misunderstand it, and ask for definite instructions. Such a course is not calculated to advance the interests of service or to smooth matters in your command. You will, therefore, proceed at once to execute this order, ten to fifteen men in each party, directed to observe the movements of the enemy now advancing on the Charlestown pike. Acknowledge the receipt of this, time when received, and when parties are started. You will also keep out a light line of mounted vedettes and be ready to move your whole force dismounted into action.

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 32. }

HDQRS. FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
ARMY OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Near Halltown, W. Va., August 22, 1864.

I. Maj. Timothy Quinn, First New York (Lincoln) Cavalry, having reported for duty, is hereby placed in command of the Second Brigade, he being the senior officer on duty with the brigade.

By command of Brigadier-General Duffié:

E. W. CLARK, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 22, 1864—5.30 p. m.

Brigadier-General STEVENSON,
Commanding District of Harper's Ferry:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that as soon as General Duffié reports to you, he will be ordered by you to carry out the verbal instructions given you by General Sheridan this p. m.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

NO. 27 BARCLAY STREET, NEW YORK,
August 22, 1864.

Captain BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Department of West Virginia:

CAPTAIN: Your communication of the 19th instant, stating that you have been directed by the commanding general to inform me that General Order No. 66, current series, assigning General Stevenson to the command of the Military District of Harper's Ferry, did not relieve me from duty in the district, and that it was expected that I would be assigned to a command by General Stevenson, has been received (on the 20th instant, between 11 and 12 o'clock) too late to reply to it before my departure. I have tried in vain to find some cause for the act of the general commanding to relieve me of the command which I have held for the last five months, and since which time I have made myself perfectly conversant with all the peculiarities of its defenses. I am not aware of having committed any military fault, or neglected my duty in any way whatever, which could have caused the discontent of the general commanding, and therefore feel the more hurt and humiliated by

it. I trust, however, that the general commanding will do me justice. The general commanding, in granting me leave of absence for twenty days, ordered me to report at its expiration to General Stevenson, but I think the general commanding has not been or is not aware of my seniority over General Stevenson (my promotion dates from April 28, 1862); but should, however, such be the case, I would most respectfully beg leave to remark that as an old regular officer, who served the United States faithfully since April, 1861, and who received his promotion through the recommendation of his commanding officer, I would never waive my rank to any officer in the army being my junior.

I hope that the general commanding will excuse the foregoing remarks, and will fully understand my feelings at being relieved at the present time from a position of trust. Every military, as well as civil, person would consider such relief as a mark of displeasure.

I remain, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

MAX WEBER,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 22, 1864.

Captain BOTSFORD,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Harper's Ferry:

Heavy rain in the mountains; river rising. There will undoubtedly be quite a rise in the river below. Please communicate this information to the general. The men in charge of the pontoon bridge should be advised and directed to be on the alert.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

NEW CREEK, August 22, 1864.

Brevet Major-General KELLEY:

I left east of Greenland last evening. Information direct from Moorefield. There were 300 rebel cavalry there yesterday fixing for a move. Could not find out in what direction.

A. HINKLE.

---

NEW CREEK, August 22, 1864.
(Received Cumberland 4 p. m.)

General KELLEY:

My scouts in from Burlington, via Ridgeville, say the citizens report a large force of the enemy at Moorefield and Petersburg.

R. STEVENSON,
Colonel.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 22, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON,

New Creek:

Direct Major Simpson to send a scout of the Eleventh Infantry, 100 strong, and a squad of cavalry of twenty men to Greenland Gap with five days' rations, to learn, if possible, the movements of McNeill.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 22, 1864.

Captain FARIS,
Oakland:

It is reported McNeill is preparing for a raid into the Glades. Be on the alert. Give Godwin notice to be active and not suffer himself to be caught off his guard.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 22, 1864.

Captain PETRIE,
Hancock:

What information did you get from Averell's scouts? Where have they been? Did they come through Martinsburg? What did they learn of the rebels?

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 22, 1864.

General KELLEY:

General Averell's scouts came from Martinsburg to Bath; found country all clear; they say no rebels heard of near. General Averell is in Martinsburg. I think the road all safe and sound in this quarter. They say heavy firing was heard in direction of Point of Rocks yesterday. Shall we move up to Back Creek or North Mountain? Answer immediately.

P. B. PETRIE,
Captain.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 22, 1864.

Captain PETRIE,
Hancock:

I think you had better not run down to North Mountain yet. You might send a small squad on hand-car, if you think best, and communicate with General Averell if he is in Martinsburg.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 22, 1864—8 a. m.

Major-General COUCH:

Latest reports of scouts place the main forces of the enemy at Winchester and Bunker Hill. They advanced a skirmish line yesterday, and attacked our cavalry pickets at Smithfield, but obtained no success that we can hear of. All quiet at last accounts at Martinsburg. Heavy firing this morning.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
No. 48. } Harrisburg, Pa., August 22, 1864.

Fort Mifflin, near Philadelphia, is hereby announced as the military prison for this department, and will be directly under the orders of the commanding general of the same.

By command of Major-General Couch:

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

[AUGUST 23, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, &c., see p. 20.]

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 23, 1864—10.30 p. m.
(Received 24th.)

Major-General AUGUR,
Commanding:

Some of my scouts report Pickett's and Field's divisions here, and that they will go through Snicker's Gap. I do not believe they are here, but the rebels have been very bold. I have not been able to capture any other than of Ramseur's and Rodes' divisions. Keep your scouts well out toward Snicker's Gap and let me know quickly of any movement. If there is anything in this report, it is that Pickett's and Field's divisions were at Culpeper, as reported by Lazelle. There will be a rise of the river, caused by heavy rains in the mountains, so Kelley reports. Everything is all right here; a little skirmishing; nobody hurt. On the 21st the pickets of the Sixth Corps pitched into the pickets of the rebs about the possession of the crest of a hill and drove them off it, but there has been no fighting. The cavalry also skirmished at Summit Point and Berryville, but with little loss. I have everything well in hand, but I do not feel justified in acting otherwise than on the defensive. Have you heard from the Eighth Illinois Cavalry?

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS HARDIN'S DIVISION,
TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS, DEPT. OF WASHINGTON,
Washington, D. C., August 23, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel THOMAS,
Commanding Second Brigade:

I am directed by the general commanding to instruct you that you will notify Major Goebel to the following effect: The six companies of the Fourth Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps and the four companies of the Tenth Regiment Veteran Reserve Corps, now in this command, are consolidated for certain purposes, and the senior officer of the two detachments is to command the combination. All duties, such as drills, police, and punishments, are to be regulated by the commanding officer of the combination. All reports are to be made out separately for the parts of regiments and consolidated at the headquarters of the commanding officer of the combination before being sent to brigade headquarters. The senior officer on duty with each detachment of these regiments will be responsible for the regimental property and will make the required returns of his detachment to the regimental headquarters and the Adjutant-General. The foregoing instructions will be followed until further orders.

Very respectfully,

R. CHANDLER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Falls Church, Va., August 23, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that a citizen named J. J. Perk presented himself at the picket-lines this evening. He left Culpeper Court-House last Friday, and reports there are no troops there at present, except a small conscripting party and small parties of ten or fifteen daily passing through toward the Valley; that, as he estimates, 20,000 infantry and 5,000 cavalry left Culpeper last Friday a week, he thinks, on the Sperryville road toward Thornton's Gap, but does not know, but they went via Warrenton to Chester Gap. Fitzhugh Lee has the cavalry; the infantry are a part of Longstreet's corps. He does not know whether or not there are troops at Warrenton. An examination of his method of estimating the strength of the force above referred to places it at about 10,000 infantry and 3,000 cavalry. Cars run to Culpeper daily bringing supplies. Mr. Perk, who claims to be with family accompanying refugees, has been sent to Lieutenant-Colonel Wells. Nothing has been heard from the force under Colonel Gansevoort.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS,
August 23, 1864.

Brevet Major-General CROOK,
Commanding Army, Martinsburg:

MY DEAR CROOK: Lowell found infantry and Fitz Lee's cavalry on the left, and McIntosh found infantry, cavalry, and artillery on the right, at Flowing Spring. I questioned another of the scouts, who confirms the story of Pickett and Field being here. These were the men I mentioned as being back near Winchester. One of Cole's cavalry, who lay in a hog-pen at Charlestown, says the camps are very large, and that trains came to the front yesterday evening and returned during the night. Have your cavalry on the alert in the morning.

Respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN.

AUGUST 23, 1864—5.25 a. m.

Capt. A. E. DANA,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: I return, as directed, the dispatch of General Wilson to Captain Reno. My picket, although very extended, is connecting with Generals Wilson and Custer. No movement has been discovered on the enemy's line. I sent out a strong reconnoitering party beyond Duffield's Station to watch their movements. Having no map, I cannot say whether the Halltown road is picketed or not by me; but what I can say is, that all the roads on my front are picketed, and there is no fear of surprise to be entertained in my direction. All is quiet here. As soon as the reconnoitering party returns I will communicate any further information.

I remain, very respectfully,

DI CESNOLA,
Colonel, Commanding Second Brigade.

---

AUGUST 23, 1864—12.05 p. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding Division:

I have inspected the whole line of my pickets which extends nearly six miles, but I could not see a single rebel in front of the line even with a good field-glass, so my supposition is that if there was any force in front of me it has left for some other point. The line as it is requires 400 men to make it efficient, and it would require two regiments to picket it, which I cannot very well do; but if General Custer's pickets would extend more toward the Charlestown road it would be very convenient to me. I was on the spot when the pickets of Custer began to drive those of the enemy on the Winchester pike, and remained there until all was quiet. My command has received three days' rations and two days' forage.

I have the honor to be, very respectfully, yours,

DI CESNOLA,
Colonel, Commanding Second Cavalry Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 23, 1864—1.30 p. m.

Brig. Gen. J. H. WILSON,
Commanding Third Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you order one brigade of your division to make a reconnaissance toward Charlestown. The general does not desire that the force sent out should become engaged; he simply desires information of the whereabouts of the enemy and his movements. This should have been sent through General Torbert, but his headquarters are so far off that the party could not be sent out to-day. Please notify General Torbert that you are sending out the party above named.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Near Harper's Farm, August 23, 1864—7.45 p. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: General McIntosh has returned, having gone by Zoar Church to within half a mile of the mill at Flowing Spring, head of Halltown, where he found the enemy's pickets and indications of a strong force in the neighborhood of the mills, reported by the people to be cavalry, infantry, and artillery. Cavalry was observed moving to the right rapidly after he struck the enemy's pickets. Nothing was seen beyond Zoar Church, though it was reported that Gilmor with about fifty men had moved toward Kearneysville. General McIntosh thinks he ought to have pushed a little farther, but at the cost of a fight. I have just received a note from General Torbert saying he had been to Kearneysville, but found no enemy. All quiet in the direction of Shepherdstown. Please let me know if this operation shall be repeated to-morrow.

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
Engle's, August 23, 1864.

Capt. M. A. RENO,
Chief of Staff, Cavalry Forces:

I have just ordered McIntosh, with three regiments, to make a reconnaissance of the enemy to ascertain his whereabouts, &c. Zoar Church and the head of Halltown run, and the country toward Charlestown, are the regions in which he is to operate. This reconnaissance is made in pursuance of instructions from General Sheridan, who directs me to inform you of it. I will inform you of results.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 23, 1864—2.25 p. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: In accordance with instructions from the major-general commanding Middle Military Division, you will, without delay, make a reconnaissance toward Charlestown, using for that purpose about three of your regiments, leaving the balance of your brigade and the battery behind. The general does not desire the force sent out to become engaged; he simply wishes information of the whereabouts of the enemy and his movements.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 23, 1864.

General STEVENSON:

I want the brigade of the Nineteenth Corps at Bolivar Heights moved to a point to the left and rear of my line, where there is a battery of General Crook's now in position. Send a battery with this brigade so that General Crook's battery can be relieved and sent to him.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIL. DIST. OF HARPER'S FERRY,
 No. 7. } Harper's Ferry, Va., August 23, 1864.

* * * * *

10. The brigade of the Nineteenth Army Corps at Bolivar Heights will break camp and hold themselves in readiness to move at once to a position on the left and rear of General Sheridan's line. A battery will report to the commanding officer and accompany the brigade. A staff officer will move the command and place it in position.

By order of Brigadier-General Stevenson:

H. M. BURLEIGH,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

POINT OF ROCKS, MD., August 23, 1864—7 p. m.

Brigadier-General STEVENSON:

All quiet.

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
 DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Fair Play, August 23, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN:

From a deserter who left Winchester last Saturday I gathered the following: His division (Kershaw's, Longstreet's old corps) left Richmond on the 7th, came by railroad to Charlottesville. He says it was reported that Field's division (same corps) left Richmond soon after, and was coming down east of the Blue Ridge. The following is the organization and strength of Kershaw's division as he gives it:

|                                                                                                                                |         |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|
| First Brigade (Humphreys'), four regiments, average, 200 .....                                                                 | 800     |
| Second Brigade (Bryan's), four regiments, average, 200 .....                                                                   | 800     |
| Third Brigade (Wofford's), five regiments and battalion .....                                                                  | 1, 200  |
| Fourth Brigade (Henagan's), three regiments, average, 200 = 600; two bat-talions, 300 = 600; 8th South Carolina, 800 ..... | 2, 000  |
| Total division .....                                                                                                           | 4, 800  |
| From previous information I estimate Early had before his late re-enforce-ment of infantry .....                           | 18, 000 |
| Fitzhugh Lee's cavalry, 3,000; cavalry, 5,000 .....                                                                            | 8, 000  |
| Total Early's present strength .....                                                                                           | 30, 800 |

An officer sent to Bloomery Gap reports no enemy west of North Mountain, with the exception of some 300 cavalry at Springfield, which I presume to be McNeill.

In addition to the above force, Early has about forty-two pieces of artillery. I have some scouts in rear of Early that I expect in to-day.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

[AUGUST 23, 1864.—For Forsyth to Averell, directing latter to report to Torbert, see p. 503.]

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 23, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division, &c.:

GENERAL: I have at this place one company of cavalry, two companies infantry, and two pieces of artillery; four additional pieces will be down to-day. At Greencastle and Mercersburg, each, one company of mounted men; two companies of infantry in the gaps between Mercersburg, Loudon, and McConnellsburg, and one in the gap between here and Gettysburg. Should the enemy advance into this valley these gaps will be closed, and, I trust, held.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

---

NEAR MARTINSBURG, August 23, 1864.
(Received 3.50 p. m.)

General KELLEY:

I am in sight of Martinsburg. The rebels hold Martinsburg; small party of them just came in, and are now driving our scouts out of the town; about five or six of our scouts had come into the town; had not been there long before rebel scouting party came in; they are still firing in the town. Getting very warm here; I must get out of this. I will go back to Hancock, and go by pike to Williamsport if you say so, and find out what is going on. Answer at Hancock.

F. B. MILLER.

---

HANCOCK, August 23, 1864.
(Received 1.20 p. m.)

General KELLEY:

I have just returned from Back Creek. Sent scouts to North Mountain and Hedgesville. Saw a man from Martinsburg; no troops there. General Averell is at Swamp Run, near Shepherdstown.

P. B. PETRIE,
Captain.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 23, 1864.

Colonel STEVENSON,
Commanding 154th Ohio National Guard, New Creek:

You will proceed with your command and report to the adjutant-general of the State of Ohio at Columbus. Assistant quartermaster will furnish transportation. Order by mail.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 23, 1864.

Colonel WILKINSON, Clarksburg:

A portion of the Eighth Virginia Cavalry is at Crab Bottom, going toward Beverly, about 400 strong. Advise the commandant at Beverly, and direct him to send a scout toward Monterey at once. Did Captain Hagans' company get their horses?

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS FORCES WEST OF PIEDMONT,
RESERVE DIVISION, DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Clarksburg, W. Va., August 23, 1864.

Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland :

GENERAL: The guerrilla parties are represented to be infesting all parts of the country south of this, robbing houses, stores, and stealing horses. A glance at the memorandum of the stations and number of troops in this command will convince you that it is utterly impracticable for me to prevent this, and that the whole line of railroad and country is completely exposed anywhere south and west of Rowlesburg, and that a force of fifty rebels could cut the communications anywhere. A scout of fifty men was sent by your direction from here last week, to be gone ten days, leaving at this important depot only thirty-nine men for duty, and, having a number of prisoners to guard, it is impracticable to do that and picket the approaches to the town. If there is any possible way of relieving the companies of the Eleventh and Sixth Virginia Infantry, now at New Creek and Cumberland, and sending them to this command, I shall be most happy to have it done. Should the enemy drive the troops (say 450 in all) from Beverly there is nothing for them to fall back on, and no assistance could, in all probability, reach us in time to prevent an advance of that enemy on Grafton and Clarksburg.

I have the honor to be, respectfully, your obedient servant,
N. WILKINSON,
Colonel, Commanding.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 26, 1864.

Respectfully returned to Col. N. Wilkinson, commanding, Clarksburg, W. Va.

It is entirely impossible to dispense with the services of the troops asked for in the locality they are now stationed, but as soon as troops can be had they will be sent as requested.

By order of Brevet Major-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 23, 1864—11 a. m.

J. B. FORD, Esq.,
Wheeling :

Railroad all right west of North Mountain. Trains run regularly to Hancock. Have sent a scout to-day to Martinsburg, or as near as they can get. Will advise you of the result. The opening of the road entirely depends on Sheridan; it is all right within my district.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

MONOCACY, August 23, 1864.

Maj. Gen. L. WALLACE:

No particulars of the fight of Sunday, except we have the enemy's wounded. Everything is very quiet along our lines up as far as Point of Rocks; my patrols go no farther west. We make a certainty of knowing what is going on in the Middle Department and on its immediate borders. We get little or no information of the movements of the enemy. Will telegraph you promptly anything I receive.

E. B. TYLER,
Brigadier-General.

[AUGUST 24, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, &c., see p. 20.]

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 24, 1864.

(Received 3.20 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

The formation of Sheridan's line is as follows: Sixth Corps on right, Nineteenth center, General Crook on left. General Crook is strengthened by a division from Sixth Corps and some other troops massed in support. It is not possible to assault the line successfully except on the left, and every precaution is taken against it there. A reconnaissance at 6 p. m. yesterday, from the right, with cavalry, found no enemy in front of Wright. A scout out to Shepherdstown and Charlestown road followed it to left; found enemy apparently in force about two miles this side of Charlestown. No enemy east of Snicker's Gap at 9 p. m. yesterday. A reconnaissance is now being made in Crook's and Emory's front. Rains have not raised the river perceptibly.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 14. }

HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Near Halltown, Va., August 24, 1864.

* * * * *

3. Lieut. Col. C. R. Smith, Sixth Pennsylvania Cavalry, is hereby announced as provost-marshal at these headquarters, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

* * * * *

9. The First Cavalry Division, Army of West Virginia, Brigadier-General Duffié commanding, will be at once dismounted, with the exception of the First New York (Lincoln) and the Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry. All unserviceable horses belonging to this division will be turned over to the proper accounting officer of the quartermaster's department at Harper's Ferry, Va.

10. As soon as mounted, the above-named regiments will report as follows: The First New York (Lincoln) Cavalry to Brigadier-General Averell, commanding Second Cavalry Division, at Fair Play, near Williamsport, Md., for assignment; the Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry to Brigadier-General Stevenson, commanding Military District of Harper's Ferry, for duty.

11. Brigadier-General Duffié will remount his division, under the direction of his department commander, and at such point as he may designate.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

A. F. HAYDEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 24, 1864. (Received 9.40 a. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR:

What news have you from your scouting parties in Loudoun County? I am exceedingly anxious to learn. I have heard nothing from Snicker's Gap for two days. Answer.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 24, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Military Division, Harper's Ferry:

I have no news from the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, or from Gansevoort. A refugee just in from Culpeper, which place he left on Friday last, reports no forces of the enemy there, except a conscripting party and small parties of ten or fifteen passing through daily. Fitzhugh Lee, with his cavalry, about 3,000, and part of Longstreet's corps, about 10,000, left there to join Early last Friday a week. He thinks they went through Sperryville and Thornton's Gap. Mosby, with two pieces of artillery, attacked the small cavalry force at Annandale this morning. I have not yet heard of the result. The force there is in a stockade.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Harper's Ferry, W. Va., August 24, 1864—9 a. m.
(Received 10.30 a. m.)

General C. C. AUGUR,
Washington, D. C.:

Scouts just in from Snicker's Gap report no crossing there. A party of cavalry, 300 or 400 strong, was seen about Hillsborough; could not tell whether they were rebels or our people. Have you any one out in that direction?

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 24, 1864—10.15 a. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Division, Harper's Ferry:

I have nothing from scouting parties later than I sent you this morning. Mosby is said to have been in command of the force that attacked Annandale this morning. He demanded a surrender, which was refused. He opened upon the stockade with two pieces of artillery. He was driven off, Major Horton, Sixteenth New York Cavalry, in command, following him up. I have sent all available cavalry force to join in pursuit. I will inform you the moment I learn anything worth knowing.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, U. S. Volunteers.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 24, 1864—12.30 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Division, Harper's Ferry:

I have good reason to believe that the Eighth Illinois Cavalry have been in the vicinity of Hillsborough.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 24, 1864—9 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Division, Harper's Ferry:

Major Waite, commanding Eighth Illinois Cavalry, has returned to Muddy Branch with his regiment, bringing in sixty-two men, rebel sympathizers, arrested under Lieutenant-General Grant's order. He brings in also all the horses he found fit for cavalry service. He found no old corn, but plenty of new and unthrashed wheat and hay, but says he could not find wagons enough to bring in one stack of wheat. He found very few negroes. He saw no signs of the enemy, except small squads of Mosby's men. I will send Major Waite out again as soon as his horses are rested. Do you wish all the crops destroyed that cannot be brought in?

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, U. S. Volunteers.

---

HALLTOWN, W. VA., August 24, 1864—9.30 p. m.
(Received 12.30 a. m. 25th.)

Major-General AUGUR,
Commanding:

I have nothing very important to communicate. Report sent you by Colonel Lazelle of information received from a refugee has been to some extent confirmed by reports from other sources, excepting as to time. Both Crook and Emory made reconnaissances to-day. Crook drove in the advance line of the enemy on our left, capturing some prisoners from Early's corps. My information from Snicker's Gap is that no troops have passed through in your direction. I will commence operations seriously with the cavalry to-morrow. Early cannot maintain his present position, and from indications does not know what to do. He cannot cross at Williamsport, for he gives up his line, and I do not believe that B[reckinridge] can cross at Snicker's Gap or the other passes for nearly the same reason. I hope the Eighth Illinois has cleaned out Loudoun Valley. I will do the same with this country before I am done with it. The Second Cavalry was in Martinsburg yesterday and last night. Nothing has been there except a small squad of rebels for only an hour or so at a time.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 279. } Washington, August 24, 1864.

1. Col. John A. Elison, quartermaster's department, will report in person, without delay, to Major-General Augur, U. S. Volunteers, to relieve Lieut. Col. E. M. Greene, quartermaster's department, in his duties as chief quartermaster, Department of Washington.

Lieutenant-Colonel Greene will turn over to Colonel Elison all money and property in his possession pertaining to the Department of Washington, including the contraband fund.

* * * * *

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 24, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel WELLS,
Alexandria:

It is reported that the enemy (supposed to be Mosby) has attacked the stockade at Annandale. Send at once what cavalry you have to that point to find the force of the enemy. Report information.

Respectfully,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

ALEXANDRIA, August 24, 1864.
(Received 10.20 a. m.)

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

An attack was made at Annandale about 5 o'clock this morning; the force is not known. The rebels were driven off. Major Horton, of Sixteenth New York, is following rebels up. Mosby was said to be in command, and demanded a surrender, which was refused. He had two pieces of cannon, and fired grape and canister. Re-enforcements have been sent from Falls Church. I have also sent out all my cavalry.

Respectfully,

H. H. WELLS,
Lieut. Col. and Prov. Mar. Gen., Defenses South of the Potomac.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., August 24, 1864.
(Received 3.25 p. m.)

Colonel TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: The force attacking at Annandale this morning was Mosby's, between 200 and 300, with artillery. They were repulsed, and retreated through Fairfax Court-House toward Centerville. Our cavalry in pursuit, about one hour and a half behind.*

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel, &c.

* See also Wells to Taylor, p. 637.

FORT CORCORAN, August 24, 1864.

(Received 9.15 a. m.)

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR:

An orderly just arrived with dispatches from cavalry camp near Falls Church, Va., informing me that the post at Annandale has been attacked by a large force of the enemy, having artillery. One hundred and seventy of the cavalry battalion is in stockade at Annandale. This dispatch is signed by Col. H. M. Lazelle, through his adjutant, Lieutenant Lansing, acting assistant adjutant-general. Can you send me troops?

G. A. DE RUSSY

Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,

Washington, D. C., August 24, 1864.

Brigadier-General DE RUSSY,

Fort Corcoran:

GENERAL: The force can only be Mosby's. Further information will be forwarded when received.

Respectfully,

J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,

Washington, D. C., August 24, 1864.

Brigadier-General DE RUSSY,

Commanding Division:

GENERAL: The attacking force at Annandale was simply a detachment of Mosby's people, and has been driven off.

Respectfully,

J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,

Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 24, 1864—6 a. m.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to inform you that an orderly has just arrived from a picket-post this side of Annandale bringing information that the stockade at Annandale is being attacked; in what force is not known, but have artillery. The shots can be heard distinctly from here. One of the men said that he saw two pieces of artillery and about fifty men.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 24, 1864—9 a. m.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to inform you that a dispatch has just been received from the officer commanding at Annandale. He states that Mosby attacked and drove in the pickets on the Fairfax Court-House road this morning about 5 o'clock. Afterward attacked the stockade, shelled it awhile, ordered it three times to surrender, and finding it would not, withdrew and gave up the attack, probably with an intention to threaten some other part of our picket-line. On learning of the attack every available man was sent out from here to give relief. Mosby had with him two pieces of artillery and with a force variously estimated at from less than 200 to 300, and even 500, men. No damage was done by him, except the wounding of one horse. The firing lasted about three-quarters of an hour, and the cannon were placed not over 300 or 400 yards from the stockade. The morning was exceedingly foggy, and what execution was done by our men is not known.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 24, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that no information has been received from Colonel Gansevoort. A picket-post, consisting of one corporal and three men, was picked up by Mosby this morning near Annandale. He was followed with all available mounted men to Germantown this morning as soon as a force could be sent from here. He was reported by citizens to have in reserve in that vicinity two additional pieces of artillery in position, and a considerable party with them. His whole strength was about 250 men. He had evidently been misinformed of the strength of the force at Annandale, and supposed it much less.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 24, 1864.

Brigadier-General DE RUSSY.

Comdg. Defenses South of the Potomac, Fort Corcoran, Va.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inform you that the attack at Annandale has ceased, and the rebels withdrew, perhaps with the intention of attacking some other part of my picket-line. The attacking party is said to have consisted of from less than 200 to 300, even 500 men, with two pieces artillery, all under Mosby. No damage was done.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Commanding Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 24, 1864.

Lient. C. B. LYELL,

Thirteenth New York Cav., Comdg. Cav. at Lewinsville:

LIEUTENANT: The party under Mosby which attacked the camp at Annandale this morning has retired from the attack without accomplishing anything more than the wounding of one horse. Another attempt will doubtless be made somewhere along our line, either during the day or to-night. The point selected will probably be at your stockade. The colonel commanding directs me to tell you to caution your pickets and your men to be on the alert, and assure yourself that they are, especially toward daybreak to-morrow, should an attack not come sooner. Keep two horses saddled in the stockade all the day and to-night, and in the case of an attack let us know here at once by sending out in two different directions. This will make sure of one of your messengers reaching us. Colonel Lazelle directs you not to surrender your command under any consideration or emergency. Please send word by the bearer how many horses and men you have with you.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN Y. LANSING,

First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS,
August 24, 1864.

Capt. E. B. PARSONS,

Assistant Adjutant-General, Middle Military Division:

CAPTAIN: In compliance with orders, I have the honor to report the following as field return for to-day:

| Command.               | Present for duty. |        |        |
|------------------------|-------------------|--------|--------|
|                        | Officers.         | Men.   | Total. |
| First Division.....    | 205               | 3,361  | 3,566  |
| Second Division.....   | 218               | 3,763  | 3,981  |
| Third Division.....    | 152               | 2,570  | 2,722  |
| Artillery Brigade..... | 28                | 752    | 780    |
| Total .....            | 603               | 10,446 | 11,049 |

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. G. WRIGHT,

Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Shepherdstown, W. Va., August 24, 1864.

General W. MERRITT,

Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: The chief of cavalry directs that you move your division at 6 a. m. on the Smithfield pike, marching as far as Walper's Cross-Roads, awaiting at that point until joined by the Third Division.

Further instructions will be given you at that point. Forage and rations are expected to arrive to-night, and if so, they will be issued with all dispatch.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

Abstract from field return of the Third Division, Cavalry Corps, commanded by Brig. Gen. James H. Wilson, for August 24, 1864.

| Troops.                    | For duty. |                     |                         | Aggregate present and absent. | Horses.   |                     |                       |
|----------------------------|-----------|---------------------|-------------------------|-------------------------------|-----------|---------------------|-----------------------|
|                            | Officers. | Men fully equipped. | Men not fully equipped. |                               | Officers. | Men's, serviceable. | Men's, unserviceable. |
| Division headquarters..... | 12        | 64                  | 25                      | 101                           | 36        | 85                  | .....                 |
| First Brigade.....         | 107       | 1,856               | 130                     | 2,333                         | 226       | 2,160               | 164                   |
| Second Brigade.....        | 56        | 1,242               | 111                     | 1,573                         | 149       | 1,587               | 106                   |
| Total.....                 | 175       | 3,162               | 266                     | 4,007                         | 411       | 3,832               | 270                   |
| Battery M.....             | 3         | 116                 | .....                   | 133                           | .....     | 209                 | .....                 |
| Batteries C and E.....     | 3         | 106                 | .....                   | 128                           | .....     | 194                 | .....                 |
| Total.....                 | 181       | 3,384               | 266                     | 4,268                         | 411       | 4,235               | 270                   |

POINT OF ROCKS, MD., August 24, 1864.

Brigadier-General STEVENSON,
Commanding:

A scouting party of twenty-four men started yesterday to Loudoun County, crossing the river at Point of Rocks ford; from there went to Waterford, thence to Wheatland and Southerville, Va., and Short Hill Mountain; returned this morning, having seen or heard of no rebels except a few straggling guerrillas. I hear from reliable authority that up to noon of the 23d there was no force east of Blue Ridge. Another scout is out.

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Shepherdstown, Va., August 24, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Second Division:

GENERAL: The chief of cavalry directs me to inform you that a reconnaissance sent out from the First Division arrived in Martinsburg yesterday morning and found no enemy. Their pickets were on the Winchester pike, about five miles out. There has been no enemy in the town, except a small party on Saturday. Lieutenant Finley, son of surgeon-general, was found there. Do you know anything of him? The railroad is destroyed pretty effectually near Kearneysville. You can withdraw the pickets on the Sharpsburg pike, leaving, as you suggested, a small party at the ferry to report what may be going on in our camps.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

---

HANCOCK, August 24, 1864.

(Received Oakland 11.05 a. m.)

Major-General KELLEY:

General Averell was at Sharpsburg yesterday. His pickets are at all the fords along the river from McCoy's Ferry, on the Maryland side. The fight on Sunday was near Berryville. I will come up this p. m. Gilmore's forces reported near Martinsburg while I was there.

F. B. MILLER.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 27. }

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, Md., August 24, 1864.

I. The One hundred and fifty-fourth Regiment Ohio National Guard, Col. R. Stevenson commanding, will proceed to Camp Chase, Ohio, for the purpose of being mustered out of service. The quartermaster's department is directed to provide transportation.

* * * * *

By order of Brevet Major-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

CLARKSBURG, August 24, 1864.

Major-General KELLEY:

Rebels surprised and captured the picket-post at Huttonsville this morning.

N. WILKINSON,
Colonel.

---

CLARKSBURG, August 24, 1864.

(Received Cumberland 9.20 p. m.)

Major-General KELLEY:

The following received from Beverly:

About 100 dismounted men came across the mountains, stepped into the camp of the pickets at Huttonsville at 3 o'clock this morning, and captured about seventy horses, seventy sets horse equipments, seventy carbines, and accouterments. They made off in great haste toward Crab Bottom. They captured forty men, but could not get them along as fast as they demanded, and let them go. No one killed; one man seriously wounded. Major Shaw, of the Eighth Ohio Volunteer Cavalry, is in pursuit.

R. YOUART,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

N. WILKINSON,
Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS FORCES IN KANAWHA VALLEY,
Charleston, W. Va., August 24, 1864.

Col. H. CRAMPTON,
Commanding Post, Fayetteville :

Move all government stores immediately to Camp Piatt. As soon as this is done report with your regiment at Camp Piatt for transportation home. Abandon nothing.

J. C. SULLIVAN,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

---

CITY POINT, VA., August 25, 1864—2.30 p. m.
(Received 6 p. m.)

Major-General HALLECK,
Washington, D. C. :

Pickett's and Field's divisions are here. You can say this to General Sheridan, and that there is no doubt about it. One regiment from each of the four brigades of Pickett's division were detached a couple of weeks ago, and for some time I did not know but that they had gone to the Valley. These regiments are now back.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

---

CITY POINT, VA., August 25, 1864—11 a. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Harper's Ferry, Va. :

I have good authority for believing that orders have gone to the Valley for the return of Fitz Lee's cavalry. This is the general talk among the Southern soldiers, and a man sent to Richmond by the provost-marshal learns the same fact. It is also natural that this should be so after the reverse of the enemy's cavalry met with on the evening of the 23d. Our troops have quietly destroyed the Weldon road, working south, the enemy's cavalry falling back before ours without offering resistance. If this should be so, it will give you a great advantage in harassing the enemy, and probably might send entirely around to his rear, and destroy his trains, supplies, &c.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General

---

HALLTOWN, August 25, 1864—11 p. m.

Lieutenant-General GRANT :

There is not much doubt of the presence here of two divisions of Longstreet's corps, General Anderson commanding. The enemy succeeded this evening in getting Shepherdstown. I do not know whether they will attempt to cross or not. I ordered two divisions of cavalry to make a reconnaissance this morning on the enemy's flank; they met Breckinridge's corps at Blue Spring or Leetown, marching toward Shepherdstown. Our cavalry skirmished with this corps sharply during the afternoon, with but little loss. The cavalry were forced to give up Shepherdstown, all but one brigade coming back to Halltown; this brigade, it is supposed, crossed at the Shepherdstown Ford. I cannot say whether or not the enemy will attempt to cross in the morning; they must be very strong to do so. My information is that Early marched with that intention, but reports are very unreliable. The enemy are in very strong force. I will not give up this place, and hope to be able to strike the enemy divided. I hardly think that they will attempt to go to Washington.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE UNITED STATES,
Washington, D. C., August 25, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Middle Military Division:

Scouts report that no troops had moved to or from the Valley up to Tuesday night, 23d. Rebels are hauling considerable grain from Beaver Dam Station. All information brought here by scouts is communicated to you.

GEO. K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

[AUGUST 25, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, &c., see p. 21.]

---

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Near Halltown, Va., August 25, 1864.

Corps and other independent commanders will keep their commands constantly supplied with three days' rations in haversacks, upon which rations the men of the several commands may be required to subsist four days.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 25, 1864.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I desire to submit a few observations with regard to the present military status here.

When General Sheridan received General Grant's dispatch informing him of Early's re-enforcement and directing him to assume a defensive attitude, the design of further pursuit and giving Early battle somewhere in the Valley had not been relinquished by General Sheridan, but was about being vigorously executed. The position at Cedar Creek, though strong in the immediate line of battle front, was a most indefensible one, nevertheless, as numerous gaps through both ranges of mountains opened ready ingress to the enemy in our rear, and, besides, was flankable on the right of the road leading down the base of the mountains west of the Valley and protected on the east by Cedar Creek and a heavy growth of timber. With all these advantages given the enemy, General Sheridan showed no trepidation, but gave Early's men opportunity to try his powers, and at his leisure took up the retrograde down the Valley. At Winchester General Sheridan halted, remained long enough to give the enemy a chance to fight, and without being driven, or seemingly being compelled, again dropped back to Berryville, where he again halted until the enemy came up, and here gave him every opportunity to attack, which, declining to do, Sheridan again moved back, halting at Charlestown and offering the same inducements to battle. It seemed pretty well established that the enemy would have given battle here had Sheridan remained another day. Early had developed our line by the fight of Sunday, and at night it is said massed his forces for a sudden assault. Monday morning daylight, however, found Sheridan in position where he now is. During this march to the rear the cavalry have carefully watched the right and left, and at no time has it been possible for the enemy to have passed through the Blue Ridge for Washington, or to the right and into Pennsylvania, without General Sheridan being almost immediately apprised of it. The movements of our army have been such as to deceive even its own officers, and it is thought thus far have baffled the enemy, who has acted as though he thought Sheridan inviting rather than avoiding battle, and ready at any time to assume the offensive should Early for a moment weaken his force or uncover himself. The impression in our army, and it seems to have reached the enemy, is that our force numbers about 50,000, and this may account for the caution Early uses, and the fact that he holds his army solidly and in close hand. The advantages are now all with Sheridan, as they were all with Early at Cedar Creek.

Early cannot cross the Potomac at Shepherdstown into Pennsylvania, as its proximity would enable Sheridan to strike his column in flank at a moment of his own choosing. He will not attempt a like movement at Williamsport, as Sheridan could immediately put his army in their rear and close all lines of communication south, and, with such aid as could be readily given him, annihilate the enemy. He cannot pass through Snicker's Gap toward Washington without his movement being known in six hours from its commencement; he would enter a country lately made desolate and wholly incapable of subsisting an army, and could not reach Washington so soon as could Sheridan by the north side. It was necessary for Early, designing either of these objects, to have first beaten Sheridan, and at least temporarily to have rendered his army powerless. This he has failed to do, and it is no longer possible for him to do it. But one course is left him (many miles from his supplies in a country recently devastated by the torch), viz, go back up the Valley and abandon the campaign wholly, or commence a new one under more favorable auspices; and having learned by the experience of this one, every evidence indicates that the enemy will within a very few hours take up the line of retreat. Sheridan's army is in splendid condition, well in hand and manifesting the greatest anxiety for a fight. There is a feeling of entire confidence in their leader, and regiments talk about being able to whip brigades. Sheridan really has a very fine army here, and the universal good spirits that prevail and anxiety to fight manifested would make it a hard army to compete with. As this is the campaign of the enemy, and not of our army, I think it may be set down as a failure, and therefore a success to our arms. Sheridan will begin from this time to harass them, and cannot fail to inflict severe punishment before they leave the Valley.

These are reflections and deductions, Mr. Secretary (which pardon me for making), plainly inferable and deducible from my standpoint, and are doubtless not strange to yourself. My telegrams from time to time have given only facts as I could glean them, as I supposed, and still suppose, you prefer to draw your own conclusions.

General Torbert is directed to try and draw Fitz Lee into a fight to-day, while, in front, General Sheridan will give Early a little quiet.

I am, Mr. Secretary, your obedient servant,

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE DEPT., 8TH ARMY CORPS,
No. 213. } Baltimore, August 25, 1864.

* * * * *

2. The Ninety-first Regiment New York Veteran Volunteers, having reported to these headquarters, in obedience to orders from the honorable Secretary of War, is hereby ordered to proceed to Fort McHenry and report to Bvt. Brig. Gen. W. W. Morris, U. S. Army, commanding Second Separate Brigade, Eighth Army Corps.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Wallace:

SAML. B. LAWRENCE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE DEPARTMENT,
Baltimore, Md., August 25, 1864.

Bvt. Brig. Gen. W. W. MORRIS,

Commanding Second Separate Brigade:

GENERAL: I am directed by Major-General Wallace to say that inasmuch as the Ninety-first New York Infantry Veteran Volunteers has been ordered to report to you for duty, you are requested to strengthen the garrison at Fort Federal Hill, so that hereafter it will be unnecessary for the commanding officer there to ask for detail to forward stragglers to their commands.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAMES R. ROSS,
Major and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

CLARKSBURG, August 25, 1864—8 a. m.
(Received 12.15 p. m.)

Col. J. A. HARDIE,

Inspector-General:

I left Beverly yesterday at 7 a. m. At 3 a. m. yesterday morning a party of the enemy, about 100 strong, surprised an outpost at Huttonsville, ten miles the other side of Beverly, and captured seventy-five horses, horse equipments, arms; they did not take any of the men. The force at Beverly is 477, Eighth Ohio Cavalry; they are armed with the Union carbine, a worthless arm; have only fifteen rounds of ammunition per man; have not pistols nor sabers. One company of

First West Virginia Cavalry is at Buckhannon, sixty men; this company is not mounted. About sixty of the enemy were reported seventeen miles from Buckhannon yesterday going in the direction of Weston. Only forty men at this post, none at Webster, and part of a company at Grafton. There is danger of the enemy breaking up the railroad between Cumberland and Wheeling, unless other dispositions of the troops are made in this vicinity. I go from here to Cumberland to-day.

WM. SINCLAIR,
Lieutenant-Colonel.

---

HALLTOWN, VA., August 25, 1864—8 a. m.
(Received 12.30 p. m.)

Major-General AUGUR,
Commanding Department of Washington:

The major-general commanding is exceedingly anxious to have Snicker's Gap and vicinity watched, and the earliest information of any movement of any enemy through the gap. He desires that you have scouting parties and reliable scouts, if you have them, sent to the gap, so as to watch it; you should send at the earliest possible moment. All wheat, hay, and fodder in Loudoun County that can be burned up should be. General Grant directs that all the crops be carried off or destroyed.

Respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 25, 1864—9 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Comdg. Middle Military Division, Harper's Ferry, W. Va.:

Among the persons brought in by Major Waite is one well known to me as a reliable Union man, who has heretofore given me valuable information; he is from Upperville; says he heard no talk there of the rebel army intending to move this way; says they are conscripting everybody there capable of bearing arms; those who join Mosby are exempt from joining Lee's army. By this means Mosby can command between 800 and 1,000 men. To get information from Snicker's Gap would require a force able to manage Mosby, whose headquarters are on the route there. Small parties will be picked up. I will send the Eighth Illinois Cavalry again to that vicinity as soon as it can move, and will send with it one of the regiments (very small) from Falls Church. To clean out Loudoun County and destroy the crops there will require a much larger force than I can send; I will do all I can, however. The horses of the Eighth Illinois have to be shod before they can move; I will let you know to-morrow when they will move. I have a man at Middleburg, who is employed to give me the earliest information of any move of the rebels in this direction; I trust he will not deceive me.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

HALLTOWN, W. VA., August 25, 1864—11 p. m.

(Received 10.30 a. m. 26th.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,

Commanding Department of Washington:

My reports from prisoners, scouts, &c., are such as to leave but little doubt in my mind that at least two divisions of Longstreet's corps, under the command of General Anderson, are here. I sent out two divisions of cavalry to make a reconnaissance to-day on the enemy's left flank; they met Breckinridge's corps on the march at or near Blue Spring or Leetown. Our cavalry skirmished sharply with this corps all afternoon, and were forced to fall back, all but one brigade coming into Halltown; this brigade (Custer's) is supposed to have crossed at Shepherdstown. The enemy now hold Shepherdstown. I cannot say whether they will cross or not; if they do, I shall try and strike them with their force separated by the river, which is reported to be rising. The reports are that Early marched with this intention this morning. I do not think they will move on Washington. Have you any news?

P. H. SHERIDAN,

Major-General.

ALEXANDRIA, VA., August 25, 1864—7.50 p. m.

Colonel TAYLOR,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: The patrols report all quiet to-day. It is reported that Mosby attacked the post at Falls Church about 1 o'clock last night, capturing two or three men and several horses.

H. H. WELLS,

Lieutenant-Colonel.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,

Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 25, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that the party under Colonel Gansevoort returned early this morning. Colonel Gansevoort obtained positive information that there is no force at either Warrenton or Culpeper; that the Orange and Alexandria Railroad is used only as far as Culpeper; that squads of 50 and 100 men frequently come up on the railroad and pass through Culpeper on their way to join the main command in the Valley, and that a large force, consisting of over 10,000 infantry and cavalry, passed through Warrenton about a week since. This is probably the force of which you have already been informed. The usual small parties of guerrillas were met with. The party captured and brought in five prisoners (two soldiers and three citizens), forty horses, one mule, horse equipments, and harness leather. A number of rebel uniforms were found in a house near Warrenton and burned. A picket-post, consisting of a corporal and three men (near this camp), of the Sixteenth New York Cavalry, was attacked at 2 a. m. to-day by a party of mounted rebels; four horses and two men were taken; one man badly wounded, and the corporal escaped. Augustus Klock, a citizen living near Falls Church, was arrested by Mosby yesterday near Vienna, and was released this morning. He states that Mosby on releasing him told him to inform me that he (Mosby) had sent Maj. W. H. Forbes and Captain Manning, Second Massachusetts Cavalry, to the penitentiary, in retaliation for the confinement of Jack Barnes and Phil. Trammell, two of Mosby's men. Both were tried by a court-martial in Washington and sentenced to the Albany penitentiary. Barnes, I believe, was tried for violation of the oath of allegiance and stealing horses; Trammell, for being a guerrilla. It has been ascertained quite positively that the person alluded to by you in your communication of August 24 as in the habit of visiting a female in the vicinity of Vienna is not an officer, but a non-commissioned officer of the Second Massachusetts Cavalry, who was yesterday relieved and ordered to rejoin his regiment.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,

Col. Sixteenth New York Vol. Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

P. S.—I forgot to state that Colonel Gansevoort brings information that the rebels obtain their supplies by the way of Thornton's Gap and Sperryville. The Warrenton route is used but little.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 25, 1864.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,

Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: I have the honor to inform you that Colonel Currie's command has been relieved from duty at Harper's Ferry. The major-general commanding has placed this brigade in position on the left of General Crook's line, and desires that it remain there for the present. Colonel Currie has been directed to report to his division commander, and to notify him when his brigade is posted.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 25, 1864—7.30 p. m. (Received 9.25 p. m.)

Major-General COUCH:

Torbert's cavalry repulsed this morning by the enemy's infantry near Leetown. Enemy exchanging shots with my pickets this evening at Shepherdstown Ford; drove in my pickets at Falling Waters to within one mile of Williamsport. Column reported moving toward Hedgesville. No enemy on this side river yet.

WM. W. AVERELL,

Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 25, 1864—4.40 p. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff:

The force we met this morning was Breckinridge's corps, composed of Wharton's and Gordon's divisions. A rebel lieutenant says they marched from their camp near Charlestown this morning between daylight and sunrise, passed through Leetown, and were on march when we struck them, going, he says, to Shepherdstown; Fitz Lee's cavalry was also on the road, but had turned off toward Martinsburg; both Early and Breckinridge were at Leetown with the troops. The lieutenant further says he don't know where the two other divisions of Rodes and Ramseur are, nor where the two under Anderson are, but supposes the latter about Halltown or in that direction; their trains also moved to-day, but not by the road upon which Early was marching. An officer just in from Torbert says he thinks they are following Merritt with cavalry, but the firing seems too heavy and continuous for that; he also says Torbert had turned off the Shepherdstown [road] and is bearing directly for the river about Antietam Ford. The firing seems to grow nearer. I am sending out scouting parties. My impression is that the rebel lieutenant's statement is reliable, and that they are making a move northward. The absence of the trains is nothing significant, even if true. A strong attack on the two divisions still in your front, or thought to be, might stop them. I will forward all the prisoners at once—eight or ten.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,

August 25, 1864—5 p. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH, Chief of Staff:

The two divisions of cavalry formed a junction at Walper's Cross-Roads about 9 a. m., neither having seen anything of the enemy before arriving there. The command was closed up and the advance made in the following order: Chapman's brigade on extreme left, half a mile from pike; McIntosh close by the side of the pike; Custer on McIntosh's right, and Cesnola on extreme right; all by flank of brigades, with skirmishers in front; regular brigade in reserve on pike. About a mile beyond Kearneysville met the enemy. Chapman bore farther to the left, guided by Colonel Brinton; struck enemy in flank. McIntosh dismounted and moved forward heavy skirmish line; Custer same on his right. Cesnola charged, mounted, through open fields; drove the enemy three-quarters of a mile; soon ascertained that his force was all infantry; drove the skirmishers clear back, killing quite a number, and before they could attack with main force our cavalry was mounted and rapidly withdrawn, covered by a line of mounted skirmishers, and the Reserve Brigade ready to act. Officers and men behaved with great gallantry and steadiness. Loss of my division will not exceed seventy. The enemy did not pursue me after I withdrew from the pike, but seemed to continue toward Shepherdstown. General Torbert reports with cavalry. Torbert is now moving toward me.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,

Camp Near Engel's, August 25, 1864—3.50 p. m.

Brigadier-General TORBERT, Chief of Cavalry:

GENERAL: We are in our old camp all right, but I find my four wagons of ammunition and ambulances have followed your route to Shepherdstown; please send them to me under charge of the bearer,

Mr. Yard, of my staff. There seems to have been some firing to-day on the left of the infantry, though as to what extent I can't tell. Have sent for my wagons, and also sent an officer to report to Sheridan, knowing it would be some time before you could communicate.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

ORDERS.]

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,

August 25, 1864—10 p. m.

The command will move to-night across the bridge at Harper's Ferry and take the road through Pleasant Valley, in the following order: First Brigade, with Fitzhugh's battery; Second Brigade, with Pennington's battery; ambulances and ammunition train; regimental and supply trains. Pickets will be called in at once. The quartermaster, commissary, and ordnance officers will move their respective trains loaded with supplies, as soon after the division has passed as practicable, across the bridge at Harper's Ferry, and join the division without delay near the South Mountain Gap, between it and Boonsborough.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

Halltown, August 25, 1864—6.45 p. m.

Brigadier-General STEVENSON,

Commanding at Harper's Ferry:

GENERAL: Brigadier-General Torbert's cavalry, all except one brigade, fell back toward this place; one brigade, it is supposed, has crossed at Shepherdstown. I desire that you will send scouts down to the ford at Shepherdstown and ascertain if the enemy make any crossing at that point or elsewhere in that vicinity during the night. Send the earliest reports received to these headquarters at once.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

GENERAL ORDERS, }
No. 68.

HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Camp near Halltown, W. Va., August 25, 1864.

I. All enlisted men within this department serving without proper authority away from the brigade, military district, or division in which their batteries or regiments may be, will be at once returned to their companies and regiments for duty, and officers are hereby empowered to seize their men absent without such authority wherever they may find them. Men thus absent, who do not return as above required within a reasonable period after the promulgation of this order, will be reported as deserters.

II. General officers and colonels commanding divisions and brigades within this department will select their staff officers from their own commands, and will at once relieve all officers now on duty with them belonging elsewhere, except the aides-de-camp general officers are authorized by law to have.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WEST VIRGINIA,
No. 154. } Camp near Halltown, W. Va., August 25, 1864.

* * * * *

2. After complying with Special Orders, No. 14, current series, headquarters Middle Military Division, Brig. Gen. A. N. Duffié, commanding First Cavalry Division, will proceed overland with the remaining regiments of his division, via Hagerstown, Md., to Hancock, Md., and from thence by rail to Cumberland, Md., and there establish a camp of instruction, where he will remount his division by regiments as rapidly as possible, the quartermaster's department supplying the necessary horses. The quartermaster's department will furnish the necessary transportation.

* * * * *

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

POINT OF ROCKS, MD., August 25, 1864—8.35 p. m.
Brigadier-General STEVENSON:

All quiet along my line. No enemy in Loudoun County. Will leave this place to-morrow at 6 a. m.

A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. 1ST. CAV. DIV., ARMY OF W. VA.,
No. 35. } Point of Rocks, Md., August 25, 1864.

* * * * *

VIII. In accordance with Special Orders, No. 14, extract 10, headquarters Middle Military Division, the following-named regiments are hereby detached from this division and will report as designated below: First New York (Lincoln) Cavalry to Brig. Gen. W. W. Averell, at Fair Play, near Williamsport, Md.; Twelfth Pennsylvania Cavalry to Brig. Gen. J. D. Stevenson, commanding Military District of Harper's Ferry, W. Va.

By command of Brigadier-General Duffié:

E. W. CLARK, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 25, 1864—6.30 p. m.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: When I sent you directions this afternoon I was under the impression that Merritt would cross at Shepherdstown, which is not the case; Custer's brigade may have crossed there. The enemy, who now have Shepherdstown, will perhaps cross, in which case I want you to keep close in on their left flank and pitch into them. It is reported that Fitz Lee has gone by way of Martinsburg, in which case you must look out for him. If Custer has crossed he can join his division, as I will send it toward South Mountain Pass; please inform him.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

If you and Custer are pressed by Fitz Lee's cavalry pitch into it; you must defeat him if possible.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Halltown, W. Va., August 25, 1864.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland, Md.:

Please send at once by rail to Hancock, Md., and from thence overland via Hagerstown to this place, the stragglers belonging to this command that you have collected at Cumberland.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 28. }

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, Md., August 25, 1864.

* * * * *

III. In pursuance of orders from the major-general commanding the department, the One hundred and fifty-sixth Regiment Ohio National Guard, Col. C. Marker, will proceed to Camp Chase, Ohio, for the purpose of being mustered, their term of service having expired. The quartermaster's department will provide transportation.

By order of Brevet Major-General Kelley:

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 25, 1864.
(Received 6.03 p. m.)

General KELLEY:

I have reliable information from citizens from Bloomery, Oakland, and Sleepy Creek Valley, who report no rebels in that vicinity; none have been there since the raid. I also have reliable information from Martinsburg and line of road this side; no rebels there.

P. B. PETRIE,
Captain.

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 25, 1864.

Col. R. STEVENSON,

Comdg. 154th Ohio National Guard, New Creek, W. Va.:

The term of service of your regiment having expired, and being on the eve of your departure for Ohio, preparatory to being mustered out of service, I accept the opportunity offered of expressing to yourself and the officers and men of your regiment my thanks for the eminent service you have rendered the country while in my command. Always ready, your faithfulness has only been equaled by your willingness on being called upon to pass through the ordeal of battle. Even in your short term of service your bravery and unfaltering courage were nobly attested. You can return, colonel, to your homes with the proud satisfaction of knowing that while you relieved the veteran troops for duty in the front, it was your pleasant duty to be participants at New Creek, W. Va., August 4, 1864, in administering to the enemies of our Government one of the most disastrous repulses in the history of the war. I regret very much, colonel, that the requirement of the service would not permit of your departure for your homes at the expiration of your term, but gladly bear testimony to the willingness with which you remained at your country's call. I trust, colonel, to soon learn that there are many members of your regiment again in the service nobly battling for the common cause.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 25, 1864.

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War:

General Kelley's course with the 100-days' men is creating great annoyance and dissatisfaction. I telegraphed you about the One hundred and fifty-fourth Regiment, but have no reply. The One hundred and fifty second, One hundred and fifty-sixth, and One hundred and forty-fifth have a messenger here this morning with complaints. He reports from General Kelley direct that he pleads orders from General Crook to hold all troops in his command until further orders. I cannot say how far this is true; I know the regiments are being held overtime and the result is injurious. Please advise me on this point; the men look to me for some explanation on the subject.

JOHN BROUGH,
Governor of Ohio.

CITY POINT, VA., August 26, 1864—2.30 p. m.

(Received 12.10 a. m. 27th.)

Major-General SHERIDAN,

Halftown, Va.:

I telegraphed you that I had good reason for believing that Fitz Lee had been ordered back here. I now think it likely that all troops will be ordered back from the Valley except what they believe to be the minimum number to detain you. My reason for supposing this is based upon the fact that yielding up the Weldon road seems to be a blow to the enemy he cannot stand. I think I do not overstate the loss of the enemy in the last two weeks at 10,000 killed and wounded. We have lost heavily, mostly in captured, when the enemy gained temporary advantages. Watch closely, and if you find this theory correct push with all vigor. Give the enemy no rest, and if it is possible to follow to the Virginia Central road, follow that far. Do all the damage to railroads and crops you can. Carry off stock of all descriptions, and negroes, so as to prevent further planting. If the war is to last another year, we want the Shenandoah Valley to remain a barren waste.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

WASHINGTON, August 26, 1864—11.40 a. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN:

It is reported that General Kelley is keeping several Ohio regiments after the expiration of their time, which is creating great dissatisfaction in Ohio. Moreover, after the expiration of their term the troops are useless and will not fight. Please direct that they go home.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 26, 1864.

Respectfully referred to Brevet Major-General Crook, commanding Department of West Virginia, who will order all regiments whose term of service has expired to their place of rendezvous to be mustered out in accordance with within directions.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

A. F. HAYDEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[AUGUST 26, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, &c., see p. 21.]

HARPER'S FERRY, VA., August 26, 1864—9 p. m.
(Received 10 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

A reconnaissance this evening in front of General Crook's corps captured eight officers and about eighty men of the enemy. He is still in our front in force. Breckinridge's move yesterday toward Shepherdstown turns out to have been an attempted decoy, as he is back again in camp on Early's left. No enemy at Shepherdstown. Some skirmishing at Williamsport to-day, but no serious attempt to cross. Averell is at Williamsport. Wilson in that vicinity and below. Custer at Shepherdstown. Torbert on our right, connecting with Custer. No movement of enemy toward Snicker's Gap. He seems nonplussed and in doubt what to do.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

HALLTOWN, VA., August 26, 1864—9 a. m.

(Received 11 a. m.)

Maj. Gen. C. C. AUGUR,

Commanding Department of Washington:

Your dispatch received.* Nothing has passed through Snicker's Gap. The operations in Loudoun County and of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry can, of course, be only in proportion to the force you have for the purpose. I have made no change in my position here, and the enemy has made no attempt to cross at Shepherdstown.

P. H. SHERIDAN,

Major-General.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,

August 26, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN,

Commanding Middle Division, Harper's Ferry:

Colonel Gansevoort, with his regiment, Thirteenth New York Cavalry, have returned, and bring information that there is no force of the enemy either at Culpeper or Warrenton, and but small parties passing up into the Valley. The railroad is not used this side of Culpeper. Supplies for the rebels pass through Sperryville and Thornton's Gap.

C. C. AUGUR,

Major-General, Commanding.

HDQRS. DEPT. OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,

Washington, August 26, 1864—3 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,

Commanding Middle Military Division, Harper's Ferry:

The provisional battalion of cavalry belonging to Gregg's division, which is now on the upper Potomac guarding the river while the Eighth Illinois is absent, has been ordered to City Point. This will leave me without means of guarding the river while the Eighth Illinois is absent. Major Waite reports to-day that he cannot get his regiment ready to move before Monday. The forges, coal, &c., had to be sent from here. I think he will get ready as soon as possible. If you think it advisable I will send out the Sixteenth New York in the direction of Aldie. They cannot raise more than 300 for the field, and they cannot go to Snicker's Gap. They may scout about Aldie and pick up rumors.

C. C. AUGUR,

Major-General, Commanding.

HALLTOWN, W. VA., August 26, 1864—8 p. m.

(Received 10 a. m. 27th.)

Major-General AUGUR,

Commanding Department of Washington:

I have nothing important to report to-night. The movements of the enemy yesterday evening toward Shepherdstown did not cause me to make any changes, and from appearances they went back to Charlestown or vicinity last night. This evening Crook made a dash at their line and Lowell charged and captured seven officers and sixty-nine privates, one lieutenant-colonel. Yesterday I got twenty-four in a charge made by Seventeenth Pennsylvania. Averell reports rebel cavalry at Williamsport, but no crossing of the river.

* Of August 25, 9 p. m., p. 909.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HALLTOWN, VA., August 26, 1864—10.30 p. m.
(Received 11.40 a. m. 27th.)

Major-General AUGUR,
Department of Washington:

Your dispatch of 3 p. m. received. I am instructed by the major-general commanding to say that Gregg's cavalry should be sent to him (Gregg) at once. You will, with the cavalry that you have on hand belonging to your department, picket the river and send out scouting parties as you may deem best.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

P. S.—Crook's men brought in to-day the horses of eight of Mosby's men.

J. W. F.

---

HILTON HEAD, August 26, 1864.
(Via Fort Monroe 4 p. m. 28th. Received 11.20 p. m. 28th.)

Major-General HALLECK, Chief of Staff:

On the steamer Fulton I send the One hundred and fourth Pennsylvania Volunteers, 900 men, to Washington to report to you. The commanding officer has orders to report by telegraph from Fort Monroe, and then, unless otherwise ordered, to proceed to Alexandria and march thence to Washington.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. G. FOSTER,
Major-General.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS OF THE ARMY,
August 29, 1864.

On its arrival this regiment will report to Major-General Augur for assignment to duty in the defenses.

By order of Major-General Halleck:

J. C. KELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 26, 1864.

Maj. JOHN M. WAITE, Commanding at Muddy Branch:

Major Fry has been relieved from duty on the upper Potomac, with his detachment. You will leave no picket on the river. Your regimental camp must be left in charge of a squad of convalescents and dismounted men.

Very respectfully,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

MUDDY BRANCH, August 26, 1864.

(Received 6 p. m.)

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: If the river is to be left open the enemy can cross two or three at a time and concentrate in the woods quite a little force. I find on my return something like thirty or forty over in rear. It will require larger guard at telegraph station, Darnestown. My regimental property will be much exposed.

Respectfully,

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 26, 1864.

Col. H. M. LAZELLE,
Commanding Cavalry Brigade:

COLONEL: The major-general commanding desires that you prepare your regiment, the Sixteenth New York Cavalry, for active service, with as little delay as practicable. You will be expected to scout, in conjunction with the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, in the direction of Upperville. Please inform these headquarters when your people will be ready.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS,
No. 180. } August 26, 1864.

* * * * *

5. Pursuant with instructions received from headquarters Middle Military Division, directing Brig. Gen. D. D. Bidwell to remain on duty with this corps, he is hereby assigned to the command of the Third Brigade, Second Division.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. H. WHITTELSEY,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 26, 1864—2 p. m.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. GEORGE CROOK,
Commanding Army of West Virginia:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you make a strong reconnoissance in your front at 4 p. m. to-day with one division of your army. The general also instructs me to say that he will visit your headquarters in the course of an hour.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

P. S.—The reconnoissance should be made on the left of your line.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

McCLELLAN'S LOOKOUT, August 26, 1864.

(Received 12.45 p. m.)

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH:

Lieutenant Hall reports that he can see no rebels in Shepherdstown now. Our cavalry left Sharpsburg at 11 a. m., on the road to Harper's Ferry.

ELLIS,
Lieutenant.

[Indorsement.]

Respectfully referred to Brigadier-General Torbert.

This cavalry must be Custer's brigade. Where did you order it?

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY CORPS,

August 26, 1864—6 a. m.

General MERRITT,

Commanding First Division:

GENERAL: Have you heard anything of General Custer and brigade and First New York? What news from the reconnaissance you were directed to send toward Shepherdstown this morning on the road we came yesterday? General Sheridan is anxious to know whether their infantry are where we left them near the brick church.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

---

AUGUST 26, 1864—7.05 p. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,

Commanding Division:

GENERAL: No report whatever has been sent from these headquarters, as everything was quiet and is quiet. Not a single shot has been fired to day by my pickets. My line extends from the river to the right of Colonel Gibbs, well connecting with him. I would have sent, as usual, the report of the picket, even when nothing occurred, but I was inspecting the line myself and it kept me nearly all day out of camp.

Very respectfully, yours,

DI CESNOLA,
Colonel, Commanding Second Brigade.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

Near Halltown, August 26, 1864.

Brigadier-General CUSTER,

Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: The chief of cavalry directs that you move your brigade and the First New York Dragoons (as soon as General Wilson's division arrives at Shepherdstown Ford) to Antietam Ford, or to a good position in the vicinity of the mouth of Antietam Creek. Report your arrival to Generals Sheridan, Merritt, and these headquarters. General Merritt is for the present on the right of the infantry. The brigadier-general commanding also desires me to extend his congratulations to you in getting your command across the river.

Very respectfully,

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

(Copy to General Merritt.)

---

HEADQUARTERS FIRST BRIGADE, FIRST DIVISION,
August 26, 1864—3 p. m.

General TORBERT,
Commanding Cavalry Corps:

GENERAL: I have the honor to report the arrival at this point (Antietam Creek) of my command. I had a severe engagement with the enemy yesterday near Shepherdstown. The enemy attempted to cut me off from the fords, but were unsuccessful. My command crossed at Boteler's Ford in as good order as if marching from parade; I did not see a single straggler. The enemy made desperate efforts to capture Ransom's guns, but were foiled. My loss is quite small, considering the circumstances.

Very respectfully,

G. A. CUSTER,
Brigadier-General.

Please send this to General Merritt.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Boonsborough, August 26, 1864—5.20 p. m.

Brigadier-General CUSTER,
Antietam Ford:

GENERAL: I have received an order, a copy of which I sent you several hours ago, directing me to hold the Shepherdstown fords, but since then I have heard through the Fifth New York that Averell had not succeeded in preventing the rebels crossing at Williamsport, and had fallen back with the view of fighting at Hagerstown. In view of these facts I have thought it best not to go to Shepherdstown, but to hold myself in readiness to support Averell by marching rapidly to Hagerstown and forming a junction with him. I have sent through an officer to communicate with him, and directed the Fifth New York to watch the fords. If the enemy has already crossed, the first thing is to whip him, and if we all go at him together Lee hasn't got cavalry enough in this portion of the country to withstand us. I hope you got off yesterday evening without any serious loss.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 26, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff, Headquarters Middle Military Division :

COLONEL: I am still at Boonsborough waiting to hear from Averell; nothing new from him since my last dispatch. Colonel Hammond, with the Fifth New York Cavalry, is watching the fords about Shepherdstown. I shall not move from here until I hear from Averell or receive positive instructions from General Torbert. General Custer is at Antietam Furnace, and I hear that his horses are in a wretched condition and his command without forage. I shall communicate to you important information received. Have sent an officer to Averell and expect him back. There seem to be no indications of an attempt on the part of the enemy to cross this side of Williamsport. I shall act as circumstances may seem to indicate would be best. The trains have gone to Harper's Ferry.

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION CAVALRY,
Boonsborough, August 26, 1864—4 p. m.

Brigadier-General TORBERT,

Chief of Cavalry:

GENERAL: Your order to hold the Shepherdstown fords was received less than an hour ago. Since it came I have received word through the Fifth New York, and it from one of Averell's officers, that the enemy had succeeded in crossing cavalry above Williamsport, and that Averell intended to fight them near Hagerstown, and have therefore written to Averell saying I would march to him and help him with the job of cleaning out Fitz Lee, unless some imperative orders to the contrary should be received. I have directed two squadrons to watch the Shepherdstown fords, and will determine my final course by the information that I get in the next hour. If they have simply crossed cavalry the sooner we dispose of it the sooner can we devote ourselves to watching the movement of the infantry. Come out yourself if possible. I'll send my trains to Frederick, it being nearer and on better roads.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

CIRCULAR.]

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 26, 1864.

Brigade commanders will immediately supply their commands with rations and forage from the division supply trains, as much as can be carried on the horses without unnecessarily overloading them; and will be ready to move as soon as possible, reporting when their commands are in readiness. It is desirable that no time shall be unnecessarily lost. The trains, with the exception of six wagon-loads of ammunition—four of Spencer and two of Sharps—will return to the vicinity of Harper's Ferry and there await further orders.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

General McIntosh will take the forage and subsistence for the Fifth New York Cavalry in wagons, and send the wagons back as soon as empty.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.]

HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 26, 1864.

The command will be saddled up at 4.30 a. m. to-morrow and ready for any instant emergency that may arise.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 26, 1864—morning.

General STEVENSON:

I sent last night a division of cavalry to Rohrersville or vicinity. Custer is at Sharpsburg, having crossed at Shepherdstown. Where have you the dismounted cavalry, and have you sufficient men in Fort Duncan and on Maryland Heights?

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Halltown, W. Va., August 26, 1864.

Brig. Gen. A. N. DUFFIÉ,

Commanding First Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: I am instructed by the commanding general to inform you that instead of proceeding to Cumberland, Md., with your command as directed by paragraph 2, Special Orders 154, current series, from these headquarters, you will collect it together at Harper's Ferry and remain there for the present.

I am, general, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HDQRS. MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, August 26, 1864.

Brigadier-General DUFFIÉ:

The general commanding orders that you do not move until further orders, but remain as at present disposed, or if you have moved to return to your position.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

Commanding officer at Point of Rocks will send this (the foregoing dispatch) by express courier to General Duffié if he has moved.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, August 26, 1864—12 noon.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,

Commanding Cavalry Division :

GENERAL: If the enemy's cavalry cross at Williamsport, Wilson and yourself had better unite; Wilson is at one of the lower crossings of Antietam. You would then be strong enough to take care of the enemy's cavalry until I could get Merritt's division with you. I will send it as soon as I learn they are crossing, and I will depend on information from you. All quiet here.

Very respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, August 26, 1864—11.40 p. m.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL, Commanding Cavalry Division :

GENERAL: I am instructed by the major-general commanding to inform you that all your dispatches* of to-day have been received, and that he is exceedingly obliged to you for the promptitude with which you have forwarded him information. Fitz Lee and Breckinridge's forces are between Shepherdstown and Charlestown; the general thinks of the two, nearer the latter place. General Sheridan does not think that the cavalry (enemy's) will cross, but wants you to watch all the fords well, and if they do cross forward him early information. General Wilson when last heard from was at or near Boonsborough; he has been directed to act in concert with you, and in case Lee crosses General Sheridan wants you to fight him and clean him out. In case of necessity, Merritt's division will be sent over to assist you.

Mudwall Jackson's command was crushed at Shepherdstown to-day.

Respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel, &c.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Boonsborough, [Md.,] August 26, 1864—4 p. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL, Hagerstown :

GENERAL: I've just received orders from General Torbert directing me to move to vicinity of Sharpsburg and hold the Shepherdstown fords; the same order directs Custer to hold Antietam Ford, and also that I shall communicate this order to you. I have further heard, however, through the Fifth New York Cavalry, of my command, now at Keedysville, that the enemy had finally succeeded in crossing above Williamsport, and that you expected to fight him near Hagerstown. If this be the case we should concentrate and clean out Fitzhugh Lee and then look to observing the movements of other forces. I can march from here by 5 p. m. Am now issuing forage and rations. Please say the word and I'll come to you, unless other imperative orders should be received.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

* Not found.

GREENCASTLE, August 26, 1864—7.05 p. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

The signal officer on North Mountain reports that a force of the enemy are moving up the river on the Virginia side from Williamsport.

A. M. THAYER,

Lieutenant and Chief Signal Officer, Dept. of the Susquehanna.

CUMBERLAND, August 26, 1864.

Captain BOTSFORD,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

A detachment of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry, seventy strong, on picket at Huttonsville were surprised and captured on the morning of the 24th; the men were paroled; horses, equipments, and arms carried off. Jackson's guerrillas are becoming very bold and troublesome in the western part of the State. The 100-days' men have nearly all returned to their homes.

B. F. KELLEY,

Brevet Major-General.

(Forwarded to Major-General Sheridan.)

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

Halltown, August 26, 1864—10.20 p. m.

Brigadier-General KELLEY,

Commanding, Cumberland, Md.:

Your dispatch informing Brevet Major-General Crook of the capture of seventy men of the Eighth Ohio Cavalry, &c., has been referred to these headquarters. I am instructed by the major-general commanding to say that the officer in command of this party should be immediately arrested, charges preferred, and tried for allowing this unnecessary capture of his command.

JAS. W. FORSYTH,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 26, 1864.

(Received 11.10 a. m.)

Brevet Major-General KELLEY:

It has been reported to General Halleck that you have detained some regiments of Ohio National Guard after the expiration of their time, causing dissatisfaction in Ohio. He directs that you send them home at once to be mustered out.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HANCOCK, August 26, 1864.

(Received 8.05 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

I have just seen some soldiers from Back Creek, who left there this a. m. on a scout to McCoy's Ferry; when near the ferry they ran into about 200 rebels; they then fell back via Indian Springs; there met their lieutenant, commanding at Back Creek, who reports, as near as could be ascertained, about 6,000 rebels (cavalry, with artillery) moving this way on the Cherry Run road; they evacuated Back Creek about noon. Also received information from Fairview that the rebels were crossing into Maryland, at Williamsport and other places. I will report again when I get anything reliable.

E. J. C. HULL,
Operator.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 26, 1864.

Capt. DANIEL SHEETS,
Commanding Sixth West Virginia Cavalry:

The general commanding directs that you send a scout, to consist of fifty men, via Patterson's Creek, Sheets' Mill, and Mechanics[burg] Gap, to Romney, returning via Springfield to camp. A prompt report of this, as well as all expeditions of like character in the future, is requested.

I am, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

C. A. FREEMAN,
Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HDQRS. THIRD SEPARATE BRIG., EIGHTH ARMY CORPS,
Baltimore, Md., August 26, 1864.

Lieut. Col. S. B. LAWRENCE,
Asst. Adjt. Gen., Eighth Army Corps, Baltimore, Md.:

COLONEL: In reply to yours of this day, asking for a report of my observations during my recent tour on the Eastern Shore of Maryland, I have the honor to report that I visited all the coast of Somerset and Worcester Counties and all the troops there stationed, including those at Salisbury. I supplied the posts, which I regarded as meagerly filled, particularly those on the Pocomoke Sound. I found the people considerably alarmed, but greatly relieved by the arrival of troops and the steps taken for their safety. The recent disturbances in that vicinity were not of the magnitude stated, and there need not now be any apprehension of a repetition. I am of the opinion that the cavalry company of Captain Smith should be replaced by one more strange to the people. I would mention here that the two men of this company who were captured and reported either murdered or drowned have, I am informed, turned up at Eastville, Va. I also report that I took measures for the security of the islands of the Chesapeake off these counties, which apprehended a raid with a view to conscription, and that I am sure no such insane project will now be attempted. I could not hear anything to confirm the report of there being a considerable number of rebels in Talbot County, but was not able to go there because of being detained by repeated storms. I propose, however, doing so in a day or so, if it be deemed judicious; if not, of dispatching a staff officer.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

HENRY H. LOCKWOOD,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

CHAMBERSBURG, August 26, 1864.

(Received 7.20 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

Enemy have withdrawn their artillery from opposite Williamsport. Our forces hold the fords. Early reported with his main body near Shepherdstown.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
 No. 198. }

HDQRS. DEPT. OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 26, 1864.

1. Maj. Gen. George Cadwalader, U. S. Volunteers, military commander, Philadelphia, Pa., will proceed without delay to Bloomsburg, Pa., and assume command of the U. S. troops in Columbia County.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Couch:

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 26, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER,
Loudon Gap:

SIR: There will be a force of our cavalry at McConnellsburg this afternoon. Make arrangements with the commanding officer there to keep you informed should the enemy enter the valley of McConnellsburg. We also have cavalry at Mercersburg. It will be well during the present excitement to have a lieutenant with fifteen men at the lower fort in the direction of Loudon, to be ready to stop up road upon positive information that the rebels are approaching the mountain. You will keep your men well in hand and allow no more straggling and thieving from the poor people down the mountain.

I am, sir, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General, Commanding Department.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Harrisburg, Pa., August 26, 1864.

Capt. WILLIAM BURGESS, Loudon:

CAPTAIN: The commanding general directs me to inform you that the enemy are in large force on the south bank of the Potomac, their line extending from Shepherdstown to Clear Spring, and requests that you get your company together and be in readiness to assist Captain Walker in Path Valley, or the troops on the road leading from Loudon to McConnellsburg, to resist their advance should they cross and move in in that direction. A small force, properly disposed of in those mountain roads, may be the means of keeping a considerable force of the enemy back and cause them much annoyance.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 26, 1864.

Major SZINK,

Comdg. Battalion (100-days') Pennsylvania Volunteers:

MAJOR: The commanding general directs that you station a picket of twenty men at Turkey Foot, on the Warm Springs road, whose duty it will be to see that no suspicious persons pass, and that no one excepting those able to give an account of themselves [be allowed] to come into town. The officers in charge must be vigilant and active. I will send you a mounted man who will go with the party and carry any information of importance to these headquarters.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 26, 1864.

Capt. SAMUEL WALKER:

CAPTAIN: The commanding general requests that you get your company together, and with axes and rifles proceed to defend the roads through the gap between Fannettsburg and Burnt Cabins. You must also have pickets at Loudon and be in readiness when they inform you of the approach of the enemy to have the roads above mentioned made inaccessible by felling trees and other obstructions, and thus defend the same by bushwhacking, &c. There is no enemy reported north of the Potomac yet, but there is no doubt about there being a large force on the south side, and it will be well for the Government and yourself to be in readiness to meet any advance they might make in your direction. Please state by the bearer what action you intend taking and the probable success.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Major and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

MERCERSBURG, August 26, 1864.

Major-General COUCH:

There is a point on the Valley road from Clear Spring to this place that could be easily blockaded so that 100 men, well posted, could beat back 1,000.

JAMES O. CARSON.

---

PITTSBURG, August 26, 1864.

Brig. Gen. THOMAS A. ROWLEY,

Commanding District of the Monongahela:

GENERAL: I have the honor to furnish you with the following report:

Agreeably with orders I left this city on Saturday morning, the 20th instant, for the purpose of visiting Erie, in this State, and other points on the Lake and Canadian shore, to ascertain the facts connected with apprehended disturbances on the Canadian line. Robert Taggart having been placed under my directions, I sent him to Cleveland for the same object. On arriving in Erie I presented a letter to one of the leading citizens, to whom I communicated my mission. I was kindly introduced to other prominent persons, and was offered assistance and co-operation. From these interviews I ascertained that no trouble was really anticipated in that quarter, although such was not impossible. I got a good knowledge of the harbor; as there is but one entrance it could be easily defended from marine invasion. Erie being the port of the Michigan, the only Government vessel on the lake, an attempt to capture her might be made, but she was at Johnson's Island and fully prepared for any such attack. Many Canadians were coming over seeking work, but though this occasioned suspicion it was capable of easy explanation, labor commanding a higher price in the States than in Canada. I was informed that considerable smuggling is carried on between the two shores by fishing vessels. During the former draft many enrolled men crossed the lake at this point and tarried in Canada till their personal apprehension subsided. The provost-marshal of the district has made his headquarters at Waterford, a little town about fifteen miles distant. The people complained of the inconvenience thus occasioned, and I was requested to lay the matter before you, and if possible have his office removed to Erie. I made inquiries as to the means of defense in Erie, and ascertained that there are six heavy guns belonging to the Michigan in the Government warehouse which are on trucks; these could be placed on the wharf, and, if needed, do effective service; there is plenty of shot, but no powder; there are also two 6-pounder brass pieces in the town. A Mr. William Lutz, who has been a first lieutenant of artillery, and was discharged on account of wounds, is anxious to have a company of artillery under his control; he might be a careful person if such an organization was deemed advisable. I remained at Erie two days, and on being informed that the provost-marshal at Buffalo had taken measures to investigate the extent of the rumored danger, I deemed it advisable to proceed thither and consult with him. Mr. Taggart reported to me that all was quiet at Cleveland; but as he had obtained information from the authorities there that the consul at Toronto had advised them to look out for a suspicious person who had left that city, I directed him to proceed to the Clifton House, Canada, and try and obtain some clue to the individual.

On arriving at Buffalo I called upon the provost-marshal, who brought me in communication with an officer who had been appointed for the purpose of investigating affairs connected with the rumored troubles in that locality. He gave me a statement of what he knew. He had intercepted letters which indicated the holding of meetings for the purpose of forming secret organizations, &c. He had detectives at different places who informed him that there are a number of rebel officers in Canada who alleged they were there under orders. In all cases these were educated, reticent, and shrewd men. They held secret meetings, but admitted no Canadians to their deliberations, excluding even those who expressed sympathy and friendship. Many of these wore the rebel uniforms, and were not mere convalescents as some supposed. The provost-marshal had been unable to detect any alarming organization. He did not fear any trouble unless it might be from a few hundred bold men who would seize a vessel in the night, cross the river, burn the city, and then scatter. He said the Canadians would not permit any open act of hostile organization. It was believed that a demonstration was to have been made some time ago for the purpose of drawing our available forces to that quarter in order to enable raiding parties to invade Pennsylvania in the absence of our troops. I was assured that if any information of importance could be obtained the facts would be immediately communicated to me. I went from Buffalo to Niagara Falls (having previously dispatched Mr. Taggart home); I remained but one day and a half, spending much of the time at the Clifton House, where disloyalty is outspoken. I paid attention to conversations, but learned nothing to excite suspicion of overt acts of invasion. I then determined to proceed to Cleveland in a steamer in order to glean what information I could from Canadians and others who I ascertained were going over in the boat on their journey to the Chicago Convention. As I did not wear my uniform there was much said in my presence during the voyage that otherwise would probably not have been spoken. I was surprised and pained to hear the sentiments of many of the persons on board; the vindictive expressions of these men against the administration of the Government was mortifying to a lover of his country, and how much more so to the ears of an officer in its service. Open treason we can repel with force, but the malignity of men who traduce and do all in their power to weaken faith in the Government, and yet profess to be loyal, is hard to be borne with in silence. I fear we will have some trouble with rebel sympathizers before the coming winter. At Cleveland I could hear nothing of importance, and so returned immediately to this city, arriving last evening at 9 o'clock.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

A. M. HARPER,

First Lieut. and Special Aide-de-Camp, Actg. Asst. Adjt. Gen.

WAR DEPARTMENT,

August 26, 1864.

Governor BROUGH,
Columbus :

The following telegram from General Sheridan will satisfy you that there is no ground of complaint by your volunteers:

General Crook was directed some days ago to have all the 100-days' men in his department sent home to be mustered out; it shall be attended to at once.

The troops are probably now, or soon will be, on the way.

EDWIN M. STANTON,

Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT,

Washington, D. C., August 26, 1864—11.50 a. m.

Governor BROUGH,
Columbus, Ohio :

General Sheridan has been directed to discharge all men whose term has expired,

H. W. HALLECK,

Major-General and Chief of Staff,

HALLTOWN, W. VA., August 27, 1864—2.30 p. m.

(Received 28th.)

Lieutenant-General GRANT:

The enemy fell back from my front last night, taking position at Smithfield and Leetown. Their demonstrations to cross the river up toward Williamsport so far are feints. It is more than probable that your theory about drawing them back will prove itself correct. I will watch closely. I captured 101 prisoners yesterday. Since Kershaw came into the Valley I have captured nearly 500 of his men.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

[AUGUST 27, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, &c., see p. 21.]

---

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 27, 1864.

Major-General SHERIDAN:

There is a considerable panic in West Virginia from apprehended rebel raids to destroy the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad while Early is holding you in check at Harper's Ferry. We have no troops to send to that department, and must leave its protection entirely to your forces.

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

---

HALLTOWN, W. VA., August 27, 1864—6 p. m.

(Received 8.10 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

I have dismounted the few remaining mounted men of General Duffié's division and will send them to Cumberland to quiet the fears of the people there. No rebels have crossed the river. McCausland and Jackson are here and all the cavalry. The force which Fitz Lee had in vicinity of Williamsport fell back to Martinsburg last night, and the whole rebel army fell back to Smithfield and Leetown. They must cross the river or leave the Valley; the indications are that it will be the latter.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 27, 1864—9 p. m.

(Received 9.30 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

I suppose you are fully advised through General Sheridan of the present status. The enemy left our front last night and went in the direction of Bunker Hill. He has drawn in all his detachments, and is thought to be concentrating at Smithfield to-night. Whether this is preparatory to a movement up the Valley or into Pennsylvania is uncertain, but indications are of the former. His cavalry is withdrawn from the fords. Sheridan's cavalry is watching the enemy closely. The infantry have not as yet broken camp, but will probably be put in motion to-morrow. Twelve hours will certainly disclose the purpose of the enemy.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 27, 1864—7.30 p. m.

Corps and other independent commanders will have their commands in readiness to move at daylight to-morrow. The following will be the allowance of transportation; one wagon and one spring-wagon for corps, division, and brigade headquarters; the ammunition trains and ambulances, and also medical supply wagons; necessary transportation for intrenching tools. All other wagons and vehicles will be parked inside the fortifications at Bolivar Heights to await further orders from these headquarters. The men will be supplied with three days' rations, which will be required to last four days.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 27, 1864.

Lient. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that reports, well authenticated, were brought in at an early hour this morning to the effect that a force of the enemy numbering about 100 were occupying the country in our immediate vicinity, having been seen yesterday immediately east of Fairfax Court-House, and this morning between this point and Vienna. Mosby, with a few men, was reported as having been seen to-day in Fairfax Court-House. Under these circumstances, and as the immediate neighborhood and the country from fifteen to twenty miles in our front is reported as overrun by small parties, I sent Major Horton, with about 220 men, all that could be sent of the Sixteenth New York, including one company from Annandale, to make a thorough examination of the country between here and Goose Creek and beyond, as far as consistent with success. Mosby, in his attack on Annandale, had with him 350 men, as is reported by a daughter of Yankee Davis and the lady who went with her with a letter concerning Doctor Boyle to-day to your headquarters. One of them counted them, she reports, as he passed their house.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, W. Va., August 27, 1864.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,
Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

General Crook has pushed out his skirmish line to nearly where the enemy's guns were yesterday; push forward yours, with supports, and find if the enemy have withdrawn their skirmish line in your front.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Boonsborough, August 27, 1864—3 a. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: Lieutenant Noyes, of my staff, has just returned from Averell, at Hagerstown, and reports that up to dusk last night no rebels had crossed the river anywhere. I send you a note* from A[verell] dated 6.40 p. m. Noyes came back by Sharpsburg. Colonel Hammond, at midnight, reported all quiet at Shepherdstown. Noyes saw him and says there are no indications of a crossing by the rebels. The fords are strongly watched, and any attempt would be vigorously met. I shall move at daylight and in accordance with previous instructions, having heard nothing from you or General Torbert since yesterday morning. The river had raised six inches last night; it has raised a good deal here.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
On Hagerstown Pike, near Mercersville, August 27, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, General Sheridan:

A company of infantry has just passed here belonging to the Thirty-fourth Ohio, of which the commanding officer reports that he was cut off at the Back Creek bridge the day before yesterday by a force of rebel cavalry about 400 in number. He states that in order to prevent the capture of himself and company he crossed the Potomac and is now returning to his command at Harper's Ferry. He says the bridge was burnt about half an hour after he had left. I have just received a note from General Averell, dated 1 p. m., in which he says the enemy's cavalry has withdrawn from the river at Williamsport and above; that a detachment of his crossed at Dam No. 5 last night, discovering indications of a retreat. Breckinridge's corps moved yesterday at 2 p. m. to Big Spring, beyond Martinsburg, covered, he thinks, by Fitz Lee's cavalry. The general further says that he has sent a reconnoitering party in the direction of Martinsburg to find the enemy. I shall start similar parties at once.

Very respectfully,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

* Not found.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
On Hagerstown Pike, near Mercerville,
August 27, 1864—3.45 p. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, General Sheridan, Harper's Ferry :

General Torbert passed by here to Hagerstown an hour ago. My division is here; Custer near Shepherdstown. No indications of movements by the enemy. As soon as my signal station is established shall communicate often.

Very respectfully,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 27, 1864—5.30 p. m.

Brig. Gen. J. H. WILSON,
Commanding Third Cavalry Division :

GENERAL: General Torbert went over to see you to-day. The enemy last night concentrated at Smithfield and Leetown, those in my front falling back to Smithfield, or to some point between it and Charlestown. Fitz Lee's cavalry fell back toward Martinsburg and to a point twelve miles from Williamsport. The indications are that they will fall back perhaps out of the Valley. The enemy this evening advanced a skirmish line toward Charlestown. I want you back here as soon as things are a little more developed. Tell Torbert to order back Custer. The enemy have either to cross the river or quit the Valley, leaving a minimum force to oppose me. The indications are that their projected campaign is a failure.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 27, 1864—6 p. m.

Brig. Gen. J. H. WILSON,
Commanding Third Cavalry Division :

GENERAL: The indications are that the rebel army is falling back to leave the Valley. I want you to move your command to the Shepherdstown Ford at once, and if my information is correct you will get orders to join me quickly, crossing at that ford. If General Torbert is with you show him this. I will order Averell by Martinsburg.

Very respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Three Miles north of Sharpsburg, August 27, 1864—11 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Military Division :

GENERAL: Your dispatch of 6 p. m. is just received. I will move down to Shepherdstown at 4.20 a. m. Have sent the dispatch to Torbert at Hagerstown. The indications of a retreat are the same all along the river. A man from my command, taken prisoner at Reams' Station, has just come in; left Wickham's command at Hainestown [Hainesville] yesterday. The defense, or rather show of it, at Williamsport prevented an attempt at crossing. He says nothing of their giving up the design of invasion, but thinks they are a little uncertain. He says they have two divisions of Longstreet's corps, Pickett's and Kershaw's, beyond any doubt. Fitzhugh Lee commands all the cavalry. Lomax relieved Bradley Johnson in command of the Valley cavalry, and that two divisions of Tennessee and Georgia cavalry are with them, one of them under Morgan. Supposed that Averell had sent in this information. I have sent scouts over the river.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

ORDERS.] HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 27, 1864—11.45 p. m.

The command will move at precisely 4 a. m. August 28 to Shepherds-town, in the following order: first, McIntosh's brigade, with Fitzhugh's battery; second, ambulances, ammunition train; third, Chapman's brigade, with Pennington's battery.

All pickets will be drawn in at daylight or in sufficient time to join the column while crossing.

General McIntosh will move without further notice at precisely the hour indicated.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Boonsborough, August 27, 1864—3.30 a. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH, Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: Lieutenant Noyes has just returned from Hagerstown via Sharpsburg. No rebels of any kind had crossed to the north side of Potomac up to dark, but they were making strong movements looking to that step. Fitzhugh Lee's cavalry, 8,000 strong, were at Harrisville [Hainesville] (I don't know where that is) last night. Please order Hammond to move his entire regiment to the fords at Shepherds-town at once, and send another regiment to his assistance without delay. The balance of the command will hold on here till further orders.

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 27, 1864.

General MCINTOSH, Commanding First Brigade:

GENERAL: The following dispatch from General Averell, just received, is furnished for your information:

GENERAL: Your note just received. Enemy's cavalry has been withdrawn from the river at Williamsport and above. A detachment of mine crossed at Dam 5 last night, and reconnoitered the enemy's left flank and rear, discovering indications of a retreat. Breckinridge's corps moved at 2 p. m. yesterday to Big Spring, beyond Martinsburg. Fitz Lee's cavalry is, I think, covering the retreat of the infantry. Saint James is still, I think, the best place for you to-night, as from that point you can reach any ford below Williamsport by direct route. I have sent reconnoitering party in direction of Martinsburg to find the enemy.

The general desires that you send small scouting parties across the river to-night to find out what the enemy are doing and where they are. He directs that your pickets connect with those of Averell on your right and with Custer's on your left; that you send patrolling and reconnoitering parties up to Dam No. 4, and keep a constant and watchful eye on all the fords on your front.

I remain, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 27, 1864—11.30 p. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Division:

Information from General Sheridan is that the enemy has fallen back. Please communicate with your regiment at the river, and have scouting parties sent at once. We are ordered to Shepherdstown, and shall move very early.

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Halltown, Va., August 27, 1864—7 p. m.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The indications are that the rebel army are about leaving the Valley. As soon as you find such to be the case, join me via Martinsburg. I will follow them. General Wilson has been ordered to Shepherdstown Ford to join me, crossing there when my information is confirmed.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 27, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL:

GENERAL: Yours per Colonel Moore was duly received. I regret I cannot comply with your request in regard to relieving the Eighth Ohio before the arrival of troops to take their place. The picket at Huttonsville, seventy strong, was surprised and captured on Wednesday morning last, which has produced great excitement and alarm in that part of the State. As soon as troops arrive I will relieve the detachment and send it forward at once. Please send up a courier daily to Hancock and keep me advised of the movements of the enemy. Telegraph line working to Hancock,

In haste, I am, yours, &c.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 27, 1864.

Capt. P. G. BIER,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

I did not receive General Crook's order to send the Ohio National Guard home till 23d instant, since which time troops have been sent forward as fast as transportation could be furnished. They have all gone except one regiment, which is guarding the railroad between here and Back Creek. This regiment will be sent as soon as cars can be had. When this regiment leaves the railroad will be entirely without guard below here. Trains to Hancock will have to be discontinued for fear of capture.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

HANCOCK, August 27, 1864.

(Received 7.40 a. m.)

General KELLEY:

Information received this a. m. The rebels are picketing strong from Four Locks to Williamsport, with artillery at Williamsport. Information also received that General Sheridan has fallen back to Harper's Ferry and the rebels are fortifying at Halltown. I received further information that Back Creek bridge is not burned. If you think it advisable, I will proceed carefully down and ascertain the true state of things; if not, to take the train further than Cherry Run, and from there send a scouting party. Please answer.

P. B. PETRIE,
Captain.

CUMBERLAND, August 27, 1864.

Captain PETRIE,

Hancock:

You can send a scout down on hand car, but do not run an engine below Hancock till we can learn more of the movements of the enemy. Send a messenger by turnpike to General Averell and give him all the information you have, and ask him to give me the latest he has. His headquarters is between Hagerstown and Sharpsburg.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

HANCOCK, August 27, 1864.

General KELLEY:

Scout just returned from Back Creek bridge. All safe; no enemy to be heard of. Guards ran off to Hagerstown.

P. B. PETRIE,
Captain.

HEADQUARTERS,
Cumberland, August 27, 1864.

Col. C. MARKER:

Permit me, through this medium, of expressing to the officers and men of the One hundred and fifty-sixth Ohio National Guard my heartfelt thanks for the earnest and devoted co-operation I have always received from them during the time they were attached to my command. Called out in a time of our country's great need, their alacrity in volunteering has been well sustained by the fine name they have so nobly won during their term of service. During the recent attack on this place by the combined forces of Generals McCausland and Bradley T. Johnson it was my pleasure to witness the steady line your regiment maintained under a heavy fire, as also the accuracy with which they returned the shots of the enemy's sharpshooters. Knowing as I do, colonel, the great representative farming interest in your regiment, I can well realize with what self-sacrificing devotion it so readily and earnestly responded to the call of your noble executive, and I feel that as soon as possible many members of your regiment will again be in the service battling for the Union and its flag.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

CHAMBERSBURG, PA., August 27, 1864.

(Received 1.15 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

My signal officers reports all quiet at and above Williamsport this morning. The enemy can be seen only at one point, opposite Cherry Run on the Virginia side, and in small force.

D. N. COUCH,
Major-General.

---

GREENCASTLE, August 27, 1864.

Maj. J. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

I am informed by signal that the force at Cherry Run made a slight demonstration this forenoon, but did not get across. I am also informed that the enemy are moving toward Hancock. This last report the signal officer gets from citizens. He has only seen a small force moving up the river and that was last night.

A. M. THAYER,
Lieutenant and Signal Officer.

---

CITY POINT, VA., August 28, 1864—2 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Halltown, Va.:

If you are so situated as to feel the enemy strongly without compromising the safety of your position, I think it advisable to do so. I do not know positively that any troops have returned yet from the Valley, but think you will find the enemy in your immediate front weaker than you are. We are quiet here, the enemy having abandoned the idea of driving us from the Weldon road, at least with his present force.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

WASHINGTON, D. C., August 28, 1864—2 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Harper's Ferry :

General Hunter has asked to be relieved from the Department of West Virginia. General Crook has been named for the place. Would the change meet your wishes?

H. W. HALLECK,
Major-General and Chief of Staff.

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 28, 1864—8.30 p. m.

(Received 1.25 a. m. 29th.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff :

Your dispatch of 2 p. m. relative to the assignment of General Crook to the command of the Department of West Virginia received. I have the honor to request that General Crook be appointed to that command.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

[AUGUST 28, 1864.—For Sheridan to Halleck, reporting operations, &c., see p. 22.]

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 28, 1864—8 p. m.

Colonel CHIPMAN,
Harper's Ferry :

What news have you to-day ? We have heard nothing.

EDWIN M. STANTON.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 28, 1864—10 p. m.

(Received 10.25 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON :

I was at General Sheridan's tent at sunrise this a. m. He had learned nothing definite as to the movement of the enemy at that time. The army moved out about 9 this morning and are to-night encamped in the vicinity of Charlestown. The cavalry have been feeling of enemy. Firing was heard to-day, but I have not been able to learn anything from the front. Sent couriers to-night, who will return before morning. Can hear of no enemy up or down the river except from operator at Muddy Branch, which you have seen.

N. P. CHIPMAN,
Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 18. } Near Halltown, Va., August 28, 1864.

1. Lieut. Col. C. Kingsbury, jr., assistant adjutant-general, is temporarily assigned to duty as assistant adjutant-general, Middle Military Division, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

2. Surg. James T. Ghiselin, U. S. Army, having reported at these headquarters, in compliance with orders from headquarters Armies of the United States, is hereby assigned to duty as medical director, Middle Military Division, and will relieve Surg. H. W. Owings, Second Eastern Shore Maryland Volunteers, now acting in that capacity. Surgeon Owings, upon being relieved, will report for duty to Brevet Major-General Crook, commanding Department of West Virginia.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

A. F. HAYDEN,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

ORDERS.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Near Halltown, Va., August 28, 1864.

The command will move from its present position at 7 a. m. to-day in the following order and designated lines of march:

The Sixth Army Corps will march across the country until it reaches Flowing Spring. The corps will be halted at the spring and there wait further orders.

The command of Brevet Major-General Emory will march via the Halltown and Charlestown pike, the command to be halted on reaching the vicinity of Charlestown and wait further orders.

The command of Brevet Major-General Crook will march across the country to the left of the Halltown and Charlestown pike, and at a distance of three-quarters of a mile from the same. On his arrival in the vicinity of Charlestown General Crook will halt his command and wait further orders.

The authorized wagons and ambulances with the corps will be guarded and controlled by corps commanders, and will follow their respective corps.

Colonel Currie's brigade, of the Nineteenth Army Corps, will not accompany the corps, but the brigade commander will report for orders to Brigadier-General Stevenson, commanding District of Harper's Ferry, W. Va.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 28, 1864—7.40 p. m.

Corps and other independent commanders will have their commands in readiness to march at 5 o'clock to-morrow morning. Further special instructions will be sent to them during the night.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

F. C. NEWHALL,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 28, 1864—8.20 p. m.

Major-General SHERIDAN,
Commanding Middle Division, Harper's Ferry:

The Eighth Illinois Cavalry will leave Muddy Branch to-morrow morning, to be joined near Aldie by the Sixteenth New York Cavalry, to scout toward Snicker's Gap, and to carry out orders concerning individuals and crops in the vicinity of Middleburg and Upperville. Major Fry's command having been withdrawn from the upper Potomac, I have sent this evening all the cavalymen of your command mounted, to guard the river during the absence of Major Waite. As soon as he returns they will be sent to join their divisions with you. I have no news to send you.

C. C. AUGUR,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 28, 1864.

Col. WILLIAM GAMBLE,
Commanding Camp Stoneman:

COLONEL: The major-general commanding directs that you send, without delay, all officers and enlisted men in your camp, who are ready to take the field, belonging to the Reserve Brigade, the First and Third Divisions Cavalry, to report to the officer in charge of the regimental camp Eighth Illinois at Muddy Branch. In the event of there being no other available officer in your camp you will detach one temporarily from the permanent establishment, to return after having turned over his men at the camp.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Report time of marching, strength of detachment, and name of commanding officer. The detachment must march this day.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 28, 1864.

Maj. JOHN M. WAITE,
Eighth Illinois Cavalry, Commanding at Muddy Branch:

MAJOR: The major-general commanding directs that you move August 29 with your regiment, leaving on the left bank of the river only your camp guard and the detachment protecting the telegraph station at Darnestown. Your march will be via Aldie, and so timed that you will reach that place before 12 m. August 30. At Aldie you will meet the Sixteenth New York Cavalry, commanded by Major Horton, who will report to you. Assuming command of the two regiments, you will move rapidly on Upperville and Middleburg, surprising any force of guerrillas lurking in that vicinity. The special object of your scout is to destroy, as far as practicable, the sources from which Mosby draws men, horses, and support. To this end you will arrest and bring in all males capable of bearing arms or conveying information, between the ages of eighteen and fifty, excepting those mentioned in the inclosed list;* impress all wagons, and bring them in loaded with forage; destroy all crops of hay, oats, corn, and wheat which you cannot bring in, and seize all horses. When horses are taken from Union men, make memoranda to that effect, in order that the horses may be identified or the owners indemnified. Collect all information within reach of the movements of the enemy and embrace it in your report; any which you may regard as of great importance should be sent in by a small party of trusted men. Mosby's headquarters are reported as alternating between the houses of Mr. Blackwell and Mr. Turner, near Upperville. The above instructions embrace particularly Upperville, Middleburg, and their vicinity. On your return it is desired that you come in by the way of Falls Church. After the rations you carry for men and animals are exhausted, live on the country. Inclosed find memorandum* for guidance in particular cases. Report departure and effective strength. The necessary instructions have been given Major Horton.

---

* Not found.

I am, very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

MUDDY BRANCH, August 28, 1864—6.50 p. m.
(Received 9.50 p. m.)

Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: Am informed a small squad of the enemy crossed and entered Poolesville last night, but left quickly. Emory will be advised. River is open, and, of course, I will be on the alert. Have a squadron up the river watching and patrolling the country. Would it not be advisable to move my regimental property to Great Falls or vicinity if my command is to be absent?

Respectfully,

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 28, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that a picket-post near the Lewinsville stockade was attacked last night, without loss to us, however, as the attack proved unsuccessful. There is nothing of importance to mention beyond this.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Commanding Brigade.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
Washington, D. C., August 28, 1864.

Col. H. M. LAZELLE,
Commanding Cavalry Brigade:

COLONEL: I have the honor to inclose herewith copy of instructions† forwarded to Maj. J. M. Waite. Be pleased to give such instructions to Major Horton as will meet the requirements of the case. The dura-

---

* Not found,

† See p. 942,

tion of the scout is, of course, indefinite, and Major Horton must be instructed that after the supply of rations for man and horse he carries with him are exhausted he is to live on the country.

Very respectfully, colonel, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

FORT MONROE, VA., August 28, 1864—1 p. m.

(Received 11.25 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK:

I have the honor to report the arrival of the One hundred and fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers at this post, from Hilton Head.

T. D. HART,

Lieutenant-Colonel, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

Charlestown, Va., August 28, 1864—2 p. m.

Brevet Major-General EMORY,

Commanding Nineteenth Army Corps:

GENERAL: Move your corps out on the Summit Point road until you arrive at the barricades thrown up on that road by General Crook when he occupied that position some time ago.

Very respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,

Major-General, Commanding.

CIRCULAR.] HDQRS. DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS,

Halltown, Va., August 28, 1864.

This command will move at 7 a. m. to-day on the Halltown pike toward Charlestown in the following order: first, Second Division, Nineteenth Army Corps; second, Reserve Artillery; third, First Division, Nineteenth Army Corps; fourth, wagons authorized.

General Grover will detail a regiment and a section of artillery as advance guard. Colonel Currie's brigade, First Division, will be reported to Brigadier-General Stevenson, commanding District of Harper's Ferry, by brigade commander.

By order of Brevet Major-General Emory:

DUNCAN S. WALKER,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS,

Halltown, Va., August 28, 1864.

Brig. Gen. W. MERRITT,

Commanding First Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs that you move your command at 5 a. m. to-day across the country from your present camp until you strike the Leetown road in the vicinity of Charlestown,

General Merritt will then push strong parties forward to drive the enemy's cavalry on the road from Charlestown to Leetown, and on the road from Charlestown to Smithfield; these reconnaissances to promptly report any information they receive of the enemy.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 28, 1864—2.15 p. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding First Cavalry Division:

Wilson has crossed at Shepherdstown Ford; has been directed to move on to Leetown and form a junction with you.

Respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 28, 1864—6.30 p. m.

Brig. Gen. W. MERRITT,
Commanding First Cavalry Division, Smithfield:

GENERAL: The major-general commanding directs me to inform you that General Wilson's command arrived at this point late this p. m. without forage, and he has, therefore, been directed to go into camp here for to-night. He did not receive the order in time to effect a junction with you to participate in your operations of to-day.

Very respectfully,

F. C. NEWHALL,
Major and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 28, 1864—9 p. m.

Brig. Gen. WESLEY MERRITT,
Commanding First Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: Brigadier-General Averell has informed me, through one of his scouts, that he expected to be in Martinsburg at 3 p. m. to-day. He was then within a mile or two of the place, and it was reported unoccupied by the enemy. Send out at early dawn parties in the direction of Bunker Hill, if it is possible for them to get through, and ascertain whether or not the enemy's infantry are moving or have gone toward Winchester. General Averell's scouts say that from all the information they could obtain the rebels were moving up the Valley. Prompt information from you early in the day may save my infantry columns heavy marches.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY RESERVE BRIGADE,

August 28, 1864—11.30 a. m.

Capt. A. E. DANA,

Assistant Adjutant-General, First Cavalry Division:

CAPTAIN: I have possession of Leetown and of the Shepherdstown and Winchester pike at that place. About 100 mounted cavalry fled at our approach, our boys charging them. It is two miles of the Opequon. The infantry left here yesterday. A citizen reports quite a cavalry force in my front toward Winchester, which he estimates at eight regiments. Major Starr has gone toward the Opequon. The enemy all went down the pike toward Winchester when we charged. They belonged to Bradley Johnson. The infantry went toward Winchester when they left yesterday.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

ALFRED GIBBS,

Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

HDQRS. SECOND BRIGADE, FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,

August 28, 1864.

Capt. A. E. DANA,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

CAPTAIN: Captain Hanley, Ninth New York Cavalry, proceeded within half a mile of Summit Station; discovered the enemy's pickets (twenty men) near Widow Gregg's farm and drove them. The citizens reported Lomax's brigade camped near Summit Station.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

DI CESNOLA,

Colonel, Commanding Brigade.

AUGUST 29.

A reconnoissance has been sent toward Winchester this morning. The enemy have withdrawn their pickets this morning.

DI CESNOLA.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,

August 28, 1864.

Colonel CESNOLA:

I will camp near Middleway (Smithfield) to-night. Withdraw the main body of your command on the road you are on and establish your picket-line to connect with the Reserve Brigade on your right. A staff officer will be out to see your inspector-general.

W. MERRITT,

Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,

Shepherdstown Ford, August 28, 1864—6.30 a. m.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: My division is here waiting orders. I sent an officer to Torbert, at Hagerstown, last night, who has just returned. Torbert will be here as soon as he can come through, following the line of the river. I haven't heard this morning from the fords above, but there is nothing here. I am anxious to get forward, but Torbert sends word not to cross without orders from General Sheridan. What is the news?

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 28, 1864.

Brig. Gen. J. H. WILSON:

GENERAL: Your dispatch notifying the headquarters of your arrival at Shepherdstown received. Orders were sent you this morning by Captain Moore, aide-de-camp. The general wants you to keep your scouts well out. Merritt is about two miles from here; was sent forward on the Smithfield and Leetown roads. No reports as yet.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel, &c.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
Near Shepherdstown Ford, August 28, 1864—7 a. m.

Lieutenant-Colonel FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff, Major-General Sheridan:

COLONEL: The man, Dodge, of the Eighth Illinois Cavalry, who accompanies the bearer, has just returned from Wickham's rebel cavalry, where he was held as a prisoner of war. He was the driver of General Wilson's mess wagon during the late raid on the Danville railroad and was captured at Reams' Station. Wickham kept him as driver to his headquarters wagon, and on the entreaties of Dodge released him a few days ago and allowed him to cross the river and return to our lines. He is in possession of much valuable information, no doubt, and although paroled could without great difficulty be made to reveal a good deal. The general, therefore, directed that he should be sent to you, with request to let him join his regiment after you will be through with him.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
Shepherdstown Ford, August 28, 1864—9.15 a. m.

Col. J. W. FORSYTH,

Chief of Staff:

COLONEL: Having waited from 6 a. m. till the present time for orders, and having heard nothing from you or Torbert, I have concluded to move out toward Kearneysville and Leetown at once. Any communication you may have for me will find me somewhere in that direction. I am anxious to have instructions.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,

Shepherdstown Ford, August 28, 1864—9.15 a. m.

Capt. M. A. RENO,

Chief of Staff:

CAPTAIN: Having received an order implying that the army at Harper's Ferry was to have moved this morning at daylight, I have concluded to cross and move out toward Kearneysville without waiting for any direct instructions. I am sure this course will meet with the general's instructions when he knows reconnaissance five or six miles in all directions from here confirm the opinion that the rebels have gone. I have waited from 6 to this time to hear from somebody. Time is precious, and therefore I act as seems best, hoping it will meet with the general's approbation. Custer left here last night for Harper's Ferry.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,

Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,

Charlestown, August 28, 1864—12 m.

Brigadier-General WILSON,

Commanding Third Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: Merritt is at Leetown or should be there by this time. If you can form a junction with him it will not be necessary to come to Charlestown.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,

Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HDQRS. THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,

Charlestown, Va., August 28, 1864—5.30 p. m.

Maj. T. P. JOHNSTON,

Chief Quartermaster of Division:

MAJOR: The general commanding division directs that you send up, besides the forage for the command, all regimental and headquarters forges at once, with a liberal supply of horseshoes; also the picket-rope for our headquarters, and our forge. The command will go into camp a short distance from town on the Berryville turnpike.

Very respectfully,

L. SIEBERT,

Assistant Adjutant-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 28, 1864. (Received 8.30 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,

Secretary of War:

The enemy have retired in direction of Bunker Hill, as if falling back down the Valley. General Sheridan has moved out in pursuit. Is camped to-night two miles beyond Charlestown. Some artillery heard this evening in that direction, but it was light and soon ceased.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,

Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 28, 1864.

Brigadier-General STEVENSON,
Commanding District of Harper's Ferry:

GENERAL: I have detailed Colonel Currie to report to you with his brigade. Move him from his present position to Bolivar Heights. I will move out to-day. General Torbert has ordered a regiment of cavalry to report to you. Send me promptly all dispatches. All telegraph dispatches should be duplicated and forwarded at different times.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 28, 1864—10 p. m.

Brigadier-General STEVENSON, Harper's Ferry:

The following dispatches have just been received from Darnestown. Please forward to General Sheridan:

DARNESTOWN, August 28, 1864—12 m. (Received 9 p. m.)

Major ECKERT:

One of Major Fry's men, just in from Poolesville, reports rebels across and advancing toward this place. Does not know their force, but saw heavy skirmish line. Was twice fired on.

S. K. RUPLEY,
Operator U. S. Military Telegraph.

DARNESTOWN, August 28, 1864.

I think the man (he belongs to the Thirteenth Pennsylvania Cavalry) has exaggerated; but no doubt a small force is this side of the river plundering. They were in Poolesville last night. Mr. Brewer, residing near mouth of Monocacy, advised some of his neighbors to take grain, &c., to Washington, as there would be some excitement in that section to-night. Don't think they will come this far, but Major Waite has been advised and will keep watch.

RUPLEY.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Halltown, W. Va., August 28, 1864.

Brig. Gen. A. N. DUFFIÉ,
Commanding First Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The commanding general directs that you proceed at once to Cumberland, Md., as directed in paragraph 2, Special Orders, No. 154, current series, from these headquarters.

I have the honor to be, general, &c.,

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Point of Rocks, Md., August 28, 1864.

Col. JOHN E. WYNKOOP,
Commanding Dismounted Cavalry, Harper's Ferry, W. Va.:

COLONEL: You will please report at these headquarters with all the men belonging to this division under your command, or whom you can find at Harper's Ferry, W. Va. Collect together every man at your camp and bring them with you. Move your command this evening, and have them provided with three days' rations to the man before starting.

By order of Brigadier-General Duffié:

E. W. CLARK, JR.,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

HANCOCK, August 28, 1864.

Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

There are indications that the enemy is leaving the Potomac entirely. Scouts from Morgan County report no movement in your direction.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 28, 1864.

Capt. P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The following telegram received from Governor Boreman will advise you of the state of affairs in the western part of my command. I have not troops to send to relieve the people:

WHEELING, August 27, 1864.

Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

The counties of Wirt, Jackson, Wood, Gilmer, &c., are greatly infested with bands of rebels, plundering, robbing, and carrying off the loyal people. A few days since they carried off the sheriff and deputy sheriff of Jackson County, and they have not yet returned. Could not Major Simpson, with his command, be sent into that region of country?

A. I. BOREMAN,
Governor.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 28, 1864.

Colonel HOY,
New Creek:

Send a mounted scout of twenty men to the junction on Alleghany Mountains and ascertain if any of McNeill's men are in this neighborhood. Get Hinkle to go with them.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 28, 1864.

Captain FARIS,
Oakland:

It is reported that a squad of McNeill's men are in the Alleghany Mountains east of Fort Pendleton, dismounted; ten were seen yesterday at Overcan's Saw-Mill. Send a scout of twenty men, with three days' rations, to assist Godwin in driving them out. Katy Cosner can give information if they are in that region.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CUMBERLAND, August 28, 1864.

Captain PETRIE,
Hancock:

Have you any news this a. m.? Have you heard anything of General Duffié's moving toward Hancock via Hagerstown with his command? Did you send a messenger to General Averell yesterday?

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

HANCOCK, August 28, 1864.

Major-General KELLEY:

Messenger I sent to General Averell, whose headquarters is at Hagerstown, has not returned. General Duffié is not moving this way that I know of. I have heard from Martinsburg; no enemy near. Can I run to Cumberland this p. m., and return in a. m.? My men need clothes and medicine badly. Please answer immediately.

P. B. PETRIE,
Captain.

---

SOUTH BRANCH, August 28, 1864.

General KELLEY:

Report that McNeill is coming down South Branch for purpose, as is supposed, of getting on railroad at some point. Have sent scout out the branch, and will put party in ambush on the ridge on Springfield road.

C. J. HARRISON,
Captain, Commanding.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 28, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER EIGHTH OHIO CAVALRY,
Beverly:

The general commanding the troops in the field directs that you at once place in arrest the officers in command of the detachment of your regiment which was surprised and captured at Huttonsville on the morning of the 24th instant. You will prefer charges and forward them to these headquarters without delay. Acknowledge receipt of this.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

---

COLUMBUS, August 28, 1864.
(Received 10 a. m. 29th.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Our military agent at Gallipolis telegraphs me this morning, "I have reliable information of Breckinridge's advance into the Kanawha Valley with 8,000, via Lewisburg." General Heintzelman left for Chicago this morning under your order. I have telegraphed him on the way. I have the State battery at Camp Dennison and three regiments of National Guard at Gallipolis. No general officer in the State.

JNO. BROUGH.

CITY POINT, August 29, 1864—1.30 p. m.

(Received 3 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN,
Halltown, Va. :

If it is ascertained certainly that Breckinridge has been detached to go into Western Virginia, attack the remaining force vigorously with every man you have, and if successful in routing him follow your success with the Sixth and Nineteenth Corps, and send Crook to meet Breckinridge. This is sent on the strength of a dispatch just received, reporting that Breckinridge, with 8,000 men, had gone to Western Virginia. I know nothing of the truth of the report.

U. S. GRANT,
Lieutenant-General.

CHARLESTOWN, VA., August 29, 1864—11 p. m.

(Received 30th.)

Lieutenant-General GRANT:

There is not one word of truth in the report of Breckinridge being in West Virginia; it is a Copperhead report. I saw his corps at the crossing of Opequon Creek this morning; it came down to dislodge Merritt's division of cavalry. Early and Breckinridge were there in person. They attacked the cavalry at the ford and forced it back a short distance. I then put in Ricketts' division of infantry, and the enemy fell back to Bunker Hill, where their whole force has been concentrated for the last two days. Fitzhugh Lee is here, in command of all the cavalry in the Valley. I had prisoners from Lomax and Wickham yesterday. I believe no troops have yet left the Valley, but I believe they will, and that it will be their last campaign in the Shenandoah. They came to invade, and have failed; they must leave or cross the Potomac. They acknowledge a loss of 1,600 men since the last advance from Strasburg, and to-day their loss has been severe; our loss slight.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

WASHINGTON, August 29, 1864.

Lieut. Col. T. S. BOWERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General, City Point, Va. :

Scouts who left Mine Run Thursday night are just in, and report following: Wickham's and Young's cavalry brigades passed up the Valley early part of last week. Corse's and Anderson's brigades started for Richmond early part of last week. Anderson's brigade recalled and is still in Valley. Thought to be no infantry now in the Valley but part of Ewell's old corps and two or three brigades of Longstreet's corps. General Ed. Johnson, of Ewell's corps, gone to Atlanta. Understood that Beauregard has gone to Atlanta with troops from Valley. General Lomax is in Richmond, but not known whether his brigade is there. Prominent secessionists of Orange County say Richmond cannot be held a month with Weldon road in our possession. Rumors of important movements of infantry in the Valley when scouts left, but no particulars could be had. Other scouts will be in Wednesday.

GEORGE K. LEET,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

(Copies to Generals Meade and Sheridan.)

CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 29, 1864—11 p. m.

(Received 30th.)

Captain LEET,

Assistant Adjutant-General:

The reports of scouts from Mine Run are inaccurate. Prisoners were yesterday captured from Wickham and Lomax. Lomax is in command of the Valley cavalry and Fitz Lee in command of all cavalry in the Valley. Breckinridge's corps I saw myself this evening; Ewell's corps I have not been able to locate for two days. Kershaw's division was here Sunday morning. I do not know who Corse and Anderson belong to, unless to some of the divisions of Longstreet's corps; they do not belong to Kershaw. Early was here to-day.

P. H. SHERIDAN,

*Major-General.*CHARLESTOWN, W. VA., August 29, 1864—9.30 p. m.

(Received 2.30 a. m. 30th.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,

Chief of Staff:

I respectfully recommend the removal of the military agent at Gallipolis as an alarmist or a Copperhead. Ramseur's and Gordon's divisions, of Breckinridge's corps, were at the crossing of Opequon Creek, near Smithfield, to-day, and Breckinridge was there in person.

P. H. SHERIDAN,

*Major-General.*WASHINGTON, D. C., August 29, 1864.

Maj. Gen. P. H. SHERIDAN:

I think a good commanding officer should be sent to Gallipolis; and if it be true that Breckinridge is operating against the Kanawha Valley, re-enforcements should be sent there.

H. W. HALLECK,

*Major-General and Chief of Staff.*HARPER'S FERRY, W. VA., August 29, 1864.

(Received 9 a. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON:

Received the following note from General Sheridan last night at midnight, dated Charlestown, August 28, and written about 9 p. m.; have nothing additional:

Colonel CHIPMAN,

Aide-de-Camp:

Your note of this p. m. received. I am occupying my old lines here with my infantry. Merritt's division of cavalry met Fitz Lee's cavalry at Leetown and drove Lee to Smithfield and then across the Opequon Creek. Our losses were not great; the enemy suffered severely. Several handsome cavalry charges were made by Merritt's command. The enemy are now concentrated at Bunker Hill. I cannot now say positively that they will fall back to Winchester; the reports are that they will; I have nothing definite; shall know to-morrow. I have had conflicting reports concerning the divisions of Field and Pickett. The rebels report that Hood has been killed, and that Longstreet is in command at Atlanta.

P. H. SHERIDAN,

Major-General, Commanding.

N. P. CHIPMAN,

Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 29, 1864—9.30 a. m.

Colonel CHIPMAN:

There seems no further occasion for you to remain at Harper's Ferry and you are much needed here.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
 No. 284. } Washington, August 29, 1864.

* * * * *

4. Capt. G. A. Gordon, Second U. S. Cavalry, is hereby relieved from his present duties, and will report in person, without delay, to the commanding general Department of West Virginia, for assignment to duty as special inspector of cavalry for said department.

* * * * *

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. DEPT. OF WASHINGTON,
 No. 75. } TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS,
August 29, 1864.

I. Pursuant to paragraph 1, Special Orders, No. 279, Adjutant-General's Office, August 24, 1864, Lieut. Col. Elias M. Greene, quartermaster's department, is hereby relieved from duty as chief quartermaster Department of Washington.

II. Col. John A. Elison, quartermaster's department, having reported at these headquarters in compliance with paragraph 1, Special Orders, No. 279, Adjutant-General's Office, August 24, 1864, is hereby announced as chief quartermaster Department of Washington. He will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

By command of Maj. Gen. C. C. Augur:

C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS EIGHTH ILLINOIS CAVALRY,
Muddy Branch, August 29, 1864—11 a. m.
 (Received 1.50 p. m.)

Lieutenant-Colonel TAYLOR,

Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: Shall cross at this point at 11 a. m. with about 650 effective men. Received communication last night from Colonel Lazelle containing information received in your instructions last night. Returned orderly to Colonel L. at 5 this morning, notifying him of my movement. Don't expect many teams brought in. Major Briggs has not arrived. When I leave [sic].

Respectfully,

JNO. M. WAITE,
Major, &c.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 29, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to report that the party sent out yesterday returned to-day, after twenty-four hours' absence, without having met Major Horton, though they went as far as Gum Spring. I immediately dispatched another party of thirty-five men of the Sixteenth to find him, giving such instructions as will, without doubt, insure, I think, his force joining that of the Eighth Illinois to-morrow by 12 m. I have also sent the necessary information to Major Waite to take the men from the Annandale stockade chiefly. I also sent rations and forage sufficient for the whole force from here until they can supply themselves.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON, 22D ARMY CORPS,
August 29, 1864.

Col. H. M. LAZELLE,
Commanding Cavalry Brigade:

COLONEL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of this date, and am directed by the major-general commanding to inform you that he does not think it advisable to change the instructions already issued. Your resignation has been suspended.

Very respectfully, your most obedient servant,

J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 29, 1864.

Maj. G. G. HORTON,
Commanding Sixteenth New York Volunteer Cavalry:

MAJOR: By direction of the colonel commanding, I have the honor to inclose for your information a copy of instructions* from Major-General Augur to Major Waite, commanding Eighth Illinois Cavalry. By these instructions you will be guided. Major Waite will be at Gum Spring to-night. You will endeavor to join him there with your command to-night, but if you find you cannot, you will proceed so as to reach Aldie before 10 a. m. to-morrow. On your arriving at that place you will report with your party to Major Waite. Captain Schneider, Sixteenth New York Cavalry, takes rations with him sufficient to supply your men and horses for three days. After delivering these supplies to you Captain Schneider will remain with you with his party and be subject to your orders and to those of Major Waite.

I am, major, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN Y. LANSING,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

* See p. 942.

HDQRS. CAVALRY CORPS, MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 29, 1864.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding First Division Cavalry:

GENERAL: The present intention is to throw two divisions down toward Front Royal on the Winchester pike. Be ready to move at any time to-day, depending on the information you obtained this morning. I congratulate you on your success of yesterday.

Yours, &c.,

A. T. A. TORBERT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers, Commanding Cavalry Corps.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 29, 1864.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding First Division Cavalry:

MY DEAR MERRITT: I am exceedingly anxious to learn if the enemy's infantry have yet left Bunker Hill. The moment you can determine this you will confer a great favor.

Yours, truly,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 29, 1864—1.05 p. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding First Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: The general desires me to say to you that he has no doubt about infantry being at the points you designate in your dispatch. General Sheridan wishes you to act cautiously.

Very respectfully,

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

HDQRS. SECOND BRIGADE, FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 29, 1864—11 a. m.

Brigadier-General MERRITT,
Commanding Division:

GENERAL: I have been along Colonel Cesnola's lines and nothing can be seen, except a few vedettes. I have only seen three men mounted myself. Don't believe there is any force in this direction, except a few mounted men to watch the country.

Respectfully,

J. F. McQUESTEN,
Captain, Second U. S. Cavalry, Division Inspector.

AUGUST 29, 1864.

Colonel LOWELL,
Commanding Third Brigade, First Cavalry Division:

COLONEL: The rest of the division is in camp near where the road from Summit Point crosses the Middleway and Charlestown pike. We had a right smart fight with the enemy's infantry to-day; were forced to retire slowly, but did it in the best of fashion. A division of the Sixth Corps has moved out toward Smithfield (Middleway). Patrol toward the pickets of the Second Brigade, on your right.

Very respectfully,

W. MERRITT,
Brigadier-General of Volunteers.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 29, 1864—10.30 a. m.

General STEVENSON,
Commanding, Harper's Ferry:

The services of Colonel Chipman being required here, you will please keep the Department advised of all military operations and information that may come to your knowledge, and endeavor to have such arrangements made as will give you prompt information of everything that transpires in the front or in your vicinity, reporting, at all events, regularly at 8 a. m. and 9 p. m. each day.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

---

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, August 29, 1864.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Your order will be strictly complied with.
Respectfully,

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HARPER'S FERRY, August 29, 1864—9 p. m.
(Received 9.15 p. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

General Sheridan, with his army, is occupying a position about two miles beyond Charlestown. The enemy are apparently concentrated in vicinity of Smithfield and Bunker Hill. Heavy firing in that direction all day. No particulars received. Averell, with his command, occupies Martinsburg to-night.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, August 29, 1864.

Brig. Gen. JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Commanding District of Harper's Ferry:

GENERAL: I am directed by the major-general commanding to acknowledge the receipt of your communication* of this date, and I am instructed to say in reply that General Sheridan has forwarded to Major-General Halleck, Chief of Staff, telegraphic reports up to date (this evening) of the operations of this army. As regards guards, escorts,

---

* Not found.

&c., to trains, none will be furnished except on order from these headquarters. The strength of your command by last report, including the dismounted cavalry, was about 9,000 men. You will hereafter make all your reports, returns, &c., direct to these headquarters, and not through Brevet Major-General Crook's headquarters.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

GENERAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. 1ST. CAV. DIV., ARMY OF W. VA.,
No. 13. } Point of Rocks, Md., August 29, 1864.

The following constitution of the brigades of this division will be observed until further orders: First Brigade, Col. R. F. Taylor commanding—First New York Veteran Cavalry, Fifteenth New York Cavalry; Second Brigade, Col. J. E. Wynkoop commanding—Twentieth Pennsylvania Cavalry, Twenty-first New York Cavalry.

Colonels Taylor and Wynkoop will immediately proceed to thoroughly organize their respective commands. Field reports will be sent in daily to these headquarters.

By command of Brigadier-General Duffié:

E. W. CLARK, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 29, 1864—8.30 a. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL:

Your note* of yesterday received. Merritt pitched into Fitz Lee's cavalry yesterday at Leetown; drove him from the town and through Smithfield across the crossing of Opequon. My information this morning leads to the belief that Early is still at Bunker Hill. Merritt is advancing a brigade toward that point; will know soon. Keep on your present line until we make a junction. Wilson is here on the Berryville pike. Torbert has joined me.

Respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 29, 1864.

Brevet Major-General KELLEY, Cumberland, Md.:

Your telegram of the 27th instant relative to affairs in your command is just received. You will have to make the best disposition of your forces possible for the present to guard against the incursions of the enemy. As soon as circumstances here will permit troops will be sent to be distributed so as to defend the railroad and the western part of the State. General Duffié is now on his way to Cumberland with about 2,500 men, dismounted cavalry, to establish a camp of instruction; his men are armed.

By order of Brevet Major-General Crook:

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

* Not found.

NEW CREEK, August 29, 1864.

(Received Cumberland 9.50 p. m.)

Major-General KELLEY:

McNeill left Moorefield yesterday morning with about 300 men; started in the direction of Romney, and from all I can learn he is making a raid on the railroad east of Cumberland. Three of his men were in Ridgeville this p. m. I was within six miles of Pittsburg [Petersburg] to-day; no enemy there.

A. HINKLE.

NEW CREEK, *August 29, 1864.*General B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland, Md.:

Hinkle reports from six miles south of Greenland Gap, at 8 this a. m., that McNeill, with 300 men, left Moorefield yesterday morning, moving toward the railroad east of Cumberland.

H. PEASE,
*Captain and Assistant Inspector-General.*SOUTH BRANCH, August 29, 1864.

(Received 1.25 p. m.)

Major-General KELLEY:

Mr. Caldwell came down from Springfield this morning; informs me that McNeill's company was in Romney last night, and that one of his men had flanked the pickets and been at Green Spring this morning; also that some of his men were in Springfield last night. I understand there were some fifteen or twenty head of cattle driven from Old Town over to Green Spring yesterday. May be McNeill will make for this cattle.

C. J. HARRISON,
*Captain, Commanding.*CHERRY RUN, August 29, 1864.

Major-General KELLEY:

We are here, all right. Some of General Averell's pickets here and at Back Creek, who report the general at Martinsburg. Rebels have fallen back to Bunker Hill. I will remain here to-night with the cars with a strong picket, if you think proper. Answer immediately.

P. B. PETRIE,
*Captain, Commanding.*CUMBERLAND, *August 29, 1864.*Colonel HOY,
New Creek:

Send a detachment of twenty men, under command of a reliable officer, to Piedmont, to remain till further orders. Direct the officer to send a small scout daily toward Elk Garden settlement.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington City, August 29, 1864—10 a. m.

Governor BOREMAN,
Wheeling:

I have been unable till now to inform you who commands the Department of West Virginia. General Hunter, in nominal command, was absent on leave and his address unknown. General Hunter is relieved of command to-day and General Crook assigned; he is in the field; his headquarters will be Cumberland.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

WAR DEPARTMENT,
August 29, 1864.

Governor BROUGH,
Columbus, Ohio:

Your telegram respecting General Breckinridge's advance into the Kanawha has just been received. Notice has been given to General Sheridan, who reported Breckinridge three days ago at Shepherdstown, on the Potomac. Sheridan has been directed to send one of his best general officers to command at Gallipolis. General Burbridge has also been directed to render all aid within his power, if it should turn out that Breckinridge has gone to West Virginia. If the report of your agent be true Sheridan has been very much deceived.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 29, 1864.

Capt. SAMUEL WALKER,
Carrick Furnace, Path Valley:

CAPTAIN: The commanding general directs me to inform you that present indications are that the enemy are falling back from the Potomac River. If you have your company organized you had better disband it, subject to be ordered out at any time. You will be informed from these headquarters of any movement by the enemy in this direction.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
 JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 29, 1864.

Capt. WILLIAM BURGESS,
Loudon, Pa.:

CAPTAIN: The commanding general directs me to inform you that present indications are that the enemy are falling back from the Potomac River. If you have an organization of men on the roads, as suggested in my last communication to you, you can relieve it from duty at present. If you can do it, it would be advisable to keep your organization up, subject to be called out at short notice. We will keep you informed of any movements of the rebels in that direction.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
JNO. S. SCHULTZE,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE EAST,
New York City, August 29, 1864.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

SIR: I wrote to you on the 18th of August in regard to the draft in this city, and the necessity of adequate military preparation against armed resistance to it. Recent developments satisfy me that a much larger force than that named in my letter of that date will be needed to insure tranquility. Brigadier-General Hays, in an official letter addressed last week to the commanding officer of the department in reply to queries addressed to him, says:

First. I do expect violent resistance to the draft.

Second. In my opinion 10,000 good troops will be required for the prompt execution of the law in this division.

This opinion is concurred in by the superintendent of the police and by our most intelligent citizens. With the information in my possession, as well as from indications which have occurred under my observation, I deem it hazardous to commence the draft without a force of from 8,000 to 10,000 men.

I am, respectfully, yours,

JOHN A. DIX,
Major-General.

---

CHARLESTOWN, VA., August 30, 1864—9.30 p. m.
(Received 9 a. m. 31st.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK,
Chief of Staff:

There is no change in the position of affairs here to-day. The enemy hold a line from Bunker Hill to the Opequon Creek; their left at Bunker Hill and right on the Opequon, near the crossing of the dirt road from Summit Point to Winchester. I sent two divisions of cavalry, via Berryville, to strike the Front Royal and Strasburg road. I will not get information from them before to-morrow. If Early has detached troops for Richmond I will attack him vigorously; as yet I have not been able to learn that he has done so. Kershaw is on the right of their line, and it is certain that he has not gone. Breckinridge was here yesterday. Rodes has not been heard from for two days. Colonel Lowell charged and drove in enemy's pickets on Summit Point road to-day, killing two officers and three men, and capturing five, all from Fitz Lee's cavalry. All the information which I can get leads to the belief that no troops have yet been sent to Richmond. I learn to-day that Corse's brigade, of Pickett's division, and Johnston's brigade, of Field's division, are here, which accounts for the report that these divisions were in the Valley. Averell is at Martinsburg, or in vicinity. A scout from North Mountain reports no rebel troops in direction of Hancock, on the upper Potomac. My command is well in hand, and I am anxiously awaiting news from the operations of the cavalry.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General.

GENERAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 248. } Washington, August 30, 1864.

Maj. Gen. D. Hunter is relieved from command of the Department of West Virginia, and Bvt. Maj. Gen. George Crook is assigned to the command in his place.

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
No. 20. } Charlestown, W. Va., August 30, 1864.

* * * * *

5. Col. Louis P. Di Cesnola, Fourth New York Cavalry, will at once proceed to Harper's Ferry, W. Va., to be mustered out of service by assistant commissary of musters, First Cavalry Division, in accordance with Circular No. 36, Adjutant-General's Office, 1864.

6. Bvt. Brig. Gen. George L. Beal, having reported to these headquarters in compliance with orders from War Department, is assigned to duty with the Nineteenth Corps, and will report accordingly to Brevet Major-General Emory for orders.

7. Lieut. Edward L. Halsted, Signal Corps, U. S. Army, is announced as acting chief signal officer on the staff of the major-general commanding, and will be obeyed and respected accordingly.

8. Capt. F. E. Town, Signal Corps, U. S. Army, and party, having reported to these headquarters in compliance with orders from the War Department, is assigned to such duty as may be designated by the acting chief signal officer, in the name of the major-general commanding.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

C. KINGSBURY, JR.,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 30, 1864.

Corps commanders are authorized to order up the regimental teams of their commands for the purpose of making out muster-rolls, &c. The wagons ordered must be held in readiness to be moved back to Bolivar Heights at a moment's notice.

By command of Major-General Sheridan:

JAS. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 215. }

HDQRS. DEPT. OF WASHINGTON,
TWENTY-SECOND ARMY CORPS,
August 30, 1864.

* * * * *

2. The One hundred and fourth Regiment Pennsylvania Volunteers, having reported at these headquarters, is hereby assigned to De Russy's division, and will be reported without delay to Brigadier-General De Russy, commanding, for duty.

* * * * *

By command of Major-General Augur:

C. H. RAYMOND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

ALEXANDRIA, August 30, 1864.
(Received 8.50 p. m.)

Colonel TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have information that Mosby intends attacking my pickets to-night. I have sent forty men to re-enforce them.

H. H. WELLS,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Provost-Marshal-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 30, 1864.

Maj. G. G. HORTON,
Commanding Sixteenth New York Cavalry:

MAJOR: You will proceed with your command immediately, and without stopping to get rations or forage, direct to Gum Spring, and there endeavor to join Major Waite, Eighth Illinois Cavalry. If you do not find him, go on to Aldie; and if you do not there meet him, push on still further, and as long as there remains a probability of overtaking his party with safety to your own. You will find Captain Washburne, of your regiment, at either Gum Spring or Aldie, with rations and forage for you for three days. The inclosed instructions are for your information. Major Waite will leave Gum Spring to-day at 10 o'clock on his way to Aldie. In order to make sure of finding Major Waite, it would be well to send some couriers ahead to let him know of your coming. Lose no time in getting started from this camp.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

EDWIN Y. LANSING,
First Lieutenant and Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

ORDERS.]

HEADQUARTERS SIXTH ARMY CORPS,
August 30, 1864—11.15 p. m.

The following from General Sheridan is sent for the information and guidance of division commanders and the corps officer of the day:

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, August 30, 1864—10 p. m.

Major-General WRIGHT,
Commanding Sixth Corps:

I am directed by the major-general commanding to inform you that the reports received from General Torbert this evening are to the effect that the whole rebel force is concentrated at Bunker Hill. The general desires that you keep your command on the alert.*

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. W. FORSYTH,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Chief of Staff.

By command of Major-General Wright:

C. A. WHITTIER,
Acting Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS FIRST NEW YORK DRAGOONS,
August 30, 1864.

Capt. WILLIAM H. H. EMMONS,
Assistant Adjutant-General, Cavalry Reserve Brigade:

My vedettes on the right report about 300 cavalry to have moved to the right, striking into the Leetown pike and disappearing in the wood. The firing continues along the line, but not sharp.

H. M. SMITH,
Major, Commanding.

ORDERS.] HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 30, 1864—9.45 a. m.

The command will move at once on the pike toward Berryville, in the following order: first, Chapman's brigade, with Pennington's battery; second, ammunition and ambulances; third, McIntosh's brigade.

Brigade headquarters will move with the least possible baggage, one wagon, if possible, only.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.] HDQRS. THIRD DIVISION, CAVALRY CORPS,
August 30, 1864.

No wagons except ammunition and ambulance, and one wagon to each brigade headquarters, will be taken along; the remainder will be sent back to the division train at Bolivar Heights.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

CIRCULAR.] HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 30, 1864—8 p. m.

The following order has just been received from the chief of cavalry:

NEAR BERRYVILLE, VA., August 30, 1864—8 p. m.

GENERAL: The chief of cavalry directs that you send a strong reconnaissance in the direction of Winchester, at least as far as the Opequon; let the party start at daylight; also send well out in the direction of Millwood and White Post, and report any information of the enemy. Have all your command saddled at daylight.

M. A. RENO,
Captain and Chief of Staff.

* Same to General Emory.

General McIntosh, in accordance with the above instructions, will send two regiments in the direction of Winchester, General Chapman one regiment toward Millwood and White Post, at daylight to-morrow, and report any information at once.

By command of Brigadier-General Wilson:

L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Extract from field return of the Third Division, Cavalry Corps, commanded by Brig. Gen. James H. Wilson, for August 30, 1864.

| Troops.                    | For duty. |                     |                         | Aggregate. | Horses.    |                      |                       |
|----------------------------|-----------|---------------------|-------------------------|------------|------------|----------------------|-----------------------|
|                            | Officers. | Men fully equipped. | Men not fully equipped. |            | Officers'. | Men's, service-able. | Men's, unserviceable. |
| Division headquarters..... | 12        | 64                  | 25                      | 104        | 32         | 90                   | 5                     |
| First Brigade.....         | 104       | 1,792               | 98                      | 2,209      | 208        | 2,161                | 132                   |
| Second Brigade.....        | 55        | 1,101               | 93                      | 1,396      | 154        | 1,288                | 36                    |
| Total .....                | 171       | 2,957               | 216                     | 3,709      | 394        | 3,539                | 223                   |
| Pennington's battery.....  | 3         | 115                 | .....                   | 134        | .....      | 209                  | .....                 |
| Fitzhugh's battery .....   | 3         | 106                 | .....                   | 128        | .....      | 194                  | .....                 |
| Total .....                | 177       | 3,178               | 216                     | 3,971      | 394        | 3,942                | 223                   |

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 30, 1864—6 p. m.

Brigadier-General MCINTOSH,
Commanding First Brigade:

General Torbert wishes you to send one good squadron on the Berryville-Winchester pike, as near to the Opequon Creek as you can. Instruct the officer that is detached to move rapidly, and if he meets any parties of the enemy to endeavor to take prisoners; information is wanted. A woman at the toll-gate just this side of the Opequon will give any news she may possess.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

J. H. WILSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, August 30, 1864.

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

The condition of the forces this morning seems unchanged. The firing yesterday was a heavy skirmish between our cavalry and Breckinridge's corps; but few casualties on our side. The enemy retired across the Opequon.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 30, 1864.
(Received 8.50 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON, Secretary of War:

No information of changes of position of forces since morning.

JNO. D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 30, 1864.
(Received 9.10 a. m.)

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

The quartermaster of the Third Brigade, First Division, Cavalry Corps, reports that Capt. C. S. Eigenbrodt was killed Friday, August 26, 1864, two miles to the left of Halltown, Va. His body [was] left on the field and buried on the next day by the enemy on the spot where he fell.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS MILITARY DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY,
Harper's Ferry, August 30, 1864.

W. P. SMITH,
Agent Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, Baltimore:

I think it would be safe to make reconnaissance of road with view to reopening it.

JOHN D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, Va., August 30, 1864—8.15 a. m.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

GENERAL: Your scouts reached me this morning. So far as I can learn, the enemy was at Bunker Hill yesterday in full force. Custer crossed the Opequon and pushed out about a mile, but had to come back, followed up [by] Breckinridge's corps (Gordon's and Ramseur's divisions). They came across the creek to Smithfield, but returned to Bunker Hill, followed up by a part of the Sixth Corps to the Opequon. Look out for your line; they cannot stay long at Bunker Hill. I will probably move to Smithfield to-day.

Yours, truly,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

HEADQUARTERS SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION,
DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Martinsburg, W. Va., August 30, 1864.

Lieut. Col. J. W. FORSYTH,
Chief of Staff, Middle Military Division:

COLONEL: I have the honor to request that you will inform me what orders, if any, have been issued in regard to the consolidation of the Fifth and Sixth Regiments West Virginia Cavalry. The veterans of the Fifth have been left without officers, nearly all of the officers having been mustered out with those men whose time of service has expired. The veterans are in Wheeling, W. Va., unable to draw pay and not doing any duty. The veterans of the Sixth are concentrated at North Branch, on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, and are, as I understand, to be mounted at once. The consolidation of these regiments is desired by the men of both, and would be beneficial to them. It would result in converting a useless mob into a body of men capable, if placed under competent officers, of doing good service as a mounted regiment.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
August 30, 1864.

Brigadier-General KELLEY,
Cumberland, Md.:

General Duffié started to your place yesterday with about 2,500 dismounted men. Should any troops be required in the Kanawha Valley send some of these until I can spare some of the troops from here, which will not be long.

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

MARTINSBURG, August 30, 1864.
(Received 8 a. m.)

Major-General KELLEY:

Enemy's picket is strong across valley from Gerrardstown to Dandridge's; they have been slightly aggressive to-day. Early's main force is at Bunker Hill. I cannot advise an attempt to reconstruct at present. Sheridan is moving. I may be able to tell you to-morrow; nothing but skirmishing to-day. Please send me general news dispatch.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

MARTINSBURG, [August] 30, 1864.

Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY:

Please send me 30,000 pounds of grain forage at once. Enemy's main force at Bunker Hill. Pickets are busy.

WM. W. AVERELL,
Brigadier-General.

---

CUMBERLAND, August 30, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Martinsburg:

Train with forage left for Martinsburg at 7 p. m. Advise the conductor at North Mountain where you want it unloaded.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CHERRY RUN, August 30, 1864.
(Received 8.06 a. m.)

Major-General KELLEY:

Everything quiet this a. m. Men just from Martinsburg report things all quiet along line of road. General Averell is in Martinsburg with his command. Our forces had a slight skirmish near Winchester yesterday. If you think proper, I will run down as far as North Mountain to get in communication with General Averell, so I can keep you posted. Please answer.

P. B. PETRIE,
Captain.

CUMBERLAND, August 30, 1864.

Capt. C. J. HARRISON,
South Branch:

A cavalry scout of 100 men has gone down to Old Town from North Branch. Please report to the officer all information you have, and get from him all he may know, and report to me by telegraph, and I will then give him further orders.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

There is no force but McNeill's near Romney.

SOUTH BRANCH, August 30, 1864.

Maj. Gen. B. F. KELLEY,
Cumberland:

Son just in from Springfield; saw twenty-five rebels three miles this side of there, who turned and went back; heard them shoeing horses in the town. He was informed by colored man that Imboden's command is between Romney and the Wire Bridge, near Springfield, on the old road. He says the men he saw had on blue overcoats, but gray pants. Jim Short, of Imboden's command, was in Cumberland day before yesterday. Could it be our men?

C. J. HARRISON,
Captain, Commanding.

CUMBERLAND, August 30, 1864.

Colonel HOY,
New Creek:

Keep your scouts active and on the alert. I think McNeill intends striking west instead of east of this point. He in all probability will go west of the Alleghany Mountains.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA,
Charlestown, W. Va., August 30, 1864.

Brig. Gen. MAX WEBER, U. S. Volunteers,
New York City:

GENERAL: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your communication of the 22d instant relative to your being relieved from the command of the Military District of Harper's Ferry and being ordered to report to Brigadier-General Stevenson for duty, and by direction of the brevet major-general commanding to state, in reply, that the order assigning General Stevenson was made in accordance with verbal instructions received by him from the commanding general of the Middle Military Division. It was supposed at the time that General Stevenson was your senior, and as you were known to be unwell it was thought that in your state of health it would be a relief to you to have the responsibility of your important command transferred to some one else for the present at least. The letter directing you to report to General Stevenson at the expiration of your leave was written under the impression that you were his junior in point of rank. The commanding general would not take upon himself such an assumption of authority as to order an officer to report for duty to his junior. That authority, as you are aware, can only be exercised by the President. At the expiration of your present leave the commanding general directs that you report in person at the headquarters of the department for assignment to duty.

I have the honor to be, general, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

P. G. BIER,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

WAR DEPARTMENT,
Washington, August 30, 1864.

Governor BROUGH,
Columbus, Ohio :

General Sheridan says that he saw General Breckinridge yesterday, and also telegraphs as follows :

I respectfully recommend the removal of the military agent at Gallipolis as an alarmist or a Copperhead. Ramseur's and Gordon's divisions, of Breckinridge's corps, were at the crossing of Opequon Creek, near Smithfield, to-day, and Breckinridge was there in person.

EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War.

---

COLUMBUS, OHIO, August 30, 1864.

Hon. E. M. STANTON :

The military agent is not a Copperhead nor an alarmist. He communicates his information is based on a rebel mail that got through to Charleston last Friday. A letter from one of Breckinridge's officers to his brother says their corps will be at Lewisburg within ten days. One of our spies saw it. The agent acted in good faith in making his communication; perhaps I was too quick in acting on it.

JOHN BROUGH.

---

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE DEPARTMENT,
Baltimore, Md., August 30, 1864.

Hon. C. A. DANA,
Assistant Secretary of War, Washington, D. C. :

SIR: I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of a communication from certain loyal colored men of the city of Baltimore, complaining of grievances to which they are subjected in being forced to drill, &c., by you referred to these headquarters August 26, 1864, for report as to whether white men were also subject to the same drill as is required from the men of color. In reply, I would respectfully state that white men have been organized into companies and regiments, and are required to drill. Unfortunately, Governor Bradford has declined to recognize their organizations and commission their officers. There are now three regiments organized. Shortly after the organization of the whites was begun that of the blacks was attempted. As Governor Bradford declined to have anything to do with the enterprise, the State constitution not recognizing colored men as subject to militia service, I assumed the business myself and gave it in charge of Colonel Bowman, who is quite popular with the class and has proven himself their devoted friend. It was desirable to enroll all the able-bodied colored men of the city, whether free or slaves. To do that by asking them to volunteer was impossible, as many of them are the slaves or employés of secession citizens, who would, of course, prohibit such action, hence my measure had to be arbitrary. That some instances of harshness have ensued is not unlikely, but the sufferers had only to complain to me to have their wrongs redressed.

It is proper to add that among the blacks, as with the whites, there are lazy and trifling people who do nothing without compulsion, and complain when it is exerted. Besides, the disaffected whites do not hesitate to fill the minds of the simple and credulous colored men with false ideas of my purposes toward them in this organization.

If I had authority to answer two questions of the complainants, there would be no difficulty in the matter: First, if, when organized, they should be called out to defend the city, will they be paid for it? Second, should they be killed or disabled while so engaged, would they or their representatives be placed on the pension list? It would oblige me very much to receive instructions on these points from the honorable Secretary of War.

Finally, the necessity for the measure complained of is simply that there must be more troops to defend the city of Baltimore than can always be spared for the purpose. I thought, and yet think it possible, to meet this necessity by stringent organization of the citizens, black and white.

Without an interference with the constitution of the State, I cannot deprive Governor Bradford of his lawful control of the able-bodied whites. It is different, however, with the blacks, whom the Governor repudiates for militia purposes; and as to these latter I will see that they are not abused.

I am, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

LEW. WALLACE,
Major-General, Commanding.

---

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 30, 1864.

Col. D. P. WHITING, U. S. Army,
Commanding Fort Mifflin:

COLONEL: In reply to your communication of the 25th instant, I am directed by the commanding general to say that by General Orders, No. 48, current series, Department of the Susquehanna, Fort Mifflin is made a separate post, and that hereafter you will report directly to these headquarters, from which source you will receive your orders. Quartermaster's and commissary supplies will be furnished by the officers of those departments in Philadelphia on your requisition, or on orders from these headquarters.

I am, colonel, very respectfully, your obedient servant,
T. BRENT SWEARINGEN,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } WAR DEPT., ADJT. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
No. 287. } Washington, August 31, 1864.

* * * * *

35. Maj. F. C. Newhall, aide-de-camp, will report in person, without delay, to Major-General Sheridan, U. S. Volunteers, commanding Middle Military Division, for assignment to duty.

* * * * *

By order of the Secretary of War:

E. D. TOWNSEND,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS CAVALRY BRIGADE,
Near Fort Buffalo, Va., August 31, 1864.

Lient. Col. J. H. TAYLOR,
Chief of Staff and Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have the honor to inform you that there is nothing of importance to report from this vicinity. One of the picket-posts was attacked to-day by a party of seven guerrillas, but they were beaten off.

8.30 P. M.

Major Horton, Sixteenth New York Cavalry, with Major Waite, have just come in; they left Aldie this morning at 7 o'clock. Major Horton arrived at Aldie at 6 o'clock last evening, and found on his arrival there that Major Waite had already been up the country and on his way back.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
H. M. LAZELLE,
Colonel Sixteenth New York Cavalry, Comdg. Cavalry Brigade.

HEADQUARTERS THIRD CAVALRY DIVISION,
August 31, 1864—7 p. m.

Brigadier-General CHAPMAN,
Commanding Second Brigade:

GENERAL: By direction of the general commanding you will send one regiment back to Rippon to picket the roads leading from there toward Winchester, and also toward the Shenandoah River. This move is desired more as a guard to trains than anything else.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
L. SIEBERT,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 31, 1864.
(Received 9.15 a. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

Nothing from front last night. Couriers expected every moment. As soon as they arrive will report.

JNO. D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 31, 1864—11 a. m.
(Received 11.30 a. m.)

Hon. EDWIN M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

The infantry of enemy are concentrated at Bunker Hill; our cavalry are sent to operate on their rear; to-day must develop their strength and purpose. No fighting yesterday mentioned.

JNO. D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

HARPER'S FERRY, August 31, 1864.
(Received 9.40 p. m.)

Hon. E. M. STANTON,
Secretary of War:

I have information through rebel sources that Early, with his command, has been recalled to Richmond; that the main body of the enemy passed through Winchester several days ago. I think this to be the fact. I learn from the front that reconnaissances of cavalry as far as Berryville and beyond Smithfield, in direction of Bunker Hill, failed to find enemy to-day.

JNO. D. STEVENSON,
Brigadier-General.

HEADQUARTERS MIDDLE MILITARY DIVISION,
Charlestown, August 31, 1864—9 a. m.

Brig. Gen. W. W. AVERELL,
Commanding Cavalry Division:

T[orbert], with M[erritt] and W[ilson], have gone up the Valley. I will have definite information soon. If the enemy should fall back, shove them along.

Very respectfully,

P. H. SHERIDAN,
Major-General, Commanding.

CUMBERLAND, August 31, 1864.

Brigadier-General AVERELL,
Martinsburg, W. Va.:

Your dispatch received. I have no late news of importance. Send you by train this a. m. the latest papers. McNeill, with about 250 men, is lying between Romney and Hanging Rock, evidently Early's western picket, watching my movements.

B. F. KELLEY,
Brevet Major-General.

CHAMBERSBURG, PA., August 31, 1864—8 p. m.

(Received 11.15 p. m.)

Maj. Gen. H. W. HALLECK, Chief of Staff:

General Cadwalader reports that he captured seventy prisoners last night in Columbia County. These are chiefly leaders and others who were organized to resist the draft. They will be sent to Fort Mifflin.

COUCH,
*Major-General.*SIGNAL CAMP,
*Greencastle, Pa., August 31, 1864.*Capt. H. S. TAFFT, Chief Assistant, Signal Bureau:

CAPTAIN: I have the honor to make you the following report of the operations of this detachment during the month ending August 31, 1864:

At the date of my last report the greater portion of my detachment were on duty at Harper's Ferry, whilst myself and a small party were temporarily stationed at Emmitsburg, Md. From this point we moved into the Cumberland Valley, by order of Capt. F. E. Town, and opened stations at Greencastle, North Mountain, and Williamsport. These stations remained in operation until August 5, when the parties occupying the two last posts were compelled to abandon them on account of the advance of the enemy to Hagerstown and Williamsport. After the retreat of the enemy across the river I requested and obtained permission to return to my command at Harper's Ferry. Immediately upon my return the whole detachment belonging to this department were relieved from duty and ordered to report to Major-General Couch. I reported at headquarters Department of Susquehanna August 11, and for some days thereafter remained in camp near Chambersburg, for the purpose of equipping my men with horses and the necessary clothing. These arrangements being completed, I moved the detachment to this place, and reopened our previous stations. I have signal posts at present at this point, on North Mountain, and near Williamsport, and it is my intention to open another at Fairview as soon as possible. From these points it will be very easy to watch the fords of the upper Potomac, from Falling Waters to Hancock, and to give timely notice of any attempt to cross. I regret very much that the haziness of the atmosphere has embarrassed our operations very much for the past ten days; but as this is rather unusual in this climate and at this season, I think we shall experience no difficulty of the kind during the fall. During the past month Lieutenant Reymer has reported to me for instructions and duty. Good horses have been furnished to the enlisted men, and I have the honor of reporting my detachment as well equipped and instructed as any party with which I ever served.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

AMOS M. THAYER,
*First Lieutenant and Chief Signal Officer.*HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA,
Chambersburg, Pa., August 31, 1864.

Capt. E. M. WARREN,

Independent Company 100-days' Pennsylvania Volunteers:

CAPTAIN: The commanding general directs that you move your command from where it is at present located to within three or four miles of McConnellsburg, establishing your camp at a point where wood and water are easily accessible. You will keep constantly on the alert in regard to deserters and stragglers, arresting them wherever found. All Government property in the hands of unauthorized persons should be taken charge of, and the facts promptly reported to these headquarters.

I am, captain, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

T. BRENT SWEARINGEN,
Captain and Assistant Adjutant-General.

Abstract from return of the Middle Military Division, Maj. Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, U. S. Army, commanding, for the month of August, 1864.

| Command.                                  | Present for duty. |        | Aggregate present. | Aggregate present and absent. | Pieces of artillery. |        | Headquarters.     |
|-------------------------------------------|-------------------|--------|--------------------|-------------------------------|----------------------|--------|-------------------|
|                                           | Officers.         | Men.   |                    |                               | Heavy.               | Field. |                   |
| General headquarters .....                | 24                | 120    | 216                | 389                           | .....                | .....  | In the field.     |
| Department of Washington (Augur):         |                   |        |                    |                               |                      |        | Washington, D. C. |
| Staff and infantry .....                  | 483               | 18,597 | 23,076             | 26,572                        | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Cavalry .....                             | 120               | 3,402  | 5,752              | 7,180                         | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Artillery .....                           | 218               | 5,895  | 7,753              | 9,854                         | 736                  | 279    |                   |
| Detachment of Signal Corps ..             | 7                 | 68     | 75                 | 81                            | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Total .....                               | 828               | 27,962 | 36,656             | 43,687                        | 736                  | 279    |                   |
| Department of the Susquehanna (Couch):    |                   |        |                    |                               |                      |        | Chambersburg, Pa. |
| Staff and infantry .....                  | 138               | 1,872  | 2,228              | 3,670                         | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Cavalry .....                             | 13                | 401    | 427                | 464                           | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Artillery .....                           | 5                 | 181    | 194                | 296                           | .....                | 12     |                   |
| Detachment of Signal Corps ...            | 2                 | 56     | 59                 | 66                            | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Total .....                               | 158               | 2,510  | 2,908              | 4,496                         | .....                | 12     |                   |
| Middle Department (Wallace):              |                   |        |                    |                               |                      |        | Baltimore, Md.    |
| Staff and infantry .....                  | 260               | 5,067  | 5,963              | 8,362                         | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Cavalry .....                             | 19                | 297    | 347                | 660                           | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Artillery .....                           | 8                 | 219    | 294                | 329                           | .....                | 6      |                   |
| Total .....                               | 287               | 5,583  | 6,604              | 9,351                         | .....                | 6      |                   |
| Department of West Virginia (Crook):      |                   |        |                    |                               |                      |        | In the field.     |
| Staff and infantry .....                  | 538               | 11,898 | 14,032             | 23,443                        | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Cavalry .....                             | 241               | 6,231  | 8,457              | 14,722                        | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Artillery .....                           | 83                | 2,877  | 3,521              | 4,478                         | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Total .....                               | 862               | 21,006 | 26,010             | 42,643                        | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Sixth Army Corps (Wright):                |                   |        |                    |                               |                      |        | In the field.     |
| Staff and infantry .....                  | 635               | 11,333 | 15,717             | 29,599                        | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Artillery .....                           | 24                | 623    | 697                | 812                           | .....                | 24     |                   |
| Total .....                               | 659               | 11,956 | 16,414             | 30,411                        | .....                | 24     |                   |
| Detachment Nineteenth Army Corps (Emory): |                   |        |                    |                               |                      |        | In the field.     |
| Staff and infantry .....                  | 657               | 12,068 | 14,187             | 21,081                        | .....                | .....  |                   |
| Artillery .....                           | 15                | 436    | 458                | 559                           | .....                | 20     |                   |
| Total .....                               | 672               | 12,504 | 14,645             | 21,640                        | .....                | 20     |                   |
| Cavalry forces (Torbert):                 |                   |        |                    |                               |                      |        | In the field.     |
| Cavalry and staff .....                   | 371               | 7,891  | 10,347             | 20,028                        | .....                | 32     |                   |
| Artillery .....                           | 22                | 611    | 701                | 979                           | .....                | 24     |                   |
| Total .....                               | 393               | 8,502  | 11,048             | 21,007                        | .....                | 56     |                   |
| Grand total .....                         | 3,883             | 90,143 | 114,501            | 173,624                       | 736                  | 397    |                   |

Organization of troops in the Middle Military Division, commanded by Maj. Gen. Philip H. Sheridan, U. S. Army, August 31, 1864.

ESCORT.

6th U. S. Cavalry, Capt. Ira W. Claflin.

DEPARTMENT OF WASHINGTON.

Maj. Gen. CHRISTOPHER C. AUGUR.

SIGNAL CORPS.

Capt. WILLIAM B. ROE.

LIGHT ARTILLERY DEPOT AND CAMP OF INSTRUCTION.*

Brig. Gen. ALBION P. HOWE.

Massachusetts Light, 16th Battery, Capt. Henry D. Scott.
New York Light, 6th Battery, Capt. Joseph W. Martin.
Pennsylvania Light, Battery C, Capt. James Thompson.
1st United States, Batteries A and F, Lieut. Hardman P. Norris.
2d United States, Batteries C and E, Lieut. James S. Dudley.
3d United States, Batteries L and M, Lieut. Erskine Gittings.
4th United States, Battery A, Lieut. Rufus King, jr.

PROVISIONAL BRIGADES.

Maj. Gen. SILAS CASEY.

Detachments 1st, 2d, 19th, 23d, 27th, 31st, 39th, 43d, and 102d U. S. Colored Troops,
Lieut. Charles E. Graham.
Detachments 28th and 29th U. S. Colored Troops, Lieut. Daniel Brooks.
45th U. S. Colored Troops, Lieut. Col. Edward Thorn.

HARDIN'S DIVISION.†

Brig. Gen. MARTIN D. HARDIN.

First Brigade.

Col. J. HOWARD KITCHING.

6th New York Heavy Artillery, Maj. Absalom Crookston.
9th New York Heavy Artillery (five companies), Maj. James W. Snyder.
13th New York Cavalry, Company A, Capt. Charles H. Hatch.
41st New York (six companies), Lieut. Col. Detleo von Einsiedel.
1st Battalion Pennsylvania Artillery (two companies), Capt. Samuel Riddle.
2d U. S. Artillery, Battery I, Lieut. William P. Graves.
3d U. S. Artillery, Battery G, Capt. Lewis L. Young.

Second Brigade.

Lieut. Col. HORACE G. THOMAS.

4th and 10th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (ten companies), Lieut. Col. Benezet F. Foust.
7th and 21st U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (twelve companies), Maj. John B. Callis.
Michigan Light Artillery, 14th Battery, Capt. Charles Heine.
1st Company New Hampshire Heavy Artillery, } Capt. Charles H. Long.
1st Provisional Battalion Heavy Artillery, }

---

* Or Camp Barry, commanded by Maj. James A. Hall.

† Headquarters at Washington City. Troops at Forts Baker, Bayard, Bunker Hill, Carroll, Davis, De Russy, Du Pont, Gaines, Greble, Kearny, Lincoln, Mahan, Mansfield, Meigs, Reno, Ricketts, Simmons, Slocum, Smead, Snyder, Stanton, Stevens, Sumner, Wagner, and Batteries Cameron, Kemble, Parrott, and Vermont.

Third Brigade.

Lieut. Col. JOHN H. OBERTEUFFER.

Massachusetts Heavy Artillery (eight companies).*

Fort Foote, Md.

Capt. OLIVER J. CONANT.

Maine Coast Guard, Company B, Capt. Oliver J. Conant.

Michigan Light Artillery, 13th Battery, Capt. Charles Dupont.

2d Company New Hampshire Heavy Artillery, Lieut. George P. Thyng.

DISTRICT OF ST. MARY'S, MD.

Brig. Gen. JAMES BARNES.

11th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Col. J. Egbert Farnum.

20th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Col. George A. Washburne.

5th Massachusetts Cavalry (colored), Maj. Horace N. Weld.

Wisconsin Light Artillery, 2d Battery, Capt. Charles Beger.

FORT WASHINGTON, MD.

Col. HORACE BROOKS.

Maine Coast Guard, Company A, Capt. Charles Barker.

DISTRICT OF WASHINGTON.

Col. MOSES N. WISEWELL.†

First Brigade.

Col. GEORGE W. GILE.

1st U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Col. Frederick E. Trotter.

6th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Col. Frederic S. Palmer.

9th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Col. Robert E. Johnston.

19th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Maj. John H. Donovan.

22d U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Col. Allan Rutherford.

24th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Col. John F. Marsh.

Not brigaded.

150th Pennsylvania, Company K, Capt. Thomas Getchell.

Union Light Guard Ohio Cavalry, Lieut. James B. Jameson.

U. S. Ordnance Detachment, Maj. James G. Benton.

DE RUSSY'S DIVISION.‡

Brig. Gen. GUSTAVUS A. DE RUSSY.

First Brigade.

Col. JOSEPH N. G. WHISTLER.

10th New York Heavy Artillery, Col. G. De Peyster Arden.

1st Pennsylvania Light Artillery, Battery H, Capt. Andrew Fagan.

1st Rhode Island Light Artillery, Battery H, Capt. Crawford Allen, jr.

1st U. S. Artillery, Battery E, Lieut. Frank S. French.

2d U. S. Artillery, Battery G, Lieut. James E. Wilson.

* The 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 11th, 12th, and 14th Independent Companies; afterward the Third Regiment Heavy Artillery.

† Military governor.

‡ Headquarters at Fort Corcoran. Troops at Forts Barnard, Berry, Ethan Allen, Ellsworth, Farnsworth, Garesché, Lyon, Marcy, O'Rourke, Richardson, Reynolds, Scott, Ward, Weed, Willard, Williams, Worth, and Battery Rodgers.

Second Brigade.

Col. THOMAS WILHELM.

74th Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. Alexander von Mitzel.
 13th New York Cavalry, Company C, Capt. Hobart E. Fitzgerald.
 1st New York Light Artillery, Battery K, Capt. Solon W. Stocking.
 Provisional Battalion (three companies), Capt. Nelson J. Strickland.

Third Brigade.

Col. WILLIAM HEINE.

103d New York, Lieut. Col. Andrew Wettstein.
 104th Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. Thompson D. Hart.
 3d U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Maj. William H. H. Beadle.
 3d Company Unattached Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, Lieut. Edwin Thomas.
 15th Company Unattached Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, Lieut. Edward J. Russell.
 Indiana Light Artillery, 16th Battery, Capt. Charles R. Deming.
 1st New York Light Artillery, Battery F, Capt. William R. Wilson.
 Pennsylvania Light Artillery, Battery I, Lieut. Louis M. Johnston.

Fourth Brigade.

Col. ADDISON FARNSWORTH.

Maryland Light Artillery, Battery D, Capt. John M. Bruce.
 1st West Virginia Light Artillery, Battery C, Capt. Wallace Hill.
 1st Wisconsin Heavy Artillery, Company A, Capt. Wallace M. Spear.
 12th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Maj. James Johnston.

CAVALRY BRIGADE.

Col. HENRY M. LAZELLE.

13th New York, Col. Henry S. Gansevoort.
 16th New York, Maj. Giles G. Horton.

DISTRICT OF ALEXANDRIA.

Brig. Gen. JOHN P. SLOUGH.*

1st District of Columbia (four companies), Lieut. Col. Robert Boyd.
 2d District of Columbia, Col. Charles M. Alexander.
 42d Massachusetts, Lieut. Col. Joseph Stedman.
 26th Michigan, Company F, Capt. Edmund Richardson.
 Pennsylvania Light Artillery, Battery H, Lieut. Theodore M. Finley.

PROVOST DETACHMENTS.

Lieut. Col. HENRY H. WELLS.†

2d District of Columbia, Company A, Lieut. John W. Peck.
 2d District of Columbia, Company B, Capt. John B. Morris.
 1st Michigan Cavalry, Company D, Capt. Thurlow W. Lusk.
 16th New York Cavalry, Company G, Capt. James A. McPherson.
 12th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (detachment), Capt. Rufus D. Pettit.

RENDEZVOUS OF DISTRIBUTION.

Lieut. Col. SAMUEL MCKELVY.

14th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (detachment), Lieut. Col. Carlile Boyd.
 Provisional Detachment, conscripts, &c., Capt. Alvah W. Briggs.

* Military governor.

† Provost-marshal-general, Defenses South of the Potomac.

CAVALRY DIVISION.*

Col. WILLIAM GAMBLE.

FIRST DIVISION.

Capt. BENJAMIN F. ROCKAFELLOW.

First Brigade.

Lieut. CHARLES A. PARKER.

|               |   |              |
|---------------|---|--------------|
| 1st Michigan, | } | Detachments. |
| 5th Michigan, |   |              |
| 6th Michigan, |   |              |
| 7th Michigan, |   |              |

Second Brigade.

Lieut. WILLIAM J. ALLEN.

|                    |   |              |
|--------------------|---|--------------|
| 4th New York,      | } | Detachments. |
| 6th New York,      |   |              |
| 9th New York,      |   |              |
| 17th Pennsylvania, |   |              |

Reserve Brigade.

Lieut. MARCELLUS E. JONES.

|                               |   |              |
|-------------------------------|---|--------------|
| 19th New York (1st Dragoons), | } | Detachments. |
| 6th Pennsylvania,             |   |              |
| 1st Rhode Island,             |   |              |
| 1st United States,            |   |              |
| 2d United States,             |   |              |
| 5th United States,            |   |              |
| 6th United States,            |   |              |

SECOND DIVISION.

Capt. JAMES T. PEALE.

First Brigade.

Lieut. GEORGE W. BROOKS.

|                    |   |              |
|--------------------|---|--------------|
| 1st Massachusetts, | } | Detachments. |
| 1st New Jersey,    |   |              |
| 10th New York,     |   |              |
| 6th Ohio,          |   |              |
| 1st Pennsylvania,  |   |              |
| 3d Pennsylvania,   |   |              |

Second Brigade.

Capt. ROBERT A. ROBINSON.

|                    |   |              |
|--------------------|---|--------------|
| 1st Maine,         | } | Detachments. |
| 2d Pennsylvania,   |   |              |
| 4th Pennsylvania,  |   |              |
| 8th Pennsylvania,  |   |              |
| 13th Pennsylvania, |   |              |
| 16th Pennsylvania, |   |              |

THIRD DIVISION.

Maj. HENRY W. SAWYER.

First Brigade.

Capt. ROBERT LOUDON.

|                    |   |              |
|--------------------|---|--------------|
| 1st Connecticut,   | } | Detachments. |
| 2d New York,       |   |              |
| 3d New York,       |   |              |
| 5th New York,      |   |              |
| 2d Ohio,           |   |              |
| 18th Pennsylvania, |   |              |

Second Brigade.

Lieut. GEORGE W. BYARD.

|                |   |              |
|----------------|---|--------------|
| 8th Illinois,  | } | Detachments. |
| 3d Indiana,    |   |              |
| 8th New York,  |   |              |
| 22d New York,  |   |              |
| 25th New York, |   |              |
| 1st Ohio,      |   |              |
| 1st Vermont,   |   |              |

CAMP MISCELLANY.

Lieut. Col. RICHARD F. MOSON.

UNATTACHED.

1st New Hampshire (detachment), Maj. Joseph F. Andrews.

* Consisting of detachments belonging to the cavalry of the Army of the Potomac and Middle Military Division.

MUDDY BRANCH, MD.

8th Illinois Cavalry, Maj. John M. Waite,

HOSPITAL GUARDS.

Surg. ROBERT O. ABBOTT,

CAVALRY DEPOT (GIESBOROUGH POINT),

Col. GEORGE A. H. BLAKE.

19th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Company K, Lieut. Henry K. W. Ayers.
228th Company, 1st Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Archibald W. McKillip.

FREEDMAN'S VILLAGE.

U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (two companies), Capt. George B. Carse.

RAILWAY GUARD.

18th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (six companies), Col. Charles F. Johnson.

NOT BRIGADED.

84th New York State Militia, Col. Frederick A. Conkling.

DEPARTMENT OF THE SUSQUEHANNA.

Maj. Gen. DARIUS N. COUCH,

CARLISLE, PA.

Cavalry Depot (Carlisle Barracks), Capt. William B. Royall.
Draft Rendezvous, Capt. David P. Hancock.

CHAMBERSBURG, PA.

Patapsco (Maryland) Guards, Capt. Thomas S. McGowan.
201st Pennsylvania Infantry, Col. F. Asbury Awl.
1st Battalion Pennsylvania Infantry, Lieut. Col. Charles Stewart.
Pennsylvania Cavalry (one company), Capt. George D. Stroud.
Keystone (Pennsylvania) Battery, Capt. Matthew Hastings.

CHELTON HILL (CAMP WILLIAM PENN), PA.

Lieut. Col. LOUIS WAGNER.

45th U. S. Colored Troops (six companies), Maj. James T. Bates.
127th U. S. Colored Troops (five companies), Lieut. William P. Roberts.
Independent Company A, U. S. Colored Troops, Lieut. Enon M. Harris.

GREENCASTLE, PA.

Pennsylvania Cavalry (one company), Capt. Edward B. Sanno.
Detachment Signal Corps, Lieut. Amos M. Thayer.

HARRISBURG, PA.

Capt. RICHARD I. DODGE.

16th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Col. Charles M. Prevost.
50th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Benjamin C. Cook.
Convalescent Battery, Lieut. John T. Kingsbury.

PHILADELPHIA, PA.

Maj. Gen. GEORGE CADWALADER.

186th Pennsylvania, Col. Henry A. Frink.

46th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Capt. Thomas C. Kendall.

51st Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Capt. Edward L. Stratton.

52d Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Frank H. Coles.

53d Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Capt. John R. Fellman.

55th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Capt. Oliver D. Peabody.

57th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Capt. William Brian.

105th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Thomas Matthews.

131st Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Capt. John K. Murphy.

162d Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Capt. Max von Amelnunxen.

DISTRICT OF THE MONONGAHELA.*

Brig. Gen. THOMAS A. ROWLEY.

1st New York Light Artillery, Battery A, Capt. Thomas H. Bates.

21st U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Company I, Capt. Greenlief P. Davis.

109th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. John L. Graham.

POTTSVILLE, PA.

Capt. JOSIAH C. HULLINGER.†

50th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (detachment), Sergt. Jeremiah Alcorn.

21st Pennsylvania Cavalry, Company D, Lieut. James C. Patton.

SHIMPS'TOWN, PA.

Pennsylvania Cavalry (one company), Capt. Christian B. Hebble.

YORK, PA.

Surg. HENRY PALMER.

108th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. William Mitchell.

BLOOMSBURG, PA.

Pennsylvania Cavalry (one company), Capt. Bruce Lambert.

McCONNELLSBURG, PA.

Pennsylvania Cavalry (one company), Capt. Edward M. Warren.

FORT MIFFLIN, PA.

Lieut. Col. DANIEL P. WHITING.

MIDDLE DEPARTMENT (EIGHTH ARMY CORPS).

Maj. Gen. LEWIS WALLACE.

FIRST SEPARATE BRIGADE.

Brig. Gen. ERASTUS B. TYLER.

1st Maryland Eastern Shore, Maj. John R. Keene.

11th Maryland, Col. William T. Landstreet.

12th Maryland (five companies), Lieut. Col. John L. Bishop.

93d New York (militia), Col. William R. W. Chambers.

195th Pennsylvania, Col. Joseph W. Fisher.

1st Delaware Cavalry (seven companies), Lieut. Col. Napoleon B. Knight.

8th New York Heavy Artillery (detachment), } Lieut. William H. Courtney.

9th New York Heavy Artillery (detachment), }

3d Pennsylvania Artillery, Battery H, Capt. William D. Rank.

* Capt. Samuel L. Fullwood, commanding Post of Pittsburg.

† Commanding Lehigh District.

SECOND SEPARATE BRIGADE.

Bvt. Brig. Gen. WILLIAM W. MORRIS.

5th Massachusetts Infantry, Col. George H. Peirson.
 91st New York, Lieut. Col. Jonathan Tarbell.
 2d U. S. Artillery, Batteries H and K, Capt. Frank H. Larned.

THIRD SEPARATE BRIGADE.

Brig. Gen. HENRY H. LOCKWOOD.

1st Maryland Eastern Shore, Company B, Capt. John E. Graham.
 8th Massachusetts, Col. Benjamin F. Peach, jr.
 193d Pennsylvania (detachment).
 194th Pennsylvania, Col. James Nagle.
 71st Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Robert J. Sutherland.
 72d Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Frank P. Gross.
 89th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Nelson Brouson.
 95th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Vivian K. Spear.
 143d Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Horatio Roberts.
 10th U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (four companies), Col. David P. De Witt.
 Independent Cavalry Company (Maryland), Capt. George W. P. Smith.

ANNAPOLIS, MD.

Col. ADRIAN R. ROOT.

96th Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Capt. Horace F. Crossman.
 118th and 119th Companies, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. Charles Reynolds.

WILMINGTON, DEL.

Col. SAMUEL M. BOWMAN.*

193d Pennsylvania (detachment), Col. John B. Clark.
 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps (detachments), Lieut. James Lewis.

DEPARTMENT OF WEST VIRGINIA.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. GEORGE CROOK.

FIRST DIVISION.

Col. JOSEPH THOBURN.

First Brigade.

Col. GEORGE D. WELLS.

34th Massachusetts, Maj. Harrison W. Pratt.
 116th Ohio, Col. James Washburn.
 123d Ohio, Col. William T. Wilson.
 5th New York Heavy Artillery, 2d Battalion, Maj. Caspar Urban.

Second Brigade.

Col. WILLIAM G. ELY.

18th Connecticut, Maj. Henry Peale.
 2d Maryland Eastern Shore, Col. Robert S. Rodgers.
 1st West Virginia, Lieut. Col. Jacob Weddle.
 4th West Virginia, Capt. Benjamin D. Boswell.
 12th West Virginia, Capt. Erastus G. Bartlett.

* Commanding District of Delaware.

Third Brigade.

Col. THOMAS M. HARRIS.

23d Illinois (five companies), Capt. David P. Moriarty.
 54th Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. John P. Linton.
 10th West Virginia, Maj. Henry H. Withers.
 11th West Virginia, Lieut. Col. Van H. Bukey.
 15th West Virginia, Maj. John W. Holliday.

SECOND DIVISION.

Col. ISAAC H. DUVAL.

First Brigade.

Col. RUTHERFORD B. HAYES.

23d Ohio, Lieut. Col. James M. Comly.
 36th Ohio, Col. Hiram F. Devol.
 5th West Virginia, Col. Abia A. Tomlinson.
 13th West Virginia, Col. William R. Brown.

Second Brigade.

Col. DANIEL D. JOHNSON.

34th Ohio, Maj. Luther Furney.
 91st Ohio, Lieut. Col. Benjamin F. Coates.
 9th West Virginia, Maj. Benjamin M. Skinner.
 14th West Virginia, Lieut. Col. George W. Taggart.

DISTRICT OF HARPER'S FERRY.*

Brig. Gen. JOHN D. STEVENSON.

KENLY'S BRIGADE.

Brig. Gen. JOHN R. KENLY.

2d Maryland Potomac Home Brigade, Lieut. Col. G. Ellis Porter.
 3d Maryland Potomac Home Brigade, Col. Charles Gilpin.
 49th Pennsylvania,† Lieut. Col. Baynton J. Hickman.

CAVALRY.

12th Pennsylvania, Col. Lewis B. Pierce.
 Loudoun (Virginia) Rangers, Capt. Daniel M. Keyes.
 Remount Camp, Capt. James H. Stevenson.

ARTILLERY.

Kentucky Light, 1st Battery, Capt. Daniel W. Glassie.
 Maryland Light, Baltimore Battery, Capt. Frederic W. Alexander.
 Maryland Light, Battery A,‡ Capt. James H. Rigby.
 5th New York Heavy (eight companies), Col. Samuel Graham.
 New York Light, 30th Battery, Capt. Alfred von Kleiser.
 New York Light, 32d Battery, Capt. Charles Kusserow.
 Ohio Light, 1st Battery, Capt. George P. Kirtland.
 1st Ohio Light, Battery L, Capt. Frank C. Gibbs.
 1st Pennsylvania Light, Battery G, Capt. Beldin Spence.
 Pennsylvania Light, Battery F,* Capt. Nathaniel Irish.
 1st West Virginia Light, Battery A, Capt. George Furst.

UNATTACHED.

1st Maryland Potomac Home Brigade (infantry), Lieut. Col. Roger E. Cook.
 Independent Company Pennsylvania Engineers, Capt. S. Crawford Smith.

* For composition of the Third Brigade, First Division, Nineteenth Army Corps (serving in this district), see p. 985.

† Also reported in Third Brigade, First Division, Sixth Army Corps.

‡ Dismounted and acting as infantry.

WEST OF SLEEPY CREEK.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. BENJAMIN F. KELLEY.

2d Maryland Potomac Home Brigade, Company K, Capt. Peter B. Petrie.
 6th West Virginia, Maj. John H. Showalter.
 11th West Virginia (four companies), Maj. James L. Simpson.
 2d Maryland Potomac Home Brigade, Company F (cavalry), Capt. Norval McKinley.
 3d Company Ohio Cavalry (detachment), Capt. Harry Pease.
 8th Ohio Cavalry (detachment), Lieut. Col. Robert Youart.
 1st West Virginia Cavalry, Company A, Capt. Harrison H. Hagans.
 5th West Virginia Cavalry, Company G, Capt. Michael Donohue.
 6th West Virginia Cavalry, Lieut. Col. Francis W. Thompson.
 1st Illinois Light Artillery, Battery L, Lieut. John McAfee.
 Maryland Light Artillery, Battery B, Capt. Alonzo Snow.
 1st West Virginia Light Artillery, Battery D, Capt. John Carlin.
 1st West Virginia Light Artillery, Battery H, Lieut. John E. Morgan.

KANAWHA VALLEY FORCES.

Brig. Gen. JEREMIAH C. SULLIVAN.

7th West Virginia Cavalry, Maj. Hedgeman Slack.

FIRST CAVALRY DIVISION.*

Brig. Gen. ALFRED N. DUFFIÉ.

1st Maryland Potomac Home Brigade,† Col. Henry A. Cole.
 1st New York (Veteran), Lieut. Col. John S. Platner.
 15th New York, Col. Robert M. Richardson.
 21st New York, Maj. John S. Jennings.
 20th Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. Gabriel Middleton.

SECOND CAVALRY DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. WILLIAM W. AVERELL.

First Brigade.

Col. JAMES M. SCHOONMAKER.

8th Ohio (detachment), Maj. James W. Shaw.
 14th Pennsylvania, Maj. Shadrach Foley.
 22d Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. Andrew J. Greenfield.

Second Brigade.

Col. WILLIAM H. POWELL.

1st New York (Lincoln), Maj. Timothy Quinn.
 1st West Virginia, Lieut. Col. Charles E. Capehart.
 2d West Virginia, Lieut. Col. John J. Hoffman.
 3d West Virginia, Maj. Lot Bowen.

Artillery.

5th United States, Battery L, Lieut. Gulian V. Weir.

ARTILLERY BRIGADE.

Capt. HENRY A. DU PONT.

1st Pennsylvania Light Artillery, Battery D, Capt. Andrew Rosney.
 5th U. S. Artillery, Battery B, Capt. Henry A. Du Pont.
 1st West Virginia Light Artillery, Battery E, Capt. Alexander C. Moore.

* But see organization as directed in General Orders, No. 13, August 29, p. 958.

† See also Lowell's brigade (p. 986), to which it was assigned August 9.

MISCELLANEOUS.

FREDERICK, MD.

132d Company, 2d Battalion, U. S. Veteran Reserve Corps, Lieut. James Drysdale.

WHEELING, W. VA.

Virginia Exempts, Capt. Ewald Over.

SIXTH ARMY CORPS.

Maj. Gen. HORATIO G. WRIGHT

ESCORT.

1st Michigan Cavalry, Company G, Lieut. William H. Wheeler.

FIRST DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. DAVID A. RUSSELL.

First Brigade.

Col. WILLIAM H. PENROSE.

4th New Jersey, Capt. Robert S. Johnston.
10th New Jersey, Maj. Lambert Boeman.
15th New Jersey, Lieut. Col. Edward L. Campbell.

Second Brigade.

Brig. Gen. EMORY UPTON.

65th New York,* Col. Joseph E. Hamblin.
121st New York, Lieut. Col. Egbert Olcott.
95th Pennsylvania, Capt. Francis J. Randall.
96th Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. William H. Lessig.
2d Connecticut Heavy Artillery, Col. Ranald S. Mackenzie.

Third Brigade.

Col. OLIVER EDWARDS.

37th Massachusetts,† Lieut. Col. George L. Montague.
49th Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. Baynton J. Hickman.
82d Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. John M. Wetherill.
119th Pennsylvania,‡ Lieut. Col. Gideon Clark.
2d Rhode Island (battalion), Capt. Elisha H. Rhodes.
5th Wisconsin (battalion), Capt. Charles W. Kempf.

SECOND DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. GEORGE W. GETTY.

First Brigade.

Brig. Gen. FRANK WHEATON.

62d New York, Lieut. Col. Theodore B. Hamilton.
93d Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. John S. Long.
98th Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. John B. Kohler.
102d Pennsylvania, Maj. Thomas McLaughlin.
139th Pennsylvania, Maj. Robert Munroe.

Second Brigade.

Brig. Gen. LEWIS A. GRANT.

2d Vermont, Lieut. Col. Amasa S. Tracy.
3d Vermont (battalion), } Col. George P.
4th Vermont, } Foster.
5th Vermont, Capt. Friend H. Barney.
6th Vermont, Capt. Martin W. Davis.
11th Vermont (1st Heavy Artillery), Col. James M. Warner.

* Detachment 67th New York attached.

† Detachments 7th and 10th Massachusetts attached.

‡ Detachment 23d Pennsylvania attached.

Third Brigade.

Brig. Gen. DANIEL D. BIDWELL.

7th Maine, Maj. Stephen C. Fletcher.
 43d New York, Lieut. Col. Volkert V. Van Patten.
 49th New York, Lieut. Col. Erastus D. Holt.
 77th New York, Lieut. Col. Winsor B. French.
 122d New York, Maj. Jabez M. Brower.
 61st Pennsylvania, Capt. Charles S. Greene.

THIRD DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. JAMES B. RICKETTS.

First Brigade.

Col. WILLIAM EMERSON.

14th New Jersey, Maj. Peter Vredenburg, jr.
 106th New York, Capt. Samuel Parker.
 151st New York, Lieut. Col. Thomas M. Fay.
 87th Pennsylvania, Col. John W. Schall.
 10th Vermont, Maj. Edwin Dillingham.

Second Brigade.

Col. J. WARREN KEIFER.

6th Maryland, Col. John W. Horn.
 110th Ohio, Lieut. Col. Otho H. Binkley.
 122d Ohio, Col. William H. Ball.
 126th Ohio, Lieut. Col. Aaron W. Ebright.
 67th Pennsylvania, Lieut. John F. Young.
 138th Pennsylvania, Maj. Lewis A. May.
 9th New York Heavy Artillery, Maj. Charles Burgess.

ARTILLERY BRIGADE.

Col. CHARLES H. TOMPKINS.

Maine Light, 5th Battery (E), Capt. Greenleaf T. Stevens.
 Massachusetts Light, 1st Battery (A), Lieut. Jacob Federhen.
 New York Light, 1st Battery, Capt. Andrew Cowan.
 1st Rhode Island Light, Battery C, Capt. Richard Waterman.
 1st Rhode Island Light, Battery G, Capt. George W. Adams.
 5th United States, Battery M, Capt. James McKnight.

DETACHMENT NINETEENTH ARMY CORPS.

Bvt. Maj. Gen. WILLIAM H. EMORY.

FIRST DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. WILLIAM DWIGHT.

First Brigade.

Bvt. Brig. Gen. GEORGE L. BEAL.

29th Maine, Maj. William Knowlton.
 30th Massachusetts, Lieut. Col. Francis H. Whittier.
 90th New York, Lieut. Col. Nelson Shaurman.
 114th New York, Col. Samuel R. Per Lee.
 116th New York, Col. George M. Love.
 153d New York, Col. Edwin P. Davis.

Second Brigade.

Brig. Gen. JAMES W. McMILLAN.

12th Connecticut, Lieut. Col. Frank H. Peck.
 13th Maine, Col. Henry Rust, jr.
 15th Maine, Col. Isaac Dyer.
 160th New York,* Lieut. Col. John B. Van Petten.
 47th Pennsylvania, Col. Tilghman H. Good.
 8th Vermont, Col. Stephen Thomas.

Third Brigade.†

Col. LEONARD D. H. CURRIE.

30th Maine, Capt. George W. Randall.
 133d New York, Maj. Anthony J. Allaire.
 162d New York, Col. Justus W. Blanchard.
 165th New York (six companies), Lieut. Col. Gouverneur Carr.
 173d New York, Maj. George W. Rogers.

*Detachment of non-veterans 90th New York attached.

†Serving in the District of Harper's Ferry.

Artillery.

New York Light, 5th Battery, Lieut. John V. Grant.

SECOND DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. CUVIER GROVER.

First Brigade.

Brig. Gen. HENRY W. BIRGE.

9th Connecticut, Col. Thomas W. Cahill.
 12th Maine, Col. William K. Kimball.
 14th Maine, Col. Thomas W. Porter.
 26th Massachusetts, Col. Alpha B. Farr.
 14th New Hampshire, Col. Robert Wilson.
 75th New York, Col. Robert B. Merritt.

Second Brigade.

Col. EDWARD L. MOLINEUX.

11th Indiana, Col. Daniel Macauley.
 22d Iowa, Col. Harvey Graham.
 131st New York, Col. Nicholas W. Day.
 159th New York, Lieut. Col. William Waltermire.
 3d Massachusetts Cavalry (dis-mounted), Col. Lorenzo D. Sargent.

Third Brigade.

Col. JACOB SHARPE.

38th Massachusetts, Maj. Charles F. Allen.
 128th New York, Lieut. Col. James P. Foster.
 156th New York, Lieut. Col. Alfred Neafie.
 175th New York (three companies), Capt. Charles McCarthey.
 176th New York, Maj. Charles Lewis.

Fourth Brigade.

Col. DAVID SHUNK.

8th Indiana, Lieut. Col. Alexander J. Kenny.
 18th Indiana, Col. Henry D. Washburn.
 24th Iowa, Col. John Q. Wilds.
 28th Iowa, Lieut. Col. Bartholomew W. Wilson.

Artillery.

Maine Light, 1st Battery (A), Capt. Albert W. Bradbury.

RESERVE ARTILLERY.

Capt. ELIJAH D. TAFT.

Indiana Light, 17th Battery, Capt. Milton L. Miner.
 1st Rhode Island Light, Battery D, Capt. William W. Buckley.

CAVALRY.

Brig. Gen. ALFRED T. A. TORBERT.

ESCORT.

1st Rhode Island, Maj. Preston M. Farrington.

FIRST DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. WESLEY MERRITT.

First Brigade.

Brig. Gen. GEORGE A. CUSTER.

1st Michigan, Maj. Thomas M. Howrigan.
 5th Michigan, Col. Russell A. Alger.
 6th Michigan, Col. James H. Kidd.
 7th Michigan, Maj. Melvin Brewer.

Second Brigade.

Col. THOMAS C. DEVIN.

4th New York, Lieut. Col. William R. Parnell.
 6th New York, Maj. William E. Beardsley.
 9th New York, Lieut. Col. George S. Nichols.
 17th Pennsylvania, Maj. Coe Durland.

Third Brigade.

Col. CHARLES R. LOWELL, Jr.

1st Maryland Potomac Home Brigade, Maj. Alexander M. Flory.
 2d Massachusetts, Lieut. Col. Casper Crowninshield.
 25th New York, Maj. Charles J. Seymour.

Reserve Brigade.

Col. ALFRED GIBBS.

19th New York (1st Dragoons), Maj. Howard M. Smith.
 6th Pennsylvania, Maj. James Starr.
 1st United States, Capt. Eugene M. Baker.
 2d United States, Capt. Robert S. Smith.
 5th United States, Lieut. Gustavus Urban.

Artillery.

1st United States, Batteries K and L, Lieut. Frank E. Taylor.
2d United States, Battery D, Lieut. Edward B. Williston.

THIRD DIVISION.

Brig. Gen. JAMES H. WILSON.

First Brigade.

Brig. Gen. JOHN B. MCINTOSH.

1st Connecticut, Col. Erastus Blakeslee.
3d New Jersey, Lieut. Col. Charles C. Suydam.
2d New York (four companies), Capt. Walter C. Hull.
5th New York, Lieut. Col. William P. Bacon.
2d Ohio, Lieut. Col. George A. Purington.
18th Pennsylvania, Lieut. Col. William P. Brinton.

Second Brigade.

Brig. Gen. GEORGE H. CHAPMAN.

3d Indiana (detachment), Lieut. Benjamin F. Gilbert.
1st New Hampshire (seven companies), Col. John L. Thompson.
8th New York, Lieut. Col. William H. Benjamin.
22d New York, Maj. Caleb Moore.
1st Vermont, Col. William Wells.

RESERVE HORSE ARTILLERY BRIGADE.

Capt. LA RHETT L. LIVINGSTON.

2d United States, Batteries B and L, Lieut. Charles H. Peirce.
2d United States, Battery M,* Lieut. Carle A. Woodruff.
3d United States, Batteries C, F, and K, Capt. Dunbar R. Ransom.
4th United States, Batteries C and E,* Lieut. Charles L. Fitzhugh.

Abstract from return of the Department of the East, Maj. Gen. John A. Dix,† U. S. Army, commanding, for the month of August, 1864.

| Command.                                                               | Present for duty. |        | Aggregate present. | Aggregate present and absent. | Pieces of heavy artillery. |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------|--------|--------------------|-------------------------------|----------------------------|
|                                                                        | Officers.         | Men.   |                    |                               |                            |
| General headquarters .....                                             | 89                | .....  | 89                 | 89                            | .....                      |
| City and Harbor of New York (Hunt) .....                               | 57                | 835    | 1, 279             | 2, 249                        | .....                      |
| Hart's Island (Jackson) .....                                          | 7                 | 45     | 56                 | 99                            | .....                      |
| Boston Harbor and Massachusetts Sea-Coast Defenses (Floyd-Jones) ..... | 40                | 1, 419 | 1, 705             | 1, 760                        | 242                        |
| Defenses of Portsmouth Harbor and Maine Sea-Coast (Dawson) .....       | 11                | 283    | 310                | 392                           | .....                      |
| Other forts .....                                                      | 15                | 634    | 893                | 967                           | .....                      |
| Total .....                                                            | 219               | 3, 216 | 4, 332             | 5, 556                        | .....                      |

Troops in the Department of the East, Maj. Gen. John A. Dix,† U. S. Army, commanding, August 31, 1864.

CITY AND HARBOR OF NEW YORK.

Brig. Gen. LEWIS C. HUNT.

Fort Hamilton.

Maj. DICKINSON WOODRUFF.

69th New York State National Guard, Companies D and H, Capt. Michael O'Boyle.
3d United States, Lieut. Joseph Hale.
12th United States (invalid company), Lieut. Edwin M. Coates.
5th U. S. Artillery (detachment), Lieut. Thomson P. McElrath.

* Serving with Third Cavalry Division.

† Maj. Gen. John J. Peck, U. S. Army, second in command.

Fort Lafayette.

Lieut. Col. MARTIN BURKE.

7th United States, Company A, Lieut. Constant Williams.
 7th United States, Company E, Lieut. James Cullen.
 10th United States (detachment), Lieut. Claude S. Robertson.

Fort Columbus.

Capt. JOHN D. WILKINS.

New York Light Artillery, 20th Battery (detachment), Capt. B. Franklin Ryer.
 U. S. General Service Recruits.

Fort Richmond.

Col. JAMES BAGLEY.

69th New York State National Guard, Col. James Bagley.

Sandy Hook.

Lieut. Col. ENOCH STEEN.

New York Light Artillery, 28th Battery, Capt. Josiah C. Hannum.

Fort Schuyler.

Maj. HENRY D. WALLIN.

7th United States (eight companies), Maj. Henry D. Wallin.
 31st U. S. Colored Troops (detachment).

Fort Wood.

Col. CHARLES S. MERCHANT.

6th United States, Lieut. Col. Henry B. Clitz.
 Permanent Party, Lieut. Joseph B. Rife.

Battery Barracks.

Capt. HAMILTON S. HAWKINS.

6th United States (detachment), Capt. Hamilton S. Hawkins.
 New York Light Artillery, 20th Battery (detachment).

Hart's Island.

Brig. Gen. NATHANIEL J. JACKSON.

31st U. S. Colored Troops (detachment), Maj. Charles A. Wells.
 Garrison Battalion, Maj. Matthias S. Euen.
 Battalion of Recruits, Maj. Augustus C. Tate.

BOSTON HARBOR AND MASSACHUSETTS SEA-COAST DEFENSES.

Lieut. Col. DE LANCEY FLOYD-JONES.

Clark's Point (New Bedford).

Capt. CALEB E. NIEBUHR.

1st Battalion Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, Company B, Capt. Caleb E. Niebuhr.

Eastern Point (Fort Gloucester).

Capt. FRANCIS E. PORTER.

2d Unattached Company Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Capt. Francis E. Porter.

Fort Independence.

Lieut. Col. DE LANCEY FLOYD-JONES.

11th United States, 3d Battalion, Company A, }
 11th United States, 2d Battalion, Company H, } Capt. Alfred E. Latimer.
 11th United States, Invalid Company A, }
 1st U. S. Artillery, Invalid Company A, } Lieut. James Kennington.
 1st Battalion Massachusetts Heavy Artillery, Company D, Capt. Thomas J. Little.

Long Point Batteries (Provincetown).

Capt. DAVID H. DYER.

21st Unattached Company Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Capt. David H. Dyer.

Forts Pickering and Lee (Salem).

Capt. JOHN G. BARNES.

17th Unattached Company Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Capt. John G. Barnes.

Fort Sewall (Marblehead).

Capt. LEWIS SOULE.

20th Unattached Company Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Capt. Lewis Soule.

Fort Warren.

Maj. STEPHEN CABOT.

15th Unattached Company Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Capt. Isaac A. Jennings.

19th Unattached Company Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, Capt. James M. Mason.

1st Battalion Massachusetts Heavy Artillery (Companies A, C, E, and F), Capt. James H. Baldwin.

DEFENSES OF PORTSMOUTH HARBOR AND MAINE SEA-COAST.

Lieut. Col. SAMUEL K. DAWSON.

Fort Constitution.

Capt. GEORGE C. HOUGHTON.

New Hampshire State Militia, Company A, Capt. George C. Houghton.

Lafayette Artillery, New Hampshire State Militia, Company B, Capt. Joel H. Tarbell.

Fort McClary.

Capt. GEORGE C. HOUGHTON.

Maine State Guards, Company A, Capt. Llewellyn J. Morse.

Fort Knox.

Lieut. THOMAS H. PALMER.

1st Maine Heavy Artillery (detachment), Lieut. Thomas H. Palmer.

Fort Sullivan.

Capt. THOMAS P. HUTCHINSON.

Maine Coast Guard, Company C, Capt. Thomas P. Hutchinson.

MISCELLANEOUS.

Fort Adams, R. I.

Col. OLIVER L. SHEPHERD.

15th United States, 3d Battalion, Company D, Capt. Henry C. Gapen.

Fort Ontario, N. Y.

Capt. ROBERT E. A. CROFTON.

16th United States (detachment), Capt. Robert E. A. Crofton.

Portsmouth Grove, R. I.

Capt. CHRISTOPHER BLANDING.

Rhode Island Hospital Guards, Company A, Capt. Christopher Blanding.

Forts Preble and Scammel, Me.

Maj. GEORGE L. ANDREWS.

17th United States, Invalid Companies A and B, Capt. William H. Walcott.

Fort Trumbull, Conn.

Capt. JOHN D. O'CONNELL.

14th United States (detachment), Capt. John D. O'Connell.

3d U. S. Artillery, Battery I, Lieut. Abram C. Wildrick.

Fort Porter, N. Y.

Capt. EDWIN C. WILSON.

Detachment Veteran Reserve Corps and recruits, Lieut. Daniel T. Everts.

CONFEDERATE CORRESPONDENCE, ETC.

[AUGUST 4, 1864.—For Lee to Davis, relating to certain operations in the Shenandoah Valley, &c., see Vol. XLII, Part II, p. 1161.]

HEADQUARTERS,
August 8, 1864. (Via Staunton, Va.)

General J. A. EARLY:

Enemy has detached a division of cavalry with a body of infantry to Washington. General R. H. Anderson, with infantry and cavalry, is in Culpeper to observe their movements.

R. E. LEE,
General.

RICHMOND, VA., August 9, 1864.

General R. E. LEE,
Dunn's Hill, Va.:

Who shall relieve General Ransom in the Valley? Can General F. Lee; or would it [be] better to send his senior brigadier? We have unofficial intelligence that Generals McCausland and Johnson were surprised and routed near Moorefield, dispersing with heavy loss.

JEFF'N DAVIS.

DUNN'S HILL, VA., August 9, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS:

Dispatch of to-day received. General Early reports on the 8th that McCausland had arrived in Hardy, having sustained very little loss; statements in Northern papers of his defeat untrue. Some commander should relieve Ransom. I think it best to send Fitz Lee's senior brigadier; will do so if you approve.

R. E. LEE,
General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 9, 1864.

Hon. SECRETARY OF WAR,
Richmond:

SIR: When applied to some time ago to devise some mode to relieve the people of the Northern Neck and the south side of the Rappahannock from outrages by the enemy, I advised that all citizens capable of bearing arms be organized for the defense of their property and families. At the same time I inquired of Colonel Mosby if he could recommend some one, experienced in the kind of service which the necessities of the exposed districts will require, to aid in organizing the citizens and controlling their operations. He has recently replied to my letter and recommended very highly the bearer of this, Mr. Thomas W. Richards, as a man of approved courage, of good character, and fitted by experience for the duty. I therefore respectfully advise that you send Mr. Richards to the country in question with a letter to the most prominent citizens explanatory of his object, and asking their co-operation, at the same time giving him authority to raise a command for local defense in conformity to law, but strictly prohibiting him from receiving any absentees from the army or persons liable to enrollment in the general service. I think such a command, well managed, will contribute greatly to the security of the people and their property.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

[Indorsement.]

AUGUST 10, 1864.

ADJUTANT-GENERAL:

Grant such authority as is recommended by General Lee. Let the officer have a certified copy of this letter from General Lee, which will be his best recommendation to the citizens of the Northern Neck. Refer him, too, to General Kemper, to whom he will report for the present, and will co-operate with the reserves.

J. A. S.,
Secretary.

---

HARRISONBURG, August 9, 1864.

EDITOR WHIG:

Defeat of McCausland. Our forces under Generals B. T. Johnson and McCausland suffered defeat near Moorefield, Hardy County, on Sunday morning last about daylight. They were surprised, attacked by forces under Averell, and stampeded and routed, the enemy capturing and killing 300 or 400 of Johnson's men, 4 pieces of artillery, and 800 or 900 horses. It was a perfect rout, our men scattering in wild disorder and confusion and running in different directions. Fuller particulars to-morrow.

J. H. WARTMAN.

[Indorsement.]

AUGUST 9, 1864.

Respectfully submitted for the information of the President.

It is a copy of a press dispatch sent to the Whig. I have retained till officially advised.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

AUGUST 9, 1864.

Major-General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: I will move Rodes' and Ramseur's divisions in the morning toward Martinsburg, and you will picket on the Charlestown road, as well as the Brucetown road, and toward Indian Springs. You must keep a vigilant lookout for the enemy and drive him back if he advances. I will go with Rodes and Ramseur myself.

Respectfully,

J. A. EARLY,
Lieutenant-General.

HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT,
August 9, 1864.

General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: The movements of the enemy render it necessary for your command to be kept always ready to move at a moment's notice. Men and officers must be kept in camp. All roads must be picketed in every direction. General Early directs me to say that he wishes you to give your personal attention to this.

I am, general, respectfully, &c.,

A. S. PENDLETON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT,
August 9, 1864—11 p. m.

General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: Move at sunrise to-morrow to Winchester. Colonel Allan will move his train, following your leading division. Take your artillery.

By order of Lieutenant-General Early:

A. S. PENDLETON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

RICHMOND, VA., August 10, 1864.

General R. E. LEE,

Hdqrs. Army of Northern Virginia, near Petersburg, Va.:

I accept your conclusion. General G. W. C. Lee not physically equal to the duty. Send the senior brigadier of Fitz Lee's division. He will require temporary rank, being now junior to Brigadier-General Vaughn, unless the latter is ordered elsewhere.

JEFF'N DAVIS.

OFFICIAL AND RELIABLE.]

AUGUST 10, 1864.

Grant is gathering a large force at or near Harper's Ferry. He (Grant) has been up giving direction, and has returned to the forces confronting Petersburg. The force at Harper's Ferry will make an impetuous dash down the Valley; will try to get in the rear of Early and re-capture all supplies, cut railroads, lay waste the crops, &c. The force now at or about Harper's Ferry is estimated between 50,000 and 60,000, cavalry, infantry, and artillery included. Grant will continue to lie before Petersburg with what is left of his army, and will attack if there should be the least chance for success. They have on the upper Potomac between 7,000 and 8,000 cavalry. Plans, you see, have wonderfully changed since my last dispatch a few days ago. They have been marching and countermarching through the counties lying on the upper Potomac, no doubt to deceive Early and lead him in a trap. But we are in hopes Early may arrange matters and catch him. No troops in the county. Gold, 260½, so quoted in the papers; can't be bought for that.

Yours, &c.,

DURST.

N. B.—It is not known reliably who will be chief in command of all the forces at Harper's Ferry, but most likely Hooker, as he has recently been ordered here from the Southwest. Hooker has by some means gotten the name among the soldiers as "Fighting Joe;" this reason, no doubt, has influenced the Administration in making the selection. The army above don't seem so full of fight; they seem jaded and tired. There is sickness prevailing in the ranks.

Yours, &c.,

DURST.

(Copy to General R. E. Lee.)

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
 No. 188. } Richmond, August 10, 1864.
 * * * * *

XXXVIII. Maj. Gen. L. L. Lomax will relieve Major-General Ransom in the command of the cavalry attached to the corps of Lieutenant-General Early. Upon being relieved Major-General Ransom will report to the Adjutant and Inspector General.

By command of the Secretary of War:

SAML. W. MELTON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
 No. 188. } August 10, 1864.
 * * * * *

VI. Brig. Gen. Philip Cook, Provisional Army, C. S., is assigned to the command of the brigade of Rodes' division formerly commanded by Brigadier-General Doles, and will report accordingly.

By command of General R. E. Lee:

W. H. TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

AUGUST 10, 1864.

Major-General BRECKINRIDGE :

GENERAL : The enemy is reported advancing. There is no cavalry on the road from Charlestown and Berryville to Winchester, Imboden's pickets having been cut in two. Keep a strict lookout and keep your forces in constant readiness; do not let us have another surprise.

J. A. EARLY,
Lieutenant-General.

---

[AUGUST 11, 1864.—For Lee to Seddon, relative to engagement at Moorefield, see p. 551.]

---

WAR DEPARTMENT, C. S. A.,
Richmond, Va., August 11, 1864.

General R. E. LEE,
Petersburg, Va. :

Information through signal office, said to be reliable, from Washington, of the 8th instant, states Grant and staff arrived in Washington from Baltimore on the 6th, and that his army has been moving away rapidly from Petersburg since his unsuccessful mining feat. Troops and munitions in large numbers and quantities have recently landed at Alexandria, Annapolis, Baltimore, and Washington from Grant's army. This accords with information from same source of 5th and 6th, which states that Sheridan and Hooker were in Washington; that 2,500 cavalry had arrived; that Grant and staff had gone to Harper's Ferry, and that Sheridan's cavalry, 8,000, were all in Washington. Total force for operations in Maryland believed to be 50,000; total left at Petersburg about the same. Troops being sent to Harper's Ferry and that region. Brigade of cavalry with artillery passed through Washington on 7th. You must estimate the worth of these reports.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

HEADQUARTERS,
August 11, 1864.

Hon. J. A. SEDDON:

Your dispatch of to-day received. General Grant has been at Harper's Ferry; General Sheridan has been placed in command of that department; the greater part of his cavalry has gone with him. The part of the Nineteenth Corps that has been serving here, and probably the Eighteenth Corps, are the only infantry, I believe, that have left General Meade.

R. E. LEE.

---

MOUNT JACKSON, August 11, 1864.

T. H. WYNNE, Esq.:

Yours received. On Sunday morning at daylight Averell, by having flanked the picket, guided by Union men of the county, came on the camp of Johnson's brigade, and were on the First and Second Maryland before they had notice; they were dispersed, with a loss of fifty. The rest of the command fell back toward Moorefield, checking him as far as possible, until it reached the town, distant four miles, when the Twenty-first, Colonel Peters, and the Twenty-seventh [Battalion], Captain Gibson, stopped his further pursuit. My command then moved off toward Mount Jackson, losing 150 to 175 killed, wounded, and missing, and 2 pieces of artillery and 2 ambulances. Part of McCausland's went up the Winchester road and part was with me. General McCausland being with me, I covered the movement on my road until all got off. He lost two pieces of artillery and fully as many prisoners as I did, and many more horses. I lost our horses, besides those of prisoners. Will write fully.

B. T. J[OHNSON].

[Indorsement.]

AUGUST 11, 1864.

Respectfully submitted for the information of the President. I have advised retention from publication.

J. A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

ORDNANCE OFFICE, ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 11, 1864.

COMMANDING OFFICER,
Staunton:

Direct Major Leyden to send four of the seven Napoleons received by him to Captain Gregory, General Early's army, at once.

By command of General Lee:

B. G. BALDWIN,
Lieutenant-Colonel Commanding, Army of Northern Virginia.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } HDQRS. ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
No. 189. } August 11, 1864.

* * * * *

IV. Brig. Gen. A. C. Godwin, Provisional Army, C. S., is assigned to the command of the brigade of Early's division formerly commanded by General Hoke, and will report accordingly.

* * * * *

By command of General R. E. Lee:

W. H. TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS,
August 11, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. R. H. ANDERSON:

GENERAL: The Washington Chronicle of the 8th states that General Sheridan has superseded General Hunter in command of the troops on the upper Potomac, and I believe that the greater part of his cavalry has been detached by General Grant and sent to Washington and Baltimore. This morning General Hampton commences his march for Culpeper, with his division, to report to you. It is desirable that the presence of our troops be felt beyond the Rappahannock. You had better take position north of Culpeper Court-House and let the cavalry operate north of Rappahannock River. Should the enemy's forces move west of the Blue Ridge range, leaving Washington uncovered, the cavalry might cross the Potomac east of the mountains and demonstrate against that city. Should he concentrate all his cavalry in the Valley, unless it can be withdrawn by other operations ours must meet it, and General Hampton must take command of all the cavalry when united. Any enterprise that can be undertaken to injure the enemy, distract or separate his forces, embarrass his communications on the Potomac or on land, is desirable. If you can learn what troops have been detached from Grant's army let me know. Prisoners and deserters state the Eighteenth Corps and the portion of the Nineteenth operating here have left.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General,

HEADQUARTERS,
August 11, 1864.

General WADE HAMPTON,
Commanding, &c.:

GENERAL: I desire you to proceed with your division to Culpeper. On arrival you will report to Lieut. Gen. R. H. Anderson, commanding in that quarter. The object is to threaten the enemy's flank and rear should he move across the Blue Ridge into the Valley, and to retain his forces about Washington for its protection. It is desirable that the presence of the troops in that region be felt, and should the enemy move up the Potomac, leaving his capital uncovered, that the cavalry cross the Potomac, if practicable, east of the Blue Ridge. Should the enemy's cavalry be concentrated in the Valley, ours must meet it, if it cannot cause its withdrawal by other operations. Specific instructions will be given you by General Anderson.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 11, 1864.

General J. A. EARLY:

Maj. Gen. L. L. Lomax has been directed to report to you to relieve General Ransom, in command of cavalry. General Ransom on being relieved will report to the Adjutant-General, Richmond.

R. E. LEE.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 11, 1864.

General J. A. EARLY:

Washington Chronicle of the 8th states that Sheridan has superseded Hunter. Another division of cavalry has been sent to General Anderson; communicate with him.

R. E. LEE.

HEADQUARTERS,
August 12, 1864.

His Excellency JEFFERSON DAVIS,
President of the Confederate States:

MR. PRESIDENT: I received last night your dispatch of the 11th giving information of the enemy's movements.* I was aware of the departure of a large part of Sheridan's cavalry, and that he had taken command of the Federal forces in the Valley. Torbert's division is the only one that has yet reached that region, and I am not positive whether the whole of the other divisions have gone or not, though it is so reported. I thought it best, however, to move Hampton's division to Culpeper, and it commenced its march yesterday. W. H. F. Lee's division is retained, and I hope it will be sufficient for the protection of the railroad. If I find that the enemy's cavalry here is superior to ours I will recall some of Hampton's. I have assigned General H[ampton] to the command of the cavalry. General Butler, he thinks, is best qualified to command his division; as he does so now by right of seniority I have recommended no change. The forces opposed to General Early consist of the Sixth and Eighth, two divisions of the Nineteenth, and the Thirteenth Corps; the latter recently arrived from New Orleans. General Early was at Newtown on the 11th, and the enemy, who, for the two previous days had been endeavoring to approach his rear, was apparently moving toward Front Royal. I have directed General Anderson to move toward Thornton's Gap and be governed by circumstances. General Early reports that General Bradley Johnson's brigade had been surprised in camp near Moorefield and routed, losing four guns. I have directed that if General J[ohnson] is to blame he must be relieved from command.

* See Vol. XLII, Part II, p. 1169.

I went up to Howlett's Thursday morning, having heard that the enemy had thrown a body of troops on the neck at Dutch Gap, with a view of endeavoring to drive them off. Their position was about two miles and a half from the battery, and Major Smith reported, from his experience on former occasions, owing to inferior powder, he could not be certain of throwing his shot more than 1,200 yards. I signaled to General Ewell to attack them from his side and to arrange with Captain Mitchell to shell them from his gun-boats. This I hoped would have been done that afternoon, but he could not complete his arrangements until yesterday afternoon, and then had to suspend the attack for an exchange of prisoners, previously arranged. The force, I understand, is composed partly of negroes, and that they are engaged in cutting a canal through the neck. What use they will make of it I do not see, unless their object is to turn Pickett's left. I have posted Lieutenant-Colonel Poague's battalion of artillery on the heights of Proctor's Creek, west of Howlett's farm, and will commence a heavy battery on the river in that vicinity as soon as possible. Perhaps it is thought the James River can be so reduced as to prevent the navigation of our naval boats.

With great respect, your obedient servant,

R. E. LEE,
General.

P. S.—General Grant is reported to have returned from Harper's Ferry. He was at Old Point on the 8th, and a deserter states he and Butler were at Dutch Gap yesterday.

R. E. L.

---

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 12, 1864.

General R. H. ANDERSON,
Culpeper Court-House, Va.:

General Early, at Newtown, states the enemy to be moving up the Shenandoah with a view of reaching his rear, apparently toward Front Royal. It may be his purpose to move up Luray Valley. You had better move up to Sperryville and be governed by circumstances. Hampton should reach you the 15th. Keep him apprised and keep in communication with Early.

R. E. LEE.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 12, 1864. (Via Woodstock, Va.)

General J. A. EARLY:

Dispatch of 11th received. Anderson has been advised; communicate with him.

R. E. LEE.

WAR DEPARTMENT, C. S. A.,
Richmond, Va., August 13, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. J. A. EARLY,
Commanding, &c.:

GENERAL: You have doubtless seen some notice of an infamous burning, by a force from the gun-boats of the enemy, of the residence, with its effects, of the widow and orphans of my late brother, Maj. John Seddon, on the Rappahannock, some four miles below Fredericksburg.

I send herewith a copy of a letter* from Mr. William A. Little, the brother of Mrs. Seddon, and a gentleman of high character and undoubted veracity, giving a full account of the outrage, and also a copy of the order* under which the deed was done, left with the manager by the officer, ascertained to be a Major Whelan, of a Pennsylvania regiment, who commanded the party, purporting to set forth the cause of the destruction and by whose order done. As the act was done under the pretext of retaliation for a deed committed under totally different circumstances, and with certainly recent provocation fresh in the minds of your soldiers to justify them, by those under your command, I have thought it most appropriate to inform you accurately of the facts, and to rely on you, should opportunity offer, to exact fitting retribution.

I may not be insensible to the bias of personal feeling in this matter, for it stings me to the quick, I confess, to have relationship or connection with me the source to helpless relatives of such grievous wrongs; but in the exercise of the calmest judgment I can command, I must denounce this as one of the very meanest, pettiest, and most malignant atrocities committed by our miscreant invaders during the war. The pretense, I understand, has been presented by their lying prints that they mistakenly supposed the property to be mine, or to be owned by my living brother, with an interest on my part in it. For this there is not the least foundation in fact.

Thousands in the Army of the Potomac knew all about the house and its owners, and among the wretches present and assisting in the vandal act was recognized the commander of one of the gun-boats, who had visited the house with the purpose of plunder, with a party of his marines, some weeks since, and then learned the name and condition of the owners, and were prevented apparently from outrage only by a general paper of protection General Patrick had given when acting with the army around it; besides, several citizens of character on the river, as General Smith informs me he has satisfactorily learned, were taken by the enemy, and on inquiry had given the fullest information who were the real owners and occupants of the house, and that I had no interest whatever in the property, not being even executor of my brother's estate. General Graham, of Brandon notoriety, was on board as chief officer, and after having this information and holding a sort of conference, I am informed, with other officers, he ordered the perpetration of the outrage. Thus an expedition of at least two gun-boats, with a considerable force under a general officer, were specially ordered by a major-general of the enemy commanding a department to proceed some hundred miles to burn the house and effects of a widow and helpless children, the oldest about fourteen, over their heads, and to turn them out at night, in rain and darkness, with two of the infant children seriously sick, without shelter or protection, on no other ground of selection than that they were connections or relations of a public functionary of the Government against which they were warring.

* Not found as inclosures.

To such a deliberate act of baseness, spite, and despicable malignity there is no need to add heightening effects; but it may be stated that the family consisted of an aged mother, near eighty years of age, a widow, with five young children, and a maiden sister, still a young lady. There are none, too, in the land more exemplary and held in more universal or higher esteem than these ladies, and their conduct in that fearful trial, as on not a few previous occasions, so combining loyalty to their State and heroism of soul with all the refinement and dignity of ladies, should have shamed, as before it had done, all but dastards or fiends from their ignominious purposes. Infamy and execration must follow the perpetrators of such outrages; but it seems to me that signal retribution should likewise indicate our abhorrence of the act, and enforce from the fears of our enemies, since to all higher sentiments they are insensible, abstinence from similar atrocities against the homes of our helpless women and children.

Very truly, yours,

JAMES A. SEDDON,
Secretary of War.

---

AUGUST 14, 1864.

Mr. POTTS:

General Hampton is to-day on the cars from Richmond to Charlottesville. Send this to Richmond and request them to have it delivered to him on the route if practicable; it is very desirable for General Hampton to get it.

W. H. TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[Inclosure.]

HEADQUARTERS,
August 14, 1864.

General W. HAMPTON,
Beaver Dam, Va.:

Halt your command and return toward Richmond. Gregg's division is crossing at Deep Bottom. Send back an officer to ascertain position.

R. E. LEE.

Mr. POTTS:

This must be sent promptly and be forwarded at once from Richmond.

W. H. T.

AUGUST 15, 1864.

General R. E. LEE,
Chaffin's Bluff:

Mosby telegraphs, Upperville, 13th: Attacked enemy's supply train near Berryville that morning; dispersed guard treble his number; captured and destroyed 75 loaded wagons; brought off over 200 prisoners, including several officers, between 500 and 600 horses and mules, upward of 200 head of fine beef-cattle, and many valuable stores. Considerable number of enemy killed and wounded. His loss, 2 killed, 3 wounded.

W. H. TAYLOR,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

[AUGUST 16, 1864.—For Lee to Seddon, relating to Mosby's operations at Berryville, see p. 633.]

HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT,
August 16, 1864.

General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: Lieutenant-General Early directs that you have your command all ready to move at sunrise to-morrow and keep it so during the day, as it may be necessary to move at any moment.

I am, general, respectfully, &c.,

A. S. PENDLETON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, } ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
 No. 193. } Richmond, August 16, 1864.

* * * * *

IV. Maj. Charles Howard, commissary of subsistence, is assigned to duty in the cavalry command of Maj. Gen. L. L. Lomax.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

AUGUST 18, 1864.

Major-General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: Move in the morning at sunrise toward Bunker Hill. Let your ordnance, ambulances, and medical wagons follow each division, and other trains move in the rear, under charge of Major Harman. Order of march: first, Ramseur; second, Rodes; third, Breckinridge. Braxton's battalion of artillery will move with Ramseur's division, and Nelson's will follow Rodes' division. You will direct one of your brigades to move with the general trains and deployed as flankers on the right flank.

Respectfully,

J. A. EARLY,
Lieutenant-General.

BUNKER HILL, August 19, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. R. H. ANDERSON:

GENERAL: There is no enemy between here and Martinsburg, and a small force of cavalry is reported to be there, variously estimated at from 800 to 2,000; I have sent to see. No force this side of the Opequon, but a cavalry force reported about Smithfield. McCausland had skirmishing with a cavalry picket near where the railroad bridge crosses the Opequon and drove it across the stream. I wish McCausland to take position at the crossing of the road by Brucetown to Smithfield, and I think it would be well for Fitz Lee to picket the crossing of the Opequon, on the road from Winchester to Summit Point; he can communicate across by Jordan Springs. No wheat has been burned in this country, and if we can stay here we can live. I have sent Lomax to Martinsburg. I think Fitz Lee had better try and shove the enemy back on the Berryville road.

Respectfully,

J. A. EARLY,
Lieutenant-General.

[AUGUST 20, 1864.—For Lee to Seddon, reporting operations in the Shenandoah Valley, see p. 552.]

HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT,
August 20, 1864.

General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: The lieutenant-general commanding directs that you have your command ready to move at sunrise to-morrow.

I am, general, respectfully, &c.,

A. S. PENDLETON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 197. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, August 20, 1864.

* * * * *

XXX. Leave of absence for thirty days, for the benefit of his health, is granted Maj. Gen. Robert Ransom, jr., Provisional Army, C. S.

* * * * *

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

Strength of the infantry of the Army of the Valley District, August 20, 1864, as shown by inspection reports of this date.

| Troops.                 | Aggregate presentfor duty. | Aggregate present. | Aggregate presentand absent. |
|-------------------------|--------------------------------|--------------------|----------------------------------|
| Gordon's division:      |                                |                    |                                  |
| Headquarters.....       | 7                              | 7                  | 8                                |
| York's brigade.....     | 614                            | 803                | 3,708                            |
| Terry's brigade.....    | 858                            | 963                | 6,042                            |
| Evans' brigade.....     | 1,344                          | 1,597              | 4,254                            |
| Total.....              | 2,823                          | 3,370              | 14,012                           |
| Rodes' division:        |                                |                    |                                  |
| Battle's brigade.....   | 966                            | 1,154              | 3,271                            |
| Grimes' brigade.....    | 918                            | 1,113              | 3,317                            |
| Cook's brigade.....     | 699                            | 902                | 2,447                            |
| Cox's brigade.....      | 803                            | 991                | 4,085                            |
| Total.....              | 3,386                          | 4,160              | 13,120                           |
| Ramseur's division:     |                                |                    |                                  |
| Headquarters.....       | 11                             | 11                 | 12                               |
| Pegram's brigade.....   | 595                            | 831                | 2,334                            |
| Johnston's brigade..... | 600                            | 742                | 2,410                            |
| Godwin's brigade.....   | 854                            | 928                | 2,627                            |
| Total.....              | 2,060                          | 2,512              | 7,383                            |
| Grand total.....        | 8,269                          | 10,042             | 34,515                           |

*Organization of the Army of the Valley District, August 20, 1864.**

RODES' DIVISION.†

Maj. Gen. ROBERT E. RODES.

Grimes' Brigade.

Brig. Gen. BRYAN GRIMES.

32d North Carolina.
43d North Carolina.
45th North Carolina.
53d North Carolina.
2d North Carolina Battalion.

Cox's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. WILLIAM R. COX.

1st North Carolina.
2d North Carolina.
3d North Carolina.
4th North Carolina.
14th North Carolina.
30th North Carolina.

Cook's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. PHILIP COOK.

4th Georgia.
12th Georgia.
21st Georgia.
44th Georgia.

Battle's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. CULLEN A. BATTLE.

3d Alabama.
5th Alabama.
6th Alabama.
12th Alabama.
61st Alabama.

* As shown by inspection reports; cavalry and artillery not accounted for.
† Regimental commanders not indicated on inspection report.

GORDON'S DIVISION.

Maj. Gen. JOHN B. GORDON.

*Hays' Brigade.**

Col. WILLIAM MONAGHAN.

5th Louisiana, Maj. Alexander Hart.
 6th Louisiana, Lieut. Col. Joseph Hanlon.
 7th Louisiana, Lt. Col. Thomas M. Terry.
 8th Louisiana, Capt. Louis Prados.
 9th Louisiana, Col. William R. Peck.

Evans' Brigade.

Col. EDMUND N. ATKINSON.

13th Georgia, Col. John H. Baker.
 26th Georgia, Lieut. Col. James S. Blain.
 31st Georgia, Col. John H. Lowe.
 38th Georgia, Maj. Thomas H. Bomar.
 60th Georgia, Capt. Milton Russell.
 61st Georgia, Capt. Eliphalet F. Sharp.
 12th Georgia Battalion, Capt. James W. Anderson.

*Stafford's Brigade.**

Col. EUGENE WAGGAMAN.

1st Louisiana, Capt. Joseph Taylor.
 2d Louisiana, Lieut. Col. Michael A. Grogan.
 10th Louisiana, Lieut. Col. Henry D. Monier.
 14th Louisiana, Lieut. Col. David Zable.
 15th Louisiana, Capt. H. J. Egan.

Terry's Brigade.†

Brig. Gen. WILLIAM TERRY.

|                |   |                                 |
|----------------|---|---------------------------------|
| 2d Virginia,   | } | Col. John H. S. Funk.           |
| 4th Virginia,  |   |                                 |
| 5th Virginia,  |   |                                 |
| 27th Virginia, | } | Col. Robert H. Dungan.          |
| 33d Virginia,  |   |                                 |
| 21st Virginia, |   |                                 |
| 25th Virginia, | } | Lieut. Col. Samuel H. Saunders. |
| 42d Virginia,  |   |                                 |
| 44th Virginia, |   |                                 |
| 48th Virginia, | } |                                 |
| 50th Virginia, |   |                                 |
| 10th Virginia, |   |                                 |
| 23d Virginia,  | } |                                 |
| 37th Virginia, |   |                                 |

RAMSEUR'S DIVISION.‡

Maj. Gen. STEPHEN D. RAMSEUR.

Pegram's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. JOHN PEGRAM.

13th Virginia.
 31st Virginia.
 49th Virginia.
 52d Virginia.
 58th Virginia.

Johnston's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. ROBERT D. JOHNSTON.

5th North Carolina.
 12th North Carolina.
 20th North Carolina.
 23d North Carolina.

Godwin's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. ARCHIBALD C. GODWIN.

6th North Carolina.
 21st North Carolina.
 54th North Carolina.
 57th North Carolina.
 1st North Carolina Battalion.

RICHMOND, VA., August 22, 1864.

General S. COOPER,

Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: Having just left the command of the Cavalry of the Valley and knowing its condition, I have the honor to make the following suggestions in order to assist in having it brought to anything like a state of efficiency:

The command now consists of five brigades: Vaughn's, strength present, 562; Imboden's, 667; McCausland's, 993; Johnson's, 1,132; Jack-

* These brigades united, under command of Brig. Gen. Zebulon York.

† Composed of the fragmentary remains of fourteen of the regiments of Edward Johnson's division, most of which was captured by the enemy May 12, 1864.

‡ Regimental commanders not indicated on inspection report.

son's, 737. Vaughn's brigade is composed of two others (which was infantry till last winter), and the First Tennessee Cavalry, the Twelfth and Sixteenth Tennessee Battalions Cavalry, and the Sixteenth Georgia Battalion Cavalry. Dismount at once the whole of it, except the First Tennessee and Twelfth and Sixteenth Tennessee Battalions; transfer the mounted battalions to the First Tennessee and make it a respectable size—it's colonel is a fine officer; have the part dismounted brought to Army of Northern Virginia, or sent to Army of Tennessee; assign First Tennessee to Johnson's brigade, and assign Brig. Gen. G. H. Steuart to its command, as I hear he has been ordered to the Valley. Imboden's has the Eighteenth, Twenty-third, and Sixty-second Virginia Cavalry and one unauthorized battalion; break up the battalion; transfer the men to Sixty-second Regiment, and place the whole brigade under Wickham as a part of his own, at the same time relieving Brigadier-General Imboden. Jackson has the Nineteenth and Twentieth Regiments and Forty-sixth and Forty-seventh Battalions Virginia Cavalry; consolidate the two battalions; give Major Lady, Forty-sixth Battalion, the command of the battalion transferred, and place the whole brigade with Lomax's old brigade as a part of it. McCausland's brigade to remain as it is, with addition of a regiment from Johnson's. Johnson's to consist of Eighth and Twenty-first Regiments, Twenty-seventh, Thirty-fourth, Thirty-sixth, and Thirty-seventh Virginia Battalions Cavalry, and the First and Second Maryland Battalions Cavalry; make two regiments of the four Virginia battalions; consolidate the two Maryland into one; find meritorious officers from the cavalry of Northern Virginia to place in charge of the regiments formed; transfer one regiment to McCausland. With this arrangement General Lomax will have two strong brigades; Fitz Lee will have his division increased by 1,200 men, where they will be taught to fight; and the indifferent officers gotten rid of. Give to each division a military commander at once.

The above, in my judgment, is the best arrangement that can be made. The only other change that can do any good is, if this be not carried out, consolidate Imboden's and Jackson's brigades and find a commander for the brigade thus formed. The horses from Vaughn's brigade can be used to fit out artillery for the command, as all it had has been lost; to my knowledge, two-thirds of these horses have been stolen and captured, and taken from Maryland. The Georgia battalion has never done anything, and has not now fifty men present. There should be at least three inspectors at each division headquarters.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

R. RANSOM, JR.,

Major-General.

[Indorsement.]

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES,

Richmond, December 20, 1864.

Respectfully submitted to the Adjutant-General.

A copy of this report was sent to General Early, August 29, 1864, with a letter of that date, a copy of which is herewith inclosed.* No reply has been received.

For General Bragg and in his absence:

JNO. B. SALE,

Colonel and Military Secretary.

* See p. 1008.

SPECIAL ORDERS, }
No. 198. }

ADJT. AND INSP. GENERAL'S OFFICE,
Richmond, August 22, 1864.

* * * * *

XLI. Brig. Gen. John Echols, Provisional Army, C. S., is assigned to the command of the District of Southwestern Virginia and of the troops serving there, including the reserves. He will report to General R. E. Lee, commanding, &c. This assignment will not interfere with the order placing Major-General Breckinridge in command of the Department of Western Virginia.

By command of the Secretary of War:

JNO. WITHERS,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS LEE'S CAVALRY DIVISION,
ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 23, 1864—2.30 p. m.

Colonel SORREL:

COLONEL: Advance of enemy reported by Lomax turned out to be a small reconnoitering party, who have gone back. Lomax's scouts report no enemy this side of Shepherdstown. Will encamp on Smithfield pike near Cameron's Depot, in supporting distance of either flank. General Early has desired me to take charge of all the cavalry whilst General A[nderson] and he are together. There is no doubt most of enemy's cavalry are on their right flank.

Very respectfully,

FITZ LEE,
Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT,
August 24, 1864.

General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: As the enemy is reported advancing on Gordon's left and front, General Early directs that you move Gordon to meet them, and Wharton to support him, except the brigade which is watching the trains.

I am, general, respectfully, &c.,

A. S. PENDLETON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

AUGUST 24, 1864—7.15 a. m.

Lieutenant-General EARLY:

GENERAL: I have Terry's brigade in line between Shepherdstown and Leetown road, with remainder of Gordon's command and Wharton just behind, waiting developments. Lomax is on Shepherdstown road, and I have a picket on Leetown road. I don't hear anything of the enemy, and believe it was another cavalry stampede. I learn that Lomax has sent McCausland out to hunt for the enemy.

Respectfully,

JOHN C. BRECKINRIDGE,
Major-General.

AUGUST 24, 1864.

Major-General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: Let your troops remain where they are for the present.

J. A. EARLY,
Lieutenant-General.

HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT,

August 24, 1864.

General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: Lieutenant-General Early directs that you have your command ready to move at sunrise. As soon as you give the orders he wishes you to ride over here to receive instructions in person.

I am, general, respectfully, &amp;c.

A. S. PENDLETON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,

August 25, 1864.

Hon. SECRETARY OF WAR:

General Early reports from Charlestown that he has forced the enemy back to Harper's Ferry.

R. E. LEE.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,

August 26, 1864.

General EARLY:

GENERAL: Your letter of the 23d has been received, and I am much pleased at your having forced the enemy back to Harper's Ferry. This will give protection to the Valley and arrest the travel on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad. It will, however, have little or no effect upon Grant's operations, or prevent re-enforcements being sent to him. If Sheridan's force is as large as you suppose, I do not know that you could operate to advantage north of the Potomac. Either Anderson's troops or a portion of yours might, however, be detached to destroy the railroad west of Charlestown, and Fitz Lee might send a portion of his cavalry to cross the Potomac east of the Blue Ridge, as you propose. I cannot detach at present more cavalry from this army; the enemy is too strong in that arm. I am aware that Anderson is the ranking officer, but I apprehend no difficulty on that score. I first intended him to threaten the enemy east of the Blue Ridge, so as to retain near Washington a portion of the enemy's forces. He crossed the mountains at your suggestion, and, I think, properly. If his troops are not wanted there he could cross into Loudoun or Fauquier and return to Culpeper. It would add force to the movement of cavalry east of the Blue Ridge. I am in great need of his troops, and if they can be spared from the Valley, or cannot operate to advantage there, I will order them back to Richmond. Let me know.

Very respectfully,

R. E. LEE,
General.

LEETOWN, August 27, 1864—9.30 a. m.

General BRECKINRIDGE:

GENERAL: Lieutenant-General Early directs me to say that he is waiting here for the passage of your trains on toward Bunker Hill. He wishes your troops also to move on toward Smithfield.

Respectfully, &c.,

A. S. PENDLETON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

BUNKER HILL, August 28, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. R. H. ANDERSON:

GENERAL: All my troops (infantry) are here at this place, and I am picketing the roads all around from the Winchester and Martinsburg pike to Gerrard Run, and I would respectfully suggest that you put infantry pickets on the Brucetown road and around to the Berryville pike, as I find the pickets of the cavalry are but little to be depended on. A note was received from Fitz Lee stating that the cavalry was picketing around by Martinsburg, Kearneysville, and Summit Point, to Castleman's Ferry; but a major commanding one of the pickets has just reported that a body of the enemy's cavalry has appeared at the ford of the Opequon on the road from here to Leetown, and I can't understand this. A captain of Yankee cavalry was captured yesterday and brought to my headquarters, and he says that he commanded the cavalry which attacked and captured Kershaw's skirmishers; he says his force was only a squadron, and that no idea was entertained of the attack until he discovered that the men on the skirmish line were sitting down roasting corn, and no person paying any attention, many of them having their backs to their line; he says he was officer of the day, and as such inspecting the line when he made this discovery, and he proposed the attack to his brigadier, who ordered it, and the men were captured in the same position he had discovered them, most of them being taken with their guns loaded; he says he captured seventy-three men, including a lieutenant-colonel or major and several commissioned officers, and only lost three men.

Respectfully,

J. A. EARLY,
Lieutenant-General.

---

ON BRUCETOWN ROAD AT OPEQUON CROSSING,
August 28, 1864—4.45 p. m.

Lieutenant-General ANDERSON:

GENERAL: The enemy's cavalry advanced on Charlestown and Smithfield pike, and on Charlestown and Leetown road to Leetown, and from latter place to Smithfield. The position of Smithfield not being tenable against a large force advancing on those roads, I evacuated the place, ordering Lomax's division to fall back toward Bunker Hill, holding the fords on the Opequon, whilst I, with a portion of Wickham's brigade, checked them upon this road. Colonel Boston, commanding Lomax's old brigade, is between Summit Point and Lockhart's Mill, and has been ordered to look out for your right. Wickham's brigade is now at this place. Have not yet ascertained if the enemy's infantry are following this movement.

Respectfully,

FITZ LEE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS LEE'S CAVALRY DIVISION,
ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 28, 1864—6.15 p. m.

Lieutenant-General ANDERSON:

GENERAL: Am at crossing of Smithfield and Brucetown road over the Opequon; Wickham's brigade guards this ford and Fry's Mill ford. McCausland is at Beason's, and Lomax was ordered to hold fords from Smithfield to Bunker Hill, and all approaches north of those points. Lomax's old brigade is between Summit Point and Locke's Ford, on Opequon, watching through Berryville to Shenandoah. Will try and find out to-night the nature of this advance.

Respectfully,

FITZ LEE,
Major-General.

HEADQUARTERS ARMIES OF THE CONFEDERATE STATES,
Richmond, August 29, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. J. A. EARLY,
Commanding, &c.:

On return of Major-General Ransom from your army his opinion was desired as to the future of his late cavalry command, and he was requested to suggest such changes as would improve the discipline and increase the efficiency thereof. I inclose you a copy of his report* before taking any action, and request your suggestions. As part of the command was for some time under Major-General Breckinridge, he may be better acquainted than yourself with the personnel. I therefore desire you to obtain an expression of his opinion also as to that part. It is feared that too radical a change may produce dissatisfaction in those commands raised mostly in the country now held by the enemy and cause many desertions. At the same time it is felt that some stringent measures are necessary to secure discipline and prevent disaster.

I am, general, very respectfully, your obedient servant,

BRAXTON BRAGG,
General.

HEADQUARTERS LEE'S CAVALRY DIVISION,
ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
Near Brucetown, August 29, 1864—7.30 p. m.

General ANDERSON:

GENERAL: The enemy reoccupied Smithfield this afternoon; nothing but cavalry seen. I have ordered a regiment of cavalry to picket the ford at the crossing of Brucetown and Smithfield road over the Opequon, and a regiment also at Fry's or Smith's Mill, with a squadron in front, as close to Smithfield as it can be placed.

Respectfully,

FITZ LEE,
Major-General.

* See Ransom to Cooper, August 22, p. 1003.

HEADQUARTERS LEE'S CAVALRY DIVISION,
ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
Near Brucetown, August 30, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel SORREL,
Assistant Adjutant-General:

COLONEL: I have but four regiments of cavalry and four pieces of artillery to defend the fords in your immediate front, and can keep but two regiments and two pieces of artillery on picket at a time, as I am obliged to graze the others. If it should be deemed advisable to hold these fords on the Opequon, I would suggest that the force be increased. I have been quite unwell since yesterday morning and am confined to my bed.

Respectfully,

FITZ LEE,
Major-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS LEE'S CAVALRY DIVISION,
ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
Near Brucetown, August 30, 1864.

Lieutenant-Colonel SORREL:

COLONEL: An infantry prisoner taken to-day reports that Sixth Corps marched through Charlestown, encamping near Cameron's Depot, on Smithfield pike, and moved up toward latter place yesterday afternoon, when their cavalry retired. A brigade from that corps (I mentioned before) actually reached Smithfield, following up our retiring infantry. The Nineteenth and Eighth Corps also passed through Charlestown, the first taking the Leetown and the other the Berryville roads, encamping, I presume, in the edges of the town, as they have not appeared anywhere on these roads.

FITZ LEE,
Major-General.

---

HDQRS. WICKHAM'S CAVALRY BRIG., LEE'S CAVALRY DIV.,
August 30, 1864.

Maj. Gen. FITZHUGH LEE:

I have men now at Smithfield, the enemy's vedettes being in sight on the hill beyond the town. I have ordered a picket-post to be established, if possible, on the hill beyond Smithfield. A brigade of the Sixth Corps came up to the town yesterday evening, but retired last night. The infantry is said to be encamped now at Baker's Run. My pickets are now at this end of the town.

Your obedient servant,

W. C. WICKHAM,
Brigadier-General.

---

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA,
August 31, 1864.

Lieut. Gen. J. A. EARLY,
Commanding, &c.:

GENERAL: General Lee directs me to inclose the enemy's signal alphabet* as deciphered by some of our signal corps here. We read their messages with facility, and the general thinks it may be of service to you, but advises that care be taken to conceal the fact of our knowledge of the alphabet. The enemy also reads our messages, and the general suggests that your signal men be put on their guard to prevent the enemy obtaining information by that means.

---

* Not found.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,

CHARLES MARSHALL,
Lieutenant-Colonel and Aide-de-Camp.

---

HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT,
August 31, 1864.

Major-General BRECKINRIDGE,
Commanding, &c.:

GENERAL: The lieutenant-general commanding directs that you move to Shepherdstown at daylight to-morrow, going from Darkesville to Leetown, and thence to Shepherdstown. Your trains and artillery accompany you, and you will march one brigade in rear of all your trains. The brigade which is at Martinsburg you will order to proceed from that place to Shepherdstown as soon as Rodes and Ramseur reach Martinsburg.

I am, general, respectfully, &c.,

A. S. PENDLETON,
Assistant Adjutant-General.

---

HDQRS. DEPARTMENT OF SOUTHWEST VA. AND EAST TENN.,
Dublin, August 31, 1864.

General S. COOPER,
Adjutant and Inspector General, &c.:

GENERAL: I have the honor to report that on yesterday (30th instant), in obedience to Special Orders, No. 198, section XLI, August 22, 1864, from your office, I assumed command of this department, relieving Brig. Gen. John H. Morgan, and have for the present established my headquarters at this place. I have not as yet been able to obtain any very satisfactory report of the troops now in the department, but hope to be able to take steps soon to secure such report. I herewith inclose to you the only report* that could be made from the papers in the office of the assistant adjutant-general of the department. From this you will perceive that the organization of the troops must necessarily be imperfect and confused, resulting from the fragmentary character of the various commands. Brigadier-General Morgan has had, no doubt, very great difficulty in establishing any organizations from the materials under his control, and much difficulty will still be experienced in this regard. I find that there is no inspector for the troops, an officer very important at this time for the proper organization of the command; and I respectfully request, if it can be done, that a rigid and experienced inspecting officer may be assigned to me temporarily, to aid me in bringing the affairs of the department to a better system and order. I have thought that some such officer might now be on duty in Richmond, who could be spared for this duty, at least for a short time. I do not forward the inclosed paper as a report, but only to give you an idea of the condition of the command and of the difficulties with which the commanding officer has had to contend. The most of the troops are now in East Tennessee, in the vicinity of Bull's Gap, where the enemy have lately been making some demonstrations.

---

* Not found.

I shall at once commence the use of every effort to bring out and organize properly all of the reserve troops in the department. I have given orders for immediate arrangements to be made to bring out of that portion of East Tennessee now under our control all the surplus wheat therein, of which I understand there is a considerable quantity, and I hope to be able to effect something in this way. Brigadier-General Morgan is in the immediate command of the troops in the field in East Tennessee.

I am, general, very respectfully, &c.,

JNO. ECHOLS,
Brigadier-General, &c.

*Strength of the Army of Valley District (at and about Bunker Hill, Va.), Lieut. Gen. Jubal A. Early commanding, August 31, 1864, as shown by inspection reports.**

| Troops.                                                 | Aggregate present for duty. | Aggregate present. | Aggregate present and absent. | Present effective for the field. | Pieces of artillery. |
|---------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------|--------------------|-------------------------------|----------------------------------|----------------------|
| Rodes' division (Rodes):                         |                             |                    |                               |                                  |                      |
| Battle's brigade, Brig. Gen. Cullen A. Battle.....      | 951                         | 1, 163             | 3, 252                        | 951                              | .....                |
| Grimes' brigade, Brig. Gen. Bryan Grimes.....           | 883                         | 1, 091             | 3, 293                        | 832                              | .....                |
| Cook's brigade, Brig. Gen. Philip Cook.....             | 674                         | 883                | 2, 421                        | 599                              | .....                |
| Cox's brigade, Brig. Gen. William R. Cox.....           | 797                         | 973                | 4, 052                        | 679                              | .....                |
| Total.....                                              | 3, 305                      | 4, 110             | 13, 018                       | 3, 061                           | .....                |
| Gordon's division (Gordon):                      |                             |                    |                               |                                  |                      |
| Terry's brigade,† Brig. Gen. William Terry.....         | 864                         | 987                | 6, 485                        | 783                              | .....                |
| York's brigade,† Brig. Gen. Zebulon York.....           | 658                         | 813                | 3, 507                        | 658                              | .....                |
| Evans' brigade, Col. Edmund N. Atkinson.....            | 1, 311                      | 1, 526             | 4, 204                        | 1, 210                           | .....                |
| Total.....                                              | 2, 883                      | 3, 326             | 14, 196                       | 2, 651                           | .....                |
| Early's division (Ramseur):                      |                             |                    |                               |                                  |                      |
| Pegram's brigade, Brig. Gen. John Pegram.....           | 621                         | 851                | 2, 325                        | 599                              | .....                |
| Johnston's brigade, Brig. Gen. Robert D. Johnston.....  | 618                         | 774                | 2, 401                        | 598                              | .....                |
| Godwin's brigade, Brig. Gen. Archibald C. Godwin.....   | 806                         | 935                | 2, 270                        | 775                              | .....                |
| Total.....                                              | 2, 045                      | 2, 560             | 6, 996                        | 1, 972                           | .....                |
| Artillery (Nelson):                              |                             |                    |                               |                                  |                      |
| Braxton's battalion, Lieut. Col. Carter M. Braxton..... | 243                         | 284                | 380                           | 280                              | 11                   |
| Nelson's battalion, Capt. Thomas J. Kirkpatrick.....    | 275                         | 314                | 459                           | 275                              | 12                   |
| McLaughlin's battalion, Maj. William McLaughlin.....    | 262                         | 316                | 454                           | 247                              | 12                   |
| Total.....                                              | 780                         | 914                | 1, 293                        | 802                              | 35                   |
| Grand total§.....                                       | 8, 963                      | 10, 910            | 35, 503                       | 8, 486                           | 35                   |

* Not including Wharton's division or the cavalry. The report for Wharton's division shows an aggregate of 503 of Echols' (Patton's) brigade, and of 638 of Wharton's brigade "present at inspection;" but gives no indication whatever of the strength of Smith's brigade, nor does it give the stations of these troops. Inspection report of this date for the cavalry not found.

† Note on original says, "Composed of the remnants of the Virginia regiments of Johnson's division."

‡ Hays' and Stafford's brigades.

§ For strength of Early's corps and Kershaw's division, as shown by monthly return of the Army of Northern Virginia, see Vol. XLII, Part II, p. 1213.

*Organization of the Second Army Corps, Army of Northern Virginia, Lieut. Gen. Jubal A. Early commanding, August 31, 1864.**

GORDON'S DIVISION.

Maj. Gen. JOHN B. GORDON.

Hays' Brigade.

5th Louisiana, Col. Henry Forno.
6th Louisiana, Col. William Monaghan.
7th Louisiana, Col. Davidson B. Penn.
8th Louisiana, Col. Alcibiades DeBlanc.
9th Louisiana, Col. William R. Peck.

Gordon's Brigade.

13th Georgia, Lieut. Col. John H. Baker.
26th Georgia, Col. Edmund N. Atkinson.
31st Georgia, Col. Clement A. Evans.
38th Georgia, Col. James D. Mathews.
60th Georgia, Col. William H. Stiles, sr.
61st Georgia, Col. John H. Lamar.

Pegram's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. JOHN PEGRAM.

13th Virginia, Col. James B. Terrill.
31st Virginia, Col. John S. Hoffman.
49th Virginia, Col. John C. Gibson.
52d Virginia, Col. James H. Skinner.
58th Virginia, Col. Francis H. Board.

Hoke's Brigade.

6th North Carolina, Col. Robert F. Webb.
21st North Carolina, Lieut. Col. William S. Rankin.
54th North Carolina, Col. Kenneth M. Murchison.
57th North Carolina, Col. Archibald C. Godwin.
1st North Carolina Battalion Sharpshooters, Maj. Rufus W. Wharton.

JOHNSON'S DIVISION.

Stonewall Brigade.

2d Virginia, Col. John Q. A. Nadenbousch.
4th Virginia, Col. William Terry.
5th Virginia, Col. John H. S. Funk.
27th Virginia, Lieut. Col. Charles L. Haynes.
33d Virginia, Col. Frederick W. M. Holliday.

Steuart's Brigade.

10th Virginia, Col. Edward T. H. Warren.
23d Virginia, Col. Alexander G. Taliaferro.
37th Virginia, Col. Titus V. Williams.
1st North Carolina, Col. Hamilton A. Brown.
3d North Carolina, Col. Stephen D. Thruston.

Jones' Brigade.

21st Virginia, Col. William A. Witcher.
25th Virginia, Col. John C. Higginbotham.
42d Virginia, Col. Robert W. Withers.
44th Virginia, Col. Norvell Cobb.
48th Virginia, Col. Robert H. Dungan.
50th Virginia, Col. Alexander S. Vandeventer.

Stafford's Brigade.

1st Louisiana, Col. William R. Shivers.
2d Louisiana, Col. Jesse M. Williams.
10th Louisiana, Col. Eugene Waggaman.
14th Louisiana, Col. Zebulon York.
15th Louisiana, Col. Edmund Pendleton.

RODES' DIVISION.

Maj. Gen. ROBERT E. RODES.

Daniel's Brigade.

32d North Carolina, Col. Edmund C. Brabble.
43d North Carolina, Col. Thomas S. Kenan.
45th North Carolina, Col. Samuel H. Boyd.
53d North Carolina, Col. William A. Owens.
2d North Carolina Battalion, Maj. John M. Hancock.

* From return of Army of Northern Virginia; but see organization of the Army of the Valley District August 20 (p. 1002), and strength August 31, as shown by inspection reports, next, ante; also foot-note explanations, Vol. XLII, Part II, pp. 1216, 1217.

Ramseur's Brigade.

2d North Carolina, Col. William R. Cox.
 4th North Carolina, Col. Bryan Grimes.
 14th North Carolina, Col. R. Tyler Bennett.
 30th North Carolina, Col. Francis M. Parker.

Doles' Brigade.

4th Georgia, Col. Philip Cook.
 12th Georgia, Col. Edward Willis.
 21st Georgia, Col. John T. Mercer.
 44th Georgia, Col. William H. Peebles.

Battle's Brigade.

Brig. Gen. CULLEN A. BATTLE.

3d Alabama, Col. Charles Forsyth.
 5th Alabama, Col. Josephus M. Hall.
 6th Alabama, Col. James N. Lightfoot.
 12th Alabama, Col. Samuel B. Pickens.
 61st Alabama, Lieut. Col. Lewis H. Hill.

Johnston's Brigade.

5th North Carolina, Col. Thomas M. Garrett.
 12th North Carolina, Col. Henry E. Coleman.
 20th North Carolina, Col. Thomas F. Toon.
 23d North Carolina, Maj. Charles C. Blacknall.

Abstract from field return of troops in the Department of Western Virginia and East Tennessee, Brig. Gen. John H. Morgan commanding, August, 1864.

| Command.                                 | Present for duty. |       | Effective total present. | Aggregate present. | Aggregate present and absent. | Pieces of field artillery. |
|------------------------------------------|-------------------|-------|--------------------------|--------------------|-------------------------------|----------------------------|
|                                          | Officers.         | Men.  |                          |                    |                               |                            |
| General and staff .....                  | 6                 | 2     | 2                        | 8                  | 8                             | .....                      |
| Infantry.                         |                   |       |                          |                    |                               |                            |
| 13th Battalion Virginia Reserves .....   | 2                 | ..... | .....                    | 2                  | 389                           | .....                      |
| Cavalry.                          |                   |       |                          |                    |                               |                            |
| Morgan's division staff .....            | 7                 | 8     | 8                        | 15                 | 15                            | .....                      |
| First Brigade .....                      | 57                | 732   | 732                      | 842                | 1,090                         | .....                      |
| Second Brigade .....                     | 64                | 656   | 656                      | 751                | 1,220                         | .....                      |
| Detachment Vaughn's brigade .....        | 49                | 504   | 504                      | 600                | 729                           | .....                      |
| Detachment Jones' brigade .....          | 62                | 761   | 761                      | 876                | 1,432                         | .....                      |
| Total .....                              | 239               | 2,661 | 2,661                    | 3,084              | 4,486                         | .....                      |
| Artillery.                        |                   |       |                          |                    |                               |                            |
| Burroughs' battery .....                 | 3                 | 74    | 74                       | 78                 | 110                           | 4                          |
| McClung's battery .....                  | 4                 | 56    | 56                       | 60                 | 65                            | 4                          |
| Levi's battery .....                     | 1                 | 43    | 43                       | 44                 | 49                            | 2                          |
| Detachment Ninth Georgia Battalion ..... | 4                 | 94    | 94                       | 98                 | 98                            | 3                          |
| Total .....                              | 12                | 267   | 267                      | 280                | 322                           | 13                         |
| Grand total .....                        | 259               | 2,930 | 2,930                    | 3,374              | 5,205                         | 13                         |

APPENDIX.

*Report of Capt. Jed. Hotchkiss, Topographical Engineer, C. S. Army, of operations of the Second Corps, Army of Northern Virginia and Army of Valley District, May 3–November 14, 1864.**

HDQRS. TOPOGRAPHICAL ENGINEERS, VALLEY DISTRICT,
Staunton, Va., December 31, 1864.

MAJOR: As topographical engineer of the Second Corps, Army of Northern Virginia and subsequently of the Valley District, I have the honor herewith to submit, for the information of the Engineer Bureau, a report of the camps, marches, and engagements of the Second Corps of the Army of Northern Virginia and of the Army of the Valley District, of the Department of Northern Virginia, during the campaign of 1864, illustrated by maps and sketches.

On the 3d of May, 1864, the Second Corps, commanded by Lieut. Gen. R. S. Ewell, was encamped in Orange County, Va. (as indicated on plate ———†), where it had spent the winter, and picketed the fords of the Rapidan, as shown on the same plate. On the 4th of May the Federal army, which had wintered in Culpeper County, making some demonstrations along our front, crossed large bodies of infantry at Ely's and Germanna Fords and marched to the vicinity of the Old Wilderness Tavern (see plate ———‡). The Second Corps, except parts of Early's division, which was left on picket on the Rapidan, marched to the vicinity of Locust Grove and encamped on the old turnpike (see plate ———‡). Early on the morning of the 5th Jones' brigade, of Johnson's division, moved down the turnpike and drove the enemy's pickets to near where their column was marching, via the Germanna plank road, into and across the old turnpike, near Lacy's house. The brigade was then formed, as indicated on plate ———,§ and skirmished with the enemy until in the p. m., when the enemy attempted to turn its right flank, which was thrown back to meet the attack (see plate ———‡). This movement of the enemy was successful and drove the brigade of Jones from its position. Battle's brigade, of Rodes' division, then moved forward (see plate ———‡), but was confused by Jones' retreating men and forced back. Gordon's brigade, of Early's division, having been put in line, then moved forward and drove the enemy back to his original position (see plate ———‡). The rest of the corps was posted as in plate ———‡.

The enemy attacked our lines on the morning of the 6th at daylight and were repulsed with much loss. We had constructed some breastworks and were protected by them (see plate ———§). Skirmishing

* See also Hotchkiss' Journal, p. 567.

† Plate LXXXI, Map 1 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXIII, Map 1 of the Atlas.

§ Plate LXXXIII, Map 2 of the Atlas.

was kept up all day. Just before dark we made an attack with Gordon's brigade on the enemy's right flank and drove them from their lines and camp (see plate ——*). The right of the Second Corps formed a junction with the left of the Third on the right of the old turnpike (see plate ——*). On the 7th we fortified the advanced position we had captured, reconnoitered and found the enemy on the Germanna road, and skirmished with the enemy on our right (see plate ——*). Late in the evening the corps moved to the right to the previous position of the Third Corps, as the enemy had commenced moving to our right. On the 8th the corps marched to the vicinity of Spotsylvania Court-House (see plate ——†), skirmishing some with the enemy's flankers, their main body moving down the plank road toward Fredericksburg (see plate ——†). On the 9th the corps took a position between the Po and the Ny Rivers, which it fortified (see plate ——†), and skirmished some with the enemy. The Third Corps was on the left and the First Corps on the right of the Second (see plate ——‡). On the 10th the enemy attacked our line in several places, and at 4 p. m. broke and carried a portion of it near the Harrison house, but we regained it. They continued to make great efforts to break the line in several places, but were repulsed (see plate ——‡). The enemy fortified themselves with several lines in our front (see plate ——‡ for some of them). Late in the p. m. the enemy came to the Po bridge, beyond the Old Block-House, and a few of them crossed. General Early, with the Third Corps, drove them back and beyond Waite's Shop (see plate ——‡). There was fighting in front of the First Corps also. The 11th was comparatively quiet. The enemy showed three lines of battle in front of the Court-House. Wilcox's and Heth's divisions, of the Third Corps, were put on the right of the army, while Anderson's division was across the Po, on the left, fortifying. (See line of works on left on plate ——‡).

On the morning of the 12th, at 4 a. m., the enemy massed in column of divisions, in front of the McCoull house, and made a furious attack upon the salient of our line there and captured it, taking 20 pieces of artillery that were just coming up to positions. The troops on the right of the point attacked were moved to the left and checked the enemy until re-enforcements came up, when a new line was taken and held (see plate ——‡). The fighting was incessant from 4 a. m. until 1 p. m., when there was a lull for a short time, after which it was renewed until 4 p. m. We held the position which we had taken (see plate ——‡). Some attacks were made on the enemy by the right of the army. On the 13th some skirmishing and cannonading took place, but no attack. The lines of the corps were somewhat shortened during the day (see plate ——‡). The enemy made an attack on —— brigade during the night, but was repulsed (see plate ——‡). Skirmishing continued on the 14th, and the enemy made a feeble attack at 3 p. m., then moved during the night farther to our right, leaving no enemy in the immediate front of the left of our center. In the p. m. two brigades went out in front and drove the enemy still more to our right (see plate ——‡). Nothing transpired but a few cannon shots on the 15th, and only some skirmishing and some shelling on the 16th, the enemy only fronting

---

* Plate LXXXIII, Map 2 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXI, Map 1 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXIII, Map 3 of the Atlas.

the extreme right of the Second Corps. Part of the army was moved more to the right. On the 17th, in the p. m., General Ewell moved Rodes' division forward from our left and found the enemy behind breast-works some distance in front; we fired one volley and fell back (see plate ———*). We recovered a portion of the line we lost on the 12th. The enemy attacked Gordon's brigade at 4 a. m. of the 18th with a heavy column, which was repulsed. In the p. m. of the 19th the corps made a movement to the front and right (the enemy having retired last night across the Ny) to attack the enemy's right. We attacked at 5 p. m. with Rodes' division and gained some success, but were finally forced to retire, the enemy being in full force (see plate ———*). A portion of the Third Corps moved out a short distance at the same time (see plate ———*).

A profound quiet prevailed on the 20th. On the morning of the 21st the Second Corps moved to the right of the army toward the Telegraph road, and south of the Po (see plate ———†), as the enemy was moving to the right, having abandoned the line of the Ny. The march was continued down the Po to the Telegraph road and then to Dickinson's Mill, where we encamped at 11 p. m. (see plate ———†). The enemy's advance attacked part of Pickett's division at Milford Station, and the cavalry skirmished with them all along the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad to that place. On the 22d the march was continued to the vicinity of Hanover Junction, which we reached by 1 p. m., Rodes' division in the rear (see plate ———†). The cavalry fought the enemy's advance near Chesterfield Station (see plate ———†). On the 23d the Second Corps was put in position in front and to the right of Hanover Junction (see plate ———‡). The Third Corps was on the extreme left. The enemy crossed at Jericho Ford in the p. m., and drove the Third Corps away and formed a line at right angles to the railroad and across it toward New Found River (see plate ———‡). The Second Corps was ordered to move up to support the Third after dark, but finally bivouacked along the railroad, across and to the left of the Telegraph road (see plate ———‡). The enemy took the works near the Telegraph road bridge and crossed the North Anna. At night a line of defense was selected, and the First Corps moved to its line and fortified it; the Second Corps was held in reserve (see plate ———‡). The Second Corps was placed on the right on the 24th, and fortified a line extending from the Telegraph road across the Richmond, Fredericksburg and Potomac Railroad to the right of Hanover Junction (see plate ———‡). The enemy fortified his position south of the North Anna. Some skirmishing occurred on the 24th and 25th. There was some skirmishing on the 26th, and the enemy advanced a line of battle on Rodes' division, on the right, which his skirmishers drove back (see plate ———‡). On the morning of the 27th it was found that the enemy had withdrawn across the North Anna, and only a small force remained in front of the army. The Second Corps marched along the Virginia Central Railroad; then to Merry Oaks, and to Hughes' Cross-Roads (see plate ———§), the enemy moving to near Hanover town. Marching at 3 a. m. of the 28th, via Atlee's Station and Shady Grove Church, the corps took position near Hundley's Corner, on the crest of the water-shed on the south bank of the Totopotomoy Creek (see plate ———§). There was a hard-fought cavalry engagement near Aenon Church the same day. We

* Plate LXXXIII, Map 3 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXI, Map 2 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXI, Map 7 of the Atlas.

§ Plate LXXXI, Map 3 of the Atlas.

quietly held our position on the 29th. On the 30th ——— brigade was moved to the right and front toward Bethesda Church, and attacked the enemy and drove them to their works, when they repulsed us (see plate ———*). On the 31st there was some fighting on the Old Church road.

June 1, there was hard fighting at Cold Harbor by the First Corps. On the 2d the position of the Second Corps was changed, and part of the Third put on its left (see plate ———*), and at 5 p. m. an attack was made on the enemy, and prisoners and a portion of his works captured (see plate ———*).

On the 3d there was skirmishing all along the lines and a very heavy cannonade on the left (see plate ———*). The enemy made a furious attack on the First Corps June 4. Last night the Second Corps moved back to its former position, holding the advanced line with skirmishers (see plate ———*). The Third Corps was moved from the left to Gaines' Mill. The enemy attacked our line at 9 p. m., and was repulsed (see plate ———*). Lieut. Gen. J. A. Early was put in full command of the Second Corps on the 5th; all quiet. June 6, the enemy left the front of the Second Corps last night, and it followed them up to-day to Gilman's Mill, skirmishing some and finding the enemy intrenched (see plate ———*). On the 7th the corps, being in reserve, moved out in front of the line and attacked the enemy's flank with some success (see plate ———*). From the 8th to the 13th of June the Second Corps was in reserve, and remained in camp to the west of Gaines' Mill.

ARMY OF THE VALLEY DISTRICT.

The Second Corps of the Army of Northern Virginia, consisting of Rodes', Gordon's, and Early's divisions of infantry, the latter commanded by Ramseur, and Brigadier-General Long's artillery, under the command of Lieut. Gen. Jubal A. Early, left its encampment one mile west of Gaines' Mill, Hanover County, Va., at 3 a. m., Monday, June 13, 1864, and, marching by the route indicated on the accompanying map (plate ———†), and encamping at the places marked on the same map, reached the vicinity of Shadwell Station, on the Virginia Central Railroad, on the evening of June 16.

The next day, June 17, Ramseur's and Gordon's divisions were taken to Lynchburg via the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, while Rodes' division marched to the North Garden Depot (see plate ———†). The divisions on arriving at Lynchburg at 1 p. m. were at once marched out on the Salem road and took position near the line of battle formed the next day, June 18 (see plate ———‡). June 18, Rodes' division took the cars and came on to Lynchburg. In the p. m. the enemy advanced a line of battle, which was met and repulsed by a disposition of forces as shown on plate ———‡. General Early found General Breckinridge's command, consisting of a division of infantry, King's artillery, and Jackson's, Imboden's, McCausland's, and Jones' brigades of cavalry, in the immediate suburbs of Lynchburg, constructing a new line of defenses, as indicated in plate ———‡. Assuming command of all the forces, he moved them out to the line taken on the 18th, some three miles in front of Lynchburg. The enemy retreated from the front of Lynchburg during the night of the 18th by the Salem road, and we followed on the morning of the 19th, Ramseur's division in front, our advance occasionally reaching the enemy's rear guard, which burned all the bridges on the way and so impeded our progress some. They also destroyed the Virginia and Tennessee Railroad as much as possible. Breckinridge's division marched by the "Forest" road. Ramseur had a lively skirmish with the enemy near Liberty (see plate ———*), after which the army encamped near there (see plate ———* for routes from Lynchburg to Liberty).

* Plate LXXXI, Map 3 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXI, Map 6 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXIII, Map 7 of the Atlas.

June 20, the infantry, Gordon in front, followed after the enemy to Buford's Gap, skirmishing with the rear. At the gap the enemy made a show of resistance, and dispositions were made (as in plate ———*) to flank him from his position, but the movement was so slow that night came before it was accomplished, and we encamped in the gap, the enemy in our front. Major Gilmer's cavalry made a detour to the left, captured some of the enemy, and drove them from a signal station. Most of the cavalry marched from Liberty by the Peaks Gap to Buchanan to thwart the enemy's movements in the Valley. June 21, the enemy continued his retreat and we followed at rather a late hour, Rodes in advance, to the vicinity of Hanging Rock, or Mason's Gap, leaving the main road at Big Lick to try and reach the gap before the enemy (for route, see plate ———*). Imboden's cavalry crossed the Blue Ridge southwest of Buford's Gap and came upon the enemy's rear at Big Lick and followed them through Salem and Mason's Gap. The infantry reached Hanging Rock after the enemy had passed and encamped in the vicinity. The cavalry, under General Ransom, attacked the enemy's line of march at Hanging Rock at 11 a. m., and in the vicinity of Salem (see plate ———*), having made a night march from Buchanan, and cut their line of march, capturing artillery, wagons, &c., part of which they were compelled to destroy, being forced back by superior numbers of the enemy, who continued their retreat to Mason's Cove (see plate ———†). June 22, the troops remained in camp, only [except] Ramseur's division, which moved to the vicinity of Botetourt Springs. Imboden's cavalry continued the pursuit of the enemy toward New Castle. The rest of the cavalry marched to the vicinity of Fincastle. June 23, the army marched to Buchanan, Ramseur in advance, and on the 24th to Buffalo Creek, not far from Lexington, moving by two roads (see plate ———*). The enemy continued his retreat toward Lewisburg, followed by a few cavalry. Our cavalry marched, as shown in plate ———*, and encamped near Collierstown. June 25 and 26, the army continued the march by two roads, where practicable (see plate ———*), to the vicinity of Staunton. On the 27th the infantry rested and the cavalry continued the march (see plate ———‡). June 28, Ramseur and Rodes marched, by Mount Sidney and the Keezletown road, to the vicinity of North River, while Gordon and Breckinridge followed the Valley turnpike to near the same stream. The cavalry marched by the Back road. June 29, the army marched to the vicinity of Sparta, Ramseur in advance, and on the 30th, Gordon in advance, to near Hawkinstown, and July 1 he led the march to Fisher's Hill, the cavalry coming by the Middle road, and encamped on Hupp's Hill.

July 2, we marched to the vicinity of Winchester, Gordon in front (see plate ———‡). July 3, Gordon and Breckinridge marched to

---

* Plate LXXXI, Map 6 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXIII, Map 8 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

Martinsburg and captured the place, many stores, and some prisoners, without much opposition (see plate ———*). Ramseur marched to Leetown via Brucetown, and Rodes to Smithfield. The cavalry advanced to Kearneysville via Brucetown and Leetown (see plate ———*); met the enemy's cavalry near the latter place, and had quite a severe fight of it and drove them through Kearneysville (see plate ———*). McCausland's brigade marched all night via White Hall and Back Creek (see plate ———*). July 4, Ramseur marched, via Flowing Spring and Brown's, to Halltown, and Rodes via Charlestown; then advancing we drove the enemy from Halltown and Bolivar Heights, and took Bolivar with the skirmishers of the two divisions. The enemy shelled our troops from Maryland Heights, where they had 100-pounder Parrott guns, and also from Fort Duncan and Harper's Ferry (see plate ———†). After dark the enemy evacuated Harper's Ferry and our skirmishers took possession. The other divisions marched to the vicinity of Duffield's Depot (see plate ———*). McCausland's brigade attacked North Mountain Depot early in the morning and took 200 prisoners (see plate ———‡), then marched to Hainesville. July 5, Gordon crossed the Potomac at Boteler's Ford and marched to the mouth of the Antietam, where he encamped. Vaughn, in command of Breckinridge's division (Breckinridge commanding a corps made of it and Gordon's division) marched to Sharpsburg. Ramseur and Rodes spent the day at Harper's Ferry (see plate ———*). McCausland went to Shepherdstown. July 6, Gordon marched to near Maryland Heights. Ramseur and Rodes came to the vicinity of Sharpsburg, leaving one brigade at Harper's Ferry (see plate ———*). The cavalry went to Boonsborough (see plate ———*). McCausland came to the front of Sharpsburg. July 7, Gordon drove in the enemy's outposts at Fort Duncan and Maryland Heights, and, supported by Wharton (Breckinridge's division), engaged the enemy to within 600 yards of their very strong works (see plate ———†). Rodes was near Rohrersville and Ramseur near Sharpsburg. Lewis' brigade, of Ramseur's division, remained on Bolivar Heights (see plate ———‡) until late in the p. m., and then marched to the division at Sharpsburg by the usual route (see plate ———*). The cavalry marched to the vicinity of Frederick City and engaged the enemy some. McCausland went to Hagerstown from Sharpsburg, and engaged U. S. regular cavalry.

July 8, Ramseur marched by Boonsborough and Middletown to the summit of the Catoctin Mountain, where he found the cavalry in position (see plate ———*). Gordon and Wharton marched from Rohrersville, by Fox's Gap and Middletown, to the foot of the Catoctin Mountain (see plate ———*), while Rodes, from Rohrersville crossed the South Mountain by Crampton's Gap and encamped near Jefferson (see plate ———*). McCausland marched all night and passed the Boonsborough Gap at daylight and went to Frederick City and skirmished there during the day; camped at Middletown. On the 9th Ramseur drove in the enemy's pickets near Frederick City and through it toward Monocacy Junction, where they occupied two block-houses, one of them flanked by a strong earth-work on a hill and a commanding ridge on which was posted their main line, just across the Monocacy (see plate ———§). Ramseur engaged the enemy in front about

---

* Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXII, Map 1 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXIII, Map 5 of the Atlas.

§ Plate LXXXIII, Map 9 of the Atlas.

10 a. m. and skirmished with them while several batteries engaged their artillery. In the meantime McCausland's brigade of cavalry, which moved by Jefferson from Middletown, crossed the Monocacy lower down (see plate ——*), and got upon the enemy's flank and drove away his cavalry and engaged his infantry for a time. Gordon's division soon followed and struck the flank of the enemy's infantry and drove it back in confusion (see plate ——*). They then formed a second line, which he also broke and routed completely, pursuing them some distance, capturing many prisoners until night closed the pursuit. McCausland's brigade followed the enemy's cavalry to Urbana and engaged them (see plate ——†), and then fell back to the Monocacy. Rodes' division marched out on the Baltimore road and skirmished with the enemy some (see plate ——†). The troops encamped on the battle-field. Johnson's brigade of cavalry, formerly Jones', started on an expedition to the vicinity of Baltimore, &c. (For their route and camps, showing where they burned important bridges and cut the enemy's lines of communication with Washington City, see plate ——†). Sunday, July 10, the enemy's infantry retreated toward Baltimore. We destroyed the iron bridge across the Monocacy and the block-houses at the Junction, and continued our march toward Washington City via Urbana, Gordon in front. Ramseur brought up the rear and had a little skirmishing with some of the enemy's cavalry. We encamped near Gaithersburg. McCausland, in advance, drove Wilson's cavalry, fighting, to Rockville, and camped there (see plate ——†). July 11, Rodes in front, marched to Silver Spring, on the borders of the District of Columbia, where we engaged the enemy's skirmishers and drove them to the fortifications (see plate ——†). The day was intensely hot, and the army much exhausted. We found the enemy's works of a very formidable character and fully manned; the whole country cleared off and exposed in every part to fire from their numerous forts and batteries that crowned the heights in our front (see plate ——†). The army encamped in the vicinity of Silver Spring. McCausland's cavalry brigade advanced from Rockville by the Georgetown road and engaged the enemy near Tennallytown (see plate ——†), while Colonel Mosby's command made a demonstration at the Chain Bridge on the Virginia side (see plate ——†).

July 12, we spent in front of Washington, and Rodes' division had a heavy skirmish with the enemy on the Seventh Street turnpike in the p. m. We also had a cavalry skirmish on the Georgetown road, where our cavalry was forced by superior numbers to retire. Some infantry was sent to their support. Johnson's brigade of cavalry returned to-day from its march toward Baltimore (see plate ——†). At dark our trains were started back, Wharton in front, and at 11 p. m. the rest followed, Ramseur in the rear (see plate ——†). McCausland marched the river road. July 13, we reached Rockville at daylight and Seneca Creek about noon, where we rested until dark. The enemy followed to Rockville and attacked our rear guard, Jackson's brigade of cavalry, and were handsomely repulsed (see plate ——†). McCausland marched to Edwards Ferry. Continuing the march during the night via Poolesville, the army reached White's Ford about midnight and rested until dawn of the 14th, when it crossed the river and encamped between there and Leesburg. The enemy came up shortly after we crossed. Part of the cavalry crossed lower down (see plate ——*). McCausland crossed at Conrad's Ferry and went to Edwards Ferry and had a fight (see plate ——*). The 15th was spent in camp, the enemy making demonstrations along the river and shelling our cavalry. The trains and prisoners were sent to Ashby's Gap, via Upperville, McCausland covering them. July 16, we marched, via Leesburg and Purcellville, through Snicker's Gap, Jackson's cavalry in advance, crossed the Shenandoah, as did also Gordon's and Wharton's divisions. The others encamped on the east and west slopes of the mountain. McCausland followed the trains to Ashby's Gap and Johnson marched to protect the right flank from the enemy at Hillsborough, but he failed to do it, and they made an attack on our train at Purcellville and did some damage, but they were soon repulsed and we captured a piece of artillery from them (see plate ——*). McCausland marched to Millwood.

---

* Plate LXXXIII, Map 9 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

July 17, we crossed the Shenandoah at Castleman's Ferry and Gordon and Wharton encamped near the crossing; Rodes farther down the river and Ramseur near Long Branch. Imboden went to Millwood; McCausland to Salem Church; Jackson toward Charlestown, and Johnson farther to the left (see plate ——*). Our cavalry fought the enemy's advance in Snicker's Gap. July 18, the enemy came across the mountain at Snicker's Gap and attacked our lines furiously, getting commanding positions for their artillery on the bluffs of the east bank of the Shenandoah. They crossed the river at Cool Springs, where they were met by Rodes, aided by Wharton, and signally repulsed and driven with loss across the river, Gordon engaging them at the same time near Castleman's Ferry (see plate ——*). Their loss was heavy. Our cavalry fought them as they advanced across the mountain. The fight took place in the p. m. July 19, the enemy attempted to cross at Berry's Ferry, from Ashby's Gap, but was signally repulsed by Imboden's and McCausland's brigades of cavalry (see plate ——*). On the 20th Ramseur's division and Vaughn's and Jackson's cavalry, which had been sent to Winchester last night, to-day went three miles toward Martinsburg, and was attacked by the enemy at Rutherford's farm and defeated, losing 4 pieces of artillery, Jackson saving them from rout by charging to the front and covering the retreat (see plate ——†). The trains were started toward Newtown, and during the night Breckinridge (Gordon and Wharton), followed by McCausland, marched to Cedarville via Millwood, and on the 20th to Middletown. Rodes marched through White Post and on to Newtown, while Ramseur, having covered the evacuation of Winchester, came to Kernstown (see plate ——*).

On the 21st we moved to Cedar Creek, the enemy slowly following with a large force, and on the 22d marched to the vicinity of Strasburg, Ramseur north, Rodes northwest, and Breckinridge northeast, on Hupp's Hill (see plate ——*), and McCausland encamped in the vicinity of Front Royal. July 23, the enemy's cavalry advanced to near Newtown, but was met by ours and driven back to Kernstown. The infantry remained in camp. McCausland's brigade moved to Buckton (see plate ——*). July 24, we marched toward Winchester, Gordon in front, Vaughn's cavalry on the Valley turnpike, Johnson's on the right, to flank Winchester, Jackson on the Middle, and Imboden on the Back road. We drove in the enemy's pickets at Bartonsville and the cavalry engaged them at 10 a. m. near Kernstown. The infantry soon came up and Wharton was moved in line to the right and Gordon to the left of the turnpike. Ramseur was moved to the Middle road. Gordon engaged the enemy in front while Wharton turned their left flank and they retreated in confusion. Johnson had engaged their cavalry on the Front Royal road, and Rodes was moved across toward Mrs. Hamilton's to cut off the retreat of the cavalry, but most of them escaped. They made several attempts to stand, but were pressed vigorously by Rodes on the right of the pike and in it, below Winchester, and by Gordon on the left. Rodes continued the pursuit to Stephenson's and the cavalry to Bunker Hill, causing the enemy to burn over seventy wagons and twelve caissons. Gordon pursued to three miles beyond Winchester. Ramseur and Wharton came to the Red Bud. Our artillery did excellent work. McCausland marched via Cedarville to Winchester and to the front at Stephenson's. July 25, after the heavy rain of the morning, the infantry marched to Bunker Hill. Our cavalry followed the enemy to Martinsburg and had a skirmish there (see plate ——*). The enemy crossed the Potomac.

---

* Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXIII, Map 6 of the Atlas.

On the 26th we marched to Martinsburg, and encamped in the vicinity; Rodes and Ramseur on Dry Run, and Gordon and Wharton on Tuscarora Creek. The cavalry went to opposite Williamsport. The 27th and 28th were employed in destroying the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad in the vicinity of Martinsburg. Cavalry at Hainesville and Hammond's Mill. July 29, McCausland's and Johnson's brigades of cavalry started for Chambersburg, which they burned (for routes, encampments, and engagements with the enemy, see plate ——†); and Rodes and Ramseur marched to Williamsport, the skirmishers driving the enemy to Hagerstown, while McCausland's and Johnson's cavalry crossed at McCoy's Ford. The enemy's cavalry fired on our line of march at Falling Waters. We crossed to the Virginia side to encamp (see plate ——†). July 30, returned to Martinsburg, Ramseur by Hammond's Mill, Rodes by Falling Waters; and on the 31st marched to Bunker Hill and encamped, Ramseur northwest and Rodes southeast of there, while Gordon and Wharton halted at Darkesville (see plate ——†).

August 1, 2, and 3, we remained in camp. On the 4th Gordon and Wharton marched to Shepherdstown, via Leetown, while Rodes and Ramseur went via Martinsburg to Hainesville (see plate ——†). On the 5th we crossed the Potomac to Sharpsburg and had a skirmish with Cole's cavalry across the Antietam (see plate ——†). Rodes and Ramseur crossed at Williamsport and encamped near Saint James' College.

On the 6th Rodes and Ramseur returned through Williamsport and on to Hammond's Mill, while Gordon and Wharton marched to the Virginia shore at Williamsport via Tilghmanton. Some of the cavalry went to Hagerstown (see plate ——†). On the 7th we continued our march through Martinsburg to the camps at Bunker Hill and Darkesville as on the 30th ultimo (see plate ——†). Averell's division of Federal cavalry surprised the camp of Johnson's cavalry at Moorefield and drove it and McCausland's away in great confusion (see plate ——†). Enemy collecting a large force at Harper's Ferry. August 8 and 9 were spent in camp, and on the 10th we marched to Stephenson's

* Plate LXXXII, Map 2 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXII, Map 3 of the Atlas.

Depot, then by Jordan Springs to the mouth of Abraham's Creek, where Breckinridge encamped. Ramseur marched to Winchester to meet a reported advance of the enemy from Romney. Rodes encamped at Stephenson's. The enemy made demonstrations on the Martinsburg, Berryville, and Millwood roads in the p. m., but were easily repulsed (see plate ———*). On the morning of the 11th we formed a line of battle covering the approaches to Winchester from the east and south-east, Breckinridge covering the Berryville and Millwood roads, Ramseur the Front Royal road, and Rodes the one to Martinsburg. There was some skirmishing and cannonading on the Millwood road (see plate ———*), but it was ascertained that the enemy was endeavoring to reach the Valley pike, in our rear, so Gordon was moved to the vicinity of Newtown and put in position to cover the approaches (see plate ———*); the rest of the army followed. After a brisk skirmish, about dark, on the road to the Double Toll-Gate, in which the enemy was repulsed (see plate ———*), we encamped in the vicinity of Newtown (see plate ———*). On the morning of the 12th we fell back across Cedar Creek and formed a line of battle there, the enemy forming on the north side, and some skirmishing ensued (see plate ———*). In the evening we fell back to Fisher's Hill, posting the cavalry on the flanks and in front, McCausland on the right (see plate ———*). August 13, a line of defense was selected at Fisher's Hill and occupied by troops as in plate ———.† On the 14th the enemy sent a few skirmishers across Cedar Creek and ours engaged them. The enemy drove our signal men from the end of the Three-Top Mountain, but a company of sharpshooters drove them off in turn with loss (see plate ———‡). August 15, we drove the enemy's pickets across Cedar Creek and reconnoitered their position.

On the 16th General Anderson, advancing to re-enforce General Early, had his pickets attacked by the enemy at Guard Hill, near Front Royal, and suffered some loss (see plate ———‡). On the morning of the 17th the enemy retreated, burning barns and hay and grain ricks as they went. We followed after them, McCausland's cavalry brigade in front, on the Valley pike, followed by Gordon, Jackson's brigade on the Middle and Johnson's on the Back road. We did not overtake the enemy until we reached Kernstown; then drove their skirmishers in and found their cavalry, supported by a brigade of infantry, posted on Bowers' Hill. Forsberg's brigade, of Wharton's division, was thrown out on the left and skirmished with the enemy; then Wharton was formed in line, with Ramseur's sharpshooters on the right, and advanced under a heavy musketry and artillery fire and drove the enemy from the hill about dark (see plate ———*). McCausland moved round to the right of Winchester and by the Berryville road. General Anderson, with Kershaw's division of infantry and Fitz Lee's cavalry, advanced to the Opequon (see plate ———*). On the 18th Rodes went a short distance on the Berryville road, Ramseur on the Martinsburg road, and Anderson encamped on the Front Royal and Millwood roads; Gordon and Wharton on Abraham's Creek; McCausland went to Stephenson's. August 19, the army marched to Bunker Hill and encamped near there, Anderson and Fitz Lee remaining at Winchester. Lomax's division of cavalry went to Martinsburg and Shepherdstown. On the 20th the cavalry had some skirmishing along the Opequon.

---

* Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXII, Map 11 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXII, Map 4 of the Atlas.

On the 21st we marched to the vicinity of Charlestown, driving the enemy's cavalry from the Opequon, meeting the infantry about 9 a. m. at Cameron Station and driving them toward Charlestown, in front of which we had some severe skirmishing and also shelled the enemy's sharpshooters at Packett's house. The troops were disposed as in plate ———.* The enemy fortified their lines (see plate ———*). Vaughn's, Johnson's, and Jackson's brigades advanced to Leetown and then crossed to the vicinity of Charlestown (see plate ———†). Part of McCausland's brigade followed the enemy's cavalry from the Opequon to Summit Point. The rest covered the advance and formed on Rodes' left. Fitz Lee, advancing by Berryville, engaged the enemy on that road, while Anderson drove them on the Summit Point road (see plate ———‡). We encamped near Cameron. August 22, the enemy retired last night and we drove their cavalry pickets through Charlestown and established our line beyond it, with cavalry on both flanks, Fitz Lee on the right and Lomax on the left. Anderson came to the vicinity (see plate ———‡). We remained near the same position on the 23d and 24th, moving somewhat to the left along the Leetown road (see plate ———‡). The enemy drove in our pickets on the 24th, but we repulsed them. August 25, marched for Shepherdstown via Leetown, Wharton in front, and met the advance of the enemy's cavalry on the march, about two miles from Leetown, and had quite a heavy skirmish and artillery duel with them, driving them from their position (see plate ———‡). They made another stand nearer to Shepherdstown, where we engaged them until dark, driving them several miles, some crossing the Potomac and some going toward Harper's Ferry (see plate ———‡). We encamped near Shepherdstown, the cavalry divisions of Fitz Lee and Lomax collected at Leetown via Smithfield, and went to Williamsport via Martinsburg (see plate ———‡). Anderson remained in front of Charlestown, with McCausland on his left and ——— on his right.

On the 26th the army marched back to Leetown, Ramseur in advance. The cavalry came to Shepherdstown after an artillery fight across the Potomac at Williamsport (see plate ———‡). The enemy made an attack on Anderson at Charlestown in the p. m. August 27, marched to the old camps at Bunker Hill, Rodes moving by "the Bower." The rest, Ramseur in advance, by Smithfield. Anderson marched via Smithfield and Brucetown to Stephenson's. The cavalry that had been left at Charlestown came to Smithfield, but was ordered back. The rest of it remained at Shepherdstown (see plate ———‡). On the 28th, the enemy's cavalry advanced on ours and compelled it to cross the Opequon. After a brisk engagement at Smithfield, which place the enemy occupied and burned barns and houses, Fitz Lee retired toward Brucetown and Lomax toward Bunker Hill. Ramseur was marched toward the Opequon, but did not cross (see plate ———‡). The 29th the enemy advanced across the Opequon, driving in our cavalry. Our infantry was advanced, as in plate ———,§ and, aided by the artillery, drove them back across the Opequon and from some rude works they had constructed in front of Smithfield (see plate ———§), and then returned to camp, leaving the cavalry behind, but the enemy

---

* Plate LXXXII, Map 6 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXII, Map 5 of the Atlas.

§ Plate LXXXII, Map 7 of the Atlas.

drove them back across the Opequon in the p. m. McCausland sent vedettes on Gordon's right from his position at Beeson's Ford. All was quiet on the 30th, but the enemy made some demonstrations along the Opequon on the 31st, which were met by our cavalry. Anderson on the 31st marched to near Winchester and Rodes marched to Martinsburg and back on a reconnaissance (see plate ——*).

Quiet prevailed September 1, but on the 2d the enemy was reported moving in force toward Berryville, and three divisions of the army were marched across the country to near Stone Chapel, when Vaughn's brigade of cavalry, which had been left at Bunker Hill, having been stampeded by the enemy, who thus got on Johnson's flank and routed the whole line (see plate ——*), capturing wagons, &c., when Rodes, who had been left at Stephenson's, formed and drove the enemy back to Bunker Hill, and the army came back to the vicinity of Brucetown and Stephenson's. McCausland moved from Brucetown to Rodes' right (see plate ——*); Fitz Lee and Anderson moved toward Berryville. On the morning of the 3d the enemy's cavalry appeared at White Post, and Fitz Lee moved to Newtown to guard our rear. Anderson advanced to Berryville and found the enemy's infantry there, and drove a portion of it handsomely from some earth-works (see plate ——†). Rodes moved to Bunker Hill and supported our cavalry in a fight there in the morning (see plate ——*). At night Gordon marched to Winchester. On the 4th Ramseur, Wharton, and Rodes marched to Berryville via "Burnt Factory," and moved to the left of General Anderson and had some skirmishing with the enemy, whom we found well fortified in our entire front (see plate ——†). The enemy's cavalry returned from White Post to-day; Gordon remained to guard the approaches to Winchester. After remaining in front of the enemy at Berryville until 2 p. m. of the 5th the divisions of Rodes, Wharton, and Ramseur returned by the same route they had advanced to Stephenson's; Rodes, in front, reached there just in time to form a brigade on the right of our cavalry, which was falling back before Averell's superior force, and aid in driving him several miles through a hard rain with loss (see plate ——*). Anderson marched back in the a. m. to the west side of the Opequon. It was quiet on the 6th, but on the 7th the enemy made demonstrations near Brucetown at the Yellow House, on the Martinsburg road, and also on the Millwood and Front Royal roads not far from Winchester. They were repulsed at all points. It was quiet again on the 8th, owing to the hard rain, but on the 9th the enemy advanced to the Opequon, below Brucetown, and burned some mills; Wharton marched out to meet them. September 10, we marched, Rodes in front, through a very hard rain beyond Darkesville, preceded by some of Lomax's division. Near Darkesville we encountered the enemy's cavalry and drove it off (see plate ——*), our cavalry pursuing through Martinsburg, when the enemy retired across the Opequon, their whole force being on the south side of that stream. The infantry returned to Bunker Hill, the cavalry remained at Darkesville.

On the 11th the infantry marched back to Stephenson's, the cavalry remaining at Darkesville. It was quiet on the 12th, but on the 13th the enemy advanced by the old Charlestown road, and we had an artillery engagement across the Opequon, lasting most of the day (see plate ———*). The enemy retired at night. On the 14th Anderson went away with Kershaw's division via Front Royal. The troops remained in camp on the 15th and 16th near Stephenson's. In the p. m. of the 17th Jackson's brigade of cavalry and Gordon's and Rodes' divisions marched to Bunker Hill, and on the 18th Jackson and Gordon went to Martinsburg, meeting the enemy's pickets at Big Spring and driving them through the town, three of the brigades going to the left and one (York's) to the right; made some captures, burned railroad bridges, and returned to Bunker Hill; Rodes returned to Stephenson's (see plate ———*). The enemy advanced by the Berryville road toward Winchester at 3 a. m. of the 19th, and Ramseur opposed their advance, having Johnson's and Jackson's cavalry on the right. Rodes came up at 10 a. m. and formed on Ramseur's left and Gordon arrived about noon and formed on Rodes' left. Wharton formed to the left and rear of Gordon across the Martinsburg road, on which he drove back several advances of the enemy's cavalry. The fighting was very heavy about noon, and all the enemy's advances were repulsed by our infantry and artillery with great slaughter. The enemy massed his cavalry at 1 p. m. to turn our left, but was repulsed in his attack. He renewed it at 4 p. m. and got in the rear of the left, when the whole line gave way and we retreated, about sundown, the enemy's cavalry following to Kernstown, where they were repulsed by Ramseur, who was in the rear. We retreated to Newtown, Gordon in front, and encamped about midnight (see plate ———*). The enemy had by official returns ——— cavalry opposed to us.

* Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXII, Map 10 of the Atlas.

On the 20th the army marched at daylight to Fisher's Hill and took position as in plate ———.† General Rodes having been killed at Winchester, Ramseur was placed in command of Rodes' division and Brig. Gen. John Pegram took command of Early's division, which Ramseur had hitherto commanded. Fitz Lee's cavalry fell back to Front Royal.‡ One division of the enemy's cavalry came to near Strasburg. On the 21st we remained in our works as on the 20th. The enemy made some demonstrations in the a. m. with infantry on our right and center and cavalry on our left. Late in the p. m. they drove in our skirmish line on the Middle road and got possession of a wooded hill in our front, which they at once fortified (see plate ———†). Wickham, in command of Fitz Lee's cavalry, fell back to Milford (see plate ———§). On the 22d of September the enemy advanced a line of battle in our front at an early hour and engaged our skirmishers. At 9.30 a. m. they had them earnestly engaged in front of the center, and at 1 p. m. they advanced several lines of battle in front of Ramseur, but only drove in his skirmishers. At 4.30 p. m. they drove in the skirmishers in front of Gordon, and opened a lively artillery fire from the ridge between the railroad and the river. At the same time a corps of the enemy's infantry having made a detour through the woods at the foot of Little North Mountain, turned the flank of our cavalry on the left and compelled them to retreat in confusion, when it moved on toward the left flank of the infantry and rather beyond it.

About 5.30 p. m. an attempt was made to throw the whole line back and more to the left to meet the movement of the enemy; but the attack was so rapid and vigorous in flank and front that the whole left of the line gave way, thus admitting the enemy to the rear of the whole

* Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXII, Map 11 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXII, Map 8 of the Atlas.

§ Plate LXXXIV, Map 1 of the Atlas.

line northwest of the railroad, which at once gave way, and the whole army retreated in disorder about dark, except some of Wharton's division, which formed a rear guard, and the brigade that had been on the left of the line. A few men and some artillery rallied on the hill in front of Mount Prospect and checked the enemy for a time. The army retreated rapidly. The enemy followed to Tom's Brook, where Smith's brigade of Wharton's division checked them, and they gave up the pursuit (see plate ———*). The retreat continued all night, and the troops arrived at Mount Jackson at an early hour on the morning of the 23d. The trains were sent across the North Fork of Shenandoah River by the bridge Captain Hart, of the engineer troops, had completed the day before. The troops remained in line of battle at Mount Jackson during the day, and the enemy's cavalry came up and skirmished and threw a few shells, but made no advance (see plate ———†). After dark we crossed to Rude's Hill and encamped (see plate ———†).

On the morning of the 24th we formed a line of battle on Rude's Hill and remained there until noon, the enemy advancing to the river and throwing a few shells, at the same time moving up on the opposite side of the river to our left flank (see plate ———†), and driving our cavalry back rapidly on the Middle road. We then fell back in line and in column, and formed again in rear of New Market, and in the same way, skirmishing and using artillery, we formed lines and fell back to Tenth Legion, where we formed a line late in the p. m. and held it until after dark (see plate ———†), when, leaving Jackson's cavalry on picket, the army followed the trains, by the Keezletown road, to Flook's (see plate ———†), Ramseur in front, where we arrived about midnight. Our cavalry was driven to near Harrisonburg. On the 25th the trains moved on at 1 p. m. to Brown's Gap, via Peale's Cross-Roads, Meyerhoeffer's Store, and Port Republic, and at daylight the troops followed, Pegram in advance, and encamped in Brown's Gap, the cavalry encamping between South and Middle Rivers (see plate ———†); the enemy came to Harrisonburg. September 26, Kershaw's division came up the river from Swift Run Gap, where it had crossed the Blue Ridge from Gordonsville, and, turning off at Lewis', joined the rest of the army in Brown's Gap (see plate ———†). The enemy's cavalry and artillery attacked Kershaw as he was about to turn off and he repulsed them, engaging their artillery also, which was across the river (see plate ———†). Early in the morning the enemy's cavalry came on from Harrisonburg and drove ours across the South River. Pegram's division was moved out to the angle of the Cave road, with artillery, and engaged the enemy, repulsing several charges of cavalry (see plate ———†); at the same time the enemy advanced up the turnpike, where Ramseur's skirmishers drove them back. The attack on Kershaw was simultaneous. Wharton and Gordon were marched out to support the others (see plate ———†). Wickham's cavalry (Fitz Lee's) was moved to our left in the p. m. to Patterson's Ford, to meet a reported move of the enemy.

The enemy's cavalry having spent the night of the 26th near Weyer's Cave and Port Republic, with skirmishers across South River (see plate ———†), General Early planned to attack them in flank and rear on the 27th. Wickham, under cover, was marched across South River at Patterson's Ford, followed by Gordon, artillery, and Ramseur, Wharton guarding the right flank of the movement, while Pegram engaged the enemy in front and Kershaw held the approaches to Brown's Gap (see plate ———*). Our cavalry made a successful attack and everything was in position for a surprise, when the artillery opened prematurely and warned the enemy and they fled, only skirmishing some with our cavalry, which drove them toward Mount Meridian. Pegram crossed the river and joined Gordon and Ramseur in driving the enemy across North River, when we shelled them very successfully as they fled from the hill opposite Port Republic (see plate ———*). We encamped between the rivers, except Kershaw, who remained at Brown's Gap. Some misunderstanding of orders delayed the march on the morning of the 28th, when we started for Waynesborough, the enemy having gone there via Staunton on the 27th. Our trains crossed at Patterson's Ford and went up South River, Ramseur in front of them, followed by Wharton. Pegram marched by the Waynesborough road from Mount Meridian, turning by the Dogtown road five miles from Waynesborough. Kershaw, followed by Gordon, marched by New Hope and Hermitage, striking the enemy's cavalry at the latter place and driving it on toward Dogtown. Pegram met the enemy about four miles from Dogtown and drove them there; then formed a line after dark and drove them to the Staunton road and toward Fishersville, our cavalry having previously gone by a by-road to near the tunnel and driven the enemy across South River and through Waynesborough (see plate ———*). All encamped after dark in the vicinity of Waynesborough. On the 29th the army rested, the engineer troops and pioneers being engaged in rebuilding the railroad bridges across South River and Christian's Creek, which the enemy had destroyed. The enemy's cavalry retreated via Staunton, Spring Hill, and Mossy Creek to Bridgewater, while those along the Valley road fell back to North River, burning barns, mills, &c., as they went. Our cavalry went to Middle River. All quiet on the 30th.

---

* Plate LXXXII, Map 11 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

October 1, the army moved to the vicinity of Mount Sidney, Gordon, Kershaw, and Pegram marching by the road to the Willow Pump, and then down the Valley road three miles beyond Mount Sidney. Ramseur and Wharton went by the Mount Meridian road and across by Piedmont to within three miles of Mount Sidney. Our cavalry went toward North River (see plate ———*).

On the 2d the enemy drove in our pickets near North River, and the Stonewall Brigade, of Gordon's division, drove them back and held the bridge. Our cavalry was engaged with the enemy at Bridgewater (see plate ———*). The 3d and 4th were quiet, except some skirmishing along the line of North River.† Gordon moved to near Naked Creek on the 5th, and Rosser's cavalry joined the army, having come up from Richmond, via Lynchburg. The enemy left his camps near Harrisonburg, Mount Crawford, and Bridgewater early on the morning of the 6th, after burning in every direction. Our cavalry was soon in pursuit, and the infantry, Gordon in front, followed at 11 a. m. and marched to the vicinity of Harrisonburg, three divisions beyond it. Lomax went by the Keezletown road to Peale's, and Rosser, with Fitz Lee's division, by the Back road, falling on the enemy's rear at Brock's Gap and capturing forges, &c. (see plate ———‡). He then went to Timberville (see plate ———*). On the 7th we continued the march to New Market, Pegram in front, and encamped in the vicinity; Pegram and Wharton on the Timberville, Gordon and Ramseur on the Forest-

---

*Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

†Plate LXXXII, Map 12 of the Atlas.

‡Plate LXXXIV, Map 2 of the Atlas.

ville, and Kershaw on the Luray roads. Our cavalry went to Stony Creek (see plate ———*). The infantry remained in camp on the 8th, while Rosser, on the Back road, drove the enemy to Round Hill, engaging them near Tom's Brook (see plate ———†), while Lomax drove them to Tom's Brook on the turnpike (see plate ———‡). The enemy turned on our cavalry on the 9th and drove them back, Lomax to Mount Jackson and Rosser to Stony Creek, where he checked them, and captured their trains and 8 pieces of artillery. Ramseur and Kershaw were marched down to Rude's Hill to meet the enemy, but they retired to Edenburg (see plate ———*), and at night we held the line of Stony Creek. The 10th and 11th the infantry remained in camp, the pioneers being employed in repairing the telegraph line to New Market. Lomax's division went to the Page Valley on the 11th.

On the 12th the march was resumed, Ramseur in front, and the army marched to between Narrow Passage Creek and Woodstock (see plate ———*). The cavalry marched from Timberville to Stony Creek. Payne's brigade went to Pugh's Run on the Valley pike. Continuing the march on the 13th the advance infantry, Gordon's, reached Hupp's Hill by 10 a. m., having been preceded by Payne's cavalry. The infantry was kept concealed by the hill and woods, and formed as in plate ———,‡ and some artillery was put in position, and opened on the enemy's camps and pickets on the north side of Cedar Creek, driving them from their posts and camps on the left in great disorder. The enemy then advanced a brigade across Cedar Creek and opened from the batteries on their right. Our artillery shelled the advancing column and slowly withdrew, when the enemy came on and was charged and handsomely routed by Gordon's and Wharton's skirmishers and Conner's brigade, of Kershaw's division (see plate ———‡). The enemy suffered severely. Rosser advanced to Cedar Creek and engaged the enemy's cavalry (see plate ———‡); Lomax went down Page Valley and drove the enemy's pickets from Guard Hill (see plate ———*). The army fell back to Fisher's Hill and encamped (see plate ———*). Enemy burning [barns, &c.,] at Front Royal. The 14th was spent on Fisher's Hill, &c. (see plate ———*). The enemy's cavalry came to southwest of Strasburg, and Gordon's and Wharton's skirmishers drove them back to Hupp's Hill. Lomax encamped at ———. We remained at Fisher's Hill the 15th, some of our skirmishers going to Hupp's Hill and finding the enemy busily fortifying the north bank of Cedar Creek. All quiet on the 16th, but at night Rosser's brigade of cavalry took Grimes' infantry, of Ramseur's division, behind it, and went to surprise a cavalry camp of the enemy on the Back road, but found only a picket, which was captured (see plate ———*).

On the 17th the troops were marched out in front of Tumbling Run a mile or more, and some reconnaissances were made in front. General Early sent General Gordon and myself to reconnoiter the enemy's position with reference to an attack from the signal station on Three-Top Mountain, sending General Pegram to Cedar Creek for the same purpose. A map of the enemy's position and works was made and delivered to the general commanding. On the 18th General Early summoned his division commanders to headquarters and decided upon and communicated to them a plan of attack to be carried into effect the following night and day, assigning to each division its time and place of attack, as it was executed (see plate ———*). General Gordon, with the Second Corps (Gordon's, Ramseur's, and Pegram's divisions), was to march across the Shenandoah and around the base of Three-Top Mountain by a blind and concealed path, and then to cross the Shenandoah again at Bowman's Ford and turn the enemy's left flank. Kershaw was to go by Strasburg to Bowman's Mill and attack in front of the left; Wharton and the artillery to go by Strasburg to Hupp's Hill and be ready to second the other attacks; Rosser to go by the Back road and engage the cavalry of the enemy; all to be in position and attack at 5 o'clock of the morning of the 19th. Rosser to attack first, then Gordon, and lastly Kershaw (see plate ———*). About dark the streams were bridged and the path cleared out by the pioneers; and Gordon marched at 8 p. m. by the selected route (see plate ———*).

* Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXII, Map 11 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXV, Sketches 35, 36, and 37 of the Atlas.

At midnight Kershaw and Wharton started for their positions. Before 5 a. m. of October 19, Kershaw and Wharton were resting on Hupp's Hill and Bowman's Mill road, and Gordon had rested for some time not far from Bowman's Ford on the south bank of the river. Rosser was also in position (see plate ———*). The attack was successfully made, the enemy's pickets driven in, and by sunrise Kershaw and Gordon had occupied the camps and works of the Eighth and Nineteenth Corps, and captured artillery and prisoners (see plate ———*). The Sixth Corps offered a new obstruction, and lines were formed as in plate ———*, and they were driven back to the left of Middletown. A portion of Wharton's division was added to the line and moved against the enemy, but could not cross Meadow Run in consequence of its depth of bed, and was driven back. The artillery then opened and drove the enemy from his position (see plate ———*). A second line was now formed, passing in front of Middletown and to the left (see plate ———*) and some skirmishing and cannonading took place along the line. A portion of the left was advanced some distance (see plate ———*), the enemy in the meantime, deploying his cavalry on his flanks, rallied and formed a line of infantry in the woods on the left of Meadow Run, behind some rude breast-works of rails, and from these they advanced late in the p. m. and broke a portion of our line on the left, when the whole line gave way just before dark and retreated. The enemy's cavalry crossing Cedar Creek above the turnpike bridge, succeeded in cutting off and capturing most of our artillery and many wagons on Hupp's Hill after dark, the bridge near Spangler's Mill having in the meantime broken down and stopped the train. The troops marched all night and reached New Market on the 20th and went into their former camps, Rosser bringing up the rear. The enemy's cavalry followed slowly to Edenburg, where we had halted our cavalry (see plate ———†).

On the 21st the enemy's infantry came across Cedar Creek and took and fortified with great care a new position on Hupp's and the adjoining hills (see plate ———*). Lomax's division, which only came to the vicinity of Middletown on the 19th, fell back to Milford in the Page Valley, and took and fortified a strong position there (see plate ———‡). All was quiet until the 26th, when the enemy's cavalry attacked Lomax's position at Milford and was repulsed. Rosser's brigade on that day went from its camp near Timberville to Luray. The troops remained quietly in camp in the vicinity of New Market, holding the line of Stony Creek and the position at Milford with cavalry, at points east of the Blue Ridge, until the 10th of November, when they again marched down the Valley, Kershaw's division in front, and encamped on each side of Woodstock (see plate ——*), Rosser's division of cavalry going to Fairview and Lomax's to Front Royal (see plate ——*).

* Plate LXXXII, Map 9 of the Atlas.

† Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

‡ Plate LXXXIV, Map 1 of the Atlas.

Marching at 6 a. m. on the 11th, Pegram's division in front, preceded by Payne's brigade of cavalry, we drove the enemy's pickets from Middletown and up to a line of fortifications beyond Newtown; then formed a line of battle between Middletown and Newtown and had some skirmishing with the enemy (see plate ——*). Rosser came by the Back and Middle roads to the left of Newtown (see plate ——*) and had some fighting with the enemy (see plate ——). Lomax came up on the right and extended toward Cedarville (see plate ——*). We spent the 12th in line of battle at the same place. Rosser engaged the enemy's cavalry, and part of his force was driven some distance by them along the Back road, but bringing up the rest he in turn routed Custer's division (see plate ——*). McCausland's brigade, of Lomax's division, repulsed several attacks of the enemy near Cedarville, but it was finally driven from there and lost 2 pieces of artillery. We fell back to Fisher's Hill after dark (see plate ——*). On the 13th the army, Grimes' brigade in front, marched to camps between Edenburg and Hawkinstown, and on the 14th, Gordon in front, we returned to camps in the vicinity of New Market (see plate ——*). Col. William Proctor Smith reported on the 14th as chief engineer of the Army of the Valley and assumed control of the engineer department of the same, and the operations of the army from that time to the close of the campaign have been reported by him.

I am, major, most respectfully, your obedient servant,

JED. HOTCHKISS,

Topographical Engineer, Valley District.

Maj. J. H. ALEXANDER,

Asst. Adjt. Gen. of Engineer Bureau, Richmond, Va.

---

* Plate LXXXI, Map 4 of the Atlas.

ALTERNATE DESIGNATIONS

OF

ORGANIZATIONS MENTIONED IN THIS VOLUME.*

- Adams' (George W.) Artillery. See Rhode Island Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery G.
- Adney's (William H. G.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 36th Regiment.
- Alcorn's (Jeremiah) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 50th Company.
- Alexander's (Charles M.) Infantry. See District of Columbia Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Alexander's (Frederic W.) Artillery. See Baltimore Artillery, post.
- Alger's (Russell A.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Allaire's (Anthony J.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 133d Regiment.
- Alleghany Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Allen's (Charles F.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 38th Regiment.
- Allen's (Crawford, jr.) Artillery. See Rhode Island Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery H.
- Allstrom's (John V.) Cavalry. See New Jersey Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Amelunxen's (Max von) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 162d Company.
- Amherst Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Amick's (John W.) Partisans. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Anderson's (Charles R.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 128th Regiment.
- Anderson's (James W.) Heavy Artillery. See Georgia Troops, 12th Battalion.
- Andrews' (Joseph F.) Cavalry. See New Hampshire Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Arden's (G. De Peyster) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Atkinson's (Edmund N.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 26th Regiment.
- Atwell's (Charles M.) Cavalry. See Loudoun Rangers, Cavalry, post.
- Awl's (F. Asbury) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 201st Regiment.
- Ayers' (Henry K. W.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 19th Regiment.
- Babcock's (Willoughby) Infantry. See New York Troops, 75th Regiment.
- Bacon's (William P.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Bagley's (James) Infantry. See New York Troops, 69th Regiment, Militia.
- Baker's (Eugene M.) Cavalry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 1st Regiment.
- Baker's (John H.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Baldwin's (James H.) Heavy Artillery. See Massachusetts Troops, 1st Battalion, Batteries A, C, E, and F.
- Ball's (Edward) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 51st Regiment.
- Ball's (William H.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 122d Regiment.
- Baltimore Artillery. See Maryland Troops, Confederate, 2d Battery.
- Baltimore Artillery. See Maryland Troops, Union.
- Barker's (Charles) Infantry. See Coast Guard Infantry, post.
- Barnes' (John G.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 17th Unattached Company.
- Barney's (Friend H.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Bartholomee's (Theodore M.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 12th Regiment.
- Bartlett's (Erastus G.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Bassett's (Isaac C.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 82d Regiment.

---

* References, unless otherwise indicated, are to index following.

- Bates' (James T.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Colored, 45th Regiment.
- Bates' (Thomas H.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery A.
- Battle's (Henry T.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 21st Regiment.
- Bauer's (Gottfried) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 98th Regiment.
- Beadle's (William H. H.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 3d Regiment.
- Beardsley's (William E.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Beck's (James W.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 44th Regiment.
- Beger's (Charles) Artillery. See Wisconsin Troops, 2d Battery.
- Benjamin's (William H.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Bennett's (George N.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 38th Regiment.
- Bennett's (John W.) Cavalry. See Vermont Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Bennett's (R. Tyler) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 14th Regiment.
- Binkley's (Otho H.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 110th Regiment.
- Birdseye's (Mortimer B.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 2d Regiment (Harris Light).
- Bishop's (John L.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 12th Regiment.
- Blacknall's (Charles C.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 23d Regiment.
- Blain's (James S.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 26th Regiment.
- Blakeslee's (Erastus) Cavalry. See Connecticut Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Blanchard's (Justus W.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 162d Regiment.
- Blanding's (Christopher) Infantry. See Hospital Guards, Infantry, post.
- Blinn's (Charles D.) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Board's (Francis H.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 58th Regiment.
- Boeman's (Lambert) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Boggs' (John) Cavalry. See Pendleton County Home Guards, post.
- Boice's (Theodore A.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Bomar's (Thomas H.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 38th Regiment.
- Boswell's (Benjamin D.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Bowen's (Lot) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Boyd's (Carlile) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 14th Regiment.
- Boyd's (Robert) Infantry. See District of Columbia Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Boyd's (Samuel H.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 45th Regiment.
- Boykin's (Stephen M.) Infantry. See South Carolina Troops, 20th Regiment.
- Brabble's (Edmund C.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 32d Regiment.
- Bradbury's (Albert W.) Artillery. See Maine Troops, 1st Battery.
- Brewer's (Melvin) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 1st and 7th Regiments.
- Brewerton's (Henry F.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 5th Regiment, Battery B.
- Brian's (William) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 57th Company.
- Briggs' (Alvah W.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 106th Regiment.
- Brinton's (William P.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 18th Regiment.
- Bronson's (Nelson) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 89th Company.
- Brooks' (Daniel) Infantry. See Union Troops, Colored, 28th and 29th Regiments.
- Brower's (Jabez M.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 122d Regiment.
- Brown's (Addison, jr.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Brown's (Allison L.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 149th Regiment.
- Brown's (Charles C.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 22d Regiment.
- Brown's (Hamilton A.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 1st Regiment.

- Brown's (William R.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Bruce's (John M.) Artillery. See Maryland Troops, Union, Battery D.
- Bryan's (Thomas A.) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Buckley's (William W.) Artillery. See Rhode Island Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery D.
- Buell's (Marquis D. L.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 144th Regiment.
- Bukey's (Van H.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 11th Regiment.
- Bumgard's (J.) Cavalry. (Official designation not of record.) See J. Bumgard.
- Burgess' (Charles) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Burroughs' (William H.) Artillery. See Rhett Artillery, post.
- Butler's (Géorge) Infantry. See Indiana Troops, 11th Regiment.
- Cadot's (Lemuel Z.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 91st Regiment.
- Cahill's (Thomas W.) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Callis' (John B.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 7th and 21st Regiments.
- Campbell's (Edward L.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 15th Regiment.
- Capehart's (Charles E.) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Carlin's (John) Artillery. See West Virginia Troops, Battery D.
- Carpenter's (John C.) Artillery. See Alleghany Artillery, ante.
- Carr's (Gouverneur) Infantry. See New York Troops, 165th Regiment.
- Carrington's (James McD.) Artillery. See Charlottesville Artillery, post.
- Carroll's (John S. P.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Carter's (James E.) Cavalry. See Tennessee Troops, Confederate.
- Carter's (William P.) Artillery. See King William Artillery, post.
- Chamberlin's (John W.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 123d Regiment.
- Chambers' (William R. W.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 93d Regiment, Militia.
- Chandler's (Charles G.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Chapman's (George B.) Artillery. See Monroe Artillery, post.
- Charles' (William S.) Infantry. See Indiana Troops, 18th Regiment.
- Charlottesville Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Chase's (Frederick) Artillery. See Rhode Island Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery D.
- Claflin's (Ira W.) Cavalry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 6th Regiment.
- Clark's (Gideon) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 119th Regiment.
- Clark's (John B.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 193d Regiment.
- Clark's (Leander) Infantry. See Iowa Troops, 24th Regiment.
- Clark's (Sidney E.) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Claypool's (Charles D.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Clitz's (Henry B.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 6th Regiment.
- Clyburn's (Benjamin R.) Infantry. See South Carolina Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Coast Guard, Infantry. See Maine Troops.
- Coates' (Benjamin F.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 91st Regiment.
- Coates' (Edwin M.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 12th Regiment.
- Cobb's Legion. See Georgia Troops.
- Cobb's (Norvell) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 44th Regiment.
- Cole's (Henry A.) Cavalry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 1st Regiment, P. H. B.
- Coleman's (Henry E.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 12th Regiment.
- Coleman's (James H.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 102d Regiment.
- Coles' (Frank H.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 52d Company.
- Comly's (James M.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 23d Regiment.
- Comstock's (Apollos) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Conant's (Oliver J.) Infantry. See Coast Guard, Infantry, ante.
- Conkling's (Frederick A.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 84th Regiment, Militia.
- Cook's (Benjamin C.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 50th Company.

- Cook's (Philip) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Cook's (Roger E.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 1st Regiment, P. H. B.
- Cooke's (John S.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 26th Regiment.
- Cooley's (Alfred) Infantry. See New York Troops, 156th Regiment.
- Cooper's (Raleigh L.) Artillery. See Stafford Artillery, post.
- Cornish's (William T.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 15th Regiment.
- Courtney Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Courtney's (William H.) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 8th and 9th Regiments.
- Cowan's (Andrew) Artillery. See New York Troops, 1st Battery.
- Cowand's (David G.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 32d and 53d Regiments; also 2d Battalion.
- Cox's (William R.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 2d Regiment.
- Crofton's (Robert E. A.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 16th Regiment.
- Crookston's (Absalom) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Crossman's (Horace F.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 96th Company.
- Crowninshield's (Casper) Cavalry. See Massachusetts Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Cullen's (James) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 7th Regiment.
- Cummings' (William G.) Cavalry. See Vermont Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Curtis' (Oscar H.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 114th Regiment.
- Darling's (Daniel H.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 7th Regiment.
- Darnall's (William W.) Infantry. See Indiana Troops, 11th Regiment.
- Davis' (Edwin P.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 153d Regiment.
- Davis' (Greenlief P.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 21st Regiment.
- Davis' (Martin W.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Day's (Nicholas W.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 131st Regiment.
- Deane's (Charles W.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 6th Regiment.
- De Blanc's (Alcibiades) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 8th Regiment.
- De La Paturelle's (Honore) Infantry. See New York Troops, 90th Regiment.
- Deming's (Charles R.) Artillery. See Indiana Troops, 16th Battery.
- Devol's (Hiram F.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 36th Regiment.
- Dewey's (Henry H.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 10th Regiment.
- De Witt's (David P.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 10th Regiment.
- Di Cesnola's (Louis P.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Dillingham's (Edwin) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Donohue's (Michael) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Donovan's (John H.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 19th Regiment.
- Doughty's (John B.) Infantry. See Wisconsin Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Douw's (John D. P.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 121st Regiment.
- Drysdale's (James) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 132d Company.
- Dudley's (James S.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Batteries C and E.
- Duggan's (Andrew W.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Duncan's (Ashbell F.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Dungan's (Robert H.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 48th Regiment.
- Dunn's (Ambrose C.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 37th Battalion.
- Dupont's (Charles) Artillery. See Michigan Troops, 13th Battery.
- Du Pont's (Henry A.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 5th Regiment, Battery B.
- Durland's (Coe) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 17th Regiment.
- Dwight's (Augustus W.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 122d Regiment.

- Dyer's (David H.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 21st Unattached Company.
- Dyer's (Isaac) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 15th Regiment.
- Ebright's (Aaron W.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 126th Regiment.
- Edmundson's (Henry A.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 27th Battalion.
- Egan's (H. J.) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 15th Regiment.
- Einsiedel's (Detleo von) Infantry. See New York Troops, 41st Regiment.
- Enochs' (William H.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Entwistle's (James) Infantry. See New York Troops, 176th Regiment.
- Evans' (Clement A.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 31st Regiment.
- Everett's (James) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Exempts' Battalion, Infantry. See West Virginia Troops.
- Fagan's (Andrew) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery H.
- Farabee's (Harvey) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Farmer's (George E.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Farnum's (J. Egbert) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 11th Regiment.
- Farr's (Alpha B.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 26th Regiment.
- Farrington's (Preston M.) Cavalry. See Rhode Island Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Fay's (Thomas M.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 151st Regiment.
- Federhen's (Jacob) Artillery. See Massachusetts Troops, 1st (A) Battery.
- Fellman's (John R.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 53d Company.
- Ferguson's (William D.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 184th Regiment.
- Finley's (Theodore M.) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, Battery H.
- Fisher's (John) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Fisher's (Joseph W.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 195th Regiment.
- Fisk's (Henry C.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 65th Regiment.
- Fitzgerald's (Hobart E.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Fitzhugh's (Charles L.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 4th Regiment, Batteries C and E.
- Fletcher's (Stephen C.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 1st (Veteran) and 7th Regiments.
- Flory's (Alexander M.) Cavalry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 1st Regiment, P. H. B.
- Floyd's (Horace W.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 3d and 4th Regiments.
- Fluvanna Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Foley's (Shadrach) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Forno's (Henry) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Forsyth's (Charles) Infantry. See Alabama Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Foster's (George P.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 3d and 4th Regiments.
- Foster's (James P.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 128th Regiment.
- Foust's (Benezet F.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 4th and 10th Regiments.
- French's (Edwin W.) Cavalry. See Connecticut Troops, 1st Regiment.
- French's (Frank S.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 1st Regiment, Battery E.
- French's (Winsor B.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 77th Regiment.
- Frink's (Henry A.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 186th Regiment.
- Fry's (C. W.) Artillery. See Orange Artillery, post.
- Funk's (John H. S.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 5th Regiment.
- Furney's (Luther) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 34th Regiment.
- Furst's (George) Artillery. See West Virginia Troops, Battery A.
- Gansevoort's (Henry S.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Gapen's (Henry C.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 15th Regiment.
- Garber's (Asher W.) Artillery. See Staunton Artillery, post.
- Gardiner's (Alexander) Infantry. See New Hampshire Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Garrett's (Thomas M.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 5th Regiment.

- George's (Albert G. P.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 60th Regiment.
- Getchell's (Thomas) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 150th Regiment.
- Gibbs' (Alfred) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 19th Regiment.
- Gibbs' (Frank C.) Artillery. See Ohio Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery L.
- Gibson's (John C.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 49th Regiment.
- Gibson's (Thomas) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Gibson's (Thomas S.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 27th Battalion.
- Gilbert's (Benjamin F.) Cavalry. See Indiana Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Gilmor's (Harry W.) Cavalry. See Maryland Troops, Confederate, 2d Battalion.
- Gilpin's (Charles) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 3d Regiment, P. H. B.
- Gittings' (Erskine) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 3d Regiment, Batteries L and M.
- Glassie's (Daniel W.) Artillery. See Kentucky Troops, Union, 1st Battery.
- Glover's (Andrew S.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 2d Regiment (Harris Light).
- Gobin's (J. P. Shindel) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 47th Regiment.
- Godwin's (Archibald C.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 57th Regiment.
- Good's (Tilghman H.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 47th Regiment.
- Gordon's (David S.) Cavalry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment.
- Gould's (Marshall) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Graham's (Harvey) Infantry. See Iowa Troops, 22d Regiment.
- Graham's (John E.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 1st Regiment, E. S.
- Graham's (John L.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 109th Company.
- Graham's (Samuel) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Granger's (Moses M.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 122d Regiment.
- Granniss' (Samuel H.) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Grant's (John V.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 5th Battery.
- Graves' (William P.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Battery I.
- Greene's (Charles S.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 61st Regiment.
- Greenfield's (Andrew J.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 22d Regiment.
- Griffin's (William H.) Artillery. See Maryland Troops, Confederate, 2d Battery.
- Grimes' (Bryan) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 4th Regiment.
- Grogan's (Michael A.) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Gross' (Frank P.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 72d Company.
- Hagans' (Harrison H.) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Hague's (Albert G.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Hale's (Joseph) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 3d Regiment.
- Haley's (Eben D.) Artillery. See Maine Troops, 1st Battery.
- Hall's (James R.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Hall's (Josephus M.) Infantry. See Alabama Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Hall's (Moses S.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Hamblin's (Joseph E.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 65th Regiment.
- Hamilton's (Theodore B.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 62d Regiment.
- Hammond's (John) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Hampton Legion, Cavalry. See South Carolina Troops.
- Hancock's (John M.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 2d Battalion.
- Hanley's (Timothy) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Hanlon's (Joseph) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Hannum's (Josiah C.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 28th Battery.
- Hardwicke's (William W.) Artillery. See Lee Artillery, post.
- Harper's (John) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 95th and 96th Regiments.
- Harris' (Enon M.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Colored, Company A.

- Harris' (Leonard A.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 137th Regiment.
- Harrison's (Charles J.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Harrison's (William H.) Cavalry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment.
- Hart's (Alexander) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Hart's (Thompson D.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 104th Regiment.
- Hart's (William T.) Engineers. See Confederate Troops, Regulars, 3d Regiment.
- Haslett's (John R.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 197th Regiment.
- Hasson's (Benjamin F.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 22d Regiment.
- Hastings' (Matthew) Artillery. See Keystone Artillery, post.
- Hastings' (Smith H.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Hatch's (Charles H.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Haurand's (August) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Hawkins' (Hamilton S.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 6th Regiment.
- Haynes' (Charles L.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 27th Regiment.
- Healy's (John G.) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Heaton's (Edward) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Batteries B and L.
- Hebble's (Christain B.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops.
- Heine's (Charles) Artillery. See Michigan Troops, 14th Battery.
- Heine's (William) Infantry. See New York Troops, 103d Regiment.
- Heiskell's (Felix) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 13th Regiment.
- Henagan's (John W.) Infantry. See South Carolina Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Henry's (William W.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Hensley's (William B.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 45th Battalion.
- Hickman's (Baynton J.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 49th Regiment.
- Higginbotham's (John C.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 25th Regiment.
- Higinbotham's (Thomas H.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 65th Regiment.
- Hill's (Joseph C.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 6th Regiment.
- Hill's (Lewis H.) Infantry. See Alabama Troops, 61st Regiment.
- Hill's (Wallace) Artillery. See West Virginia Troops, Battery C.
- Hinkson's (Hezekiah) Artillery. See Indiana Troops, 17th Battery.
- Hobbs' (Joshua E.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 64th Regiment.
- Hobson's (E. La Fayette) Infantry. See Alabama Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Hoffman's (John J.) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Hoffman's (John S.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 31st Regiment.
- Hoge's (George W.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 126th Regiment.
- Holliday's (Frederick W. M.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 33d Regiment.
- Holliday's (John W.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 15th Regiment.
- Holman's (Charles) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 5th Regiment, Battery B.
- Holt's (Erastus D.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 49th Regiment.
- Holt's (Willis C.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Horn's (John W.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 6th Regiment.
- Horton's (Giles G.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 16th Regiment.
- Hospital Guards, Infantry. See Rhode Island Troops.
- Houghton's (George C.) Infantry. See Martin Guards, Infantry, post.
- Howrigan's (Thomas W.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Hoyt's (James J.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 156th Regiment.
- Hubbard's (Thomas H.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 30th Regiment.
- Hufty's (Baldwin) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Hull's (John) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 116th Regiment.
- Hull's (Walter C.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 2d Regiment (Harris Light).
- Humphreys' (John M.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 52d Regiment.
- Hunsdon's (Charles) Heavy Artillery. See Vermont Troops, 1st Regiment.

- Hunt's (Lucius T.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Hutchinson's (Thomas P.) Infantry. See Coast Guard, Infantry, ante.
- Ilsley's (Edwin) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Irish's (Nathaniel) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, Battery F.
- Ives' (Brayton) Cavalry. See Connecticut Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Jackson's (Daniel D.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 121st Regiment.
- Jackson's (Lyman J.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 159th Regiment.
- Jackson's (Thomas E.) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- James' (Leroy C.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 58th Regiment.
- Jameson's (James B.) Cavalry. See Union Light Guard, Cavalry, post.
- Janeway's (Jacob J.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Jeff. Davis Artillery. See Alabama Troops.
- Jennings' (Isaac A.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 15th Unattached Company.
- Jennings' (John S.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 21st Regiment.
- Johnson's (Charles F.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 18th Regiment.
- Johnson's (Enoch E.) Infantry. See *Vermont Troops, 2d and 5th* Regiments*.
- Johnson's (William H.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 1st Battery.
- Johnston's (James) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 12th Regiment.
- Johnston's (Louis M.) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, Battery I.
- Johnston's (Philip Preston) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Johnston's (Robert E.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 9th Regiment.
- Johnston's (Robert S.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Jones' (Abram) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 1st Regiment (Lincoln).
- Jones' (Edward S.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Jones' (Edward W.) Heavy Artillery. See Connecticut Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Jones' (Joseph) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 14th Regiment.
- Keene's (John R.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 1st Regiment, E. S.
- Keller's (David C.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 93d Regiment.
- Kellogg's (Horace) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 123d Regiment.
- Kempf's (Charles W.) Infantry. See Wisconsin Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Kenan's (Thomas S.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 43d Regiment.
- Kendall's (Thomas C.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 46th Company.
- Kennington's (James) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 11th Regiment.
- Kenny's (Alexander J.) Infantry. See Indiana Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Keyes' (Daniel M.) Cavalry. See Loudoun Rangers, Cavalry, post.
- Keystone Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops.
- Kidd's (James H.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Kimball's (Hiram A.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 151st Regiment.
- Kimball's (William K.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Kincheloe's (James C.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- King's (Rufus, jr.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 4th Regiment, Battery A.
- King William Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Kinney's (Edwin R.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Kirkpatrick's (Thomas J.) Artillery. See Amherst Artillery, ante.
- Kirtland's (George P.) Artillery. See Ohio Troops, 1st Battery.
- Kitching's (J. Howard) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Kleiser's (Alfred von) Artillery. See New York Troops, 30th Battery.
- Knap's (Joseph M.) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, 1st Battalion.
- Knight's (Napoleon B.) Cavalry. See Delaware Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Knowlton's (William) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 29th Regiment.

* Temporarily commanding.

- Kohler's (John B.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 98th Regiment.
- Krom's (Abram H.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Kusserow's (Charles) Artillery. See New York Troops, 32d Battery.
- Lafayette Artillery. See New Hampshire Troops.
- Laing's (John K.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Lamar's (John H.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 61st Regiment.
- Lamb's (Jacob H.) Artillery. See Rhode Island Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery C.
- Lambert's (Bruce) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops.
- Landstreet's (William T.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 11th Regiment.
- Larned's (Frank H.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Batteries H and K.
- Latimer's (Alfred E.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 11th Regiment.
- Lazelle's (Henry M.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 16th Regiment.
- Lee Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Lee's (Richard H.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 1st Regiment, Militia.
- Leiper's (Charles L.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Lessig's (William H.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 96th Regiment.
- Levi's (John T.) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Lewis' (Charles) Infantry. See New York Troops, 176th Regiment.
- Lewis' (George N.) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Lewis' (James) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion.
- Lightfoot's (James N.) Infantry. See Alabama Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Linton's (John P.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 54th Regiment.
- Little's (Thomas J.) Heavy Artillery. See Massachusetts Troops, 1st Battalion, Battery D.
- Lobban's (John G.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 49th Regiment.
- Long's (Charles H.) Heavy Artillery. See New Hampshire Troops, 1st Company.
- Long's (John S.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 93d Regiment.
- Loudoun Rangers, Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Union.
- Love's (George M.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 116th Regiment.
- Love's (James R., jr.) Infantry. See William H. Thomas' Legion, post.
- Lowe's (John G.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 131st Regiment.
- Lowe's (John H.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 31st Regiment.
- Lowry's (William M.) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Lurty's (Warren S.) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Lusk's (Thurlow W.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 1st Regiment.
- McAfee's (John) Artillery. See Illinois Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery L.
- McAteer's (Patrick H.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Macauley's (Daniel) Infantry. See Indiana Troops, 11th Regiment.
- McCarthy's (Charles) Infantry. See New York Troops, 175th Regiment.
- McCartney's (William H.) Artillery. See Massachusetts Troops, 1st (A) Battery.
- McClanahan's (J. H.) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- McClennan's (Matthew R.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 138th Regiment.
- McClung's (Hugh L. W.) Artillery. See Tennessee Troops, Confederate.
- McCutchen's (J. S. Kerr) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 31st Regiment.
- McElrath's (Thomson P.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 5th Regiment.
- McFarland's (Moses) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 8th Regiment.
- McGee's (John L.) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 3d Regiment.
- McGlashan's (Peter) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 50th Regiment.
- McGowan's (Thomas S.) Infantry. See Patapsco Guards, Infantry, post.
- McGregor's (James) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 139th Regiment.
- McIntire's (Samuel B.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Batteries B and L.
- McKendry's (Archibald) Cavalry. See Massachusetts Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Mackenzie's (Ranald S.) Heavy Artillery. See Connecticut Troops, 2d Regiment.

- McKillip's (Archibald W.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 1st Battalion, 228th Company.
- McKinley's (Norval) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 2d Regiment, P. H. B.
- McKnight's (James) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 5th Regiment, Battery M.
- McLaughlin's (George H.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 153d Regiment.
- McLaughlin's (Thomas) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 102d Regiment.
- McMillan's (John C.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 30th Regiment.
- McNeill's (John H.) Partisans. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- McPherson's (James A.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 16th Regiment.
- Marcy's (George O.) Cavalry. See Connecticut Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Marker's (Caleb) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 156th Regiment.
- Marsh's (John F.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 24th Regiment.
- Marston's (Oliver H.) Infantry. See New Hampshire Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Martin Guards, Infantry. See New Hampshire Troops.
- Martin's (Joseph W.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 6th Battery.
- Mason's (James M.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 19th Unattached Company.
- Massie's (John L.) Artillery. See Fluvanna Artillery, ante.
- Mathews' (James D.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 38th Regiment.
- Matthews' (Thomas) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 105th Company.
- May's (Lewis A.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 138th Regiment.
- Mead's (John B.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Mercer's (John T.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 21st Regiment.
- Merritt's (Robert B.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 75th Regiment.
- Meyer's (John) Infantry. See Iowa Troops, 28th Regiment.
- Middleton's (Gabriel) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 20th Regiment.
- Miles' (William W.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Milledge's (John, jr.) Artillery. See Georgia Troops.
- Milligan's (Robert) Cavalry. See Delaware Troops.
- Milliken's (Charles A.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 43d Regiment.
- Miner's (Milton L.) Artillery. See Indiana Troops, 17th Battery.
- Mitchell's (William) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 108th Company.
- Mitzel's (Alexander von) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 74th Regiment.
- Monaghan's (William) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Monior's (Henry D.) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Monroe Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Montague's (George L.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 37th Regiment.
- Moore's (Alexander C.) Artillery. See West Virginia Troops, Battery E.
- Moore's (Alpheus S.) Cavalry. See Ohio Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Moore's (Caleb) Cavalry.* See New York Troops, 22d Regiment.
- Moore's (Shriver) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Morehouse's (John B.) Cavalry. See Connecticut Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Morgan's (John E.) Artillery. See West Virginia Troops, Battery H.
- Moriarty's (David P.) Infantry. See Illinois Troops, 23d Regiment.
- Morris Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Morris' (John B.) Infantry. See District of Columbia Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Morse's (Henry B.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 114th Regiment.
- Morse's (Llewellyn J.) Infantry. See State Guards Militia, Infantry, post.
- Morton's (John E.) Artillery. See Maine Troops, 1st Battery.
- Mosby's (John S.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 43d Battalion.
- Munk's (William) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery D.

* Temporarily commanding.

- Munroe's (Robert) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 139th Regiment.
- Murchison's (Kenneth M.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 54th Regiment.
- Murphy's (John K.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 131st Company.
- Nadenbousch's (John Q. A.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 2d Regiment.
- Nagle's (James) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 194th Regiment.
- Neafie's (Alfred) Infantry. See New York Troops, 156th Regiment.
- Neff's (Harmanus) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 196th Regiment.
- Nesmith's (John H.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Nettleton's (A. Bayard) Cavalry. See Ohio Troops, 2d Regiment.
- New York 1st Dragoons, Cavalry. See New York Troops, 19th Regiment.
- Nichols' (George S.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Niebuhr's (Caleb E.) Heavy Artillery. See Massachusetts Troops, 1st Battalion, Battery B.
- Norris' (Hardman P.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 1st Regiment, Batteries A and F.
- Northcott's (Robert S.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Nye's (George H.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 29th Regiment.
- O'Boyle's (Michael) Infantry. See New York Troops, 69th Regiment, Militia.
- O'Connell's (John D.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 14th Regiment.
- Olcott's (Egbert) Infantry. See New York Troops, 121st Regiment.
- Orange Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Over's (Ewald) Infantry. See Exempts' Battalion, Infantry, ante.
- Owens' (William A.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 53d Regiment.
- Palmer's (Frederic S.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 6th Regiment.
- Palmer's (Thomas H.) Heavy Artillery. See Maine Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Parker's (Francis M.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 30th Regiment.
- Parker's (Samuel) Infantry. See New York Troops, 106th Regiment.
- Parnell's (William R.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Parr's (John G.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 139th Regiment.
- Patapsco Guards, Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union.
- Patchell's (James) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 102d Regiment.
- Patton's (James C.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 21st Regiment.
- Payne's (Nathaniel) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Payne's (William H.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 37th Battalion.
- Peabody's (Oliver D.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 55th Company.
- Peach's (Benjamin F., jr.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 8th Regiment, Militia.
- Peale's (Henry) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 18th Regiment.
- Pease's (Harry) Cavalry.* See Ohio Troops, 3d Company.
- Peck's (Frank H.) Infantry. See Connecticut Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Peck's (John W.) Infantry. See District of Columbia Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Peck's (William R.) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Peebles' (William H.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 44th Regiment.
- Peirce's (Charles H.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Batteries B and L.
- Peirson's (George H.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 5th Regiment, Militia.
- Pendleton County Home Guards. See West Virginia Troops.
- Pendleton's (Edmund) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 15th Regiment.

* Temporarily commanding.

- Pendleton's (Samuel H.) Artillery. See Morris Artillery, ante.
- Penn's (Davidson B.) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 7th Regiment.
- Pennington's (Alexander C. M., jr.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Battery M.
- Penrose's (James W.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 15th Regiment.
- Per Lee's (Samuel R.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 114th Regiment.
- Peters' (William E.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 21st Regiment.
- Petrie's (Peter B.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 2d Regiment, P. H. B.
- Pettit's (Rufus D.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 12th Regiment.
- Philadelphia City Scouts, Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops.
- Phillips' (John W.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 18th Regiment.
- Phillips Legion. See Georgia Troops.
- Pickens' (Samuel B.) Infantry. See Alabama Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Pierce's (Lewis B.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Pinckard's (William E.) Infantry. See Alabama Troops, 61st Regiment.
- Platner's (John S.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 1st Regiment (Veteran).
- Polk's (John R.) Infantry. See Indiana Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Porter's (Francis E.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 2d Unattached Company.
- Porter's (G. Ellis) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 2d Regiment, P. H. B.
- Porter's (Thomas W.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Potter's (Andrew) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 34th Regiment.
- Potts' (Peter J.) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Prados' (Louis) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Pratt's (Harrison W.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 34th Regiment.
- Prentiss' (Clifton K.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 6th Regiment.
- Prevost's (Charles M.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 16th Regiment.
- Pugh's (Samuel B.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 161st Regiment.
- Purington's (George A.) Cavalry. See Ohio Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Quinn's (Timothy) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 1st Regiment (Lincoln).
- Ramsay's (James R.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops.
- Randall's (Francis J.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 95th and 96th Regiments.
- Randall's (George W.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 30th Regiment.
- Rank's (William D.) Heavy Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, 3d Regiment, Battery H.
- Rankin's (William S.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 21st Regiment.
- Ransom's (Dunbar R.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 3d Regiment, Batteries C, F, and K.
- Reese's (William J.) Artillery. See Jeff. Davis Artillery, ante.
- Reilly's (Terrence) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 4th Regiment, Batteries C and E.
- Rexford's (Willie M.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 131st Regiment.
- Reynolds' (Charles) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 118th and 119th Companies.
- Rhett Artillery. See Tennessee Troops, Confederate.
- Rhodes' (Elisha H.) Infantry. See Rhode Island Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Richardson's (Edmund) Infantry. See Michigan Troops, 26th Regiment.
- Richardson's (Robert M.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 15th Regiment.
- Riddle's (Samuel) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, 1st Battalion.
- Rigby's (James H.) Artillery. See Maryland Troops, Union, Battery A.
- Ringgold Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 22d Regiment.
- Ripley's (Theodore A.) Infantry. See New Hampshire Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Roberts' (Horatio) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 143d Company.

- Roberts' (William P.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Colored, 127th Regiment.
- Robertson's (Claude S.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 10th Regiment.
- Robertson's (Peter) Infantry. See New York Troops, 106th Regiment.
- Robeson's (William P., jr.) Cavalry. See New Jersey Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Rodenbough's (Theophilus F.) Cavalry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment.
- Rodgers' (Robert S.) Infantry. See Maryland Troops, Union, 2d Regiment, E. S.
- Rogers' (George W.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 173d Regiment.
- Rogers' (Joab B.) Cavalry. See Connecticut Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Rosney's (Andrew) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery D.
- Ross' (P. D.) Infantry. See Alabama Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Ruhl's (Edgar M.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 87th Regiment.
- Russell's (Edward J.) Heavy Artillery. See Massachusetts Troops, 15th Unattached Company.
- Russell's (Milton) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 60th Regiment.
- Rust's (Henry, jr.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 13th Regiment.
- Rutherford's (Allan) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 22d Regiment.
- Ryer's (B. Franklin) Artillery. See New York Troops, 20th Battery.
- Salsbury's (John A.) Infantry.* See Pennsylvania Troops, 87th Regiment.
- Sanno's (Edward B.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops.
- Sargent's (John) Cavalry. See Illinois Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Sargent's (Lorenzo D.) Cavalry. See Massachusetts Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Schall's (John W.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 87th Regiment.
- Schneider's (Joseph) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 16th Regiment.
- Schwartz's (Edward) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Scott's (Henry D.) Artillery. See Massachusetts Troops, 16th Battery.
- Scott's (Rufus) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 19th Regiment.
- Seymour's (Charles J.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 25th Regiment.
- Sharp's (Eliphalet F.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 61st Regiment.
- Shaurman's (Nelson) Infantry. See New York Troops, 90th Regiment.
- Shaw's (James W.) Cavalry. See Ohio Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Shipley's (Samuel D.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 30th Regiment.
- Shivers' (William R.) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 1st Regiment, Volunteers.
- Shoemaker's (John J.) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Showalter's (John H.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Simison's (Samuel A.) Infantry. See Illinois Troops, 23d Regiment.
- Simpson's (James L.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 11th Regiment.
- Skinner's (Benjamin M.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Skinner's (James H.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 52d Regiment.
- Slack's (Hedgeman) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 7th Regiment.
- Smith's (George W. P.) Cavalry. See Maryland Troops, Union.
- Smith's (Howard M.) Cavalry. See New York Troops, 19th Regiment.
- Smith's (Robert S.) Cavalry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment.
- Smith's (S. Crawford) Engineers. See Pennsylvania Troops.
- Snow's (Alonzo) Artillery. See Maryland Troops, Union, Battery B.
- Snow's (John S.) Artillery. See Maine Troops, 1st Battery.
- Snyder's (James W.) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 9th Regiment.
- Soule's (Lewis) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 20th Unattached Company.
- South's (Zedekiah) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 153d Regiment.
- Spangler's (Aaron) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 110th Regiment.
- Spear's (Vivian K.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 95th Company.
- Spear's (Wallace M.) Heavy Artillery. See Wisconsin Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery A.

* Temporarily commanding.

- Spence's (Beldin) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery G.
- Spera's (Weidner H.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 17th Regiment.
- Sperry's (William J.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Stafford Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Stagg's (Peter) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Starr's (James) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 6th Regiment.
- State Guards Militia, Infantry. See Maine Troops.
- Staunton Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Stedman's (Joseph) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 42d Regiment.
- Stevens' (Greenleaf T.) Artillery. See Maine Troops, 5th Battery.
- Stevenson's (Robert) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 154th Regiment.
- Stewart's (Charles) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 1st Battalion.
- Stiles' (William H., sr.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 60th Regiment.
- Stocking's (Solon W.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery K.
- Strain's (Alexander) Infantry. See New York Troops, 153d Regiment.
- Stratton's (Edward L.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 51st Company.
- Stroud's (George D.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops.
- Suter's (John) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 54th Regiment.
- Sutherland's (Robert J.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 2d Battalion, 71st Company.
- Suydam's (Charles C.) Cavalry. See New Jersey Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Sweitzer's (Nelson B.) Cavalry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 1st Regiment.
- Taft's (Elijah D.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 5th Battery.
- Taggart's (George W.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Taliaferro's (Alexander G.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 23d Regiment.
- Tanner's (William A.) Artillery. See Courtney Artillery, ante.
- Tarbell's (Joel H.) Artillery. See Lafayette Artillery, ante.
- Tarbell's (Jonathan) Infantry. See New York Troops, 91st Regiment.
- Tay's (Charles H.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Taylor's (David J.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 61st Regiment.
- Taylor's (Franck E.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 1st Regiment, Batteries K and L.
- Taylor's (Joseph) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 1st Regiment, Volunteers.
- Tennessee (Confederate) First Cavalry. See James E. Carter's Cavalry, ante.
- Terrill's (James B.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 13th Regiment.
- Terry's (Thomas M.) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 7th Regiment.
- Terry's (William) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 4th Regiment.
- Teters' (Wilbert B.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 116th Regiment.
- Thomas' (Edwin) Heavy Artillery. See Massachusetts Troops, 3d Unattached Company.
- Thomas' (Stephen) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Thomas' (William B.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 192d Regiment.
- Thomas' (William H.) Legion. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate.
- Thompson's (Francis W.) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 6th Regiment.
- Thompson's (James) Artillery. See Pennsylvania Troops, Battery C.
- Thompson's (John L.) Cavalry. See New Hampshire Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Thomson's (James W.) Artillery. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Thomson's (William H.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 1st and 3d Regiments.
- Thorn's (Edward) Infantry. See Union Troops, Colored, 45th Regiment.
- Thruston's (Stephen D.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 3d Regiment.
- Thurber's (Benjamin F.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 75th Regiment.
- Thurmond's (Philip J.) Partisans. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.

- Thurmond's (William D.) Partisans. See Virginia Troops, Confederate.
- Thyng's (George P.) Heavy Artillery. See New Hampshire Troops, 2d Company.
- Todd's (Rutherford P.) Infantry. See South Carolina Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Tolman's (Flavel L.) Infantry. See New Hampshire Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Tomlinson's (Abia A.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 5th Regiment.
- Toon's (Thomas F.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 20th Regiment.
- Tracy's (Amasa S.) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Tremain's (Alfred F.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 30th Regiment.
- Trotter's (Frederick E.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 1st Regiment.
- Turner's (Alfred L.) Infantry. See Maine Troops, 29th Regiment.
- Turner's (William H., jr.) Cavalry. See Rhode Island Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Underhill's (Henry P.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 160th Regiment.
- Union Light Guard, Cavalry. See Ohio Troops.
- Urban's (Caspar) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 5th Regiment, 2d Battalion.
- Urban's (Gustavus) Cavalry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 5th Regiment.
- Vandeventer's (Alexander S.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 50th Regiment.
- Van Etten's (Orsamus R.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 1st Battery.
- Van Patten's (Volkert V.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 43d Regiment.
- Van Petten's (John B.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 160th Regiment.
- Voorhes' (George W.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 126th Regiment.
- Vredenburgh's (Peter, jr.) Infantry. See New Jersey Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Waggaman's (Eugene) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Waite's (John M.) Cavalry. See Illinois Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Walcott's (William H.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 17th Regiment.
- Wales' (Elijah) Infantry. See Vermont Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Walker's (Aldace F.) Heavy Artillery. See Vermont Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Wallen's (Henry D.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 7th Regiment.
- Waltermire's (William) Infantry. See New York Troops, 159th Regiment.
- Warner's (James M.) Heavy Artillery. See Vermont Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Warren's (Edward M.) Cavalry. See Pennsylvania Troops.
- Warren's (Edward T. H.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 10th Regiment.
- Washburn's (Henry D.) Infantry. See Indiana Troops, 18th Regiment.
- Washburn's (James) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 116th Regiment.
- Washburne's (George A.) Infantry. See Union Troops, Veteran Reserve Corps, 20th Regiment.
- Wass' (Ansel D.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 60th Regiment.
- Waterman's (Richard) Artillery. See Rhode Island Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery C.
- Webb's (Robert F.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 6th Regiment.
- Weddle's (Jacob) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Weir's (Gulian V.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 5th Regiment, Battery L.
- Weld's (Horace N.) Cavalry. See Massachusetts Troops, 5th Regiment, Colored.
- Wells' (Charles A.) Infantry.* See Union Troops, Colored, 31st Regiment.
- Wells' (Milton) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 15th Regiment.
- Wells' (William) Cavalry. See Vermont Troops, 1st Regiment.
- West's (Owen) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 149th Regiment.
- Wetherill's (John M.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 82d Regiment.
- Wettstein's (Andrew) Infantry. See New York Troops, 103d Regiment.
- Wharton's (Rufus W.) Sharpshooters. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 1st Battalion.

* Temporarily commanding.

- Wharton's (W. Woodson) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 45th Regiment.
- Wheeler's (William H.) Cavalry. See Michigan Troops, 1st Regiment.
- Whitaker's (Edward W.) Cavalry. See Connecticut Troops, 1st Regiment.
- White's (Elijah V.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 35th Battalion.
- White's (Robert) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 41st Battalion.
- Whitener's (B. M.) Infantry. See South Carolina Troops, 3d Battalion.
- Whittier's (Francis H.) Infantry. See Massachusetts Troops, 30th Regiment.
- Wildes' (Thomas F.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 116th Regiment.
- Wildrick's (Abram C.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 3d Regiment, Battery I.
- Wilds' (John Q.) Infantry. See Iowa Troops, 24th Regiment.
- Wiles' (Browning N.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 151st Regiment.
- Wilkie's (Frederick C.) Heavy Artillery. See New York Troops, 5th Regiment, 2d Battalion.
- Williams' (Constant) Infantry. See Union Troops, Regulars, 7th Regiment.
- Williams' (Jesse M.) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 2d Regiment.
- Williams' (Titus V.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 37th Regiment.
- Willis' (Edward) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 12th Regiment.
- Willis' (William H.) Infantry. See Georgia Troops, 4th Regiment.
- Williston's (Edward B.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Battery D.
- Wilson's (Bartholomew W.) Infantry. See Iowa Troops, 28th Regiment.
- Wilson's (James E.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Battery G.
- Wilson's (R. E.) Sharpshooters. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 1st Battalion.
- Wilson's (Robert) Infantry. See New Hampshire Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Wilson's (William R.) Artillery. See New York Troops, 1st Regiment, Battery F.
- Wilson's (William T.) Infantry. See Ohio Troops, 123d Regiment.
- Winston's (John R.) Infantry. See North Carolina Troops, Confederate, 43d and 45th Regiments.
- Witcher's (John S.) Cavalry. See West Virginia Troops, 3d Regiment.
- Witcher's (Vincent A.) Cavalry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 34th Battalion.
- Witcher's (William A.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 21st Regiment.
- Withers' (Henry H.) Infantry. See West Virginia Troops, 10th Regiment.
- Withers' (Robert W.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 42d Regiment.
- Wolcott's (John A.) Infantry. See New York Troops, 151st Regiment.
- Woodruff's (Carle A.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 2d Regiment, Battery M.
- Woodson's (Blake L.) Infantry. See Virginia Troops, Confederate, 45th Battalion.
- Wright's (Edward) Infantry. See Iowa Troops, 24th Regiment.
- York's (Zebulon) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 14th Regiment.
- Youart's (Robert) Cavalry. See Ohio Troops, 8th Regiment.
- Young's (John F.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 67th Regiment.
- Young's (Lewis L.) Artillery. See Union Troops, Regulars, 3d Regiment, Battery G.
- Yutzy's (Enoch D.) Infantry. See Pennsylvania Troops, 54th Regiment.
- Zable's (David) Infantry. See Louisiana Troops, 14th Regiment.

INDEX.

Brigades, Divisions, Corps, Armies, and improvised organizations are "Mentioned" under name of commanding officer; State and other organizations under their official designation. (See Alternate Designations, pp. 1033-1048.)

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Page.                                       |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------|
| Abbott, George E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 331                                         |
| Abbott, Lemuel A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 243                                         |
| Abbott, Robert O. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 979                                         |
| Abraham's Creek, near Winchester, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 13, 1864. SeeShenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Conner, James. Sheridan, Philip H. Wilson, James H.   McIntosh, John B. Torbert, Alfred T. A.   |                                             |
| Adams, Major. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 570                                         |
| Adams, George M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 540                                         |
| Adams, George W.Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 108, 127, 152, 154, 157, 226, 271, 272, 985 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 277                                         |
| Adams, James F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 550                                         |
| Adams, Seymour F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 620, 788                                    |
| For correspondence as A. D. C., see Max Weber .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                             |
| Adamstown, Md. Skirmish at, Oct. 14, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 2                                           |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.Correspondence withAverell, William W .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 493                                         |
| Couch, Darius N .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 737, 756, 774, 821, 840, 855                |
| Devin, Thomas C .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 474                                         |
| Dix, John A .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 809                                         |
| Hunter, David .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 698                                         |
| Maryland, Governor of .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 755                                         |
| Merritt, Wesley .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 452                                         |
| Pennsylvania, Governor of .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 755                                         |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 60                                          |
| Stevenson, John D .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 836, 966                                    |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 750, 773                                    |
| Orders, General, series 1864: No. 240 , 719; No. 248 , 962; No. 282 , 62.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |                                             |
| Orders, Special, series 1864: No. 266 , 768; No. 268 , 781; No. 271 , 807;No. 273 , 826; No. 279 , 899; No. 284 , 954; No. 287 , 971.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |                                             |
| Orders, General, series 1865: No. 20 , 63.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                             |
| Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A.Correspondence withEchols, John .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 1010                                        |
| Lee, Robert E .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 635                                         |
| Ransom, Robert, jr .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1003                                        |
| Sale, John B .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1004                                        |
| War Department, C. S. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 991                                         |
| Orders, Special, series 1864: No. 188 , 993; No. 193 , 1000; No. 197 , 1001;No. 198 , 1005.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                             |

|                                                                                           | Page                                                                                     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Adney, William H. G. Mentioned .....                                               | 110, 129                                                                                 |
| Aikens, Joseph P. Mentioned .....                                                  | 211                                                                                      |
| Alabama Troops. Mentioned. (Confederate.)                                          |                                                                                          |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : Jeff. Davis , 567.                            |                                                                                          |
| Infantry— Regiments : 3d, 5th, 6th, 12th, 61st , 564, 1002, 1013.           |                                                                                          |
| Albright, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                 | 618                                                                                      |
| Alcorn, Jeremiah. Mentioned .....                                                  | 980                                                                                      |
| Alexander, Barton S. Mentioned .....                                               | 51-53                                                                                    |
| Alexander, Charles M. Mentioned .....                                              | 977                                                                                      |
| Alexander, Frederic W. Mentioned .....                                             | 982                                                                                      |
| Alexander, H. Eugene. Mentioned .....                                              | 624                                                                                      |
| Alexander, James H. Mentioned .....                                                | 1032                                                                                     |
| Alexander, William. Mentioned .....                                                | 815                                                                                      |
| Alger, Russell A. Mentioned .....                                                  | 466, 986                                                                                 |
| Allaire, Anthony J. Mentioned .....                                                | 109, 127, 985                                                                            |
| Allan, William. Mentioned .....                                                    | 576, 579, 584, 585, 588, 992                                                             |
| Allen, Charles F.                                                                  |                                                                                          |
| Mentioned .....                                                                           | 109, 128, 326, 340, 343, 345, 986                                                        |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                          | 343                                                                                      |
| Allen, Crawford, jr. Mentioned .....                                               | 976                                                                                      |
| Allen, Smith. Mentioned .....                                                      | 541                                                                                      |
| Allen, Weston E. Mentioned .....                                                   | 257                                                                                      |
| Allen, William J. Mentioned .....                                                  | 978                                                                                      |
| Allstrom, John V. Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 ..... | 536                                                                                      |
| Allyn, Robert. Mentioned .....                                                     | 484                                                                                      |
| Ambruster, Julius. Mentioned .....                                                 | 232, 239, 240                                                                            |
| Amelunxen, Max von. Mentioned .....                                                | 980                                                                                      |
| Amidon, George H. Mentioned .....                                                  | 210                                                                                      |
| Anderson, Lieutenant. Mentioned .....                                              | 406                                                                                      |
| Anderson, Charles E. Mentioned .....                                               | 797                                                                                      |
| Anderson, Charles R. Mentioned .....                                               | 109, 128, 343, 345                                                                       |
| Anderson, George T. Mentioned .....                                                | 952, 953                                                                                 |
| Anderson, James W. Mentioned .....                                                 | 1003                                                                                     |
| Anderson, Joseph. Mentioned .....                                                  | 619                                                                                      |
| Anderson, Richard H.                                                               |                                                                                          |
| Correspondence with                                                                       |                                                                                          |
| Early, Jubal A. ....                                                                      | 1001, 1007                                                                               |
| Lee, Fitzhugh .....                                                                       | 1005, 1007-1009                                                                          |
| Lee, Robert E. ....                                                                       | 995, 997                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                           | 10, 21, 24, 569-573, 604, 844, 905, 910, 912, 990, 996, 997, 1005, 1006, 1016, 1024-1027 |
| Andrew, John A. For correspondence, etc., see Massachusetts, Governor of .  |                                                                                          |
| Andrews, George L. Mentioned .....                                                 | 989                                                                                      |
| Andrews, John N. Mentioned .....                                                   | 520                                                                                      |
| Andrews, Joseph F. Mentioned .....                                                 | 978                                                                                      |
| Annandale, Va. Skirmish at, Aug. 24, 1864.                                         |                                                                                          |
| Communications from                                                                       |                                                                                          |
| Augur, Christopher C .....                                                                | 897, 899, 900                                                                            |
| De Russy, Gustavus A. ....                                                                | 900                                                                                      |
| Lazelle, Henry M. ....                                                                    | 900-902                                                                                  |
| Wells, Henry H. ....                                                                      | 899                                                                                      |
| Reports of                                                                                |                                                                                          |
| Schneider, Joseph .....                                                                   | 638                                                                                      |
| Wells, Henry H. ....                                                                      | 637                                                                                      |

|                                                                                                                                                                                   | Page.                                                                                                                           |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Antietam Ford, Md. Skirmish at, Aug. 4, 1864. Communications from                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                 |
| Howe, Albion P .....                                                                                                                                                              | 685, 687                                                                                                                        |
| Hunter, David .....                                                                                                                                                               | 684                                                                                                                             |
| Sinclair, William .....                                                                                                                                                           | 686                                                                                                                             |
| Arago, Steamer. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                            | 860                                                                                                                             |
| Arden, G. De Peyster. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                      | 976                                                                                                                             |
| Armies of the United States. Recommendation for promotions in. Communication from U. S. Grant .....                                                                        | 767                                                                                                                             |
| Arms, Ammunition, etc. See Munitions of War .                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                 |
| Army Corps, 6th.                                                                                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                 |
| Bidwell, Daniel D., assigned to command of 3d Brigade, 2d Division of...                                                                                                          | 920                                                                                                                             |
| Itineraries. Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                               | 63–75                                                                                                                           |
| Army Corps, 8th. See Middle Department .                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                 |
| Army Corps, 19th. Itineraries. Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                      | 75–81                                                                                                                           |
| Army Corps, 22d. See Washington, Department of .                                                                                                                    |                                                                                                                                 |
| Army Transportation. See Munitions of War .                                                                                                                         |                                                                                                                                 |
| Ashbrook, Oscar A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                         | 249, 258                                                                                                                        |
| Ashby, Turner. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                             | 249                                                                                                                             |
| Ashby, William A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                          | 249                                                                                                                             |
| Atkinson, Charles W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                       | 402, 407                                                                                                                        |
| Atkinson, Edmund N. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                        | 1003, 1011, 1012                                                                                                                |
| Atkinson, Lewis A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                         | 402                                                                                                                             |
| Atwell, Charles M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                         | 636, 881                                                                                                                        |
| Augur, Christopher C.                                                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                 |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                               |                                                                                                                                 |
| Barnes, James .....                                                                                                                                                               | 637, 845                                                                                                                        |
| De Russy, Gustavus A .....                                                                                                                                                        | 872, 900                                                                                                                        |
| Downey, James M .....                                                                                                                                                             | 776                                                                                                                             |
| Fry, William H .....                                                                                                                                                              | 832                                                                                                                             |
| Gamble, William .....                                                                                                                                                             | 861, 942                                                                                                                        |
| Gansevoort, Henry S .....                                                                                                                                                         | 832, 845                                                                                                                        |
| Grant, U. S .....                                                                                                                                                                 | 727                                                                                                                             |
| Grover, Cuvier .....                                                                                                                                                              | 778                                                                                                                             |
| Halleck, Henry W .....                                                                                                                                                            | 727, 776, 793, 860, 861                                                                                                         |
| Hardin, Martin D .....                                                                                                                                                            | 682                                                                                                                             |
| Kitching, J. Howard .....                                                                                                                                                         | 813                                                                                                                             |
| Lazelle, Henry M .....                                                                                                                                                            | 683, 684, 697, 721, 729, 742, 762, 777, 784, 785, 793, 801, 813, 862, 871–873, 882, 890, 900, 901, 910, 920, 933, 943, 955, 971 |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                                                                                                          | 727, 728, 740, 741, 761, 776, 831, 843, 859, 860, 871, 872, 889, 897, 898, 909, 910, 918, 919, 941                              |
| Taylor, Joseph H .....                                                                                                                                                            | 762                                                                                                                             |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A .....                                                                                                                                                        | 682                                                                                                                             |
| Waite, John M .....                                                                                                                                                               | 683, 697, 708, 729, 742, 793, 800, 823, 831, 844, 861, 862, 882, 919, 920, 942, 943, 954                                        |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                                                                                                                                | 879                                                                                                                             |
| Wells, Henry H .....                                                                                                                                                              | 683, 697, 709, 729, 742, 784, 813, 823, 832, 882, 899, 910, 963                                                                 |
| Wilson, James H .....                                                                                                                                                             | 730, 746, 779                                                                                                                   |
| Mentioned... 35, 51, 52, 55, 492, 501, 645, 709, 723, 729, 730, 739, 742, 746, 759, 768, 778, 779, 801, 808, 813, 831, 832, 840, 860, 861, 873, 899, 919, 920, 942, 955, 974, 975 |                                                                                                                                 |
| Reports of operations about Snicker's Gap, Va., Oct. 28–29, 1864, and skirmish at Upperville (29th) .....                                                                         | 646                                                                                                                             |
| Austin, Andrew Y. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                          | 405                                                                                                                             |

|                                                                                                                                                                           | Page.                        |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------|
| Averell, William W.                                                                                                                                                |                              |
| Congratulatory Orders. Engagement at Oldfields, near Moorefield, W. Va., Aug. 7, 1864.....                                                                                | 505                          |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                       |                              |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.....                                                                                                                                   | 493                          |
| Byers, John A.....                                                                                                                                                        | 781                          |
| Chipman, Norton P.....                                                                                                                                                    | 823, 858, 877                |
| Couch, Darius N.....                                                                                                                                                      | 797, 888, 894, 911           |
| Duffié, Alfred N.....                                                                                                                                                     | 688, 703                     |
| Gibson, Thomas.....                                                                                                                                                       | 771                          |
| Harrison, Henry N.....                                                                                                                                                    | 764                          |
| Hunter, David.....                                                                                                                                                        | 688, 713, 733, 734, 748      |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                                                                                                   | 688-                         |
| 692, 704, 713, 714, 734, 735, 748, 771, 781, 797, 804, 838, 937, 950, 967, 972                                                                                            |                              |
| Melvin, Thayer.....                                                                                                                                                       | 789, 804, 820                |
| Royall, William B.....                                                                                                                                                    | 771                          |
| Schoonmaker, James M.....                                                                                                                                                 | 771, 789, 797                |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                                                                                                   | 496, 501-505, 725, 764, 770, |
| 788, 804, 819, 820, 827, 836-838, 851, 867, 877, 893, 914, 925, 937, 958, 966, 972                                                                                        |                              |
| Stevenson, John D.....                                                                                                                                                    | 820, 828, 829, 836, 837, 850 |
| Thayer, Amos M.....                                                                                                                                                       | 926                          |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A.....                                                                                                                                                 | 502, 796, 827, 852, 903      |
| Wilson, James H.....                                                                                                                                                      | 925, 936                     |
| Witcher, John S.....                                                                                                                                                      | 853, 878                     |
| Work, George T.....                                                                                                                                                       | 714                          |
| Mentioned... 2, 3, 5, 7, 19-25, 29, 40, 45-49, 54, 60, 81, 84, 86, 87, 94, 97, 106, 111, 117, 124,                                                                        |                              |
| 148, 153, 258, 350, 421-429, 435, 436, 456, 457, 459, 470, 476, 478, 490, 492, 495,                                                                                       |                              |
| 505, 506, 516, 517, 568, 572, 578, 687, 688, 690, 694, 702, 703, 710, 712, 715, 719,                                                                                      |                              |
| 720, 724-726, 731, 733, 736, 738, 741, 748, 749, 752, 754, 759, 780, 781, 787, 789,                                                                                       |                              |
| 797, 798, 805, 812, 819, 823, 826-828, 830, 831, 834, 835, 837-839, 842, 848, 852,                                                                                        |                              |
| 853, 857-859, 864, 866-868, 870, 871, 875-878, 881, 888, 893, 894, 896, 904, 914,                                                                                         |                              |
| 917, 919, 922, 923, 934-938, 945, 951, 957, 959, 962, 968, 983, 991, 994, 1023, 1026                                                                                      |                              |
| Relieved from command of 2d Cavalry Division, Army of West Virginia .                                                                                                     | 505                          |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                          | 493, 495                     |
| Awl, F. Asbury. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                     | 979                          |
| Ayers, Henry K. W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                  | 979                          |
| Ayres, Conway W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                    | 119, 446, 482                |
| Babcock, Captain. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                   | 618                          |
| Babcock, Nathan S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                  | 219                          |
| Babcock, William J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                 | 190                          |
| Babcock, Willoughby. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                | 109, 119, 325, 326           |
| Back Road, near Strasburg, Va. Skirmish on, Oct. 7, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Lomax, p. 612; itinerary, p. 102. |                              |
| Bacon, William P.                                                                                                                                                  |                              |
| Correspondence with John B. McIntosh.....                                                                                                                                 | 849                          |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                            | 987                          |
| Bagley, James. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                      | 988                          |
| Bailey, ———. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                        | 673                          |
| Bailey, Ezra H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                     | 435                          |
| Baker, Eugene M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                    | 111, 130, 986                |
| Baker, John H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                      | 1003, 1012                   |
| Baker, Nathaniel B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                 | 350                          |

|                                                                                                                                                                          | Page.                                                                                           |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Baldwin, Briscoe G. Correspondence with Commanding Officer at Staunton, Va .....                                                                                  | 995                                                                                             |
| Baldwin, Henry M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 139, 278, 279                                                                                   |
| Baldwin, James H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 989                                                                                             |
| Ball, Edward. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                     | 566, 591                                                                                        |
| Ball, George A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                   | 550                                                                                             |
| Ball, William H.Mentioned .....                                                                                                                               | 108, 126,132, 224-227, 229, 230, 233, 234, 237, 246, 247, 249, 250, 256, 259, 261, 262, 985 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                        | 250, 260                                                                                        |
| Ballard, Frederick L. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                             | 369, 388, 389, 403                                                                              |
| Ballard, Thomas. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 630                                                                                             |
| Ballentine, James W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                              | 869                                                                                             |
| Barber, ———. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                      | 457                                                                                             |
| Barclay, Charles S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                               | 198                                                                                             |
| Bardwell, Charles S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                              | 119                                                                                             |
| Bargar, Gilbert H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                | 229, 262                                                                                        |
| Bariteau, Alexis W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                               | 147                                                                                             |
| Barker, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 976                                                                                             |
| Barker, James G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 402                                                                                             |
| Barley, George. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                   | 277                                                                                             |
| Barnes, Jack. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                     | 911                                                                                             |
| Barnes, James.Correspondence withAugur, Christopher C .....                                                                                               | 637, 845                                                                                        |
| Halleck, Henry W .....                                                                                                                                                   | 778                                                                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                          | 976                                                                                             |
| Barnes, John G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                   | 989                                                                                             |
| Barnes, William T. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                | 609                                                                                             |
| Barney, Friend H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 984                                                                                             |
| Barnhart, Levant W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                               | 459, 527                                                                                        |
| Barnum, U. S. S.Capture of, on Big Sandy River. See Kanawha Valley, W. Va. Witcher'sOperations in, Nov. 5-12, 1864, etc.Mentioned ..... | 650                                                                                             |
| Barr, Elias A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                    | 249, 258                                                                                        |
| Barr, Robert. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                     | 224, 230                                                                                        |
| Barrett, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                    | 138                                                                                             |
| Barry, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                      | 489                                                                                             |
| Bartholomee, Theodore M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                          | 736, 737, 781                                                                                   |
| Bartlett, Erastus G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                              | 110, 981                                                                                        |
| Bartley, James C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 198                                                                                             |
| Bartruff, Charles M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                              | 232                                                                                             |
| Bassett, Isaac C.Mentioned .....                                                                                                                              | 107, 112, 125                                                                                   |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                         | 188                                                                                             |
| Bates, James T. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                   | 979                                                                                             |
| Bates, Thomas H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 830, 980                                                                                        |
| Battle, Cullen A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 555, 564, 575, 598-602, 1002, 1011, 1013, 1015                                                  |
| Battle, Henry T. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 564                                                                                             |
| Bauer, Gottfried. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 126, 202                                                                                        |
| Baxter, Henry C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 208, 210, 211                                                                                   |
| Baybutt, Philip. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 550                                                                                             |
| Baylor, George. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                   | 674                                                                                             |

|                                                                                                                                              | Page                |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------|
| Beach, Henry. Mentioned.....                                                                                                          | 462                 |
| Beadle, William H. H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                  | 977                 |
| Beal, George L.                                                                                                                       |                     |
| Correspondence with William Dwight.....                                                                                                      | 825                 |
| Mentioned. 75, 108, 114, 121, 280, 281, 288-293, 297-299, 301-303, 311-314, 824, 962, 985                                                    |                     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                             | 311                 |
| Bean, Theodore W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                     | 480                 |
| Beardsley, ———. Mentioned .....                                                                                                       | 845                 |
| Beardsley, William E.                                                                                                                 |                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                               | 111, 474, 621, 986  |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                             | 484                 |
| Beaton, Charles H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                     | 331                 |
| Beaumont, Eugene B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                    | 520                 |
| Beauregard, G. T. Mentioned.....                                                                                                      | 737, 870            |
| Bechtel, Lafayette. Mentioned.....                                                                                                    | 649                 |
| Beck, James W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                         | 564                 |
| Beckhardt, Henry. Mentioned.....                                                                                                      | 278, 279            |
| Beger, Charles. Mentioned.....                                                                                                        | 976                 |
| Belding, John W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                       | 138                 |
| Benedict, Mitchell. Mentioned.....                                                                                                    | 305                 |
| Benjamin, William H.                                                                                                                  |                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                              | 111, 130, 519, 987  |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                             | 543                 |
| Bennett, George N. Mentioned.....                                                                                                     | 345                 |
| Bennett, John W.                                                                                                                      |                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                              | 130, 519, 525, 548  |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                              | 544                 |
| Bennett, R. Tyler. Mentioned .....                                                                                                    | 281, 1013           |
| Benton, George M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                      | 137                 |
| Benton, James G. Mentioned.....                                                                                                       | 976                 |
| Berry, Frederick M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                   | 118                 |
| Berry, Matthew. Mentioned.....                                                                                                        | 435, 509            |
| Berryville, Va.                                                                                                                       |                     |
| Affair at, Aug. 13, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Beardsley , p. 484; Gibbs , p. 489. |                     |
| Affair near, Sept. 13, 1864. Communications from                                                                                             |                     |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A .....                                                                                                                   | 531                 |
| Wilson, James H .....                                                                                                                        | 531                 |
| Engagement near, Sept. 3, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                      |                     |
| Duval, Isaac H.                                                                                                                              | Johnson, Daniel D.  |
| Hayes, Rutherford B.                                                                                                                         | Linton, John P.     |
| Holliday, John W.                                                                                                                            | Sheridan, Philip H. |
| Simms, James P.                                                                                                                              | Thoburn, Joseph.    |
| Also itineraries , pp. 83, 85; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 572. Sheridan to Averell , p. 504.                             |                     |
| Skirmishes at.                                                                                                                               |                     |
| Aug. 19, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Itinerary , p. 90.                                               |                     |
| Aug. 20, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Itineraries , pp. 90, 92.                                        |                     |
| Sept. 4, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                                       |                     |
| Deane, Charles W.                                                                                                                            | Sheridan, Philip H. |
|                                                                                                                                              | Stagg, Peter.       |
| Also journal of Hotchkiss , p. 572.                                                                                                   |                     |

Berryville, Va.—Continued.

Skirmishes near.

Aug. 21, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.Reports of

Lowell, Charles R., jr.

Sheridan, Philip H.

Wilson, James H.

Merritt, Wesley.

Sept. 14, 1864. See *Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.Itinerary, p. 79.Berryville and Winchester Pike, Va. Skirmish on. See *Opequon Creek, Va.Skirmish on Berryville and Winchester Pike near, Aug. 19, 1864.Beverly, W. Va. Action at, Oct. 29, 1864. Reports of

Wilkinson, Nathan..... 646, 647

Youart, Robert..... 648

Beverly, W. Va., Commanding Officer at. Correspondence with Nathan

Wilkinson..... 692

Bickmore, Charles S. Mentioned..... 138Bicknell, Benjamin F. Mentioned..... 118Bidwell, Daniel D.

Assignment to command..... 920

Mentioned..... 32, 54, 69, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 139, 151,
154, 191, 193–196, 199–201, 204, 208–212, 215, 217–221, 271, 276, 291, 920, 985

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864..... 212

Bier, Philip G. Mentioned..... 139, 363, 364, 366For correspondence as A. A. G., see David Hunter; also George Crook.Bierbower, Henry. Mentioned..... 331, 335Big Sandy River. Capture on, of U. S. steamers Barnum and Fawn. See*Kanawha Valley, W. Va. Witcher's Operations in, Nov. 5–12, 1864,* *etc.Binkley, Otho H.

Mentioned..... 108, 126, 224, 227, 229, 246, 249, 251, 270, 985

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign. Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864..... 258, 259

Birdseye, Mortimer B.

Mentioned..... 535

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864..... 538

Birge, Henry W.Mentioned..... 80, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 279–281, 289, 292, 298, 304, 318, 319, 321–323, 325, 327–331, 334, 342, 346–349, 351, 353, 355, 356, 358, 359, 986

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864..... 322, 325

Birge, Manning D. Mentioned..... 460, 467Birney, David B. Mentioned..... 791Bischoff, Eugene. Mentioned..... 327Bishop, John L. Mentioned..... 980Blacknall, Charles C. Mentioned..... 1013Blackwell, Joseph. (Citizen.) Mentioned..... 618Blackwell, Joseph. (Private.) Mentioned..... 540Blain, James S. Mentioned..... 1003Blair, Montgomery. Mentioned..... 682Blake, Charles G. Mentioned..... 382Blake, George A. H. Mentioned..... 979Blakely, William. Mentioned..... 685, 772, 797Blakeslee, Erastus. Mentioned..... 987Blanchard, Justus W. Mentioned..... 109, 127, 985Blanding, Christopher. Mentioned..... 989

|                                                                                            | Page.                        |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------|
| Blazer, Richard.                                                                    |                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                            | 23                           |
| Reports of Mosby's operations, Aug. 9-Oct. 14, 1864 .....                                  | 615                          |
| Blinn, Charles D. Mentioned .....                                                   | 109, 128                     |
| Bliss, James. Mentioned .....                                                       | 543, 544                     |
| Blondin, Dewitt C. Mentioned .....                                                  | 263                          |
| Blough, Henry J. Mentioned .....                                                    | 540                          |
| Blue, Richard W. Mentioned .....                                                    | 662                          |
| Blunt, John W. Mentioned .....                                                      | 479, 480                     |
| Board, Francis H. Mentioned .....                                                   | 1012                         |
| Board of Inquiry. Attack on Union supply train, Aug. 13, 1864.                      |                              |
| Communications from                                                                        |                              |
| Dean, William .....                                                                        | 622                          |
| Edwards, Oliver .....                                                                      | 621                          |
| Farrington, Preston M. ....                                                                | 622                          |
| Kenly, John R .....                                                                        | 620                          |
| McGonnigle, Andrew J .....                                                                 | 630                          |
| McKinney, Edward P .....                                                                   | 621                          |
| Detail for .....                                                                           | 619, 620                     |
| Finding of .....                                                                           | 632                          |
| Order convening .....                                                                      | 619                          |
| Proceedings of .....                                                                       | 620-632                      |
| Report of amount of transportation awaiting orders .....                                   | 630                          |
| Testimony of                                                                               |                              |
| Dean, William .....                                                                        | 631, 632                     |
| Kenly, John R .....                                                                        | 623-627                      |
| Mann, James C .....                                                                        | 628-630                      |
| Boarts, James A. Mentioned .....                                                    | 118                          |
| Boeman, Lambert. Mentioned .....                                                    | 107, 125, 138, 167, 171, 984 |
| Boggs, John. Mentioned .....                                                        | 645                          |
| Boice, Theodore A. Mentioned .....                                                  | 130, 518, 535                |
| Bomar, Thomas H. Mentioned .....                                                    | 1003                         |
| Bonneif, Emile. Mentioned .....                                                     | 331                          |
| Boreman, Arthur I. Mentioned .....                                                  | 681, 950                     |
| For correspondence, etc., see West Virginia, Governor of.                           |                              |
| Borsk, Peter. Mentioned .....                                                       | 508                          |
| Bostick, C. Correspondence with Moses N. Wisewell .....                             | 741                          |
| Boston, Reuben B. Mentioned .....                                                   | 1007                         |
| Boswell, Benjamin D. Mentioned .....                                                | 110, 128, 981                |
| Boteler, Alexander R. Mentioned .....                                               | 571, 573, 584                |
| Botsford, James L. For correspondence as A. A. G., see George Crook.         |                              |
| Boughner, Oliver P. Mentioned .....                                                 | 389                          |
| Bouldin, Wood, jr. Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 ..... | 597                          |
| Bowen, Chester B. Mentioned .....                                                   | 550                          |
| Bowen, Lot.                                                                         |                              |
| Correspondence with Darius N. Couch .....                                                  | 707                          |
| Mentioned .....                                                                            | 983                          |
| Bowers, Alfred Mentioned .....                                                      | 383                          |
| Bowers, Theodore S. Correspondence with George K. Leet .....                        | 760, 952                     |
| Bowman, Frank. Mentioned .....                                                      | 577                          |
| Bowman, Samuel M. Mentioned .....                                                   | 869, 970, 981                |
| Boyd, Carlile. Mentioned .....                                                      | 977                          |
| Boyd, Charles R. Mentioned .....                                                    | 573, 575, 578                |

|                                                                                        | Page.                                  |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------|
| Boyd, C. R. Mentioned .....                                                     | 568                                    |
| Boyd, Robert. Mentioned .....                                                   | 977                                    |
| Boyd, Samuel H. Mentioned .....                                                 | 1012                                   |
| Boyd, William H. Mentioned .....                                                | 789                                    |
| Boykin, Stephen M. Mentioned .....                                              | 566, 595                               |
| Boyle, ———. Mentioned .....                                                     | 933                                    |
| Boyle, James. Mentioned .....                                                   | 416                                    |
| Brabble, Edmund C. Mentioned .....                                              | 1012                                   |
| Bradbury, Albert W.                                                             |                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                        | 109, 128, 134, 319, 321, 358, 824, 986 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1894 .....                       | 356                                    |
| Bradford, Augustus W. Mentioned .....                                           | 755, 970                               |
| For correspondence, etc., see Maryland, Governor of.                            |                                        |
| Bradford, S. Nelson. Mentioned .....                                            | 782                                    |
| Bradshaw, John J. Mentioned .....                                               | 224, 249                               |
| Bragg, Braxton.                                                                 |                                        |
| Correspondence with Jubal A. Early .....                                               | 1008                                   |
| Mentioned .....                                                                        | 1004                                   |
| Branham, J. W. Mentioned .....                                                  | 640, 641                               |
| Brault, Alphonse. Mentioned .....                                               | 148                                    |
| Braxton, Carter M. Mentioned .....                                              | 555, 567, 1000, 1011                   |
| Breckinridge, John C.                                                           |                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                                    |                                        |
| Early, Jubal A. ....                                                                   | 991–993, 1000, 1001, 1005–1007, 1010   |
| Echols, John .....                                                                     | 641                                    |
| Vandeventer, Alexander S. ....                                                         | 644                                    |
| Mentioned .....                                                                        | 17, 21, 23,                            |
| 24, 28, 85, 95, 98, 101, 155, 424, 425, 440, 444, 455, 490, 516, 517, 554, 555, 557,   |                                        |
| 559, 567–569, 573, 574, 597, 737, 773, 833, 881, 898, 905, 910–912, 917, 925, 934,     |                                        |
| 937, 951–953, 960, 961, 965, 966, 969, 1000, 1005, 1008, 1018–1020, 1022, 1024         |                                        |
| Breed, Edward E. Mentioned .....                                                | 119                                    |
| Brenaman, A. T. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                    | 829, 838                               |
| Brewer, ———. Mentioned .....                                                    | 949                                    |
| Brewer, Melvin.                                                                 |                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                        | 111, 119, 446, 454, 455, 458, 462, 986 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                       | 468                                    |
| Brewerton, Henry F. Mentioned .....                                             | 129, 413–416, 419–421                  |
| Brewster, John M. Mentioned .....                                               | 540                                    |
| Brian, William. Mentioned .....                                                 | 980                                    |
| Bridgewater, Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 2, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Cam-   |                                        |
| paign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Lomax, p. 612; itineraries,              |                                        |
| pp. 99, 102.                                                                    |                                        |
| Brigden, George M. Mentioned .....                                              | 405                                    |
| Briggs, Alvah W. Mentioned .....                                                | 126, 977                               |
| Briggs, Benjamin A. Mentioned .....                                             | 220                                    |
| Briggs, George G. Mentioned .....                                               | 954                                    |
| Brinton, John H. Mentioned .....                                                | 141                                    |
| Brinton, William P. Mentioned .....                                             | 111, 518, 519, 912, 987                |
| Britton, John. Mentioned .....                                                  | 540, 541                               |
| Brock's Gap, Va. Skirmish near, Oct. 6, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Cam- |                                        |
| paign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Torbert, p. 430; itinerary,              |                                        |
| p. 102; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 578.                                           |                                        |
| Bronson, Nelson. Mentioned .....                                                | 981                                    |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Page.                   |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Brooks, Daniel. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 975                     |
| Brooks, George W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 978                     |
| Brooks, Horace. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 976                     |
| Brough, John. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 781                     |
| For correspondence, etc., see Ohio, Governor of.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                         |
| Brower, Jabez M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 108, 126, 138, 215, 985 |
| Brower, Jacob. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 124                     |
| Brown, Addison, jr. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 107, 208                |
| Brown, Allison L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 627                     |
| Brown, Charles C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 130                     |
| Brown, E. Parmly. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 331                     |
| Brown, Hamilton A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 1012                    |
| Brown, J. Thompson. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 582                     |
| Brown, William H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 771                     |
| Brown, William R. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 110, 129, 982           |
| Brownell, William H. P. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 331                     |
| Brownell, William R. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 300                     |
| Brown's Gap, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 26, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports ofKidd, James H. Merritt, Wesley. Powell, William H.Also itinerary , p. 85; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 576.                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                         |
| Bruce, John M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 977                     |
| Brucetown, Va. Skirmishes near Winchester, Va., and near, Sept. 7, 1864.See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 Itinerary , p. 105; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 572.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                         |
| Bryan, Goode. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 566, 589, 593, 594, 893 |
| Bryan, Timothy M., jr. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 470                     |
| Buckhannon, W. Va. Skirmishes at, Sept. 27-28, 1864. See West Virginia. Witcher's Expedition into, Sept. 17-28, 1864.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                         |
| Buckley, Thomas. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 277                     |
| Buckley, William W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 986                     |
| Bucklyn, John K. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 272                     |
| Buell, Marquis D. L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 854                     |
| Buffington, Stanard. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 641                     |
| Bukey, Van H.Correspondence with Milton Wells.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 395                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 110, 129, 387, 390, 982 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 394                     |
| Bulkley, William S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 118, 316                |
| Bulltown, W. Va. Skirmish at, Aug. 20, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1                       |
| Bumgard, J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 640                     |
| Bunker, E. E.Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 705, 716                |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 705, 724                |
| Bunker Hill, W. Va.Actions at.Sept. 2, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Averell , p. 497; Sheridan , p. 22; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 572.Sept. 3, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Averell , p. 497; Sheridan , p. 45.Skirmish at, Sept. 13, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Averell , p. 498. |                         |
| Burbridge, Ignatius C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 393                     |

|                                                                                | Page.                                                                         |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Burbridge, Stephen G. Mentioned.....                                    | 960                                                                           |
| Burch, Isaac. Mentioned.....                                            | 138                                                                           |
| Burgess, Charles.                                                       |                                                                               |
| Mentioned.....                                                                 | 108, 224, 229, 246, 249, 985                                                  |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                | 255                                                                           |
| Burgess, William. Correspondence with Darius N. Couch.....              | 928, 960                                                                      |
| Burke, Martin. Mentioned.....                                           | 988                                                                           |
| Burleigh, Henry M. Mentioned.....                                       | 788                                                                           |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Max Weber .                         |                                                                               |
| Burnham, Walter. Mentioned.....                                         | 176                                                                           |
| Burns, Thomas. Mentioned.....                                           | 176                                                                           |
| Burns, William H. Mentioned.....                                        | 119, 247, 253                                                                 |
| Burnside, Ambrose E. Mentioned.....                                     | 700                                                                           |
| Burrell, Jonathan. Mentioned.....                                       | 138, 175                                                                      |
| Burrows, De Saussure. Mentioned.....                                    | 595                                                                           |
| Butcher, Thomas P. Mentioned.....                                       | 147, 148                                                                      |
| Butler, Benjamin F. Mentioned.....                                      | 791, 997                                                                      |
| Butler, George. Mentioned.....                                          | 331, 333, 340                                                                 |
| Buxton, Charles. Mentioned.....                                         | 119                                                                           |
| Byard, George W. Mentioned.....                                         | 978                                                                           |
| Byers, John A.                                                          |                                                                               |
| Correspondence with                                                            |                                                                               |
| Averell, William W.....                                                        | 781                                                                           |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                        | 690                                                                           |
| Mentioned.....                                                                 | 715                                                                           |
| Byrnes, Andrew J. Mentioned.....                                        | 175                                                                           |
| Cable, George W. Mentioned.....                                         | 649                                                                           |
| Cabot, Stephen. Mentioned.....                                          | 989                                                                           |
| Cadot, Lemuel Z.                                                        |                                                                               |
| Mentioned.....                                                                 | 110, 129, 410, 411                                                            |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....               | 412, 413                                                                      |
| Cadwalader, George.                                                     |                                                                               |
| Assignments to command.....                                                    | 840, 928                                                                      |
| Correspondence with                                                            |                                                                               |
| Couch, Darius N.....                                                           | 809                                                                           |
| War Department, U. S.....                                                      | 707                                                                           |
| Mentioned.....                                                                 | 55, 106, 774, 782, 808, 840, 928, 973, 980                                    |
| Cahill, Thomas W. Mentioned.....                                        | 109, 282, 325, 986                                                            |
| Caldwell, ———. Mentioned.....                                           | 959                                                                           |
| Callan, Owen. Mentioned.....                                            | 6                                                                             |
| Callis, John B. Mentioned.....                                          | 975                                                                           |
| Campbell, Edward L.                                                     |                                                                               |
| Congratulatory Orders.                                                         |                                                                               |
| Fisher's Hill, Va.                                                             |                                                                               |
| Battle of, Sept. 22, 1864.....                                                 | 170                                                                           |
| Skirmish at, Sept. 21, 1864.....                                               | 170                                                                           |
| Winchester (or the Opequon), Va. Battle of, Sept. 19, 1864.....                | 170                                                                           |
| Mentioned....                                                                  | 107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 151, 154, 162–164, 166, 167, 174, 175, 179, 181, 984 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                | 168                                                                           |
| Campbell, Levi, jr. Mentioned.....                                      | 395                                                                           |
| Canadian Line. Affairs on, generally. Communication from Albert M. Har- |                                                                               |
| per.....                                                                       | 929                                                                           |
| Canby, Edward R. S. Mentioned.....                                      | 307                                                                           |
| Candee, Franklin J. Mentioned.....                                      | 118                                                                           |

|                                                                                            | Page.                            |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------|
| Cannon, Henry G. Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....          | 595                              |
| Capehart, Charles E. Mentioned .....                                                       | 983                              |
| Capehart, Henry. Mentioned. 84, 111, 117, 124, 130, 136, 499, 506, 509, 510, 512, 514, 678 |                                  |
| Capron, Albert. Mentioned .....                                                            | 540                              |
| Captured Property. See Property Captured .                                          |                                  |
| Carlin, John. Mentioned .....                                                              | 983                              |
| Carpenter, James W. Mentioned .....                                                        | 537                              |
| Carpenter, John C. Mentioned .....                                                         | 573                              |
| Carpenter, Orrin B. Mentioned .....                                                        | 138, 229, 257                    |
| Carr, Henry B. Mentioned .....                                                             | 359                              |
| Carr, John W. Mentioned .....                                                              | 355                              |
| Carr, Gouverneur.                                                                          |                                  |
| Correspondence with William H. Emory .....                                                 | 846                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                            | 109, 127, 985                    |
| Carrington, W. A. Mentioned .....                                                          | 589                              |
| Carroll, John S. P. Mentioned .....                                                        | 129, 410, 411                    |
| Carse, George B. Mentioned .....                                                           | 979                              |
| Carson, James O. Correspondence with Darius N. Couch .....                                 | 929                              |
| Carter, Asa B. Mentioned .....                                                             | 119, 402                         |
| Carter, John B. Mentioned .....                                                            | 119                              |
| Carter, Thomas H. Mentioned .....                                                          | 557, 559, 563, 567, 580          |
| Cartwright, John W. Mentioned .....                                                        | 138                              |
| Casey, Silas. Mentioned .....                                                              | 975                              |
| Casualties in Action. See Confederate Troops and Union Troops. Casualties.          |                                  |
| Returns of.                                                                         |                                  |
| Caswell, Charles W. Mentioned .....                                                        | 147, 148                         |
| Cating, James. Mentioned .....                                                             | 474, 477                         |
| Catlin, Lynde. Correspondence with                                                         |                                  |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                                         | 806                              |
| Webb, Francis I. D .....                                                                   | 765                              |
| Cavalry Corps, Middle Military Division.                                                   |                                  |
| Itineraries. Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                        | 89–106                           |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A., assigned to command of .....                                        | 501                              |
| Cedar Creek, Va.                                                                           |                                  |
| Actions at.                                                                                |                                  |
| Oct. 13, 1864. Casualties. Returns of. Union troops .....                                  | 372                              |
| See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of               |                                  |
| Crook, George. Harris, Thomas M. Torbert, Alfred T. A.                                     |                                  |
| Devin, Thomas C.                                                                           |                                  |
| Also itineraries , pp. 82, 83, 100, 103; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 579.      |                                  |
| Nov. 12, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.                |                                  |
| Reports of                                                                          |                                  |
| Birdseye, Mortimer B. Ives, Brayton. Torbert, Alfred T. A.                                 |                                  |
| Cummings, William G. Pennington, Alexander C. M.                                           |                                  |
| Also itineraries , pp. 91, 100, 103; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 584.          |                                  |
| Battle of, Oct. 19, 1864.                                                                  |                                  |
| Casualties. Returns of. Union troops .....                                                 | 131–139, 176, 230, 252, 325, 366 |
| Communications from                                                                        |                                  |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A .....                                                   | 452                              |
| Bukey, Van H. ....                                                                         | 395                              |
| Custer, George A. ....                                                                     | 528                              |
| Kellogg, Horace. ....                                                                      | 385                              |
| Lincoln, Abraham. ....                                                                     | 62                               |

Cedar Creek, Va.—Continued.

Battle of, Oct. 19, 1864.

Communications from

|                           |          |
|---------------------------|----------|
| Merritt, Wesley .....     | 452, 453 |
| Potter, Andrew .....      | 382      |
| Suter, John .....         | 392      |
| Teters, Wilbert B .....   | 384      |
| Wells, Milton .....       | 397      |
| Wilkie, Frederick C ..... | 383      |
| Withers, Henry H .....    | 393      |

See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

|                        |                      |                             |
|------------------------|----------------------|-----------------------------|
| Allen, Charles F.      | Gibbs, Frank C.      | Neafie, Alfred.             |
| Ball, William H.       | Goggin, James M.     | Parr, John G.               |
| Bennett, John W.       | Graham, Harvey.      | Pennington, Alexander C. M. |
| Binkley, Otho H.       | Granger, Moses M.    | Potter, Andrew.             |
| Birdseye, Mortimer B.  | Grant, Lewis A.      | Robertson, Peter.           |
| Birge, Henry W.        | Grimes, Bryan.       | Salsbury, John A.           |
| Bukey, Van H.          | Harris, Thomas M.    | Sheridan, Philip H.         |
| Cadot, Lemuel Z.       | Hayes, Rutherford B. | Shunk, David.               |
| Chandler, Charles G.   | Healy, John G.       | Simms, James P.             |
| Coates, Benjamin F.    | Hill, Joseph C.      | Snow, John S.               |
| Comly, James M.        | Hoge, George W.      | Snyder, James W.            |
| Cowand, David G.       | Howard, Ocran H.     | Suter, John.                |
| Crook, George.         | Hufty, Baldwin.      | Teters, Wilbert B.          |
| Crowninshield, Casper. | Hyde, Thomas W.      | Thurber, Benjamin F.        |
| Custer, George A.      | Ives, Brayton.       | Torbert, Alfred T. A.       |
| Darnall, William W.    | Janeway, Jacob J.    | Van Etten, Orsamus R.       |
| Devin, Thomas C.       | Keifer, J. Warren.   | Warner, James M.            |
| Devol, Hiram F.        | Kellogg, Horace.     | Wells, Milton.              |
| Du Pont, Henry A.      | Kidd, James H.       | Wildes, Thomas F.           |
| Early, Jubal A.        | Lee, Robert E.       | Wilkie, Frederick C.        |
| Emerson, William.      | Lomax, Lunsford L.   | Winston, John R.            |
| Emory, William H.      | McKnight, James.     | Withers, Henry H.           |
| Farmer, George E.      | McMillan, James W.   | Wolcott, John A.            |
| Ferguson, William D.   | May, Lewis A.        | Wright, Edward.             |
| French, Winsor B.      | Merritt, Wesley.     | Wright, Horatio G.          |
| Getty, George W.       | Molineux, Edward L.  | Young, John F.              |
| Ghiselin, James T.     | Munk, William.       |                             |

Skirmishes at.

Aug. 12, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.Reports of

|                  |                         |                       |
|------------------|-------------------------|-----------------------|
| Crook, George.   | Lowell, Charles R., jr. | Sheridan, Philip H.   |
| Devin, Thomas C. | Merritt, Wesley.        | Torbert, Alfred T. A. |
| Kidd, James H.   |                         |                       |

Also itineraries, pp. 92, 98; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 568.Aug. 15, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.Journal of Hotchkiss, p. 569.Cedar Run Church, Va. Affair at, Oct. 17, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Torbert, p. 432; itineraries, pp. 100, 103.Cedarville, Va. Skirmish near, Sept. 20, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Averell, p. 499.Cedarville (Guard Hill, or Front Royal), Va. Engagement at, Aug. 16, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

|                   |                  |                       |
|-------------------|------------------|-----------------------|
| Deane, Charles W. | Kidd, James H.   | Sheridan, Philip H.   |
| Devin, Thomas C.  | Lee, Robert E.   | Torbert, Alfred T. A. |
| Gibbs, Alfred.    | Merritt, Wesley. |                       |

Also itinerary, p. 92; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 569.

Churchman, Caleb.

Correspondence with

Lockwood, Henry H ..... 718

Wallace, Lew ..... 716

Mentioned ..... 717, 718

Clafin, Ira W. Mentioned ..... 107, 125, 975Clammer, Jacob. Mentioned ..... 395Clark, Charles A. Mentioned ..... 542Clark, Eusebius S. Mentioned ..... 119, 326Clark, Ezra W., jr. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Alfred N. Duffié.Clark, Gideon.

Mentioned ..... 107, 125, 984

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 189

Clark, John B. Mentioned ..... 751, 766, 869, 981Clark, Leander. Mentioned ..... 128, 353Clark, Leonard. Mentioned ..... 495, 505, 726, 736Clark, Orton S. Mentioned ..... 305Clark, Sidney E.

Mentioned ..... 108

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 315, 316

Clark, William F., jr. Mentioned ..... 138Clarke, Asaph M. Mentioned ..... 266Clarke, Augustus P. Mentioned ..... 474Claypool, Charles D. Mentioned ..... 125Clendenin, George, jr. Mentioned ..... 199, 200, 202Cleveland, Chester D. Mentioned ..... 176Clitz, Henry B. Mentioned ..... 988Clothing, Camp and Garrison Equipage. See Munitions of War.Cloward, Samuel W. Mentioned ..... 138, 270Clyburn, Benjamin R. Mentioned ..... 566, 595Clyde, Eugene. Mentioned ..... 147Coalsmouth, W. Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 30, 1864. See *Kanawha Valley, W.Va. Nounnan's Expedition into, Sept. 23–Oct. 1, 1864.Coates, Benjamin F.

Mentioned ..... 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 403, 404, 409, 410, 412, 982

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 410, 411

Coates, Edwin M. Mentioned ..... 987Cobb, Norvell. Mentioned ..... 1012Cobb, William L. Mentioned ..... 377Cogswell, William H. Mentioned ..... 118Coit, Joseph H. Mentioned ..... 568Colburn, Artemas B. Mentioned ..... 119Cole, Gabriel. Mentioned ..... 550Cole, Henry A. Mentioned ..... 745, 849, 983Coleman, Henry E. Mentioned ..... 1013Coleman, James H.

Mentioned ..... 107, 126, 138, 196, 198, 200, 201

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 202, 203

Coles, Frank H. Mentioned ..... 980Collett, William H. Mentioned ..... 395Colt, Thomas G. Mentioned ..... 185Columbia Furnace, Va. Skirmish near, Oct. 7, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

Bennett, John W.

Lee, Robert E.

Torbert, Alfred T. A.

Also itinerary, p. 100.

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | Page.                               |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------|
| Colvin, Sidney T. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                           | 248                                 |
| Comly, James M.                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 110, 129, 982                       |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                  | 407, 408                            |
| Compson, Hartwell B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                        | 542–544                             |
| Comstock, Apollos. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 340                                 |
| Conant, Oliver J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                           | 976                                 |
| Confederate Troops.                                                                                                                                                                                        |                                     |
| Casualties. Returns of. Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                     | 557                                 |
| Mentioned. Engineers— Regiments : 3d, 584.                                                                                                                                                                 |                                     |
| For Volunteers, see respective States.                                                                                                                                                                            |                                     |
| Organization, strength, etc.                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                     |
| Valley District, Army of the.....                                                                                                                                                                                 | 564–567, 1002, 1003, 1011–1013      |
| Western Virginia and East Tennessee, Department of.....                                                                                                                                                           | 1013                                |
| Congdon, James A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                           | 619, 620, 738                       |
| Conger, Seymour B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 495, 505, 726, 735                  |
| Congress, U. S.                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                     |
| Medals of Honor awarded by, for distinguished services in Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                   | 550                                 |
| Thanks of, to Philip H. Sheridan, for victories in Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                          | 63                                  |
| Conkling, Frederick A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                      | 979                                 |
| Conn, Eli. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                  | 204                                 |
| Connecticut Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                             |                                     |
| Artillery, Heavy— Regiments : 2d, 107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 162, 163, 173–182, 984.                                                                                                                         |                                     |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st, 100, 103, 111, 117, 130, 529, 532, 533, 535, 536, 675, 978, 987.                                                                                                                 |                                     |
| Infantry— Regiments : 9th, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 282, 319, 325–328, 727, 986; 12th, 108, 114, 122, 127, 133, 290, 291, 294, 302, 314–317, 985; 13th, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 330, 334, 340; 18th, 981. |                                     |
| Conner, James.                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 566, 579, 590, 591, 1030            |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                   | 592                                 |
| Connors, James. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 550                                 |
| Conover, William W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                         | 224                                 |
| Coogle, Benjamin F. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                         | 88                                  |
| Cook, Benjamin C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                           | 979                                 |
| Cook, Frederick W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 546                                 |
| Cook, Philip.                                                                                                                                                                                              |                                     |
| Assignment to command.....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 993                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 564, 598–601, 993, 1002, 1011, 1013 |
| Cook, Roger E.                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                     |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                                                               |                                     |
| Howe, Albion P.....                                                                                                                                                                                               | 724                                 |
| Weber, Max.....                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 724                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 620, 623, 628, 630, 858, 982        |
| Reports of skirmish in Loudoun County, Va., Aug. 21, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                    | 636                                 |
| Cooke, John S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                              | 128                                 |
| Cooley, Alfred. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 128, 343, 344                       |
| Coons, Jonas. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                               | 331, 335                            |
| Cooper, Aaron K. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                            | 139                                 |
| Cooper, Samuel. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 993, 996, 1008                      |
| For correspondence, etc., see Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A.                                                                                                                            |                                     |

|                                                                                 | Page.                                                                                                  |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Coover, John B. Mentioned.....                                           | 145                                                                                                    |
| Copeland, Benjamin F. Mentioned.....                                     | 331, 335                                                                                               |
| Coppinger, John J. Mentioned.....                                        | 435, 522                                                                                               |
| Core, Andrew S. Mentioned.....                                           | 724                                                                                                    |
| Core, Christian J. Mentioned.....                                        | 395                                                                                                    |
| Cornish, William T. Mentioned.....                                       | 107, 171                                                                                               |
| Cornwell, Robert T. Mentioned.....                                       | 224                                                                                                    |
| Cornyn, Charles M. Mentioned.....                                        | 229, 246, 248, 249, 263                                                                                |
| Corsa, William H. Mentioned.....                                         | 331                                                                                                    |
| Corse, Montgomery D. Mentioned.....                                      | 952, 953, 961                                                                                          |
| Cosby, George B. Mentioned.....                                          | 585                                                                                                    |
| Cosner, Katy. Mentioned.....                                             | 950                                                                                                    |
| Costin, Ellison L. Mentioned.....                                        | 593                                                                                                    |
| Couch, Darius N.                                                         |                                                                                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                             |                                                                                                        |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.....                                         | 737, 756, 774, 821, 840, 855                                                                           |
| Averell, William W.....                                                         | 797, 888, 894, 911                                                                                     |
| Bowen, Lot.....                                                                 | 707                                                                                                    |
| Burgess, William.....                                                           | 928, 960                                                                                               |
| Cadwalader, George.....                                                         | 809                                                                                                    |
| Carson, James O.....                                                            | 929                                                                                                    |
| Freese, J. G.....                                                               | 840                                                                                                    |
| Halleck, Henry W.....                                                           | 693, 706, 718, 719, 774, 782, 808, 821, 928, 939, 973                                                  |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                         | 694, 702, 706                                                                                          |
| Rowley, Thomas A.....                                                           | 830                                                                                                    |
| Schultze, John S.....                                                           | 694, 774                                                                                               |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                         | 725, 808                                                                                               |
| Szink, Jacob.....                                                               | 929                                                                                                    |
| Thayer, Amos M.....                                                             | 706, 880, 939                                                                                          |
| Walker, Samuel.....                                                             | 929, 960                                                                                               |
| War Department, U. S.....                                                       | 706, 756, 840                                                                                          |
| Warren, Edward M.....                                                           | 973                                                                                                    |
| Whiting, Daniel P.....                                                          | 970                                                                                                    |
| Mentioned.....                                                                  | 55, 106, 501, 694, 718, 753, 754, 756, 788, 809, 830, 855, 856, 889, 928, 929, 960, 970, 973, 974, 979 |
| Courtney, William H. Mentioned.....                                      | 980                                                                                                    |
| Cove Point, Md. Affair at, Aug. 22, 1864. Report of George D. Odell..... | 637                                                                                                    |
| Cowan, Andrew. Mentioned.....                                            | 985                                                                                                    |
| Cowand, David G.                                                         |                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned.....                                                                  | 564, 608                                                                                               |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                | 601, 607                                                                                               |
| Cox, William R. Mentioned.....                                           | 564, 598–601, 1002, 1011, 1013                                                                         |
| Craig, John R. Mentioned.....                                            | 364                                                                                                    |
| Crampton, Harvey. Correspondence with Jeremiah C. Sullivan.....          | 905                                                                                                    |
| Crawford, Daniel L. Mentioned.....                                       | 204                                                                                                    |
| Crawford, Samuel W. Mentioned.....                                       | 64                                                                                                     |
| Creed, John. Mentioned.....                                              | 550                                                                                                    |
| Crocker, Ulric. Mentioned.....                                           | 550                                                                                                    |
| Crofton, Robert E. A. Mentioned.....                                     | 989                                                                                                    |
| Crook, George.                                                           |                                                                                                        |
| Assignments to command.....                                                     | 739, 962                                                                                               |
| Assumes temporary command of Department of West Virginia.....                   | 747                                                                                                    |

Crook, George—Continued.

Correspondence with

Duffié, Alfred N. .... 796, 924, 949

Kelley, Benjamin F. .... 648,
662, 781, 790, 805, 806, 853, 868, 887, 915, 926, 938, 950, 958

Latham, George R. .... 661

Sheridan, Philip H. .... 744, 794, 864, 883, 890, 917, 920

Weber, Max. .... 850, 886, 968

Wright, Horatio G. .... 816

Designation of command of, to be Army of West Virginia .... 726

Mentioned .... 19-21, 23-27,

34, 40-50, 52-55, 59-61, 66, 67, 71, 73, 74, 76, 79-83, 110, 115, 118, 123, 124, 128,
134, 137, 149, 150, 153, 155, 156, 158-160, 162, 164, 167, 174, 177, 179, 180, 182,
187, 192, 200, 201, 223, 225, 227, 228, 232, 237, 242, 249, 251, 253, 256, 259, 261,
264, 265, 267-270, 280, 281, 284, 291, 296, 308, 312, 314, 317, 319, 322, 328, 329,
333, 338, 341, 342, 346, 347, 349-353, 355, 358, 363, 365, 367, 368, 370, 373, 376,
380, 381, 386, 389, 391, 393, 394, 396, 397, 399, 400, 403, 404, 406, 407, 478, 493,
496, 498, 499, 504, 546, 553, 560, 561, 564, 581, 593, 596, 598, 599, 630, 657, 658,
668, 669, 702, 726, 732, 739, 740, 752, 761, 769, 775, 776, 800, 811-814, 821, 843,
847, 850, 853, 863, 864, 880, 886, 887, 892, 896, 898, 911, 915-919, 924, 926, 931,
934, 938, 940, 941, 944, 949, 952, 954, 958, 960, 962, 969, 974, 981, 997, 1009, 1031

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 . 360, 361, 363, 365

Crooks, John W. Mentioned .... 248Crookston, Absalom. Mentioned .... 975Crosman, George H. Mentioned .... 737Cross, Charles F. Mentioned .... 146, 147Crossman, Horace F. Mentioned .... 981Crowninshield, Benjamin W. Mentioned .... 720Crowninshield, Casper.

Mentioned .... 97, 111, 130, 136, 461, 483, 491, 492, 671, 672, 986

Reports of

Fauquier and Loudoun Counties, Va. Expedition from Winchester
into, Nov. 28-Dec. 3, 1864. .... 672

Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. .... 491

Crum, Daniel. Mentioned .... 138Crumley, ———. Mentioned .... 595Cullen, James. Mentioned .... 988Culpeper, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 19, 1864 .... 1Cummings, William. Mentioned .... 395Cummings, William G.

Mentioned .... 545, 546

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. .... 548

Cumpston, James. Mentioned .... 550Cunningham, William H. Mentioned .... 331Currie, Leonard D. H.

Correspondence with Philip H. Sheridan. .... 873

Mentioned .... 77, 109, 127, 294, 815, 911, 941, 944, 949, 985

Curtin, Andrew G. Mentioned .... 706, 737, 756, 774For correspondence, etc., see *Pennsylvania, Governor of.Curtis, Elliott M. Mentioned .... 321Curtis, Oscar H.

Correspondence with William Dwight. .... 308

Mentioned .... 108, 292, 305, 308

Curtis, William B. Mentioned .... 83, 128, 395

Custer, George A.

Congratulatory address. Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 527

Correspondence with

Sheridan, Philip H. .... 722, 730

Torbert, Alfred T. A ..... 528, 529, 921, 922

Wilson, James H. .... 922

Mentioned .... 17, 19, 21, 29, 31, 33, 36, 38, 39, 45, 50, 52–54, 56, 62, 84, 91, 111, 116, 130, 137, 156, 285, 310, 377, 422, 423, 425–435, 437–441, 443, 445–448, 453, 454, 459–466, 469, 470, 472–474, 477, 479–482, 485, 487, 488, 490, 498, 507, 508, 517, 519, 526–528, 532, 534, 536, 541, 543, 544, 546, 547, 553, 578, 584, 616, 679, 769, 816, 822, 890, 891, 910, 912, 915, 917, 921, 923–925, 935, 937, 948, 966, 986, 1032

Reports of

Lacey's Springs, Va. Expedition from Kernstown to, Dec. 19–22, 1864, etc ..... 674

Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 454, 520, 522

Custer, Jesse. Mentioned ..... 331

Cutwright, Mifflin. Mentioned ..... 398

Cutshaw, Wilfred E. Mentioned ..... 567

Daines, John. Mentioned ..... 421

Dalton, Henry R.

Mentioned ..... 151, 163, 173

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 163

For correspondence as A. A. G., see David A. Russell.

Damon, George B. Mentioned ..... 224, 230

Dana, Amasa E. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Wesley Merritt.

Dana, Charles A. Mentioned ..... 870

For correspondence as Assistant Secretary, see War Department, U. S.

Daniel, Junius. Mentioned ..... 1012

Darkesville, W. Va. Skirmishes at.

Sept. 2, 1864 ..... 9

Sept. 10, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.

Report of Arerell, p. 498; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 573.

Darling, Daniel H.

Mentioned ..... 130, 459–461

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 468

Darling, Henry A. Mentioned ..... 321

Darnall, William W.

Mentioned ..... 128, 335

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 336

Davenport, William S. Mentioned ..... 540

Davidson, Henry B. Mentioned ..... 566

Davis, Charles. Mentioned ..... 354

Davis, David J. Mentioned ..... 118

Davis, Edwin P. Mentioned ..... 76, 108, 127, 133, 281, 284, 293, 306, 308–313, 985

Davis, George. Mentioned ..... 550

Davis, Greenlief P. Mentioned ..... 980

Davis, Jefferson.

Correspondence with

Lee, Robert E. .... 990, 992, 996

War Department, C. S. .... 991, 994

Mentioned ..... 990, 991, 994

Davis, Littleton D. Mentioned ..... 785

Davis, Martin W. Mentioned ..... 107, 207, 208, 984

|                                                                                                                 | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Davis, Nathan. Mentioned .....                                                                                  | 392                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Davis, William. Mentioned .....                                                                                 | 832                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Dawson, Samuel K. Mentioned .....                                                                               | 987, 989                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Day, Hiram W. Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 224, 228, 229, 232, 234                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Day, Nicholas W. Mentioned .....                                                                                | 109, 128, 280, 319, 321, 326, 331, 335, 986                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Dean, Bradley. Mentioned .....                                                                                  | 331                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Dean, Daniel S. Mentioned .....                                                                                 | 355                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Dean, William.                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with Alfred Gibbs .....                                                                          | 622                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                 | 629-632, 786                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Testimony of. Board of Inquiry on attack on Union supply train, Aug.13, 1864 .....                          | 631, 632                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Deane, Charles W.                                                                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                 | 130, 459-461, 465                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                | 466                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| De Blanc, Alcibiades. Mentioned .....                                                                           | 1012                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Decker, Elmer F. Mentioned .....                                                                                | 459, 527                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Deeter, Joshua S. Mentioned .....                                                                               | 119, 248, 258                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| De Forest, John W. Mentioned .....                                                                              | 316                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| De La Paturelle, Honore. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 127                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Delaware. Affairs in, generally. Communication from Lynde Catlin .....                                          | 806                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Delaware Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Cavalry— Companies : Milligan's, 717, 766. Regiments : 1st, 644, 645, 717,718, 765, 854, 980. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Infantry— Regiments : 7th, 751.                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Deming, Charles R. Mentioned .....                                                                              | 977                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Depew, Gilbert. Mentioned .....                                                                                 | 542                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Derrick, Clarence. Mentioned .....                                                                              | 597                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| De Russy, Gustavus A.                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Augur, Christopher C .....                                                                                      | 872, 900                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Lazelle, Henry M .....                                                                                          | 901                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                 | 861, 881, 963, 976                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Deserters. Action touching. Communications from                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Couch, Darius N .....                                                                                           | 821, 840, 855                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| War Department, U. S. ....                                                                                      | 840                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Devenney, Wesley. Mentioned .....                                                                               | 138, 229, 259                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Devin, Thomas C.                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A .....                                                                        | 474                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Merritt, Wesley .....                                                                                           | 834                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                 | 19, 49, 53, 55, 83, 92, 111, 116, 130, 136, 157, 415, 417, 422, 423, 427-429, 431, 434, 435, 438, 439, 441, 442, 444-447, 449-452, 459, 473-475, 480, 485-488, 490-492, 495, 500, 526, 527, 671-673, 711, 801, 802, 817, 822, 865, 957, 986 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                               | 470,474, 475, 481, 483                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Devol, Hiram F.                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                 | 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 403, 404, 406, 410, 982                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                | 406                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Dewey, Henry H. Mentioned .....                                                                                 | 126, 246                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| De Witt, David P.                                                                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with Lew. Wallace .....                                                                          | 869                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                 | 981                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Dexter, Sir N. Mentioned .....                                                                                  | 119                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |

|                                                                                                                                                         | Page.                                  |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------|
| Di Cesnola, Louis P.                                                                                                                             |                                        |
| Correspondence with Wesley Merritt.....                                                                                                                 | 770, 847, 864, 865, 890, 891, 921, 946 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                          | 470-474, 884, 885, 912, 956, 962       |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                        | 469                                    |
| Dickens, Fannie. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 184                                    |
| Dickinson, Leonard A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                            | 316                                    |
| Dillingham, Edwin. Mentioned .....                                                                                                               | 108, 119, 222, 232, 243, 985           |
| Dillman, Sylvester S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                            | 118, 350                               |
| Disosway, Israel C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                               | 377, 380, 381                          |
| For correspondence as A. D. C., see Thomas F. Wildes .                                                                                           |                                        |
| District of Columbia Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                          |                                        |
| Infantry— Regiments : 1st, 2d; 977.                                                                                                              |                                        |
| Dix, John A.                                                                                                                                     |                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                     |                                        |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.....                                                                                                                 | 809                                    |
| Hays, William .....                                                                                                                                     | 961                                    |
| War Department, U. S. ....                                                                                                                              | 809, 961                               |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                          | 767, 809, 987                          |
| Dodge, Horace O. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 947                                    |
| Dodge, Richard I. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                | 979                                    |
| Doles, George. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 993, 1013                              |
| Donley, Sylvester W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                              | 119                                    |
| Donnelly, James P. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                | 402                                    |
| Donohue, Michael.                                                                                                                                |                                        |
| Correspondence with Nathan Wilkinson.....                                                                                                               | 705                                    |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                          | 983                                    |
| Donovan, John H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 976                                    |
| Doughty, John B. Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                | 191                                    |
| Douglas, William H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                              | 363                                    |
| Douw, John D. P.                                                                                                                                 |                                        |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                          | 107, 138, 151, 175                     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                        | 182                                    |
| Downey, James M. Correspondence with Christopher C. Augur.....                                                                                   | 776                                    |
| Draft.                                                                                                                                           |                                        |
| Enforcement of. Communications from                                                                                                                     |                                        |
| Dix, John A.....                                                                                                                                        | 961                                    |
| Hays, William .....                                                                                                                                     | 961                                    |
| Resistance to. Communication from Darius N. Couch.....                                                                                                  | 973                                    |
| Drew, George A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                   | 459                                    |
| Dry Run, Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 23, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Gibson, p. 514; Powell, p. 509. |                                        |
| Drysdale, James. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 984                                    |
| Du Bois, Henry A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                | 141, 143, 145                          |
| Dudley, James S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 975                                    |
| Dudley, Nathan A. M.                                                                                                                             |                                        |
| Correspondence with William H. Emory.....                                                                                                               | 701                                    |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                          | 36, 78, 700                            |
| Dudrow, J. P. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                     | 224, 248, 250, 256                     |
| Duffié, Alfred N.                                                                                                                                |                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                     |                                        |
| Averell, William W .....                                                                                                                                | 688, 703                               |
| Crook, George.....                                                                                                                                      | 796, 924, 949                          |
| Greenfield, Andrew J.....                                                                                                                               | 803                                    |

|                                                                                                              | Page                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Duffié, Alfred N.—Continued.                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Correspondence with                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Hunter, David .....                                                                                          | 703, 713, 733                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....                                                                                     | 688, 703, 704, 713, 733, 748, 763                                                                                                                                                            |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                                     | 725, 733                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Stevenson, John D .....                                                                                      | 837, 893, 903, 914, 924                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A .....                                                                                   | 818, 851                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Weber, Max .....                                                                                             | 748                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Wilson, James H .....                                                                                        | 819                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Wynkoop, John E .....                                                                                        | 949                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 18, 19, 35, 186,422-425, 502, 516, 631, 685, 689-691, 714, 721, 733, 738, 748, 772, 773, 788, 789802, 805, 826, 828, 833, 845, 849, 852, 886, 896, 914, 924, 932, 951, 958, 967, 983 |
| Duffield's Station, W. Va.                                                                            |                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Affair at, Oct. 14, 1864 .....                                                                               | 10                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Skirmish at, Aug. 27, 1864 .....                                                                             | 9                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Duggan, Andrew W. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 130, 461                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Duhigg, Dennis. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 119                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Duncan, Ashbell F. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 111, 119, 732                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Dungan, Robert H. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 565, 1003, 1012                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Dunlap, Jacob R. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 392                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Dunlop, R. S. Mentioned .....                                                                         | 592                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Dunn, Ambrose C. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 509, 515                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Dupont, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 976                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Du Pont, Henry A.                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 110, 124, 129, 135, 363, 366, 417, 418, 983                                                                                                                                                  |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                            | 413, 419                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Durland, Coe. Mentioned .....                                                                         | 111, 125, 186, 473, 474, 986                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Durst, ———. Mentioned .....                                                                           | 992                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Duval, Isaac H.                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 25,55, 82, 110, 116, 360-362, 367-369, 374, 376, 386-390, 396, 399-402, 405, 409, 982                                                                                                    |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                            | 399, 400                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Dwight, Augustus W. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 126                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Dwight, William.                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Charges and specifications against, in battle of Winchester (or the Ope-quon), Va., Sept. 19, 1864 ..... | 300-306                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Congratulatory Orders. Battle of Winchester (or the Opequon), Va.,Sept. 19, 1864 .....                   | 307                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Correspondence with                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Beal, George L .....                                                                                         | 825                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Curtis, Oscar H .....                                                                                        | 308                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Emory, William H .....                                                                                       | 295, 300, 307, 824                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Leefe, John G .....                                                                                          | 298                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Phinney, Stewart W .....                                                                                     | 300                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Pollard, Henry M .....                                                                                       | 299                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                                     | 306                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Underhill, Charles W .....                                                                                   | 299                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 108, 114, 121, 127, 133, 156, 174, 279-282, 287, 288, 290, 292, 294-296,298-308, 310-312, 314, 317-319, 323, 324, 330, 331, 334, 346, 348, 349, 944, 985                                 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                             | 287                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Dwyer, Philip. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 489                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Dyer, David H. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 988                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Dyer, Isaac. Mentioned .....                                                                          | 985                                                                                                                                                                                          |

|                                                                                                        | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Earl, Warren. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 220                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Early, Jubal A.                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Correspondence with                                                                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Anderson, Richard H. ....                                                                              | 1001, 1007                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Bragg, Braxton .....                                                                                   | 1008                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Breckinridge, John C. ....                                                                             | 991-993, 1000, 1001, 1005-1007, 1010                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Lee, Robert E .....                                                                                    | 558, 990, 996, 998, 1006, 1009                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Longstreet, James .....                                                                                | 52                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| War Department, C. S. ....                                                                             | 998                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                        | 3, 18-21, 23-34, 36, 37, 43-47, 49, 55, 68, 72, 82, 215, 351, 352, 392, 422, 437, 442, 444, 445, 451, 465, 468, 496, 498, 507, 513, 517, 519, 551-554, 557, 564, 565, 567-569, 571, 574, 575, 578, 580-583, 585, 587, 588, 596, 598, 609, 611-613, 622, 667, 679, 685, 688, 689, 701, 711, 714, 720, 725, 732-734, 737, 740, 772, 775, 783, 791, 799, 811, 812, 822, 823, 838, 840-842, 858, 883, 893, 897, 898, 906-908, 910, 912, 917, 928, 932, 952, 953, 958, 961, 967, 972, 990, 992, 993, 995, 997, 1000, 1001, 1004-1007, 1010-1012, 1015, 1016, 1018, 1024, 1027, 1028, 1030, 1031 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. ....                                      | 554, 557, 559-561                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| East, Department of the. Union troops in. Organization, strength, etc.,                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Aug. 31, 1864. ....                                                                                    | 987-989                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Easton, Hyman N. Mentioned .....                                                                | 535                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Ebright, Aaron W. Mentioned .....                                                               | 108, 119, 222, 246, 247, 264, 985                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Echols, John.                                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Assignment to command. ....                                                                            | 1005                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Correspondence with                                                                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A .....                                                 | 1010                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Breckinridge, John C. ....                                                                             | 641                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                        | 566, 597, 1005, 1011                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Eckert, Thomas T. Correspondence with                                                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Lawrence, George J. ....                                                                               | 760                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Rupley, S. K. ....                                                                                     | 949                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                                                                               | 857                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Eckman, Charles W. Mentioned .....                                                              | 199, 200, 202, 205                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Edenburg, Va. Skirmishes near.                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Sept. 23, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Devin , p. 476. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Nov. 7, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Darling , p. 468. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Edgar, George M. Mentioned .....                                                                | 281, 407, 597                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Edwards, Oliver.                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Correspondence with                                                                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Russell, David A. ....                                                                                 | 744                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                                                                               | 621, 794                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Wright, Horatio G .....                                                                                | 814                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned. ....                                                                                        | 67, 107, 112, 125, 151, 162-164, 168, 169, 188, 253, 514, 626, 627, 744, 778, 984                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. ....                                      | 183-186                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Edwards, William. Mentioned .....                                                               | 483                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Egan, H. J. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 1003                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Eigenbrodt, Charles S. Mentioned .....                                                          | 966                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Einsiedel, Detleo von. Mentioned .....                                                          | 975                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Elison, John A. Mentioned .....                                                                 | 899, 954                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Elkins, Clark. Mentioned .....                                                                  | 395                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Ellis, Milton A. Correspondence with Philip H. Sheridan .....                                   | 921                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Ellis, Philip H. Mentioned .....                                                                | 435                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Ellis, Rudolph. Mentioned .....                                                                 | 435                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |

|                                                                                                                                                           | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Ely, William G. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                     | 981                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Emack, George M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 6                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Emerson, William.                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 72, 74,108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 221, 223-225, 227, 228, 230, 242, 246-248, 251, 262, 985                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                         | 230, 231, 233                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Emmons, William H. H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                               | 95, 441, 490                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Alfred Gibbs .                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Emory, William H.                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Carr, Gouverneur.....                                                                                                                                     | 846                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Dudley, Nathan A. M.....                                                                                                                                  | 701                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Dwight, William.....                                                                                                                                      | 295, 300, 307, 824                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Grover, Cuvier.....                                                                                                                                       | 825                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Hunter, David.....                                                                                                                                        | 687, 700, 710                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Molineux, Edward L.....                                                                                                                                   | 687                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Potter, Orson O.....                                                                                                                                      | 700                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                                                                                   | 722, 744, 785, 801, 815, 824, 833, 845, 863, 883, 911, 934, 944, 964                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Tyler, Erastus B.....                                                                                                                                     | 711                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 20, 25-27, 29, 34, 40-45, 47-50, 53, 59, 61, 69, 73-77, 79, 80, 82, 108, 114, 118, 121, 124,127, 133, 137, 139, 143, 146, 148-150, 152-159, 162, 164, 174, 176-179, 181, 182,184, 194, 197, 201, 205, 210, 213, 214, 221, 222, 225-228, 231, 234, 236, 237, 246,247, 251-253, 257-259, 262, 263, 265-268, 270, 271, 273, 279, 281, 283, 285-291,293-296, 298, 300, 302-311, 313, 314, 317, 318, 321, 324, 326, 334, 336, 340, 342,348, 349, 351-354, 361, 362, 365, 366, 368, 369, 373-375, 377, 380, 384, 387, 391-397, 404, 420, 523, 524, 527, 546, 553, 560, 561, 564, 581, 620, 630, 684, 698, 699,701, 710, 711, 725, 740, 761, 769, 775, 776, 778, 811, 812, 817, 824, 825, 845-848,864, 892, 893, 896, 898, 941, 943, 952, 962, 964, 974, 985, 994, 995, 997, 1009, 1031 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                         | 279, 282, 284                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Enochs, William H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 110, 129, 402                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Entwistle, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                  | 283, 320                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Euen, Matthias S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                  | 988                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Evans, Charles H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                   | 649                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Evans, Clement A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                   | 555, 565, 570, 580, 609, 1002, 1003, 1011, 1012                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Evans, Lem. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                         | 418                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Evarts, Charles A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 485, 630                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Everett, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                    | 564                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Everts, Daniel T. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                   | 989                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Ewell, Richard S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                   | 582, 952, 953, 997, 1015-1018                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Ewing, Lieutenant. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 616                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Ewing, James M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                     | 119, 369, 389                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Fagan, Andrew. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                      | 976                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Fairfax Court-House, Va. Scout from, to Hopewell Gap. See Hopewell Gap ,Va. Scout from Fairfax Court-House to, Dec. 26-27, 1864. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Fairfax Station, Va. Skirmishes at.                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Aug. 8, 1864. Communications from                                                                                                                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lazelle, Henry M.....                                                                                                                                     | 742, 762                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Wells, Henry H.....                                                                                                                                       | 742                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Nov. 26, 1864.....                                                                                                                                        | 2                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Faithful, William T. Mentioned .....                                                                                                               | 827                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Fallon, Michael. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 625, 626                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Farabee, Harvey. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                   | 85, 111, 130, 430, 508                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Faris, Joseph A. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                                                                                      | 888, 950                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

|                                                                                                                              | Page                              |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Farmer, George E.                                                                                                     |                                   |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                               | 130                               |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                             | 485                               |
| Farnsworth, Addison. Mentioned .....                                                                                  | 977                               |
| Farnum, J. Egbert. Mentioned .....                                                                                    | 976                               |
| Farr, Alpha B. Mentioned .....                                                                                        | 109, 304, 325, 986                |
| Farrell, William. Mentioned .....                                                                                     | 618                               |
| Farrington, Preston M.                                                                                                |                                   |
| Correspondence with Max Weber.....                                                                                           | 622                               |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                              | 487, 528, 986                     |
| Fauquier and Loudoun Counties, Va. Expedition from Winchester into,Nov. 28–Dec. 3, 1864.                          |                                   |
| Communication from Philip H. Sheridan.....                                                                                   | 55                                |
| Property captured and destroyed by Union troops during .....                                                                 | 673                               |
| Reports of                                                                                                                   |                                   |
| Crowninshield, Casper .....                                                                                                  | 672                               |
| Merritt, Wesley .....                                                                                                        | 671                               |
| Fawn, U. S. S.                                                                                                        |                                   |
| Capture of, on Big Sandy River. See Kanawha Valley, W. Va. Witcher's        Operations in, Nov. 5–12, 1864, etc. |                                   |
| Mentioned'.....                                                                                                              | 650                               |
| Fay, Thomas M.                                                                                                        |                                   |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                               | 108, 240, 985                     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                              | 238                               |
| Federhen, Jacob. Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 985                               |
| Feight, John W. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 248, 269                          |
| Fellman, John R. Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 980                               |
| Fenn, Augustus H. Mentioned.....                                                                                      | 175, 180                          |
| Ferguson, William D.                                                                                                  |                                   |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                               | 126, 229                          |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                             | 241                               |
| Ferrel, Thornton. Mentioned.....                                                                                      | 395                               |
| Ferris, Thaddeus C. Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 138                               |
| Ferry, Amasa W. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 211                               |
| Ferry, Orris S. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 106, 782                          |
| Field, Charles W. Mentioned.....                                                                                      | 20, 791, 889, 890, 893, 905, 953' |
| Fife, William E. Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 595                               |
| Findley, James G. D. Mentioned.....                                                                                   | 402                               |
| Finley, Lieutenant. Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 903                               |
| Finley, Denison H. Mentioned.....                                                                                     | 306, 321                          |
| Finley, Theodore M. Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 977                               |
| Fish, Chauncey. Mentioned.....                                                                                        | 248                               |
| Fisher, John.                                                                                                         |                                   |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                               | 82, 88, 89, 656–658               |
| Report of skirmishes at Moorefield, W. Va., Nov. 27–28, 1864, etc.....                                                       | 665                               |
| Fisher, Joseph W. Mentioned.....                                                                                      | 980                               |
| Fisher, Newton D. Mentioned .....                                                                                     | 540                               |
| Fisher's Hill, Va.                                                                                                    |                                   |
| Battle of, Sept. 22, 1864.                                                                                                   |                                   |
| Casualties. Returns of. Union troops.....                                                                                    | 120–124, 294, 321                 |
| Communications from                                                                                                          |                                   |
| Dwight, William .....                                                                                                        | 295, 306–307                      |
| Emory, William H .....                                                                                                       | 300                               |

Fisher's Hill, Va.—Continued.

Battle of, Sept. 22, 1864.

Congratulatory Orders. Campbell ..... 170

See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

|                     |                      |                        |
|---------------------|----------------------|------------------------|
| Adams, George W.    | Fletcher, Stephen C. | Milliken, Charles A.   |
| Averell, William W. | Foster, George P.    | Molineux, Edward L.    |
| Ball, William H.    | Getty, George W.     | Neafie, Alfred.        |
| Beal, George L.     | Ghiselin, James T.   | Olcott, Egbert.        |
| Bidwell, Daniel D.  | Graham, Harvey.      | Ricketts, James B.     |
| Birge, Henry W.     | Grover, Cuvier.      | Robertson, Peter.      |
| Bradbury, Albert W. | Hamblin, Joseph E.   | Sheridan, Philip H.    |
| Cadot, Lemuel Z.    | Harris, Thomas M.    | Shunk, David.          |
| Campbell, Edward L. | Hayes, Rutherford B. | Stevens, Greenleaf T.  |
| Clark, Sidney E.    | Hoge, George W.      | Taft, Elijah D.        |
| Coleman, James H.   | Hufty, Baldwin.      | Taylor, David J.       |
| Comly, James M.     | Hunt, Lucius T.      | Thoburn, Joseph.       |
| Cowand, David G.    | Janeway, Jacob J.    | Tompkins, Charles H.   |
| Crook, George.      | Keifer, J. Warren.   | Van Etten, Orsamus R.  |
| Devin, Thomas C.    | Lamb, Jacob H.       | Warner, James M.       |
| Dwight, William.    | Lee, Robert E.       | Wells, George D.       |
| Early, Jubal A.     | Lomax, Lunsford L.   | Wilson, Bartholomew W. |
| Emerson, William.   | Macauley, Daniel.    | Wolcott, John A.       |
| Emory, William H.   | McGregor, James.     | Wright, Edward.        |
| Fay, Thomas M.      | Mackenzie, Ranald S. | Wright, Horatio G.     |
| Fisk, Henry C.      | May, Lewis A.        | Young, John F.         |

Also itineraries, pp. 64, 65, 68; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 574.

Skirmishes at.

Sept. 21, 1864.

Casualties. Returns of. Union troops ..... 120–124

Congratulatory Orders. Campbell ..... 170

See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

|                     |                       |                      |
|---------------------|-----------------------|----------------------|
| Bidwell, Daniel D.  | Hoge, George W.       | Ricketts, James B.   |
| Binkley, Otho H.    | Keifer, J. Warren.    | Tompkins, Charles H. |
| Campbell, Edward L. | McCartney, William H. | Warner, James M.     |
| Coleman, James H.   | McGregor, James.      | Wolcott, John A.     |
| Foster, George P.   | May, Lewis A.         | Wright, Horatio G.   |
| Getty, George W.    | Prentiss, Clifton K.  | Young, John F.       |
| Hamblin, Joseph E.  | Randall, Francis J.   |                      |

Also itineraries, pp. 64, 71, 74; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 574.Oct. 20, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.Reports of

|                  |                  |                     |
|------------------|------------------|---------------------|
| Devin, Thomas C. | Merritt, Wesley. | Sheridan, Philip H. |
|------------------|------------------|---------------------|

Also itinerary, p. 93.Skirmish near, Oct. 6, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Itinerary, p. 100.Fisk, Henry C.

Mentioned ..... 107, 125, 151, 154

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 180, 181

Fisk, Jesse A. Mentioned ..... 119Fiske, Edward A. Mentioned ..... 305, 324, 327, 328Fitzgerald, C. Mentioned ..... 218Fitzgerald, Hobart E. Mentioned ..... 977Fitzgerald, Richard. Mentioned ..... 119Fitzhugh, Charles L. Mentioned ..... 987Fitzhugh, F. Mentioned ..... 668Fleming, James H. Mentioned ..... 742, 762

|                                                                                                                                                                                | Page.                                           |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|
| Fleming, Rufus E.                                                                                                                                                       |                                                 |
| Correspondence with George R. Latham .....                                                                                                                                     | 668, 669                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                | 87, 89, 656, 659, 660, 663                      |
| Report of skirmishes at Moorefield, W. Va., Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc.....                                                                                                         | 662                                             |
| Fletcher, Stephen C.                                                                                                                                                    |                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                | 108, 126, 985                                   |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                               | 217                                             |
| Flood, Lieutenant. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                      | 584, 588                                        |
| Flory, Alexander M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                     | 986                                             |
| Flowing Spring, W. Va. See Welch's Spring, W. Va.                                                                                                                |                                                 |
| Floyd, Horace W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                        | 107, 126, 208, 211                              |
| Floyd-Jones, De Lancey. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                  | 987, 988                                        |
| Flynn, Dennis E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                        | 256                                             |
| Foley, Shadrach. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                        | 983                                             |
| Forbes, William H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                       | 911                                             |
| Ford, Albert L. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                         | 544                                             |
| Ford, Frederick G. W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                   | 397                                             |
| Ford, Joseph B. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                                                                                                            | 895                                             |
| Forest Hill (or Timberville), Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 24, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Powell, p. 506; itinerary, p. 85. |                                                 |
| Forno, Henry. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 1012                                            |
| Forrer, ———. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                            | 583                                             |
| Forsberg, Augustus. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                     | 569, 1024                                       |
| Forsyth, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                       | 1013                                            |
| Forsyth, George A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                       | 162, 720                                        |
| Forsyth, James W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                       | 53, 310, 413, 627, 720, 769, 827, 837, 852, 893 |
| For correspondence as Chief of Staff, see Philip H. Sheridan.                                                                                                           |                                                 |
| Fortney, Ashford E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                     | 146-148                                         |
| Fosgate, William A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                     | 119                                             |
| Foster, George P.                                                                                                                                                       |                                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                 | 120, 126, 151, 154, 193, 199, 209, 213, 984     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                | 208                                             |
| Foster, James P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                        | 319, 339, 340, 345, 986                         |
| Foster, John G.                                                                                                                                                         |                                                 |
| Correspondence with Henry W. Halleck.....                                                                                                                                      | 919                                             |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                 | 860                                             |
| Fountain, Elias. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                        | 138                                             |
| Foust, Benezet F. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                        | 975                                             |
| Fox, Henry M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 550                                             |
| Frank, Conrad. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                           | 181                                             |
| Franklin, Eugene. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                        | 343                                             |
| Franklin, W. Va. Skirmish at, Aug. 19, 1864.....                                                                                                                        | 1                                               |
| Frazar, Douglas. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                        | 777                                             |
| Freeman, Charles A. For correspondence as A. A. A. G., see Benjamin F. Kelley.                                                                                   |                                                 |
| Freeman, Thomas T. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                      | 88                                              |
| Freese, J. G. Correspondence with Darius N. Couch .....                                                                                                                 | 840                                             |
| Frémont, John C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                         | 666                                             |
| French, Edwin W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                         | 130, 535, 536                                   |
| French, Frank S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                         | 976                                             |
| French, George O. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                       | 211                                             |
| French, Peter. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                           | 310                                             |

|                                                                                                      | Page.                                       |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------|
| French, Winsor B.                                                                             |                                             |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 108, 126, 132, 195, 211, 214, 217, 985      |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                     | 219, 220                                    |
| Frink, Henry A. Mentioned.....                                                                | 980                                         |
| Front Royal, Va.                                                                              |                                             |
| Engagement at. See Cedarville (Guard Hill, or Front Royal), Va. Engagement at, Aug. 16, 1864. |                                             |
| Skirmishes at.                                                                                       |                                             |
| Sept. 21, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of              |                                             |
| Sheridan, Philip H.                                                                                  | Torbert, Alfred T. A.‡ Wilson, James H.     |
| Also itineraries , pp. 99, 105.                                                               |                                             |
| Sept. 23, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of              |                                             |
| Lowell, Charles R., jr.                                                                              | Merritt, Wesley. Torbert, Alfred T. A.      |
| Also itinerary , p. 90.                                                                       |                                             |
| Nov. 22, 1864.....                                                                                   | 10                                          |
| Frost, Malcolm G. Mentioned.....                                                              | 546                                         |
| Fry, James B.                                                                                 |                                             |
| Correspondence with Governor of Massachusetts.....                                                   | 767                                         |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 840                                         |
| Fry, Samuel. Mentioned.....                                                                   | 541                                         |
| Fry, William H.                                                                               |                                             |
| Correspondence with Christopher C. Augur.....                                                        | 832                                         |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 832, 843, 844, 919, 942                     |
| Fuller, Richard A. Mentioned.....                                                             | 616                                         |
| Fullwood, Samuel L. Mentioned.....                                                            | 980                                         |
| Fulton, Steamer. Mentioned.....                                                               | 919                                         |
| Funk, John H. S. Mentioned.....                                                               | 565, 1003, 1012                             |
| Furney, Luther. Mentioned.....                                                                | 110, 129, 410, 411, 982                     |
| Furst, George. Mentioned.....                                                                 | 982                                         |
| Gageby, George W. Mentioned.....                                                              | 392                                         |
| Galpin, Henry M. Mentioned.....                                                               | 176                                         |
| Gamble, Henry R. Mentioned.....                                                               | 87, 648                                     |
| Gamble, William.                                                                              |                                             |
| Correspondence with Christopher C. Augur.....                                                        | 861, 942                                    |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 831, 978                                    |
| Gandy, Cornelius. Mentioned.....                                                              | 397, 398                                    |
| Ganey, Dennis. Mentioned.....                                                                 | 218                                         |
| Gansevoort, Henry S.                                                                          |                                             |
| Correspondence with Christopher C. Augur.....                                                        | 832, 845                                    |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 872, 882, 890, 897, 901, 910, 911, 918, 977 |
| Reports of Mosby's operations, Aug. 9–Oct. 14, 1864.....                                             | 616, 618                                    |
| Gapen, Henry C. Mentioned.....                                                                | 989                                         |
| Gardiner, Alexander. Mentioned.....                                                           | 109, 119, 325, 326                          |
| Gardner, Robert S.                                                                            |                                             |
| Correspondence with Quartermaster-General's Office, U. S. A.....                                     | 836                                         |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 624, 630, 790, 826, 849                     |
| Garland, Major. Mentioned.....                                                                | 772                                         |
| Garman, Henry G. Mentioned.....                                                               | 550                                         |
| Garrett, John W. Correspondence with War Department, U. S.....                                | 780                                         |
| Garrett, Thomas M. Mentioned.....                                                             | 1013                                        |
| Gates, Clarence. Mentioned.....                                                               | 546                                         |
| Gaus, George C. Mentioned.....                                                                | 394                                         |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Gause, Isaac. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 530, 550                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| George, Albert G. P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 566                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Georgia Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Artillery, Heavy— Battalions : 12th, 565, 1003.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Artillery, Light— Battalions : 9th, 1013. Batteries : Milledge, 567.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Cavalry— Battalions : 16th, 1004.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Infantry— Battalions : 3d, 566. Regiments : 4th, 564, 1002, 1013; 6th, 320; 10th, 566; 12th, 564, 1002, 1013; 13th, 565, 1003, 1012; 16th, 566; 18th, 550, 566; 21st, 564, 1002, 1013; 24th, 566; 26th, 31st, 38th, 565, 1003, 1012; 44th, 485, 551, 564, 1002, 1013; 50th, 51st, 53d, 566; 60th, 61st, 565, 1003, 1012. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Miscellaneous— Cobb's Legion , 474, 566; Phillips Legion , 566.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Getchell, Thomas. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 976                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Getty, George W.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 24, 26, 27, 33, 46, 48, 53, 54, 65, 67, 69, 107, 113, 120, 125, 126, 131, 147, 149-156, 159, 161, 163, 168, 169, 174, 187, 190, 194, 196-198, 201, 209-211, 216, 221, 225, 227, 231, 232, 251, 253-255, 257, 262, 271, 272, 274, 277, 291, 404, 492, 686, 743, 768, 778, 785, 814, 902, 984, |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 191, 193                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Ghiselin, James T.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 941                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 139                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gibbon, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 471                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gibbs, Alfred.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Dean, William .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 622                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| McKinney, Edward P.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 621                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Merritt, Wesley .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 825, 946                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Scott, Rufus .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 770                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Smith, Howard M.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 866, 964                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 56, 84, 94, 97, 98, 111, 130, 422, 423, 425, 438, 440, 469, 472, 475, 476, 479-482, 488, 801, 817, 861, 912, 921, 942, 946, 986                                                                                                                                                              |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 487                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gibbs, Frank C.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 110, 129, 414-416, 982                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 417                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gibson, John A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 614                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gibson, John C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 1012                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Gibson, Thomas.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Correspondence with William W. Averell .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 771                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 130, 494, 495, 505, 509                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 514                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gibson, Thomas S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 6, 994                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Gifford, Henry J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 193, 196                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Gilbert, Benjamin F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 111, 130, 527, 987                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Gilbert's Ford, Opequon Creek, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 13, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Sheridan , p. 46; itinerary , p. 68.                                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Gile, George W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 976                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gilliland, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 758                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gillis, Amos F. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 405                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gilliss, James. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 416                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Gilmor, Harry W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 56, 184, 186, 468, 571, 572, 726, 754, 858, 892                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Gilpin, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 627, 982                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

|                                                                                    | Page.                                          |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------|
| Giltner, Henry L. Mentioned .....                                           | 1013                                           |
| Gittings, Erskine. Mentioned .....                                          | 975                                            |
| Glascock, Alfred. Mentioned .....                                           | 634                                            |
| Glassie, Daniel W. Mentioned .....                                          | 982                                            |
| Gleason, Charles W. Mentioned .....                                         | 190                                            |
| Glidden, Jasper F. Mentioned .....                                          | 119                                            |
| Glover, Andrew S. Mentioned .....                                           | 130, 538, 539                                  |
| Gobin, J. P. Shindel. Mentioned .....                                       | 127                                            |
| Goddard, Elisha F. Mentioned .....                                          | 305, 324, 327                                  |
| Godwin, Ajalon. Mentioned .....                                             | 118                                            |
| Godwin, Archibald C.                                                        |                                                |
| Assignment to command .....                                                        | 995                                            |
| Mentioned .....                                                                    | 25, 552, 565, 582, 995, 1002, 1003, 1011, 1012 |
| Godwin, Joseph M.                                                           |                                                |
| Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                                       | 716                                            |
| Mentioned .....                                                                    | 888, 950                                       |
| Goebel, Christian H. Mentioned .....                                        | 889                                            |
| Goggin, James M.                                                            |                                                |
| Mentioned .....                                                                    | 566                                            |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                   | 593                                            |
| Goldsmith, Howard H. Mentioned .....                                        | 435, 874                                       |
| For correspondence as A. D. C., see Alfred T. A. Torbert.                   |                                                |
| Good, Tilghman H. Mentioned .....                                           | 108, 985                                       |
| Goode, John. Mentioned .....                                                | 584                                            |
| Goodwin, Amos G. Mentioned .....                                            | 315                                            |
| Gordon, David S. Mentioned .....                                            | 487                                            |
| Gordon, George A. Mentioned .....                                           | 954                                            |
| For correspondence, etc., see Wesley Merritt.                               |                                                |
| Gordon, Henry. Mentioned .....                                              | 540                                            |
| Gordon, John B. Mentioned .....                                             | 18,                                            |
| 24, 25, 39, 42, 422, 554, 555, 557, 561, 562, 565, 568–581, 583–587, 598, 605,     |                                                |
| 773, 911, 953, 966, 969, 1002, 1003, 1005, 1011, 1012, 1015–1024, 1026–1032        |                                                |
| Gordonsville, Va.                                                           |                                                |
| Expedition from Winchester to near, Dec. 19–28, 1864, including skir-              |                                                |
| mishes at Madison Court-House (21st), at Liberty Mills (22d),                      |                                                |
| and near Gordonsville (23d).                                                       |                                                |
| Casualties. Returns of. Union troops .....                                         | 679                                            |
| Reports of                                                                         |                                                |
| Lee, Robert E. ....                                                                | 679, 680                                       |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                                                           | 38, 39                                         |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A. ....                                                         | 39, 677                                        |
| Skirmish near, Dec. 23, 1864. See Gordonsville, Va. Expedition from Win-    |                                                |
| chester to near, Dec. 19–28, 1864, etc.                                     |                                                |
| Goresville, Va. Skirmish at, Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Daniel M. Keyes. .... | 670                                            |
| Gould, Joseph R. Mentioned .....                                            | 118, 350                                       |
| Gould, Marshall. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....               | 853                                            |
| Graham, Charles E. Mentioned .....                                          | 975                                            |
| Graham, Charles K. Mentioned .....                                          | 998                                            |
| Graham, Harvey.                                                             |                                                |
| Mentioned .....                                                                    | 109, 128, 986                                  |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                  | 337, 338                                       |
| Graham, John E. Mentioned .....                                             | 981                                            |
| Graham, John L. Mentioned .....                                             | 980                                            |
| Graham, Robert. Mentioned .....                                             | 670                                            |

|                                                                     | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                               |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Graham, Samuel.                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with Max Weber.....                                  | 702                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 620, 623, 628, 982                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Granger, Moses M.                                            |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 126, 223, 224, 228, 229, 248, 249, 261                                                                                                                                                              |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....     | 261                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Granniss, Samuel H. Mentioned.....                           | 316                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Grant, John V.                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 109, 286, 291, 986                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....     | 317                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Grant, Lewis A.                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 126, 131, 132, 194, 195, 197, 214–216, 220, 984                                                                                                                                                     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....     | 209                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Grant, U. S.                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Augur, Christopher C.....                                           | 727                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Halleck, Henry W.....                                               | 43, 681, 695, 708, 725, 775, 791, 840, 841, 905                                                                                                                                                     |
| Hoffman, William.....                                               | 799                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Hunter, David.....                                                  | 57, 697, 723                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Lincoln, Abraham.....                                               | 681                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                             | 39, 40, 61, 696, 709, 710, 719, 720, 737, 783, 791,799, 811, 822, 830, 841, 856, 869, 870, 880, 905, 906, 916, 932, 939, 952, 953                                                               |
| War Department, U. S.....                                           | 767, 856                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 1, 18, 19, 21, 25, 40,43, 44, 46, 50, 51, 58, 497, 519, 559–561, 564, 574, 586, 681, 696, 708, 709, 723,737, 741, 759, 783, 792, 811, 816, 843, 859, 862, 898, 906, 909, 992–995, 997, 1006 |
| Graves, William P. Mentioned.....                            | 975                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Gray, Augustine. Mentioned.....                              | 316                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Gray, John. Mentioned.....                                   | 335                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Green, A. W. Mentioned.....                                  | 609                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Green, Benjamin H. Mentioned.....                            | 495, 733, 764                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Green, Theodore J. Mentioned.....                            | 119                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Greenawalt, William G. Mentioned.....                        | 203                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Greene, Charles S. Mentioned.....                            | 108, 985                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Greene, Elias M. Mentioned.....                              | 899, 954                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Greene, William P. Mentioned.....                            | 124                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Greenfield, Andrew J.                                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with Alfred N. Duffié.....                           | 803                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 111, 130, 803, 983                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Green Spring Run, W. Va. Affair at, Nov. 1, 1864. Reports of |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                             | 649                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Kennedy, Robert P.....                                              | 650                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Gregg, David McM. Mentioned.....                             | 728, 791, 802, 918, 919, 999                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Gregory, John M. (Captain.) Mentioned.....                   | 995                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Gregory, John M. (Lieutenant.) Mentioned.....                | 175                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Grier, Thomas J. Mentioned.....                              | 541                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Grimes, Bryan.                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 564, 580, 583–585, 587, 598–601, 606, 1002, 1011, 1013, 1030, 1032                                                                                                                                  |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....     | 598                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Grimes, John. Mentioned.....                                 | 358, 359                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Grimshaw, Samuel. Mentioned.....                             | 479                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Grogan, Michael A. Mentioned.....                            | 1003                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Gross, Frank P. Mentioned.....                               | 981                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Grover, Andrew J. Mentioned.....                             | 545, 546                                                                                                                                                                                            |

|                                                                                                                                 | Page                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Grover, Charles E. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 331                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Grover, Cuvier.                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Augur, Christopher C .....                                                                                                      | 778                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Emory, William H .....                                                                                                          | 825                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Halleck, Henry W .....                                                                                                          | 711, 729                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 18, 32, 43,44, 55, 76, 80, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 164, 279-293, 295-304, 306-314, 318, 319,321-325, 328, 329, 333, 334, 339-342, 344, 345, 347-349, 351-354, 356, 359, 727,759, 761, 776, 783, 792, 793, 803, 811, 812, 815, 817, 818, 824, 830, 841, 944, 986 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                | 318                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Grow, Leavious H. Mentioned .....                                                                                        | 421                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Guard Hill, Va. Engagement at. See Cedarville (Guard Hill, or Front Royal),Va. Engagement at, Aug. 16, 1864. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Gump, John A. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 138, 224, 229, 250, 252, 270                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Guthrie, Herbert F. Mentioned .....                                                                                      | 418                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hagans, Harrison H.                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Correspondence with Nathan Wilkinson .....                                                                                      | 750                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 983                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Report of skirmish near Centerville, W. Va., Sept. 14, 1864 .....                                                               | 639                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hagerstown, Md. Skirmishes at.                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Aug. 5, 1864 .....                                                                                                              | 1                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Aug. 15, 1864. See Williamsport and Hagerstown, Md. Skirmishes at.                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Hague, Albert G.                                                                                                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 514                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                | 514                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hale, Frank B. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 540                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hale, Joseph. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 987                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Haley, Eben D. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 128, 323, 359                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Haley, John P. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 119                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hall, Charles N. Mentioned .....                                                                                         | 402                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hall, Charles P. Mentioned .....                                                                                         | 305                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hall, Edward. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 139                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hall, Henry T. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 147, 921                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Hall, Houston. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 82, 87, 646-648                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Hall, James A. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 975                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hall, James R. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 129, 139, 404, 406                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Hall, Josephus M. Mentioned .....                                                                                        | 1013                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Hall, Moses S. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 129, 374, 392, 393                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Halleck, Henry W.                                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Augur, Christopher C .....                                                                                                      | 727, 776, 793, 860, 861                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Barnes, James .....                                                                                                             | 778                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Couch, Darius N .....                                                                                                           | 693, 706, 718, 719, 774, 782, 808, 821, 828, 939, 973                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Foster, John G .....                                                                                                            | 919                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Grant, U. S. ....                                                                                                               | 43, 681, 695, 708, 725, 775, 791, 840, 841, 905                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Grover, Cuvier .....                                                                                                            | 711, 729                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Hart, Thompson D .....                                                                                                          | 944                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Heine, William .....                                                                                                            | 860                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Hunter, David .....                                                                                                             | 684, 685, 698, 699, 709, 747                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....                                                                                                        | 821                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Ohio, Governor of .....                                                                                                         | 931                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                                                        | 37, 51, 720,725, 726, 737, 759, 783, 792, 811, 812, 830, 841, 842, 857, 917, 932, 940, 953, 961                                                                                                                                                                          |

|                                                                                                                                 | Page                                                                                                                                         |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Halleck, Henry W. —Continued.                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 40, 51, 52, 644, 645, 681, 688, 706, 723, 727, 729, 767, 775, 776, 783, 793, 822, 840, 855, 857, 880, 889, 896, 906, 917, 926, 932, 940, 957 |
| For correspondence as Chief of Staff, see U. S. Grant ; also War Department, U. S.                                |                                                                                                                                              |
| Hallenbeck, Edgar. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 335                                                                                                                                          |
| Halltown, W. Va.                                                                                                         |                                                                                                                                              |
| Action at, Aug. 26, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                               |                                                                                                                                              |
| Duval, Isaac H.                                                                                                                 | Johnson, Daniel D.                                                                                                                           |
| Hayes, Rutherford B.                                                                                                            | Wells, George D.                                                                                                                             |
| Also itinerary , p. 83.                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                              |
| Skirmishes at.                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                              |
| Aug. 24, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                          |                                                                                                                                              |
| Coates, Benjamin F.                                                                                                             | Hayes, Rutherford B.                                                                                                                         |
| Duval, Isaac H.                                                                                                                 | Johnson, Daniel D.                                                                                                                           |
|                                                                                                                                 | Sheridan, Philip H.                                                                                                                          |
| Also journal of Hotchkiss , p. 570.                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                              |
| Aug. 25, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Gibbs , p. 488; Sheridan , p. 21. |                                                                                                                                              |
| Halsted, Edward L.                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 146, 147, 962                                                                                                                                |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                               | 148                                                                                                                                          |
| Hambleton, Charles E. Mentioned .....                                                                                    | 772                                                                                                                                          |
| Hamblin, Joseph E.                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 151, 154, 162, 163, 169, 170, 174, 175, 177, 180, 192, 984                                                          |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                | 177                                                                                                                                          |
| Hamilton, Theodore B. Mentioned .....                                                                                    | 107, 126, 196, 198, 200, 201, 984                                                                                                            |
| Hamlin, Charles. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Albion P. Howe .                                             |                                                                                                                                              |
| Hammond, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 519, 812, 835, 923, 934, 936                                                                                                                 |
| Hampton, Wade.                                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                              |
| Correspondence with Robert E. Lee .....                                                                                         | 996, 999                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 558, 995–997, 999                                                                                                                            |
| Hancock, David P. Mentioned .....                                                                                        | 979                                                                                                                                          |
| Hancock, John M. Mentioned .....                                                                                         | 1012                                                                                                                                         |
| Hancock, Winfield S. Mentioned .....                                                                                     | 767, 791                                                                                                                                     |
| Handy, George W. Mentioned .....                                                                                         | 331                                                                                                                                          |
| Hanford, Edward R. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 550                                                                                                                                          |
| Hanley, Timothy. Mentioned .....                                                                                         | 472, 475, 946                                                                                                                                |
| Hanlon, Joseph. Mentioned .....                                                                                          | 1003                                                                                                                                         |
| Hannum, Josiah C. Mentioned .....                                                                                        | 988                                                                                                                                          |
| Hardie, James A. For correspondence, etc., see Inspector-General's Office, U. S. A.                               |                                                                                                                                              |
| Hardin, Martin D.                                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                              |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                              |
| Augur, Christopher C. ....                                                                                                      | 682                                                                                                                                          |
| Hayward, William H. ....                                                                                                        | 696                                                                                                                                          |
| Kitching, J. Howard .....                                                                                                       | 882                                                                                                                                          |
| Thomas, Horace G. ....                                                                                                          | 889                                                                                                                                          |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 696, 813, 882, 889, 975                                                                                                                      |
| Harkins, Daniel H. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 867                                                                                                                                          |
| Harlan, William S. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 737                                                                                                                                          |
| Harlee, E. P. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 595                                                                                                                                          |

|                                                                         | Page                                                                                                    |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Harman, John A. Mentioned.....                                   | 575, 576, 585, 1000                                                                                     |
| Harness, William H. Mentioned.....                               | 645                                                                                                     |
| Harper, Albert M. Correspondence with Thomas A. Rowley.....      | 929                                                                                                     |
| Harper, John. Mentioned.....                                     | 125                                                                                                     |
| Harris, Enon M. Mentioned.....                                   | 979                                                                                                     |
| Harris, Leonard A. Mentioned.....                                | 799                                                                                                     |
| Harris, Thomas M.                                                |                                                                                                         |
| Correspondence with Milton Wells.....                                   | 397                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                          | 82, 110, 115,123, 128, 129, 134, 135, 365, 367-372, 376, 378, 380, 387, 388, 390, 392, 418, 982     |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864..           | 371, 372, 387, 390                                                                                      |
| Harrison, Charles J. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley..... | 798,878, 951, 959, 968                                                                              |
| Harrison, George W.                                              |                                                                                                         |
| Mentioned.....                                                          | 735, 748                                                                                                |
| Report of skirmishes at Moorefield, W. Va., Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc.....  | 665                                                                                                     |
| Harrison, Henry N. Correspondence with William W. Averell.....   | 764                                                                                                     |
| Harrison, William H. Mentioned.....                              | 488                                                                                                     |
| Hart, Alexander. Mentioned.....                                  | 1003                                                                                                    |
| Hart, Robert McD. Mentioned.....                                 | 138, 305, 321, 323, 348                                                                                 |
| Hart, Thompson D.                                                |                                                                                                         |
| Correspondence with Henry W. Halleck.....                               | 944                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                          | 977                                                                                                     |
| Hart, William E. Mentioned.....                                  | 550                                                                                                     |
| Hart, William T. Mentioned.....                                  | 575, 583, 584, 1028                                                                                     |
| Harvie, Charles I. Mentioned.....                                | 614                                                                                                     |
| Hasbrouck, Matthew. Mentioned.....                               | 345                                                                                                     |
| Haslett, John R. Mentioned.....                                  | 751                                                                                                     |
| Hasson, Benjamin F. Mentioned.....                               | 186                                                                                                     |
| Hastings, Gideon A. Mentioned.....                               | 300                                                                                                     |
| Hastings, Mathew. Mentioned.....                                 | 707, 979                                                                                                |
| Hastings, Russell. Mentioned.....                                | 402, 407                                                                                                |
| Hastings, Smith H. Mentioned.....                                | 111, 130, 458, 460, 461                                                                                 |
| Haswell, Alvah R. Mentioned.....                                 | 546                                                                                                     |
| Hatch, Charles H. Mentioned.....                                 | 975                                                                                                     |
| Hatch, Lorenzo W. Mentioned.....                                 | 650                                                                                                     |
| Haurand, August. Mentioned.....                                  | 111                                                                                                     |
| Havens, William H. Mentioned.....                                | 103                                                                                                     |
| Hawkins, Hamilton S. Mentioned.....                              | 988                                                                                                     |
| Hawkins, Henry J. Mentioned.....                                 | 248, 253                                                                                                |
| Hayden, Augustine F. Mentioned.....                              | 843                                                                                                     |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Philip H. Sheridan.          |                                                                                                         |
| Hayden, Ferdinand V. Mentioned.....                              | 141, 145                                                                                                |
| Hayden, George B. Mentioned.....                                 | 540                                                                                                     |
| Hayes, Rutherford B.                                             |                                                                                                         |
| Mentioned.....                                                          | 110, 116, 123, 129,135, 227, 360, 363-366, 370, 373, 378, 379, 384, 385, 392, 399-402, 405-410, 982 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....        | 401-403, 405                                                                                            |
| Haynes, Charles L. Mentioned.....                                | 1012                                                                                                    |
| Haynes, Isaac B. Mentioned.....                                  | 540                                                                                                     |
| Hays, Harry T. Mentioned.....                                    | 25, 565, 609, 1003, 1011, 1012                                                                          |
| Hays, William.                                                   |                                                                                                         |
| Correspondence with John A. Dix.....                                    | 961                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                          | 961                                                                                                     |

|                                                                       | Page.                                   |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------|
| Hayslip, Carey B. Mentioned.....                               | 400                                     |
| Hayward, William H. Correspondence with Martin D. Hardin ..... | 696                                     |
| Healy, John G.                                                 |                                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                       | 128                                     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....       | 327                                     |
| Heaton, Edward. Mentioned.....                                 | 550                                     |
| Hebble, Christian B. Mentioned .....                           | 980                                     |
| Heck, Jonathan M. Mentioned.....                               | 582                                     |
| Heermance, William L. Mentioned.....                           | 475                                     |
| Heine, Charles. Mentioned.....                                 | 975                                     |
| Heine, William.                                                |                                         |
| Correspondence with Henry W. Halleck .....                            | 860                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                       | 861, 977                                |
| Heintzelman, Samuel P. Mentioned .....                         | 750, 951                                |
| Heiskell, Felix. Mentioned .....                               | 565                                     |
| Heller, Edward. Mentioned.....                                 | 234, 240                                |
| Henagan, John W. Mentioned.....                                | 24, 530, 592, 593, 893                  |
| Hendershott, Isaac R. Mentioned .....                          | 224                                     |
| Henesy, Philip. Mentioned.....                                 | 538                                     |
| Henry, Joseph.                                                 |                                         |
| Correspondence with War Department, U. S.....                         | 810                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                       | 810                                     |
| Henry, Robert. Mentioned.....                                  | 331                                     |
| Henry, William W. Mentioned .....                              | 126, 226, 229, 550                      |
| Hensley, William B. Mentioned.....                             | 566                                     |
| Heppler, John. Mentioned .....                                 | 119, 198                                |
| Herrick, Bryant B. Mentioned .....                             | 540                                     |
| Hersey, Francis L. Mentioned .....                             | 400                                     |
| Hertzog, W. T. Mentioned.....                                  | 648                                     |
| Hess, Robert N. Mentioned.....                                 | 124, 403                                |
| Hess, Thomas. Mentioned .....                                  | 393                                     |
| Heth, Henry. Mentioned .....                                   | 1016                                    |
| Hewett, Jacob. Mentioned.....                                  | 724                                     |
| Hibbert, Joseph, jr. Mentioned .....                           | 305, 321                                |
| Hibbs, Van B. Correspondence with John H. Oley .....           | 879                                     |
| Hickman, Baynton J.                                            |                                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                       | 107, 125, 982, 984                      |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....       | 187                                     |
| Hicks, George W. Mentioned.....                                | 400                                     |
| Hicks, John A. Mentioned.....                                  | 224, 231, 232                           |
| Higginbotham, John C. Mentioned.....                           | 1012                                    |
| Higinbotham, Thomas H. Mentioned.....                          | 125, 138, 174                           |
| Hill, Ambrose P. Mentioned .....                               | 737, 772, 791, 322, 832, 842, 1016–1018 |
| Hill, Daniel G. Mentioned.....                                 | 119, 243                                |
| Hill, Joseph C.                                                |                                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                       | 126                                     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....       | 254                                     |
| Hill, Lewis H. Mentioned.....                                  | 1013                                    |
| Hill, Wallace. Mentioned.....                                  | 977                                     |
| Hilliard, Edward R. Mentioned.....                             | 138, 263                                |
| Hiltz, John U. Mentioned .....                                 | 402, 407                                |
| Hinkle, A.                                                     |                                         |
| Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                          | 887, 959                                |
| Mentioned .....                                                       | 950, 959                                |
| Hinkley, Harry. Mentioned .....                                | 398                                     |

|                                                                                                                     | Page.                                           |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|
| Hinkson, Hezekiah. Mentioned.....                                                                            | 128                                             |
| Hinrichs, Oscar. Mentioned.....                                                                              | 585                                             |
| Hiser, Edwin P. Mentioned.....                                                                               | *276                                            |
| Hobbs, Joshua E.                                                                                             |                                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                      | 641, 642, 644                                   |
| Report of Nounnan's expedition into Kanawha Valley, W. Va., Sept. 23-Oct. 1, 1864.....                          | 643                                             |
| Hobson, E. La Fayette. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 564, 598                                        |
| Hoffman, John J. Mentioned .....                                                                             | 111, 130, 983                                   |
| Hoffman, John S. Mentioned .....                                                                             | 565, 1012                                       |
| Hoffman, William. Correspondence with U. S. Grant.....                                                       | 799                                             |
| Hoge, George W.                                                                                              |                                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                      | 108, 126, 223, 248, 249                         |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                    | 263, 265                                        |
| Hoke, Robert F. Mentioned.....                                                                               | 823, 995, 1012                                  |
| Holliday, Frederick W. M. Mentioned.....                                                                     | 1012                                            |
| Holliday, John W.                                                                                            |                                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                      | 110, 129, 387, 390, 398, 982                    |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                     | 396                                             |
| Holman, Charles. Mentioned.....                                                                              | 129, 415, 420                                   |
| Holman, Silas A. Mentioned.....                                                                              | 139                                             |
| Holt, Erastus D. Mentioned .....                                                                             | 108, 126, 985                                   |
| Holt, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                  | 395                                             |
| Holt, Willis C. Mentioned .....                                                                              | 566, 591                                        |
| Hood, John B. Mentioned.....                                                                                 | 953                                             |
| Hooker, Joseph. Mentioned.....                                                                               | 992-994                                         |
| Hooper, Thomas W. Mentioned .....                                                                            | 281                                             |
| Hopewell Gap, Va. Scout from Fairfax Court-House to, Dec. 26-27, 1864.Report of John Sargent.....        | 680                                             |
| Hopkins, Murganzy. Mentioned .....                                                                           | 544                                             |
| Horn, John W. Mentioned .....                                                                                | 108, 222, 224, 246, 247, 253, 985               |
| Hornbrook, Henry H. Mentioned .....                                                                          | 369, 388, 389, 630                              |
| Horton, Giles G.                                                                                             |                                                 |
| Correspondence with Henry M. Lazelle .....                                                                          | 955, 963                                        |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                      | 638, 639, 897, 899, 933, 942-944, 955, 971, 977 |
| Horton, Jere. Mentioned .....                                                                                | 790                                             |
| Hosack, William H. Mentioned.....                                                                            | 720, 843                                        |
| Hosford, Benjamin F. Mentioned .....                                                                         | 137, 174, 180                                   |
| Hotchkiss, Jed.                                                                                              |                                                 |
| Journal of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                   | 567                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                     | 561, 567, 1015                                  |
| Reports of                                                                                                          |                                                 |
| Operations of 2d Army Corps, Army of Northern Virginia and Armyof the Valley District, May 3-Nov. 14, 1864..... | 1015                                            |
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                               | 1023                                            |
| Hough, Ira. Mentioned.....                                                                                   | 348, 550                                        |
| Houghton, George C. Mentioned.....                                                                           | 989                                             |
| Houseworth, Scott. Mentioned .....                                                                           | 118                                             |
| Houston, William M. Mentioned .....                                                                          | 230                                             |
| Howard, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                             | 1000                                            |
| Howard, Henry M. Mentioned.....                                                                              | 331                                             |
| Howard, Ocran H.                                                                                             |                                                 |
| Correspondence with Philip H. Sheridan.....                                                                         | 147                                             |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                      | 826                                             |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                     | 146                                             |

|                                                                    | Page.                                                      |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| Howard, Orson. Mentioned .....                              | 138, 229, 257                                              |
| Howe, Albion P.                                             |                                                            |
| • Assignment to command .....                                      | 741                                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                |                                                            |
| Cook, Roger E .....                                                | 724                                                        |
| Hunter, David .....                                                | 685, 687, 699, 701, 712                                    |
| Mentioned .....                                                    | 685, 698, 699, 709, 722, 723, 725, 731, 733, 739, 741, 975 |
| Howe, Shesh B. Mentioned .....                              | 509                                                        |
| Howe, William R. Mentioned .....                            | 781                                                        |
| Howell, Folger. Mentioned .....                             | 647-649                                                    |
| Howes, Fenelon. Mentioned .....                             | 398                                                        |
| Howland, Ten Eyck C. Mentioned .....                        | 176                                                        |
| Howrigan, Thomas M. Mentioned .....                         | 462, 986                                                   |
| Hoy, John F.                                                |                                                            |
| Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                       | 692, 704, 950, 959, 968                                    |
| Mentioned .....                                                    | 706                                                        |
| Hoyer, Joseph S. Mentioned .....                            | 95, 441, 488                                               |
| Hoyt, James J. Mentioned .....                              | 109, 340, 343, 345                                         |
| Hoyt, John L. Mentioned .....                               | 138                                                        |
| Hubbard, Horace. Mentioned .....                            | 118                                                        |
| Hubbard, James. Mentioned .....                             | 178, 179                                                   |
| Hubbard, Thomas H. Mentioned .....                          | 127                                                        |
| Hubbard, William H. Mentioned .....                         | 211                                                        |
| Huble, William H. H. Mentioned .....                        | 204                                                        |
| Hufty, Baldwin.                                             |                                                            |
| Mentioned .....                                                    | 107, 125, 131, 155, 170, 171, 177, 178                     |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....  | 165, 167, 171                                              |
| Hughey, John. Mentioned .....                               | 540                                                        |
| Huidekoper, John. Mentioned .....                           | 623, 626, 627                                              |
| Hull, E. J. C. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley ..... | 878, 926                                                   |
| Hull, John. Mentioned .....                                 | 128, 384                                                   |
| Hull, Walter C.                                             |                                                            |
| Mentioned .....                                                    | 36, 111, 437, 518, 519, 535, 538, 540, 987                 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....   | 537                                                        |
| Hullinger, Josiah C. Mentioned .....                        | 980                                                        |
| Humes, James. Mentioned .....                               | 398                                                        |
| Humphreys, Benjamin G. Mentioned .....                      | 566, 591, 594, 893                                         |
| Humphreys, John M. Mentioned .....                          | 565                                                        |
| Hunsdon, Charles. Mentioned .....                           | 126                                                        |
| Hunt, Lewis C. Mentioned .....                              | 987                                                        |
| Hunt, Lucius T.                                             |                                                            |
| Mentioned .....                                                    | 108                                                        |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....   | 243                                                        |
| Hunt, William B. Mentioned .....                            | 331                                                        |
| Hunter, Andrew. Mentioned .....                             | 582                                                        |
| Hunter, David.                                              |                                                            |
| Correspondence with                                                |                                                            |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A .....                           | 698                                                        |
| Averell, William W .....                                           | 688, 713, 733, 734, 748                                    |
| Duffié, Alfred N .....                                             | 703, 713, 733                                              |
| Emory, William H .....                                             | 687, 700, 710                                              |
| Grant, U. S .....                                                  | 57, 697, 723                                               |
| Halleck, Henry W .....                                             | 684, 685, 698, 699, 709, 747                               |
| Howe, Albion P .....                                               | 685, 687, 699, 701, 712                                    |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Page                                                                                                                                                 |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Hunter, David —Continued.                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Kelley, Benjamin F. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 685, 687, 688, 702, 712, 724, 731, 732                                                                                                               |
| Lincoln, Abraham .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 723                                                                                                                                                  |
| Lowell, Charles R., jr. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 712                                                                                                                                                  |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 730                                                                                                                                                  |
| Sullivan, Jeremiah C. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 723                                                                                                                                                  |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 3, 40, 55, 81, 493, 495, 558, 596, 681, 685, 688, 695, 696, 701, 708, 709, 712, 719, 723, 726, 734, 735, 739, 749, 754, 765, 940, 960, 962, 995, 996 |
| Relieved from command of Department of West Virginia .....                                                                                                                                                                                 | 962                                                                                                                                                  |
| Huntley, John H. Correspondence with Max Weber .....                                                                                                                                                                                | 702                                                                                                                                                  |
| Hupp's Hill, Va. Skirmish at. See Strasburg (or Hupp's Hill), Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 14, 1864.                                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Hussey, George W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 331, 335                                                                                                                                             |
| Husted, Elmer E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 385                                                                                                                                                  |
| Hutchinson, John W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 785                                                                                                                                                  |
| Hutchinson, R. R. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 600                                                                                                                                                  |
| Hutchinson, Thomas P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                               | 989                                                                                                                                                  |
| Huttonsville, W. Va.                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Affair at, Aug. 24, 1864. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Kelley, Benjamin F. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 926, 937, 951                                                                                                                                        |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 926                                                                                                                                                  |
| Sinclair, William .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 908                                                                                                                                                  |
| Wilkinson, Nathan .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 904                                                                                                                                                  |
| Youart, Robert .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 904                                                                                                                                                  |
| Skirmish at, Aug. 5, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 1                                                                                                                                                    |
| Hyatt, Thomas J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 119, 247, 264                                                                                                                                        |
| Hyde, Thomas W. Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                    | 214                                                                                                                                                  |
| Illinois Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Artillery, Light— Regiments : 1st ( Batteries ), L , 2, 87, 89, 652, 656, 657, 660, 983.                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 8th , 646, 680, 728, 729, 762, 765, 776, 798, 808, 823, 831, 843, 872, 889, 897, 898, 909, 918, 920, 941, 942, 955, 978, 979.                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Infantry— Regiments : 23d , 110, 115, 123, 129, 372, 386–388, 390, 982.                                                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Ilsley, Edwin. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 109, 128, 304, 325, 340                                                                                                                              |
| Imboden, John D. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 84, 87, 463, 486, 493, 506, 509, 566, 610–612, 645, 683, 686, 692, 811, 968, 993, 1003, 1004, 1018, 1019, 1022, 1023                                 |
| Indiana Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : 16th , 977; 17th , 109, 115, 123, 128, 134, 286, 287, 342, 986.                                                                                                                         |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 3d , 111, 117, 130, 978, 987.                                                                                                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Infantry— Regiments : 8th , 109, 115, 122, 128, 134, 346, 347, 349, 986; 11th , 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 319, 320, 330, 332–334, 336–338, 340, 986; 18th , 109, 115, 122, 128, 134, 346, 349, 353, 986.        |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Ingalls, Rufus. Correspondence with Quartermaster-General's Office, U. S. A. ....                                                                                                                                                   | 696                                                                                                                                                  |
| Inspector-General's Office, U. S. A. Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 738, 759                                                                                                                                             |
| Sinclair, William .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 685, 686, 699, 908                                                                                                                                   |
| Inwood, Henry C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 300                                                                                                                                                  |
| Iowa Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                      |
| Infantry— Regiments : 22d , 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 322, 330–334, 337–339, 356, 986; 24th , 109, 115, 122, 128, 134, 346, 348–354, 986; 28th , 109, 115, 122, 128, 134, 320, 345–347, 349, 352, 354–356, 986. |                                                                                                                                                      |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Iredell, Jonathan P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                   | 269                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Ireland, Oscar B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 146, 147                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Irish, Nathaniel. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 982                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Itineraries. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.                                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Ives, Brayton. Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                        | 535                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jackman, Theodore. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 542                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jackman, William. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 118                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jackson, Albert T. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 119, 455, 462                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Jackson, Daniel D. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 125                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jackson, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 514                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jackson, Lyman J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 799                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jackson, Nathaniel J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                  | 987, 988                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Jackson, Thomas J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 602                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jackson, William L. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 39, 87, 566, 568–570, 573, 574, 576, 610–612, 677, 753, 754, 925, 926, 932, 1003, 1004, 1018, 1021–1025, 1027, 1028                                                                                         |
| Jacobson, William C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                   | 383                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| James, Leroy C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 565                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| James, Lyman. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                          | 138                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| James River, Va. Demonstration on the north bank of, and engagement at Deep Bottom (or Darbytown, Strawberry Plains, and New Market Road), July 27–29, 1864. See report of Devin , p. 470; also Vol. XL, Pt. I. |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Jameson, James B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 976                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Janeway, Jacob J.                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 108, 126                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                      | 235                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jennings, Isaac A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 989                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Jennings, John S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 983                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Johnson, Bradley T.                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Correspondence with Thomas H. Wynne .....                                                                                                                                                                              | 994                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 25, 86, 431, 468, 494, 495, 506, 509, 518, 551, 566, 569, 570, 572, 574, 610–612, 683, 689, 693, 702, 704, 706, 724, 726, 734, 741, 753, 754, 764, 936, 939, 946, 990, 991, 994, 997, 1003, 1004, 1021–1027 |
| Reports of                                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| New Creek, W. Va. Action at, Aug. 4, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                        | 4                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Oldfields, W. Va. Engagement at, near Moorefield, Aug. 7, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                   | 4                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Johnson, Charles F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 979                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Johnson, Daniel D.                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 55, 110, 116, 360, 399–402, 405, 412, 982                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                      | 408, 409                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Johnson, Edward. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                       | 565, 609, 952, 1003, 1011, 1012                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Johnson, Enoch E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 107, 126, 197, 208, 209                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Johnson, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 175                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Johnson, William H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 108, 119, 149, 164, 271, 272, 274, 275                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Johnston [?], ———. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 961                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Johnston, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                       | 977                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Johnston, Joseph E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 555                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Johnston, J. Stoddard. For correspondence as A. A. G., see John C. Breckinridge .                                                                                                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Johnston, Louis M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 977                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Johnston, Robert D. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 565, 1002, 1003, 1011, 1013                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Johnston, Robert E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 976                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Johnston, Robert S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 984                                                                                                                                                                                                         |

|                                                                                                                                                         | Page                                                                                                               |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Johnston, Thomas P. Correspondence with James H. Wilson.....                                                                                     | 948                                                                                                                |
| Jones, Abram. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                     | 736                                                                                                                |
| Jones, Daniel A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 146-148                                                                                                            |
| Jones, Edward. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 138                                                                                                                |
| Jones, Edward S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 710, 739                                                                                                           |
| Jones, Edward W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 125, 180                                                                                                           |
| Jones, John M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 609, 1012, 1015                                                                                                    |
| Jones, Joseph. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 564                                                                                                                |
| Jones, Julius A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 138                                                                                                                |
| Jones, Marcellus E. Mentioned.....                                                                                                               | 978                                                                                                                |
| Jones, Strother. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 569, 573                                                                                                           |
| Jones, William E. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                 | 1013, 1018, 1021                                                                                                   |
| Jordan, F. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                        | 758                                                                                                                |
| Judd, Henry B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 766, 807                                                                                                           |
| Kabletown, W. Va. Skirmishes at.                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                    |
| Nov. 18, 1864.....                                                                                                                                      | 10                                                                                                                 |
| Nov. 20, 1864.....                                                                                                                                      | 10                                                                                                                 |
| Nov. 30, 1864.....                                                                                                                                      | 2                                                                                                                  |
| Kaiser, William J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                | 214                                                                                                                |
| Kanawha Valley, W. Va.                                                                                                                           |                                                                                                                    |
| Nounnan's expedition into, Sept. 23-Oct. 1, 1864, including skirmish atCoalsmouth (Sept. 30). Reports of                                            |                                                                                                                    |
| Hobbs, Joshua E.....                                                                                                                                    | 643                                                                                                                |
| Nounnan, James H.....                                                                                                                                   | 642                                                                                                                |
| Sullivan, Jeremiah C.....                                                                                                                               | 641                                                                                                                |
| Witcher's operations in, Nov. 5-12, 1864, including capture of U. S. steam-ers Barnum and Fawn on the Big Sandy River.                              |                                                                                                                    |
| Communication from Robert E. Lee.....                                                                                                                   | 650                                                                                                                |
| Reports of Vincent A. Witcher.....                                                                                                                      | 650, 651                                                                                                           |
| Karr, Hamilton L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                 | 377, 380, 381                                                                                                      |
| Kautz, August V. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 104                                                                                                                |
| Kavaney, Thomas. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 211                                                                                                                |
| Kearneysville, W. Va.                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                    |
| Action near, Aug. 25, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov.28, 1864. Reports of                                           |                                                                                                                    |
| Deane, Charles W.                                                                                                                                       | Kidd, James H.                                                                                                     |
| Devin, Thomas C.                                                                                                                                        | Merritt, Wesley.                                                                                                   |
| Gibbs, Alfred.                                                                                                                                          | Torbert, Alfred T. A.                                                                                              |
|                                                                                                                                                         | Wilson, James H.                                                                                                   |
| Also itineraries , pp. 90, 92, 95, 101, 105; Wilson to Sheridan , p. 912.                                                                 |                                                                                                                    |
| Skirmish at, Aug. 23, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov.28, 1864. Reports of Brewer , p. 468; Sheridan , p. 45. |                                                                                                                    |
| Kearsley, J. B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                   | 87, 648                                                                                                            |
| Keedysville, Md. Skirmish at, Aug. 5, 1864.....                                                                                                  | 1                                                                                                                  |
| Keene, John R. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 980                                                                                                                |
| Keifer, J. Warren.                                                                                                                               |                                                                                                                    |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                          | 73, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132,159, 161, 175, 176, 221-225, 230, 232, 234, 236, 251, 254, 256, 258, 259, 264, 985 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                        | 225, 246                                                                                                           |
| Keller, Captain. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 569                                                                                                                |
| Keller, David C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 126, 200                                                                                                           |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                    |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                     |                                                                                                                    |
| Averell, William W.....                                                                                                                                 | 688-692, 704, 713, 714, 734, 735, 748, 771, 781, 797, 804, 838, 937, 950, 967, 972                             |
| Brenaman, A. T.....                                                                                                                                     | 829, 838                                                                                                           |

Kelley, Benjamin F.—Continued.

Page.

Correspondence with

|                                                |                                                                      |
|------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Bunker, E. E. ....                             | 705, 716                                                             |
| Byers, John A. ....                            | 690                                                                  |
| Couch, Darius N. ....                          | 694, 702, 706                                                        |
| Crook, George ....                             | 648, 662, 781, 790, 805, 806, 853, 868, 887, 915, 926, 938, 950, 958 |
| Duffié, Alfred N. ....                         | 688, 703, 704, 713, 733, 748, 763                                    |
| Faris, Joseph A. ....                          | 888, 950                                                             |
| Ford, Joseph B. ....                           | 895                                                                  |
| Godwin, Joseph M. ....                         | 716                                                                  |
| Gould, Marshall. ....                          | 853                                                                  |
| Halleck, Henry W. ....                         | 821                                                                  |
| Harrison, Charles J. ....                      | 798, 878, 951, 959, 968                                              |
| Hinkle, A. ....                                | 887, 959                                                             |
| Hoy, John F. ....                              | 692, 704, 950, 959, 968                                              |
| Hull, E. J. C. ....                            | 878, 926                                                             |
| Hunter, David. ....                            | 685, 687, 688, 702, 712, 724, 731, 732                               |
| Latham, George R. ....                         | 658, 659, 669                                                        |
| Marker, Caleb. ....                            | 938                                                                  |
| Miller, Frank B. ....                          | 894, 904                                                             |
| North Branch, Md., Commanding Officer at. .... | 715                                                                  |
| Pease, Harry. ....                             | 959                                                                  |
| Petrie, Peter B. ....                          | 878, 888, 894, 915, 938, 951, 959, 968                               |
| Sheets, Daniel. ....                           | 927                                                                  |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                       | 732, 749, 772, 790, 839, 926, 967                                    |
| South, Zedekiah. ....                          | 705                                                                  |
| Stevenson, John D. ....                        | 829                                                                  |
| Stevenson, Robert. ....                        | 692, 704, 715, 764, 853, 868, 887, 894, 916                          |
| Sullivan, Jeremiah C. ....                     | 736, 806                                                             |
| West Virginia, Governor of. ....               | 712, 724, 749, 838, 950                                              |
| Wilkinson, Nathan. ....                        | 705, 750, 839, 879, 894, 895, 904                                    |
| Yeakle, C. C. ....                             | 703                                                                  |

|                 |                                                                                                                                          |
|-----------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Mentioned. .... | 4, 20, 81, 86, 88, 89, 493, 503, 647, 654, 669, 684, 685, 688, 693, 694, 703, 706, 725, 741, 749, 764, 780, 798, 889, 916, 917, 927, 983 |
|-----------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

Reports of

|                                                                      |     |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Green Spring Run, W. Va. Affair at, Nov. 1, 1864. ....               | 649 |
| Moorefield, W. Va. Skirmishes at, Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc. ....        | 655 |
| New Creek, W. Va. Action at, Aug. 4, 1864. ....                      | 2   |
| Oldfields, W. Va. Engagement at, near Moorefield, Aug. 7, 1864. .... | 2   |

Kelley, Stephen S. Mentioned. .... 542

Kelley, Tappan W. Mentioned. .... 645

Kelley, William B. For correspondence as A. D. C., see Benjamin F. Kelley.

Kellogg, Horace.

|                                            |     |
|--------------------------------------------|-----|
| Correspondence with Thomas F. Wildes. .... | 385 |
|--------------------------------------------|-----|

|                 |          |
|-----------------|----------|
| Mentioned. .... | 128, 381 |
|-----------------|----------|

|                                                                  |     |
|------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. .... | 385 |
|------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|

Kellogg, John. Mentioned. .... 57, 738, 759, 842

Kellogg, Josiah H. Mentioned. .... 97, 678

Kelly, James L. Mentioned. .... 732

Kelly, Michael. Mentioned. .... 421

Kelly, Thomas. Mentioned. .... 551

Kelton, John C. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Henry W. Halleck.

Kemper, James L. Mentioned. .... 991

Kempf, Charles W. Mentioned. .... 107, 125, 984

|                                                                                                                                       | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Kenan, Thomas S. Mentioned .....                                                                                               | 1012                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Kendall, Alvah F. Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 413                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kendall, Thomas C. Mentioned .....                                                                                             | 980                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kenly, John R.                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Correspondence with Philip H. Sheridan .....                                                                                          | 620                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Mentioned..... 18, 67, 187, 484, 622, 623, 626-630, 632, 634, 740, 786, 842, 849, 850, 982                                            |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Testimony of. Board of Inquiry on attack on Union supply train, Aug. 13, 1864 .....                                                   | 623-627                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Kennedy, Charles W. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 341, 343                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Kennedy, Robert P. Report of affair at Green Spring Run, W. Va., Nov. 1, 1864 .....                                            | 650                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see George Crook .                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Kennedy, Thomas B. Mentioned .....                                                                                             | 211                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kennedy, William H. H. Mentioned .....                                                                                         | 278, 279                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Kennington, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                             | 988                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kenny, Alexander J. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 109, 128, 137, 305, 348, 986                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Kent, J. Ford. Mentioned .....                                                                                                 | 173                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kentucky Troops. Mentioned. (Union.)                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : 1st, 982.                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Kerfoot, John Barret. Mentioned .....                                                                                          | 568                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kernstown, Va.                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Expedition from, to Lacey's Springs. See Lacey's Springs, Va. Expedition from Kernstown to, Dec. 19-22, 1864, etc.             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Skirmishes near.                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Nov. 10, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Robert E. Lee, p. 553; itinerary, p. 64.        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Nov. 11, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Cummings, p. 548; itineraries, pp. 64, 68, 100. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Kerr, Thomas K. Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 495, 505, 726                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Kershaw, Joseph B. Mentioned .....                                                                                             | 19, 21, 23-25, 28-30, 44-46, 49, 361, 405, 423, 437, 439, 442, 450, 461, 464, 486, 504, 513, 530, 531, 556-558, 560-562, 566, 569, 570, 576-581, 583, 584, 589, 590, 594, 599, 604, 791, 811, 822, 841, 856, 870, 893, 932, 936, 953, 961, 1007, 1011, 1024, 1027-1032 |
| Ketchum, Edwin N. Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 341                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Keyes, Daniel M.                                                                                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                       | 982                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Report of skirmish at Goresville, Va., Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                            | 670                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Keyes, Richard. Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 540                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Keyser, Benjamin U.                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Correspondence with War Department, U. S. ....                                                                                        | 810                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                       | 810                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kibbee, Charles C. Mentioned .....                                                                                             | 592                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kidd, James H.                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                       | 111, 130, 136, 442-451, 454, 455, 458, 459, 461, 463, 467, 483, 491, 492, 510, 511, 986                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                     | 459, 463                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Kilburn, Thomas. Mentioned .....                                                                                               | 138, 229, 263                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Killed and Wounded. See Confederate Troops and Union Troops. Casualties. Returns of.                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Kimball, Hiram A. Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 126, 240                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Kimball, William K. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 986                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kimbro, Robert. Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 550                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Kincheloe, James C. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 873                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| King, Dixon R. Mentioned .....                                                                                                 | 395                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |

|                                                                                                                | Page.                                          |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------|
| King, J. Floyd. Mentioned .....                                                                         | 552, 567, 1018                                 |
| King, Rufus, jr. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 975                                            |
| King, William H. H. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 388                                            |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Milton Wells .                                                      |                                                |
| Kingsbury, Charles, jr. Mentioned .....                                                                 | 940                                            |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Philip H. Sheridan .                                                |                                                |
| Kingsbury, John T. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 979                                            |
| Kingsbury, Joseph S. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 421                                            |
| Kinney, Edwin R. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 126, 211                                       |
| Kinney, Richard C. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 312, 313                                       |
| Kirby, Charles W. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 119, 369                                       |
| Kirk, James D. Mentioned .....                                                                          | 198                                            |
| Kirkpatrick, Thomas J. Mentioned .....                                                                  | 1011                                           |
| Kirtland, George P. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 982                                            |
| Kitching, J. Howard.                                                                                    |                                                |
| Correspondence with                                                                                            |                                                |
| Augur, Christopher C. ....                                                                                     | 813                                            |
| Hardin, Martin D. ....                                                                                         | 882                                            |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 33, 55, 129, 135, 137, 138, 366, 403, 417, 975 |
| Kleiser, Alfred von. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 982                                            |
| Klock, Augustus. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 910                                            |
| Klock, Jacob C. Mentioned .....                                                                         | 119                                            |
| Knight, Isaac D. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 416                                            |
| Knight, Napoleon B. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 644, 980                                       |
| Knorr, Charles A. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 278, 279                                       |
| Knott, Abraham R. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 354                                            |
| Knowlton, Daniel C. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 138                                            |
| Knowlton, William. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 108, 118, 293, 985                             |
| Koerner, P. W. Oscar. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 568, 572, 573                                  |
| Kohler, John B. Mentioned .....                                                                         | 107, 126, 138, 196, 198, 200, 201, 984         |
| Kreiger, B. Frank. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 198                                            |
| Krom, Abram H. Mentioned .....                                                                          | 111, 525, 541                                  |
| Kuhn, Charles H. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 250, 252                                       |
| Kurtz, Christian H. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 354                                            |
| Kusserow, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 982                                            |
| Kuykendall, Jacob P. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 139, 374                                       |
| Lacey's Springs, Va.                                                                                    |                                                |
| Action at, Dec. 21, 1864. See Lacey's Springs, Va, Expedition from Kernstown to, Dec. 19-22, 1864, etc. |                                                |
| Expedition from Kernstown to, Dec. 19-22, 1864, and action at, (21st).                                         |                                                |
| Reports of                                                                                                     |                                                |
| Custer, George A. ....                                                                                         | 674                                            |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                                                                                       | 38, 39                                         |
| Lacy, B. T. Mentioned .....                                                                             | 586                                            |
| Lady, John B. Mentioned .....                                                                           | 500, 1004                                      |
| Laing, John K. Mentioned .....                                                                          | 128                                            |
| Lamar, John H. Mentioned .....                                                                          | 1012                                           |
| Lamb, Jacob H.                                                                                          |                                                |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 108, 127, 152, 154, 271                        |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. ....                                               | 277                                            |
| Lambert, Bruce. Mentioned .....                                                                         | 980                                            |
| Landstreet, John. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 578                                            |
| Landstreet, William T. Mentioned .....                                                                  | 980                                            |
| Lang, Theodore F. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 640                                            |

|                                                                                         | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Lansing, Edwin Y. Mentioned.....                                                 | 900                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| For correspondence as A. A. A. G., see Henry M. Lazelle .                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Larkin, Christopher. Mentioned.....                                              | 138                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Larned, Frank H. Mentioned.....                                                  | 981                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Latham, George R.                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Correspondence with                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Crook, George.....                                                                      | 661                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Fleming, Rufus E.....                                                                   | 668, 669                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                 | 658, 659, 669                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Mentioned.....                                                                          | 82, 89, 655-658, 662, 664                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Reports of Moorefield, W. Va.                                                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Expedition from New Creek to, Nov. 6-8, 1864.....                                       | 652                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Skirmishes at, Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc.....                                               | 660                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Latimer, Alfred E. Mentioned.....                                                | 988                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Latta, James W. Mentioned.....                                                   | 188                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lautenbacher, Joseph. Mentioned.....                                             | 198                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lawhead, Joseph H. Mentioned.....                                                | 411                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lawrence, George J. Correspondence with Thomas T. Eckert.....                    | 760                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lawrence, Samuel B. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Lew. Wallace .    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Lawton, Alexander R. Mentioned.....                                              | 582                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lawton, Nicholas W. Mentioned.....                                               | 277                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lazear, James R. Mentioned.....                                                  | 397, 398                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Lazelle, Henry M.                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Correspondence with                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Augur, Christopher C.....                                                               | 683, 684, 697, 721, 729, 742, 762, 777, 784,785, 793, 801, 813, 862, 871-873, 882, 890, 900, 901, 910, 920, 933, 943, 955, 971                                                                                                                                                                       |
| De Russy, Gustavus A.....                                                               | 901                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Horton, Giles G.....                                                                    | 955, 963                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Lyell, Charles B.....                                                                   | 902                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Mentioned.....                                                                          | 727, 728, 832, 833, 843, 845, 859, 871, 872, 889, 898, 900, 902, 954, 955, 977                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Leach, Frank T. Mentioned.....                                                   | 381, 382                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Leavitt, Enoch. Mentioned.....                                                   | 540                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lee, Charles W. Mentioned.....                                                   | 520, 527                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Lee, Edward P. Mentioned.....                                                    | 211                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lee, Edwin G. Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28,1864..... | 615                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lee, Fitzhugh.                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Correspondence with                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Anderson, Richard H.....                                                                | 1005, 1007-1009                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Wickham, Williams C.....                                                                | 1009                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                                          | 20, 22, 23, 25, 28, 44, 45, 185, 456,464, 507, 515, 555, 559, 567, 569-572, 611, 612, 680, 783, 799, 802, 811, 822, 823,840-842, 856-858, 863, 864, 870, 881, 890, 893, 897, 905, 908, 912, 915, 916, 923,925, 932, 934-937, 952, 953, 958, 961, 990, 992, 1001, 1004, 1006, 1007, 1024-1029 |
| Lee, G. W. Custis. Mentioned.....                                                | 992                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lee, Oscar R. Mentioned.....                                                     | 139, 210                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Lee, Richard H. Mentioned.....                                                   | 767                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Lee, Robert E.                                                                   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Correspondence with                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A.....                                   | 635                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Anderson, Richard H.....                                                                | 995, 997                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Davis, Jefferson.....                                                                   | 990, 992, 996                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Early, Jubal A.....                                                                     | 558, 990, 996, 998, 1006, 1009                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Hampton, Wade.....                                                                      | 996, 999                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |

|                                                                                                     | Page.                                                                                                                         |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Lee, Robert E. —Continued.                                                                   |                                                                                                                               |
| Correspondence with                                                                                 |                                                                                                                               |
| Peyton, Henry E.....                                                                                | 610                                                                                                                           |
| Potts, Junius D .....                                                                               | 999                                                                                                                           |
| Taylor, Walter H .....                                                                              | 1000                                                                                                                          |
| War Department, C. S.....                                                                           | 557, 558, 650, 990, 993, 994, 1006                                                                                            |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                     | 1, 2, 19, 30, 50, 578, 582, 586, 597,674, 856, 858, 864, 870, 909, 922, 990, 991, 993, 1000, 1001, 1005, 1009, 1011, 1012 |
| Reports of                                                                                          |                                                                                                                               |
| Gordonsville, Va. Expedition from Winchester to near, Dec. 19-28,1864, etc .....                | 679, 680                                                                                                                      |
| Moorefield, W. Va. Skirmishes at, Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc .....                                       | 667                                                                                                                           |
| Mosby's operations, Aug. 9-Oct. 14, 1864.....                                                       | 633                                                                                                                           |
| Oldfields, W. Va. Engagement at, near Moorefield, Aug. 7, 1864 .....                                | 551                                                                                                                           |
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                              | 552-554                                                                                                                       |
| West Virginia. Witcher's expedition into, Sept. 17-28, 1864, etc.....                               | 639                                                                                                                           |
| Lee, William H. F. Mentioned.....                                                            | 799, 996                                                                                                                      |
| Leefe, John G.                                                                               |                                                                                                                               |
| Correspondence with William Dwight .....                                                            | 298                                                                                                                           |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                      | 293, 306, 311                                                                                                                 |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see William Dwight .                                         |                                                                                                                               |
| Leet, George K.                                                                              |                                                                                                                               |
| Correspondence with Theodore S. Bowers.....                                                         | 760, 952                                                                                                                      |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                     | 19, 44                                                                                                                        |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see U. S. Grant .                                            |                                                                                                                               |
| Leete, James M. Mentioned.....                                                               | 364                                                                                                                           |
| Leetown and Smithfield, W. Va. Skirmishes at, Aug. 28, 1864. Communi-cations from        |                                                                                                                               |
| Gibbs, Alfred .....                                                                                 | 946                                                                                                                           |
| Lee, Fitzhugh .....                                                                                 | 1007, 1008                                                                                                                    |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                             | 953, 958                                                                                                                      |
| See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, August 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                      |                                                                                                                               |
| Devin, Thomas C.                      Kidd, James H.                      Sheridan, Philip H.       |                                                                                                                               |
| Gibbs, Alfred.                          Merritt, Wesley.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A. |                                                                                                                               |
| Also itineraries , pp. 92, 95; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 571.                         |                                                                                                                               |
| Lefever, Johannes. Mentioned .....                                                           | 138                                                                                                                           |
| Leich, Arthur. Mentioned.....                                                                | 331                                                                                                                           |
| Leiper, Charles L.                                                                           |                                                                                                                               |
| Correspondence with Horatio G. Wright.....                                                          | 722                                                                                                                           |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                     | 111                                                                                                                           |
| Lennon, Martin. Mentioned.....                                                               | 138                                                                                                                           |
| Lent, August. Mentioned .....                                                                | 550                                                                                                                           |
| Leonard, Charles H. Mentioned .....                                                          | 224, 229, 232                                                                                                                 |
| Leslie, Frank. Mentioned .....                                                               | 551                                                                                                                           |
| Lessig, William H. Mentioned.....                                                            | 984                                                                                                                           |
| Letterman, Jonathan. Mentioned .....                                                         | 140                                                                                                                           |
| Lewis, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                              | 109, 128, 319, 331, 340, 341, 986                                                                                             |
| Lewis, George N.                                                                             |                                                                                                                               |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                      | 127                                                                                                                           |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                    | 317                                                                                                                           |
| Lewis, James. Mentioned.....                                                                 | 981                                                                                                                           |
| Lewis, Judson A. Mentioned .....                                                             | 200, 202                                                                                                                      |
| Lewis, Norman M. Mentioned.....                                                              | 138                                                                                                                           |
| Lewis, William G. Mentioned .....                                                            | 602, 1020                                                                                                                     |

|                                                                                                                                                 | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Leyden, Austin. Mentioned .....                                                                                                          | 995                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Liberty Mills, Va. Skirmish at, Dec. 22, 1864. See Gordonsville, Va. Expedition from Winchester to near, Dec. 19-28, 1864, etc.   |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Liddy, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                                            | 540                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Lightfoot, James N. Mentioned .....                                                                                                      | 1013                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Lighthiser, George E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                    | 408                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Limestone Ridge, Va. Affair at, Sept. 17, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of McIntosh, p. 531. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Lincoln, Abraham.                                                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Chipman, Norton P .....                                                                                                                         | 870                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Grant, U. S .....                                                                                                                               | 681                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Hunter, David .....                                                                                                                             | 723                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Maryland, Governor of .....                                                                                                                     | 755                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Pennsylvania, Governor of .....                                                                                                                 | 755                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                                                                        | 61, 62                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 61, 63, 263, 500, 681, 719, 755, 806, 969                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Linton, John P.                                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 110, 367, 386, 387, 389, 396, 982                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                | 386                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Little, Thomas J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                        | 988                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Little, William A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                       | 998                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Livingston, La Rhett L. Mentioned .....                                                                                                  | 112, 118, 987                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Lobban, John G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                          | 565                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Locke, Ethan G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                          | 343                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Locke's Ford, Opequon Creek, Va. Affair at, Sept. 13, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Deane, Charles W.                      Lowell, Charles R., jr.                      Stagg, Peter.                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Also itineraries , pp. 95, 98, 102.                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Lockwood, Henry H.                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Churchman, Caleb .....                                                                                                                          | 718                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Smith, George W. P .....                                                                                                                        | 785, 800                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                                                                                              | 717, 927                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 706, 717, 751, 766, 773, 791, 799, 808, 854, 855, 981                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Lomax, Lunsford L.                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Assignment to command .....                                                                                                                     | 993                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 19, 31, 35, 36, 84, 85, 431, 433, 434, 437, 439, 440, 456, 484, 486, 497, 509, 511, 512, 515, 553, 554, 557, 559, 561, 562, 566, 569-571, 573, 574, 578, 579, 583, 584, 587, 677, 680, 822, 823, 936, 946, 952, 953, 993, 996, 1000, 1001, 1004, 1005, 1007, 1008, 1024-1026, 1029-1032 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                               | 610, 614                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Long, Armistead L. Mentioned .....                                                                                                       | 1018                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Long, Charles H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                         | 975                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Long, Franklin B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                        | 392                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Long, John S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                            | 107, 196, 984                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Long, William H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                         | 214, 217                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Longley, Thomas F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                       | 274                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Longstreet, James.                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Correspondence with Jubal A. Early .....                                                                                                        | 52                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 18, 19, 21, 52, 636, 737, 772, 783, 791, 799, 832, 840-844, 881, 890, 897, 905, 910, 936, 952, 953, 1016-1018                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Lonsbury, George W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                      | 457                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Loomis, M. D. W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                         | 666                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

Page.

Lorentz, L. Dow. Mentioned.....

Lorish, Andrew J. Mentioned .....

Losses in Action. See Confederate Troops and Union Troops. Casualties. Returns of.

Loudon, Robert. Mentioned.....

Loudoun County, Va.

Expedition from Winchester into. See Fauquier and Loudoun Counties, Va. Expedition from Winchester into, Nov. 28-Dec. 3, 1864.

Skirmish in, Aug. 21, 1864.

Communication from Norton P. Chipman .....

Reports of Roger E. Cook .....

Lough, James M. Mentioned.....

Louisiana Troops. Mentioned. (Confederate.)

Infantry—Regiments: 1st (Volunteers), 565, 1003, 1012; 2d, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, 10th, 14th, 15th, 565, 1003, 1012.

Love, George M. Mentioned .....

Love, James R., jr. Mentioned .....

Love, W. S. Mentioned .....

Lowe, John G. Mentioned .....

Lowe, John H. Mentioned .....

Lowell, Charles R., jr.

Correspondence with

Hunter, David .....

Merritt, Wesley .....

Mentioned.....

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....

Lowell, John P. Mentioned .....

Lucas, Charles A. Mentioned.....

Lucas, Frederick A. Mentioned .....

Ludlam, James D. Mentioned.....

Lukens, John B. Mentioned.....

Luray, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 24, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

Deane, Charles W.

Lowell, Charles R., jr.

Sheridan, Philip H.

Kidd, James H.

Merritt, Wesley.

Also itineraries, pp. 90, 95.

Luray Valley, Va. Skirmish in, Oct. 8, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Kidd, p. 465.

Lurty, Robert Dexter. Mentioned .....

Lusk, Thurlow W. Mentioned .....

Lutz, William. Mentioned .....

Lyell, Charles B. Correspondence with Henry M. Lazelle .....

Lyle, Robert. Mentioned.....

Lyman, Wyllys. Mentioned.....

Lynch, John A. Mentioned. ....

Lyon, Augustus W. Mentioned .....

Lyon, Charles H. Mentioned .....

Lyon, Frederick A. Mentioned.....

Lyon, Robert W. Mentioned.....

Lyons, Cornelius C. Mentioned.....

Lytle, Uriah. Mentioned .....

87, 648

551

978

881

636

119

76, 108, 127, 305, 313, 551, 985

566, 596

621

839

1003

712

956

17, 21, 33, 41, 42, 44, 45, 49, 54, 94-96, 111, 117, 130, 136, 138, 155, 360, 422-431, 433-435, 438-441, 443-451, 453, 455, 462, 473, 477-479, 481-483, 486, 490, 492, 516, 519, 698, 710, 728, 740, 745, 761, 762, 764, 769, 801, 834, 835, 848, 849, 874, 875, 884, 890, 918, 961, 983, 986

486, 490

137

350

180

680

398

</

|                                                                   | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| McAfee, John. Mentioned.....                               | 983                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Macauley, Daniel.                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                   | 55, 109, 122, 128,134, 283, 284, 304, 319, 321-324, 331, 332, 340-342, 347, 351, 352, 358, 359, 986                                                                                                                                                                |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....   | 339                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Macauley, John T. Mentioned .....                          | 331                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McBride, Lyman H. Mentioned.....                           | 406-408                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| McCabe, James P. Mentioned.....                            | 118                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McCarthy, Charles. Mentioned .....                         | 109, 128, 343, 986                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| McCartney, William H.                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                   | 108, 152, 154, 271, 272                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....  | 273                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McCaskey, John. Mentioned.....                             | 397, 398                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| McCausland, John.                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                   | 3-7,39, 40, 45, 81, 84-86, 88, 437, 477, 493, 494, 496, 506, 508, 509, 512, 554, 566, 569-571, 574, 584, 610-614, 677, 689-691, 693, 702, 704, 706, 724, 726, 733-735, 753,754, 764, 932, 939, 990, 991, 994, 1001, 1003-1005, 1008, 1018, 1020-1026, 1032 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....  | 614                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McClellan, George B. Mentioned.....                        | 686                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McClellan, Henry B. Mentioned .....                        | 613                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McClennan, Matthew R. Mentioned .....                      | 108, 246, 249, 269                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| McClurg, Leander. Mentioned .....                          | 228, 263                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| McCollum, Charles B. Mentioned.....                        | 119, 369, 389                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| McCracken, Charles E. Mentioned .....                      | 392                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McCutchen, J. S. Kerr. Mentioned.....                      | 565                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McDaniel, William G. Mentioned.....                        | 395, 396                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| McDonald, Edward H. Mentioned .....                        | 89, 656, 665, 668                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| McDonald, William R. Mentioned .....                       | 88                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| McElrath, Thomson P. Mentioned .....                       | 987                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McEnroe, Patrick H. Mentioned.....                         | 551                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McFarland, Moses. Mentioned.....                           | 127                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McFarlane, John A. Mentioned .....                         | 641                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McGee, John L. Mentioned .....                             | 130                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McGlashan, Peter. Mentioned .....                          | 566, 591                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| McGonnigle, Andrew J.                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Correspondence with James C. Mann .....                           | 630, 786                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Mentioned .....                                                   | 624-627, 629, 720                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| McGowan, Thomas S. Mentioned.....                          | 979                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McGregor, James.                                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                   | 198, 200                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....  | 205                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McGuire, Hunter. Mentioned .....                           | 556, 583                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| McIntire, Samuel B. Mentioned .....                        | 549, 550                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| McIntosh, John B.                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Correspondence with                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Bacon, William P .....                                            | 849                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Wilson, James H.....                                              | 763, 787, 818, 835, 836, 848, 867, 885, 892, 936, 937, 965                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Mentioned.....                                                    | 24, 25, 46, 47, 55, 98, 99, 101, 104, 105, 111, 117, 424, 427, 428, 516-520,531, 730, 746, 779, 795, 835, 848, 890-892, 903, 912, 913, 924, 936, 964, 965, 987                                                                                                     |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 ..... | 529, 531                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| McIrvin, Samuel. Mentioned .....                           | 519                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McKay, James. Mentioned.....                               | 542                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McKean, James P. Mentioned .....                           | 138                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| McKee, George W. Mentioned .....                           | 59                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                        | Page.                                                                                                           |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| McKelvy, Samuel. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                | 977                                                                                                             |
| McKendry, Archibald. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                            | 97, 98, 130                                                                                                     |
| Mackenzie, Ranald S.                                                                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 33, 55, 107, 125, 131, 151, 154, 159, 162, 163, 175, 176, 178, 984                                              |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                       | 179                                                                                                             |
| McKillip, Archibald W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                          | 979                                                                                                             |
| McKinley, Norval. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                               | 983                                                                                                             |
| McKinley, William, jr. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                          | 363, 364                                                                                                        |
| McKinney, Edward P.                                                                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                 |
| Correspondence with Alfred Gibbs .....                                                                                                                                                                 | 621                                                                                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 484, 622, 631, 632                                                                                              |
| McKnight, James.                                                                                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 108, 127, 152, 154, 226, 233, 271, 985                                                                          |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                      | 278                                                                                                             |
| McLaughlin, George H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                           | 127                                                                                                             |
| McLaughlin, Thomas. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                             | 984                                                                                                             |
| McLaughlin, William. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                            | 1011                                                                                                            |
| McLean, John H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                 | 753                                                                                                             |
| McMaster, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                              | 441                                                                                                             |
| McMenamin, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                | 762                                                                                                             |
| McMichael, Paul A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                              | 595                                                                                                             |
| McMillan, Henry F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                              | 310                                                                                                             |
| McMillan, James W.                                                                                                                                                                              |                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 53, 77, 108, 114, 122, 127,133, 280, 281, 284, 285, 288-291, 293, 302, 305, 308-310, 316-318, 322, 824, 985 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                      | 308, 313                                                                                                        |
| McMillan, John C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                               | 564                                                                                                             |
| McMurray, Mitchell. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                             | 198                                                                                                             |
| McNamara, Daniel C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                             | 359                                                                                                             |
| McNeill, John H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                | 30,89, 653, 660, 668, 692, 726, 741, 806, 829, 887, 888, 893, 951, 959, 968, 972                            |
| McNulty, Caleb J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                               | 835                                                                                                             |
| McNulty, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                  | 5                                                                                                               |
| McNulty, William G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                             | 765                                                                                                             |
| Macomber, Horatio E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                            | 343, 369                                                                                                        |
| McPherson, James A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                             | 977                                                                                                             |
| McPherson, Samuel W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                            | 861                                                                                                             |
| McQuesten, James F.                                                                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                 |
| Correspondence with Wesley Merritt .....                                                                                                                                                               | 956                                                                                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 119, 446                                                                                                        |
| McVean, John J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                 | 544                                                                                                             |
| McVicker, George W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                             | 853                                                                                                             |
| Maddux, John W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                 | 331                                                                                                             |
| Madison Court-House, Va. Skirmish at, Dec. 21, 1864. See Gordonsville, Va. Expedition from Winchester to near, Dec. 19-28, 1864, etc.                                                    |                                                                                                                 |
| Mahan, Andrew. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                  | 406, 408                                                                                                        |
| Mahnken, John H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                | 474, 480                                                                                                        |
| Mahoney, William. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                               | 233, 245, 246                                                                                                   |
| Main, John G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                   | 138, 479, 485                                                                                                   |
| Maine Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                        |                                                                                                                 |
| Artillery, Heavy— Regiments : 1st, 989.                                                                                                                                                         |                                                                                                                 |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : 1st, 109, 115, 123, 128, 134, 280-282, 319-323, 325,331, 351, 355-359, 824, 986; 5th, 108, 114, 121, 127, 132, 149, 173, 185, 192, 195,198, 271-273, 985. |                                                                                                                 |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st, 978.                                                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                 |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Page.                      |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------|
| Maine Troops. Mentioned—Continued.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                            |
| Infantry— Battalions : Coast Guard, 976, 989. Companies : State Guards ( Militia ), 989. Regiments : 1st ( Veteran ), 126, 132, 215, 216; 7th, 108, 113, 121, 212, 213, 217, 218, 221, 985; 12th, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 299, 300, 325, 326, 340, 727, 986; 13th, 109, 985; 14th, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 325, 326, 727, 986; 15th, 109, 985; 29th, 108, 114, 121, 127, 133, 294, 312, 985; 30th, 78, 109, 127, 985. |                            |
| Malin, George W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 540                        |
| Manassas Junction, Va. Skirmish at, Nov. 11, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 2                          |
| Mandy, Harry J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 551                        |
| Mann, James C.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                            |
| Correspondence with Andrew J. McGonnigle .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 630, 786                   |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 620-622, 624-628, 630, 631 |
| Testimony of. Board of Inquiry on attack on Union supply train, Aug. 13, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 628-630                    |
| Mann, Nehemiah H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 475                        |
| Manning, George A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 911                        |
| Marcy, George O. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 103, 111                   |
| Mark, Penrose G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 198                        |
| Marker, Caleb.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                            |
| Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 938                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 915                        |
| Marker, Eugene. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 421                        |
| Marsh, Charles H. (Private.) Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 551                        |
| Marsh, Charles H. (Scout.) Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 773                        |
| Marsh, John F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 976                        |
| Marshall, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 616                        |
| For correspondence as A. D. C., see Robert E. Lee .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                            |
| Marston, Oliver H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 128                        |
| Martin, James W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 350                        |
| Martin, Joseph W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 112, 130, 975              |
| Martin, Walter K. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 614                        |
| Martindale, Franklin G. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 435, 512                   |
| Martinsburg, W. Va.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                            |
| Action near, Sept. 18, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign , Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Averell , p. 498.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                            |
| Skirmish at, Aug. 31, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign , Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Sheridan , p. 45; itineraries , pp. 84, 85.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                            |
| Maryland. Operations in. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                            |
| Rupley, S. K. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 949                        |
| Waite, John M. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 943                        |
| Maryland, Eastern Shore of.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                            |
| Affairs in, generally. Communication from Henry H. Lockwood .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 927                        |
| Operations on. Communications from George W. P. Smith .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 785, 800                   |
| Maryland, Governor of. Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                            |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 755                        |
| Lincoln, Abraham .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 755                        |
| Maryland Troops. Mentioned. (Confederate.)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                            |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : 2d, 567, 613.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                            |
| Cavalry— Battalions : 2d, 5, 6, 186, 468, 488, 566, 904, 994, 1004, 1019. Regiments : 1st, 5, 6, 186, 994, 1004.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |                            |
| Maryland Troops. Mentioned. (Union.)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                            |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : A, 982; B, 983; D, 977; Baltimore, 982.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |                            |
| Cavalry— Companies : Smith's, 644, 717, 927, 981. Regiments : 1st P. H. B., 94, 422, 567, 745, 849, 867, 890, 983, 986, 1023.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                            |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Page.         |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------|
| Maryland Troops. Mentioned. (Union)—Continued.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |               |
| Infantry— Companies : Patapsco Guards, 808, 979. Regiments : 1st E. S., 765, 980, 981; 1st P. H. B., 982; 2d E. S., 367, 981; 2d P. H. B., * 2, 781, 982, 983; 3d P. H. B., 623, 627, 628, 982; 6th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 223, 224, 226, 246, 248, 250, 252-255, 262, 268, 269, 985; 11th, 765, 766, 773, 980; 12th, 766, 781, 980.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |               |
| Mason, ———. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 484           |
| Mason, James M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 989           |
| Massachusetts, Governor of. Correspondence with James B. Fry.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 767           |
| Massachusetts Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |               |
| Artillery, Heavy— Battalions : 1st ( Batteries ), A, 989; B, 988; C, 989; D, 988; E, F, 989. Batteries : 3d Unattached Company, 977; 6th Unattached Company, 976; 7th Unattached Company, 976; 8th Unattached Company, 976; 9th Unattached Company, 976; 10th Unattached Company, 976; 11th Unattached Company, 976; 12th Unattached Company, 976; 14th Unattached Company, 976; 15th Unattached Company, 977. Regiments : 3d, 976.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |               |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : 1st (A), 108, 121, 197, 271-274, 778, 985; 16th, 975.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |               |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st, 978; 2d, 24, 94, 95, 97, 111, 117, 130, 136, 422, 443, 490-492, 672, 673, 762, 911, 986; 3d, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 322, 330, 332-334, 339, 340, 727, 986; 5th ( Colored ), 976.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |               |
| Infantry— Companies : 2d Unattached Company, 988; 15th Unattached Company, 989; 17th Unattached Company, 989; 19th Unattached Company, 989; 20th Unattached Company, 989; 21st Unattached Company, 988. Regiments : 5th ( Militia ), 766, 981; 6th ( Militia ), 861, 879; 7th, 984; 8th ( Militia ), 981; 10th, 984; 26th, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 325, 326, 727, 986; 30th, 76, 108, 114, 121, 127, 133, 283, 290, 293, 294, 308, 312, 313, 985; 34th, 110, 115, 123, 128, 134, 372, 374-383, 388, 981; 37th, 67, 107, 112, 125, 162-164, 173, 182, 185, 187, 190, 794, 984; 38th, 109, 115, 122, 128, 134, 326, 340, 341, 343-345, 986; 42d, 977; 60th, 751, 773. |               |
| Massey, George V. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Henry H. Lockwood .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |               |
| Mather, Thomas S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 694           |
| Mathers, James. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 464, 466      |
| Mathews, James D. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 1012          |
| Matthews, Amasa E. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 462           |
| Matthews, Thomas. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 980           |
| Maulsby, William P.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |               |
| Correspondence with Max Weber.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 701           |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 619, 738      |
| Maxson, B. Frank. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 119           |
| Maxwell, George R. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 455           |
| May, Lewis A.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |               |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 108, 126, 985 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 269, 270      |
| Mayell, Henry. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 146, 147, 527 |
| Meach, George E. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 551           |
| Mead, John B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 127           |
| Meade, George G. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 952, 994      |
| Means, James C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 820           |
| Means, Samuel C. Correspondence with War Department, U. S.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 799           |
| Medals of Honor. Awarded by U. S. Congress for distinguished services in Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 550           |

* Company F served as cavalry.

|                                                                                            | Page.                                  |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------|
| Meeks, David J. Mentioned .....                                                     | 550                                    |
| Meem, A. Russell. Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....  | 589                                    |
| Moigs, John R. Mentioned .....                                                      | 30, 56, 99, 102, 739, 793, 800         |
| Meigs, Montgomery C. Mentioned .....                                                | 792                                    |
| For correspondence, etc., see Quartermaster-General's Office, U. S. A.              |                                        |
| Melton, Samuel W. Mentioned .....                                                   | 993                                    |
| Melvin, Thayer.                                                                     |                                        |
| Correspondence with William W. Averell .....                                               | 789, 804, 820                          |
| Mentioned .....                                                                            | 738, 739, 762                          |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see David Hunter ; also Philip H. Sheridan . |                                        |
| Mercer, John T. Mentioned .....                                                     | 1013                                   |
| Merchant, Charles S. Mentioned .....                                                | 988                                    |
| Merrill, Joseph C. Mentioned .....                                                  | 400, 630                               |
| Merritt, A. Clarkson. Mentioned .....                                               | 147, 148                               |
| Merritt, Robert B. Mentioned .....                                                  | 986                                    |
| Merritt, Wesley.                                                                    |                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                                        |                                        |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A .....                                                   | 452                                    |
| Devin, Thomas C .....                                                                      | 834                                    |
| Di Cesnola, Louis P .....                                                                  | 770, 847, 864, 865, 890, 891, 921, 946 |
| Gibbs, Alfred .....                                                                        | 825, 946                               |
| Lowell, Charles R., jr .....                                                               | 956                                    |
| McQuesten, James F .....                                                                   | 956                                    |
| Myers, Edward .....                                                                        | 834                                    |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                   | 55, 711, 944, 945, 956                 |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A .....                                                                 | 453,                                   |
| 701, 745, 769, 794, 802, 816, 825, 833, 846, 864, 873, 874, 883, 902, 921, 956             |                                        |
| Wilson, James H .....                                                                      | 864, 874                               |
| Mentioned .....                                                                            | 17-19, 21, 22, 26, 27, 29, 31, 33,     |
| 36, 42-50, 52-56, 62, 97, 98, 101, 111, 116, 130, 136, 148, 194, 421-437, 442, 443,        |                                        |
| 445, 446, 449, 450, 452-454, 457, 459-461, 464, 465, 470-472, 474, 477, 478, 482,          |                                        |
| 483, 498, 499, 507, 516, 517, 522, 523, 525, 537, 548, 553, 614, 621, 672, 677-679,        |                                        |
| 711, 722, 745, 772, 797, 801, 822, 833, 835, 842, 847, 848, 851, 852, 861, 867, 875,       |                                        |
| 880, 884, 885, 903, 912, 914, 922, 925, 942, 945, 947, 948, 952, 953, 958, 972, 986        |                                        |
| Reports of                                                                                 |                                        |
| Fauquier and Loudoun Counties, Va. Expedition from Winchester                              |                                        |
| into, Nov. 28-Dec. 3, 1864 .....                                                           | 671                                    |
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                     | 438, 443, 446, 448                     |
| Meyer, John. Mentioned .....                                                        | 128, 305                               |
| Michigan, U. S. S. Mentioned .....                                                  | 930                                    |
| Michigan Troops. Mentioned                                                          |                                        |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : 13th, 976; 14th, 975.                                 |                                        |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st, 107, 111, 116, 120, 125, 130, 136, 448, 455, 458-463,     |                                        |
| 466, 468, 977, 978, 984, 986; 5th, 111, 116, 130, 136, 458-462, 465, 467, 978, 986;        |                                        |
| 6th, 111, 116, 130, 136, 454, 455, 458-461, 463-469, 978, 986; 7th, 111, 116, 130,         |                                        |
| 136, 454, 455, 458-461, 465, 467-469, 978, 986.                                            |                                        |
| Infantry— Regiments : 26th, 977.                                                    |                                        |
| Mickles, Philo D., jr. Mentioned .....                                              | 638                                    |
| Middle Department (8th Army Corps).                                                 |                                        |
| Affairs in, generally. Communications from                                                 |                                        |
| Tyler, Erastus B .....                                                                     | 895                                    |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                                         | 969                                    |
| Included in Middle Military Division .....                                                 | 719                                    |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Page.         |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------|
| Middle Department (8th Army Corps)—Continued.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |               |
| Inspection of 1st Separate Brigade. Communication from Francis I. D. Webb .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 765           |
| Movements and disposition of troops in. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |               |
| Tyler, Erastus B .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 766           |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 766, 773, 854 |
| Operations in. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |               |
| Churchman, Caleb .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 718           |
| Lockwood, Henry H .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 717, 718      |
| Tyler, Erastus B .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 693           |
| Orders, General, series 1864— Wallace : No. 65, 869.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |               |
| Orders, Special, series 1864— Wallace : No. 194, 706; No. 197, 736; No. 198, 751; No. 199, 766; No. 200, 773; No. 201, 781; No. 202, 790; No. 203, 799; No. 204, 808; No. 207, 839; No. 208, 854; No. 213, 908. Lockwood : No. 33, 869.                                                                                                                                                                                            |               |
| Union troops in. Organization, strength, etc. See Middle Military Division .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |               |
| Middle Military Division. (Union.)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |               |
| Affairs in, generally. Communication from Joseph H. Taylor .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 762           |
| Constituted .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 719           |
| Orders, series 1864— Sheridan : Aug. 9, 739; Aug. 10, 760; Aug. 12, 775; Aug. 16, 813; Aug. 28, 941. Emory : Aug. 10, 763. Kenly : Aug. 12, 628. Merritt : Aug. 16, 816. Russell : Aug. 12, 778. Wilson : Aug. 14, 795; Aug. 25, 913; Aug. 27, 936; Aug. 30, 964. Wright : Aug. 9, 743; Aug. 10, 762; Aug. 11 (two), 768; Aug. 12, 778; Aug. 13, 785; Aug. 16, 814; Aug. 22, 883; Aug. 30, 963. |               |
| Orders, Circulars, series 1864— Sheridan : No. 3, 793; Aug. 10 (two), 760; Aug. 11, 767; Aug. 13, 784; Aug. 19, 843; Aug. 25, 906; Aug. 27, 933; Aug. 28, 941; Aug. 30, 962. Di Cesnola : Aug. 19, 847. Emory : Aug. 28, 944. Merritt : Aug. 19, 847. Torbert : Aug. 21, 876. Wilson : Aug. 12 (two), 779; Aug. 16, 818; Aug. 26, 923, 924; Aug. 30 (two), 964.                                        |               |
| Orders, General, series 1864— Sheridan : No. 1, 720, 721; No. 2, 721, 726; No. 3, 726; No. 4, 501; Nos. 6, 7, 8, 738; No. 9, 739; No. 11, 784; No. 12, 800. Campbell : No. 20, 170. Dwight : No. 50, 307. Emory : No. 4, 845. Torbert : No. 1, 744; No. 6, 801; No. 7, 846; No. 13, 437. Wilson : No. 42, 876.                                                                                         |               |
| Orders, Special, series 1864— Sheridan : No. 2, 726; No. 3, 739; No. 5, 793; No. 6, 800; No. 9, 842; No. 10, 619; No. 14, 896; No. 18, 940; No. 19, 620; No. 20, 962; No. 41, 505. Wilson : No. 76, 795. Wright : No. 180, 920.                                                                                                                                                                                             |               |
| Sheridan , Philip H.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |               |
| Assigned to command of .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 719           |
| Assumes command of .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 721           |
| Torbert , Alfred T. A.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |               |
| Assigned as Chief of Cavalry of .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 501           |
| Assumes command of cavalry of .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 744           |
| Union troops in. Organization, strength, etc.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |               |
| Aug. 9, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 743           |
| Aug. 19, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 848           |
| Aug. 24, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 902, 903      |
| Aug. 30, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 965           |
| Aug. 31, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 974-987       |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Page.                 |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| Middle Military Division. (Union)—Continued.                                                                                                                                                                 |                       |
| Union troops in. Organization, strength, etc.                                                                                                                                                                       |                       |
| Sept. 10, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 61                    |
| Sept. 19, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 107-112               |
| Oct. 19, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 125-130               |
| Middleton, Gabriel. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                           | 983                   |
| Middletown, Va.                                                                                                                                                                                              |                       |
| Action at. See Newtown (or Middletown), Va. Action at, Nov. 12, 1864.                                                                                                                                        |                       |
| Skirmish at, Sept. 20, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Devin, p. 475; Wilson, p. 518.                                                                                 |                       |
| Middleway, W. Va. Skirmish at, Aug. 21, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign. Report of Horatio G. Wright, p. 155; Sheridan to Averell, p. 877; Wilson to Merritt, p. 874; Wilson to Torbert, p. 875. |                       |
| Miles, Nelson A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                              | 64                    |
| Miles, William W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 111                   |
| Milford, Va. Skirmishes at.                                                                                                                                                                                  |                       |
| Sept. 22, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                                                                                                             |                       |
| Merritt, Wesley.                                                                                                                                                                                                    | Stagg, Peter.         |
| Sheridan, Philip H.                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Torbert, Alfred T. A. |
| Also itineraries, pp. 90, 95, 99, 105.                                                                                                                                                                       |                       |
| Oct. 25-26, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Robert E. Lee, p. 553; Powell, pp. 510, 511; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 583.                                                |                       |
| Military Complications. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                  |                       |
| Crook, George.....                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 968                   |
| Weber, Max.....                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 886                   |
| Militia. Calls for., etc. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                |                       |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 755, 756              |
| Couch, Darius N.....                                                                                                                                                                                                | 706, 737, 756         |
| Maryland, Governor of.....                                                                                                                                                                                          | 755                   |
| Pennsylvania, Governor of.....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 755                   |
| West Virginia, Governor of.....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 724                   |
| Miller, ———. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                  | 331                   |
| Miller, Benjamin F. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                           | 232                   |
| Miller, Charles H. For correspondence as A. A. G., see John B. McIntosh.                                                                                                                              |                       |
| Miller, Frank B. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley.....                                                                                                                                                 | 894, 904              |
| Miller, Frederick R. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 620, 627              |
| Miller, Thomas J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 208                   |
| Milligan, Robert. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 717, 718, 766         |
| Milliken, Charles A.                                                                                                                                                                                         |                       |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 108, 126, 214         |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                     | 218                   |
| Milroy, Robert H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 752                   |
| Miner, Milton L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                              | 109, 286, 287, 986    |
| Minnich, Edwin G. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 138                   |
| Mississippi Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                               |                       |
| Infantry— Regiments: 13th, 17th, 18th, 21st, 566.                                                                                                                                                            |                       |
| Mitchell, Harris B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                           | 545, 549              |
| Mitchell, John K. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                             | 997                   |
| Mitchell, P. Jordan. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 138                   |
| Mitchell, William. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                            | 980                   |
| Mitzel, Alexander von. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                        | 977                   |

|                                                                                                       | Page.                                                                                                                         |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Mobberly, John W. Mentioned.....                                                               | 693                                                                                                                           |
| Molineux, Edward L.                                                                            |                                                                                                                               |
| Correspondence with William H. Emory.....                                                             | 687                                                                                                                           |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                        | 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 279, 280, 283,284, 304, 314, 315, 318-326, 332, 336, 340, 345, 346, 348, 349, 351, 357, 824, 986 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                      | 329, 333                                                                                                                      |
| Monaghan, William. Mentioned.....                                                              | 1003, 1012                                                                                                                    |
| Monier, Henry D. Mentioned.....                                                                | 1003                                                                                                                          |
| Montague, George L. Mentioned.....                                                             | 107, 125, 184, 185, 190, 984                                                                                                  |
| Montgomery County, Md. Operations in, Oct. 7-11, 1864. Report of ErastusB. Tyler.....      | 644                                                                                                                           |
| Mooney, Michael. Mentioned.....                                                                | 358                                                                                                                           |
| Moore, ———. Mentioned.....                                                                     | 592                                                                                                                           |
| Moore, Alexander C. Mentioned.....                                                             | 983                                                                                                                           |
| Moore, Alpheus S. Mentioned.....                                                               | 84, 111, 130, 136, 433, 434, 450, 509, 510, 514                                                                               |
| Moore, Benjamin H. Mentioned.....                                                              | 363, 364                                                                                                                      |
| Moore, Caleb. Mentioned.....                                                                   | 111, 519, 544, 835, 866, 867, 937, 987                                                                                        |
| Moore, Edwin L.                                                                                |                                                                                                                               |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                        | 610                                                                                                                           |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                       | 609                                                                                                                           |
| Moore, George G. Mentioned.....                                                                | 551                                                                                                                           |
| Moore, Samuel J. C. Mentioned.....                                                             | 600                                                                                                                           |
| Moore, Shriver. Mentioned.....                                                                 | 129, 410                                                                                                                      |
| Moore, Thomas W. C. Mentioned.....                                                             | 720, 947                                                                                                                      |
| Moorefield, W. Va.                                                                             |                                                                                                                               |
| Engagement near. See Oldfields, W. Va. Engagement at, near Moorefield,Aug. 7, 1864. |                                                                                                                               |
| Expedition from Kernstown to, etc., Nov. 28-Dec. 2, 1864.....                                         | 2                                                                                                                             |
| Expedition from New Creek to, Nov. 6-8, 1864, and skirmish. Report ofGeorge R. Latham.....        | 652                                                                                                                           |
| Skirmishes at, Nov. 27-28, 1864, affair at New Creek (28th), and skirmish(28th) at Piedmont.      |                                                                                                                               |
| Communications from                                                                                   |                                                                                                                               |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                               | 658, 659, 662, 669                                                                                                            |
| Latham, George R.....                                                                                 | 659, 661, 668, 669                                                                                                            |
| Reports of                                                                                            |                                                                                                                               |
| Fisher, John.....                                                                                     | 665                                                                                                                           |
| Fleming, Rufus E.....                                                                                 | 662                                                                                                                           |
| Harrison, George W.....                                                                               | 665                                                                                                                           |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                               | 655                                                                                                                           |
| Latham, George R.....                                                                                 | 660                                                                                                                           |
| Lee, Robert E.....                                                                                    | 667                                                                                                                           |
| Potts, Peter J.....                                                                                   | 663, 664                                                                                                                      |
| Rosser, Thomas L.....                                                                                 | 669                                                                                                                           |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                               | 653                                                                                                                           |
| Stewart, C. Seaforth.....                                                                             | 654                                                                                                                           |
| Winants, H. L.....                                                                                    | 666                                                                                                                           |
| Morehouse, John B. Mentioned.....                                                              | 535, 536                                                                                                                      |
| Morford, William E. Mentioned.....                                                             | 630                                                                                                                           |
| Morgan, John E. Mentioned.....                                                                 | 983                                                                                                                           |
| Morgan, John H. Mentioned.....                                                                 | 36, 37, 651, 936, 1010, 1011, 1013                                                                                            |
| Morgan, Rollin H. Mentioned.....                                                               | 540                                                                                                                           |
| Morgan, William A. Mentioned.....                                                              | 554                                                                                                                           |
| Moriarty, David P. Mentioned.....                                                              | 982                                                                                                                           |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                            | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Morris, Casper W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                   | 771                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Morris, John B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                     | 977                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Morris, William W.                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Correspondence with Lew. Wallace .....                                                                                                                                                                     | 908                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                            | 766, 799, 839, 854, 908, 981                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Morrison, William S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                | 139                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Morrow, Albert P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                   | 489                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Morrow, John T. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                     | 328                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Morse, Henry B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                     | 127                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Morse, Llewellyn J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                 | 989                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Morton, John E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                     | 138, 323, 356, 358, 359                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Mosby, John S.                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                            | 23, 24, 35, 55, 56, 84, 95, 184, 186, 428,464, 467, 484, 490, 508, 509, 536, 543, 553, 615-619, 622, 623, 633, 635-638, 644,646, 670, 672, 683, 684, 722, 724, 727, 729, 740, 742, 772, 776, 777, 783, 785, 792,798, 802, 811, 813, 814, 822, 823, 826, 828, 829, 831, 836, 841, 842, 845, 858-860,866, 877, 897, 899, 901, 902, 909-911, 919, 933, 942, 943, 963, 990, 1000, 1021 |
| Reports of Mosby's operations, Aug. 9-Oct. 14, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                  | 633, 635                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Mosby's Operations, Aug. 9-Oct. 14, 1864.                                                                                                                                                           |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Augur, Christopher C. ....                                                                                                                                                                                 | 831                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Averell, William W. ....                                                                                                                                                                                   | 828, 829                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Edwards, Oliver .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 814                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Emory, William H. ....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 845                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Gansevoort, Henry S. ....                                                                                                                                                                                  | 832                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Gardner, Robert S. ....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 836                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Lazelle, Henry M. ....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 785, 933                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Lee, Robert E. ....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 635                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Mann, James C. ....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 786                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Smith, Howard M. ....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 866                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Stevenson, John D. ....                                                                                                                                                                                    | 826, 828, 829                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Taylor, Walter H. ....                                                                                                                                                                                     | 1000                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Waite, John M. ....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 882                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Wells, Henry H. ....                                                                                                                                                                                       | 823, 910, 963                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |
| Reports of                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Blazer, Richard .....                                                                                                                                                                                      | 615                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Gansevoort, Henry S. ....                                                                                                                                                                                  | 616, 618                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Lee, Robert E. ....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 633                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Mosby, John S. ....                                                                                                                                                                                        | 633, 635                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| See also Board of Inquiry. Attack on Union supply train, Aug. 13, 1864.                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Moses, Robert H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                    | 214                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Moson, Richard F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                   | 978                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Moulton, Albert P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                  | 392                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Mount Crawford, Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 2, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Devin, Thomas C.                      Merritt, Wesley.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A.                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Also itineraries , pp. 90, 92; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 577.                                                                                                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Mount Jackson, Va.                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Action at Rude's Hill, near. See Rude's Hill, near Mount Jackson, Va. Action at, Nov. 22, 1864.                                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Skirmishes at.                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Sept. 23, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Early , p. 656; Horatio G. Wright , p. 157; itinerary , p. 93; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 575. |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |

|                                                                              | Page.                                                 |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------|
| Mount Jackson, Va.—Continued.                                         |                                                       |
| Skirmishes at.                                                               |                                                       |
| Sept. 24, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. |                                                       |
| Report of Devin, p. 476; itinerary, p. 93.                            |                                                       |
| Oct. 3, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.   |                                                       |
| Reports of                                                            |                                                       |
| Edwards, Oliver.                                                             | Nesmith, John H.                                      |
| Hague, Albert G.                                                             | Sheridan, Philip H.                                   |
| Mountjoy, Robert P. Mentioned.....                                    | 95, 490, 670                                          |
| Mower, Joseph A. Mentioned.....                                       | 767                                                   |
| Muhleman, Edward. Mentioned.....                                      | 147, 148                                              |
| Mullen, William S. Mentioned.....                                     | 118, 331                                              |
| Mullikin, James C. Correspondence with Lew. Wallace.....              | 717                                                   |
| Mundee, Charles. Mentioned.....                                       | 193, 195                                              |
| Munford, Thomas T. Mentioned.....                                     | 31                                                    |
| Munitions of War. Supplies of, etc. Communications from               |                                                       |
| Averell, William W.....                                                      | 690, 789                                              |
| Baldwin, Briscoe G.....                                                      | 995                                                   |
| Halleck, Henry W.....                                                        | 792, 860                                              |
| Ingalls, Rufus.....                                                          | 696                                                   |
| Schoonmaker, James M.....                                                    | 797                                                   |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                      | 860                                                   |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A.....                                                    | 846, 848                                              |
| Wilson, James H.....                                                         | 948                                                   |
| Munk, William.                                                        |                                                       |
| Mentioned.....                                                               | 110, 129, 413, 414                                    |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....              | 418                                                   |
| Munroe, Robert.                                                       |                                                       |
| Mentioned.....                                                               | 107, 196, 198, 200, 205, 206, 984                     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....              | 204                                                   |
| Munson, Ralph. Mentioned.....                                         | 180                                                   |
| Murchison, Kenneth M. Mentioned.....                                  | 1012                                                  |
| Murphy, John K. Mentioned.....                                        | 980                                                   |
| Murphy, William W. Mentioned.....                                     | 514                                                   |
| Murray, W. R. Mentioned.....                                          | 606                                                   |
| Myers, ———. Mentioned.....                                            | 509                                                   |
| Myers, Edward. Correspondence with Wesley Merritt.....                | 834                                                   |
| Myers, James W. Mentioned.....                                        | 395                                                   |
| Nadenbousch, John Q. A. Mentioned.....                                | 1012                                                  |
| Nagle, James. Mentioned.....                                          | 981                                                   |
| Nash, Benjamin F. Mentioned.....                                      | 420                                                   |
| Nash, Thomas G. Mentioned.....                                        | 398                                                   |
| Neafie, Alfred.                                                       |                                                       |
| Mentioned.....                                                               | 109, 115, 128, 134, 280, 319, 321, 323, 325, 340, 986 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....             | 341, 344                                              |
| Neff, Harmanus. Mentioned.....                                        | 751                                                   |
| Neill, Thomas H. Mentioned.....                                       | 186                                                   |
| Nelson, Joseph H. Mentioned.....                                      | 634                                                   |
| Nelson, William. Mentioned.....                                       | 567, 1001, 1011                                       |
| Nesmith, John H.                                                      |                                                       |
| Mentioned.....                                                               | 514                                                   |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....              | 514                                                   |
| Nettleton, A. Bayard. Mentioned.....                                  | 111, 539                                              |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | Page                        |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Netz, Richard. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 250                         |
| Neville, Edwin M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 538                         |
| New Creek, W. Va.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                             |
| Action at, Aug. 4, 1864.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                             |
| Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                             |
| Couch, Darius N.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 693                         |
| Hoy, John F.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 692, 704                    |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 688, 691, 692, 694, 702-706 |
| Stevenson, Robert.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 704                         |
| Wilkinson, Nathan.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 692                         |
| Reports of                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                             |
| Johnson, Bradley T.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 4                           |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 2                           |
| Affair at, Nov. 28, 1864. See Moorefield, W. Va. Skirmishes at, Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc.                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                             |
| Expedition to Moorefield from. See Moorefield, W. Va. Expedition from New Creek to, Nov. 6-8, 1864.                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                             |
| Newhall, Frederic C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 720, 971                    |
| For correspondence as A. D. C., see Philip H. Sheridan.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                             |
| New Hampshire Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                             |
| Artillery, Heavy— Batteries : 1st, 975; 2d, 976.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                             |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : Lafayette (Militia) , 989.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                             |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st, 105, 111, 130, 519, 545, 549, 675, 676, 978, 987.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                             |
| Infantry— Companies : Martin Guards (Militia) , 989. Regiments : 14th, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 290, 315, 325-327, 332, 727, 986.                                                                                                                                                                  |                             |
| New Jersey Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                             |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st, 978; 3d, 24, 98, 102, 111, 117, 130, 427, 518, 520, 529-532, 534, 536, 537, 675, 876, 987.                                                                                                                                                                                             |                             |
| Infantry— Regiments : 1st ( Militia ), 765, 767; 4th, 107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 166, 167, 170-173, 183, 984; 10th, 107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 166, 167, 169-172, 984; 14th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 231, 235, 236, 985; 15th, 107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 162, 163, 166-169, 171, 172, 182, 335, 984.          |                             |
| New Market, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 24, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                                                                                                                                                                             |                             |
| Randall, Francis J.                      Sheridan, Philip H.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A.                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                             |
| Also journal of Hotchkiss , p. 576.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                             |
| Newt, Alonzo H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 208                         |
| Newtown, Va.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                             |
| Action near, Aug. 11, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                             |
| Devin, Thomas C.                      Sheridan, Philip H.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A.                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                             |
| Gibbs, Alfred.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                             |
| Also itineraries , pp. 90, 92, 94; Scott to Gibbs , p. 770.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |                             |
| Skirmish near, Oct. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 10                          |
| Newtown (or Middletown), Va. Action at, Nov. 12, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of McCausland , p. 614; itineraries , pp. 77, 93; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 584.                                                                                        |                             |
| New York Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                             |
| Artillery, Heavy— Regiments : 5th, 374, 375, 377, 380, 381, 385, 982; 5th ( Battalions ), 2d, 110, 115, 123, 128, 134, 382, 383, 981; 6th, 129, 135, 813, 975; 8th, 765, 980; 9th, 108, 113, 126, 132, 223, 224, 229, 246, 248, 250-252, 255-257, 260, 262, 270, 765, 882, 975, 980, 985; 10th, 872, 976, |                             |

New York Troops. Mentioned—Continued.

- Artillery, Light—Batteries: 1st, 108, 114, 121, 127, 132, 149, 150, 157, 164, 185, 191, 271, 272, 274–277, 985; 5th, 109, 122, 127, 285, 287, 291, 294, 309, 317, 318, 986; 6th, 112, 130, 136, 435, 447, 459, 460, 975; 20th, 28th, 988; 30th, 32d, 982. Regiments: 1st (Batteries) A, 106, 808, 809, 980; F, K, 977.
- Cavalry—Regiments: 1st (Lincoln), 111, 117, 124, 130, 425, 496, 506, 512, 651, 733, 736, 765, 771, 852, 896, 914, 983; 1st (Veteran), 958, 983; 2d (Harris Light), 99, 102, 103, 111, 117, 130, 137, 518, 520, 524, 529, 532–534, 536–540, 978, 987; 3d, 978; 4th, 111, 116, 130, 184, 445, 470–475, 482, 978, 986; 5th, 99, 102, 111, 117, 130, 137, 485, 520, 524–526, 529, 532–534, 547, 802, 835, 922–925, 936, 978, 987; 6th, 111, 116, 130, 136, 445, 470–476, 478–480, 482–485, 978, 986; 8th, 101, 111, 117, 130, 137, 521, 541, 543–545, 549, 675, 676, 978, 987; 9th, 111, 116, 130, 136, 448, 469–472, 475–478, 480–483, 834, 978, 986; 10th, 978; 13th, 616–619, 762, 872, 873, 882, 918, 975, 977; 15th, 101, 650, 675, 958, 983; 16th, 618, 638, 639, 729, 742, 762, 793, 813, 814, 833, 843, 862, 910, 918, 920, 933, 941, 942, 955, 963, 977; 19th, 95, 111, 116, 130, 136, 447, 470, 475–479, 481–484, 487–490, 833, 866, 921, 978, 986; 21st, 84, 512, 649, 765, 958, 983; 22d, 104, 105, 111, 117, 130, 521, 543, 544, 676, 978, 987; 25th, 94, 111, 116, 454, 455, 458, 460, 861, 978, 986.
- Infantry—Regiments: 41st, 872, 882, 975; 43d, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 192, 212, 213, 215, 216, 218, 221, 985; 49th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 212–216, 220, 985; 62d, 107, 113, 120, 126, 131, 196, 198–201, 206, 207, 984; 65th, 107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 162, 163, 173–182, 984; 67th, 984; 69th (Militia), 987, 988; 75th, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 325–329, 727, 986; 77th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 212–216, 219, 220, 985; 84th (Militia), 979; 90th, 76, 108, 114, 122, 127, 133, 985; 91st, 908, 981; 93d (Militia), 765, 766, 980; 103d, 860, 861, 872, 881, 977; 106th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 231, 232, 236–238, 985; 114th, 76, 108, 114, 121, 127, 133, 280, 290, 292–294, 308, 312, 313, 985; 116th, 76, 108, 114, 121, 127, 133, 280, 283, 294, 308, 312, 313, 985; 121st, 107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 162, 163, 167, 173–178, 180–183, 984; 122d, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 212, 213, 215, 216, 218, 219, 985; 128th, 109, 115, 122, 128, 134, 283, 319, 332, 338–341, 343, 345, 986; 131st, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 280, 319, 320, 326, 330, 332–335, 340, 727, 986; 133d, 78, 109, 127, 985; 151st, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 231, 232, 238–240, 985; 153d, 108, 114, 121, 127, 133, 280, 294, 308, 312, 313, 824, 825, 985; 156th, 109, 115, 122, 128, 134, 319, 322, 323, 332, 339–346, 727, 986; 159th, 109, 114, 122, 128, 133, 330, 331, 333–335, 337, 727, 986; 160th, 108, 114, 122, 127, 133, 280, 290, 293, 294, 314, 315, 985; 162d, 165th, 78, 109, 127, 985; 173d, 78, 109, 127, 536, 727, 985; 175th, 109, 122, 128, 134, 322, 343, 986; 176th, 109, 115, 122, 128, 134, 283, 319, 320, 322, 323, 330, 332, 340–343, 345, 347, 986; 184th, 126, 132, 229, 241, 270.
- Nichols, George S. Mentioned ..... 111, 130, 474, 480, 482, 483, 986
- Nichols, Henry J. Mentioned ..... 200, 202
- Nichols, Thomas. Mentioned ..... 651
- Nicodemus, William J. L. Mentioned ..... 147
- Niebuhr, Caleb E. Mentioned ..... 988
- Nieman, George W. Mentioned ..... 541
- Nims, Frederick A. Mentioned ..... 527
- Nineveh, Va. Action at, Nov. 12, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of
- Powell, William H.                      Sheridan, Philip H.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A.
- Also itineraries, pp. 84, 86.

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | Page.                   |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Niven, Robert. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 544                     |
| Norris, Hardman P. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 975                     |
| North, George H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 772, 790                |
| North, William O. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 119, 446, 458           |
| North Branch, Md., Commanding Officer at. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 715                     |
| North Carolina Troops. Mentioned. (Confederate.)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                         |
| Infantry— Battalions : 1st Sharpshooters , 565, 1003, 1012; 2d , 564, 605–608, 1002, 1012. Regiments : 1st , 564, 1002, 1012; 2d , 564, 1002, 1013; 3d , 564, 1002, 1012; 4th , 564, 601, 1002, 1013; 5th , 565, 1003, 1013; 6th , 565, 1003, 1012; 12th , 565, 1003, 1013; 14th , 564, 1002, 1013; 20th , 565, 1003, 1013; 21st , 565, 1003, 1012; 23d , 565, 1003, 1013; 30th , 564, 1002, 1013; 32d , 564, 602, 603, 605–608, 1002, 1012; 43d , 564, 602–604, 606–608, 1002, 1012; 45th , 564, 603, 605–608, 1002, 1012; 53d , 564, 602, 603, 606–608, 1002, 1012; 54th , 57th , 565, 1003, 1012. |                         |
| Miscellaneous— Thomas Legion , 566.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                         |
| Northcott, Robert S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 110, 128, 368           |
| Northern Neck, Va. Affairs in, generally. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                         |
| Lee, Robert E.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 990                     |
| War Department, C. S.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 991                     |
| Northern Virginia, Army of.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             |                         |
| Orders, Special, series 1864— Lee : No. 188 , 993; No. 189 , 995.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                         |
| North River, Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 3, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign , Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Journal of Hotchkiss , p. 578.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                         |
| Norvell, Edwin F. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 527                     |
| Nounnan, James H.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                         |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 641, 643                |
| Report of Nounnan's expedition into Kanawha Valley, W. Va., Sept. 23–Oct. 1, 1864, etc.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 642                     |
| Nounnan's Expedition into Kanawha Valley, W. Va. See Kanawha Valley, W. Va. Nounnan's Expedition into , Sept. 23–Oct. 1, 1864, etc.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                         |
| Noyes, Edward L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 331                     |
| Noyes, Henry E. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 520, 817, 934, 936      |
| Nutter's Hill, W. Va. Skirmish at, Aug. 27, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 1                       |
| Nye, George H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 127                     |
| Oakes, George J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 224, 230                |
| O'Beirne, James R. Correspondence with Moses N. Wisewell.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 721                     |
| Oberteuffer, John H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 976                     |
| O'Boyle, Michael. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 987                     |
| O'Connell, John D. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 989                     |
| Odell, George D. Report of affair at Cove Point, Md., Aug. 22, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 637                     |
| Ohio, Governor of. Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                         |
| Halleck, Henry W.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 931                     |
| War Department, U. S.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 916, 931, 951, 960, 969 |
| Ohio Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                         |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : 1st , 982. Regiments : 1st ( Batteries ), L , 110, 124, 129, 135, 365, 366, 414–418, 982.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                         |
| Cavalry— Companies : 3d , 983; Union Light Guard , 976. Regiments : 1st , 978; 2d , 24, 98, 102, 103, 111, 117, 130, 137, 427, 518, 520, 524, 529–534, 539, 540, 978, 987; 6th , 978; 8th , 30, 32, 82, 87, 111, 117, 124, 130, 136, 496, 506, 512, 513, 647–649, 734, 735, 748, 764, 771, 772, 790, 797, 804, 819, 820, 908, 926, 937, 983.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                         |

Ohio Troops. Mentioned—Continued.

Infantry—Regiments: 23d, 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 399, 402, 405, 407, 408, 982; 34th, 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 402, 408–411, 495, 878, 934, 982; 36th, 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 399, 400, 402, 405, 982; 91st, 110, 116, 123, 129, 399, 402, 403, 408–413, 982; 110th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 222–224, 227, 246–248, 250–252, 254, 258–260, 262, 266, 270, 985; 116th, 110, 115, 123, 128, 134, 374–380, 383–385, 981; 122d, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 223, 224, 246, 248, 250, 252, 257, 258, 260–263, 985; 123d, 110, 115, 123, 128, 134, 367, 375, 377, 380, 385, 386, 981; 126th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 223, 246, 248, 250, 252, 255, 259, 262–265, 985; 131st, 839; 137th, 799; 139th, 845, 879; 140th, 879; 144th, 623, 627, 628, 765, 790, 854; 145th, 916; 149th, 623, 627, 628, 765, 790, 855; 152d, 916; 153d, 705; 154th, 2, 894, 904, 916; 156th, 915, 916, 938, 939; 159th, 799; 161st, 796; 165th, 3; 170th, 702.

Ohlenschlager, Emil. Mentioned ..... 32, 56, 142, 145

O'Keeffe, Joseph. Mentioned ..... 57, 194, 720, 764

Olcott, Egbert.

Correspondence with Frank Wheaton ..... 174

Mentioned ..... 67, 125, 131, 154, 167, 168, 174–176, 984

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 174, 181

Oldfields, W. Va. Engagement at, near Moorefield, Aug. 7, 1864.

Communications from

Averell, William W. .... 734

Davis, Jefferson ..... 990

Johnson, Bradley T. .... 994

Kelley, Benjamin F. .... 731, 736

Lee, Robert E. .... 990

Sheridan, Philip H. .... 725, 726

Wartman, J. H. .... 991

Congratulatory Orders.

Averell, William W. .... 505

Powell, William H. .... 735

Reports of

Johnson, Bradley T. .... 4

Kelley, Benjamin F. .... 2

Lee, Robert E. .... 551

Oldswager, John. Mentioned ..... 138, 229, 257

Oley, John H.

Correspondence with

Hibbs, Van B. .... 879

Rucker, William P. .... 693

Report of skirmish at Winfield, W. Va., Oct. 26, 1864 ..... 645

Oliver, Dexter W. Mentioned ..... 359

Oltmanns, C. W. Mentioned ..... 568–571, 573, 576, 578, 579, 582–588

Opequon Creek, Va.

Affair at. See Locke's Ford, Opequon Creek, Va. Affair at, Sept. 13, 1864.

Battle of. See Winchester (or the Opequon), Va. Battle of, Sept. 19, 1864.

Skirmishes at.

Aug. 18, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Lowell, p. 486.

Aug. 20, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Lowell, p. 486; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 570.

Sept. 13, 1864. See Gilbert's Ford, Opequon Creek, Va. Skirmish at.

Sept. 15, 1864. See Seivers' Ford, Opequon Creek, Va. Skirmish at.

Opequon Creek, Va.—Continued

Skirmish on Berryville and Winchester Pike near, Aug. 19, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Lowell, p. 486.

Opequon Creek, W. Va,

Engagement at Smithfield Crossing of. See Smithfield Crossing of the Opequon, W. Va. Engagement at, Aug. 29, 1864.

Skirmish at, Sept. 1, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Sheridan, p. 22.

Ord, Edward O. C. Mentioned ..... 495, 994, 995

Organization, Strength, etc.

Confederate Troops..... 564–567, 1002, 1003, 1011–1013

Union Troops..... 61, 107–112, 125–130, 743, 848, 902, 903, 965, 974–989

O'Rourke, William. Mentioned ..... 180

Orr, George S. Mentioned ..... 214, 215, 217

Orr, Robert L. Mentioned ..... 193

Otis, Elmer. Mentioned ..... 536

Otis, Theodore C. Mentioned ..... 306, 321

Over, Ewald. Mentioned..... 984

Overturf, John W. Mentioned ..... 400

Owens, William A. Mentioned ..... 603, 1012

Owings, Henry W. Mentioned..... 738, 941

Page, Andrew H. H. Mentioned ..... 581, 585

Page, Henry. Mentioned..... 812, 846, 885

Palmer, Frederic S. Mentioned ..... 976

Palmer, Henry. Mentioned..... 980

Palmer, John E. Mentioned ..... 118

Palmer, Thomas H. Mentioned ..... 989

Paradise, Benjamin. Mentioned..... 785

Park, Martin. Mentioned..... 395

Parker, Charles A. Mentioned ..... 978

Parker, Chauncey A. Mentioned..... 474

Parker, Eli L. Mentioned ..... 668

Parker, Francis M. Mentioned..... 1013

Parker, Samuel. Mentioned..... 124, 985

Parker, Thomas. Mentioned ..... 190

Parkins' Mill, Va. Skirmish at, Nov. 24, 1864..... 10

Parks, Benjamin D. Mentioned ..... 118

Parks, Jeremiah. Mentioned ..... 551

Parmelee, Uriah N. Mentioned ..... 103

Parnell, William R. Mentioned ..... 986

Parr, John G.

Mentioned ..... 126, 201

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864..... 206

Parriott, George W. Mentioned ..... 395

Parrish, William I. Mentioned..... 256

Parsons, Eben, jr. Mentioned ..... 321

Parsons, Enos B.

Correspondence with Philip H. Sheridan ..... 60

Mentioned..... 720

For correspondence as A. A. G., see Philip H. Sheridan.

Patchell, James. Mentioned ..... 126, 199, 201

Patrick, Marsena R. Mentioned ..... 998

Patterson, Corydon E. Mentioned ..... 248

|                                                                                                       | Page.                                                                                          |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Patton, Frederick H. Mentioned.....                                                            | 738                                                                                            |
| Patton, George S. Mentioned.....                                                               | 597, 1011                                                                                      |
| Patton, James C. Mentioned.....                                                                | 980                                                                                            |
| Patton, Jonathan N. Mentioned.....                                                             | 363, 364                                                                                       |
| Patton, William. Mentioned.....                                                                | 519                                                                                            |
| Paul, Charles R. Mentioned.....                                                                | 170, 171                                                                                       |
| Paul, Henry S. Mentioned.....                                                                  | 119                                                                                            |
| Paul, Lewis B. Mentioned.....                                                                  | 250                                                                                            |
| Payne, Daniel C. Mentioned.....                                                                | 289                                                                                            |
| Payne, Nathaniel. Report of skirmish at Charlestown, W. Va., Nov. 29, 1864.....                | 673                                                                                            |
| Payne, William H. (Brigadier-General.) Mentioned.....                                          | 38, 39,82, 88, 89, 554, 567, 579-582, 584, 588, 656, 661, 667, 668, 675, 676, 1030, 1032   |
| Payne, William H. (Captain.) Mentioned.....                                                    | 640, 641                                                                                       |
| Peabody, Oliver D. Mentioned.....                                                              | 980                                                                                            |
| Peabody, William W. Mentioned.....                                                             | 628                                                                                            |
| Peach, Benjamin F., jr. Mentioned.....                                                         | 981                                                                                            |
| Peale, Henry. Mentioned.....                                                                   | 981                                                                                            |
| Peale, James T. Mentioned.....                                                                 | 978                                                                                            |
| Pearson, Warner. Mentioned.....                                                                | 540                                                                                            |
| Pease, Harry.                                                                                  |                                                                                                |
| Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley.....                                                           | 959                                                                                            |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                        | 3, 983                                                                                         |
| Peck, Frank H. Mentioned.....                                                                  | 108, 118, 291, 293, 314-316, 985                                                               |
| Peck, John J. Mentioned.....                                                                   | 987                                                                                            |
| Peck, John W. Mentioned.....                                                                   | 977                                                                                            |
| Peck, Joseph. Mentioned.....                                                                   | 138, 374, 391                                                                                  |
| Peck, Joshua. Mentioned.....                                                                   | 87, 647-649                                                                                    |
| Peck, Lewis M. Mentioned.....                                                                  | 536                                                                                            |
| Peck, Nathan F. Mentioned.....                                                                 | 232                                                                                            |
| Peck, William R. Mentioned.....                                                                | 1003, 1012                                                                                     |
| Peebles, William H. Mentioned.....                                                             | 1013                                                                                           |
| Pegram, John. Mentioned.....                                                                   | 450, 561,562, 565, 568, 574-581, 583-587, 598, 599, 678, 1002, 1003, 1011, 1012, 1027-1032 |
| Peirce, Charles H.                                                                             |                                                                                                |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                        | 99, 112, 130, 435, 522, 987                                                                    |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                       | 549                                                                                            |
| Peirpoint, Larkin. Mentioned.....                                                              | 878                                                                                            |
| Peirson, George H. Mentioned.....                                                              | 766, 981                                                                                       |
| Pendleton, Alexander S. Mentioned.....                                                         | 575                                                                                            |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Jubal A. Early.                                            |                                                                                                |
| Pendleton, Edmund. Mentioned.....                                                              | 1012                                                                                           |
| Pendleton, William N. Mentioned.....                                                           | 10                                                                                             |
| Penn, Davidson B. Mentioned.....                                                               | 1012                                                                                           |
| Pennington, Alexander C. M.                                                                    |                                                                                                |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                        | 36,100, 102, 130, 137, 431, 520-522, 524, 527, 536, 537, 539, 541, 545, 546, 675, 676      |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                       | 532                                                                                            |
| Pennsylvania, Department of. Designation of Department of the Susque-hanna changed to..... | 106                                                                                            |
| Pennsylvania, Governor of.                                                                     |                                                                                                |
| Address of, to Legislature of Pennsylvania.....                                                       | 751                                                                                            |
| Correspondence with                                                                                   |                                                                                                |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.....                                                               | 755                                                                                            |
| Lincoln, Abraham.....                                                                                 | 755                                                                                            |
| War Department, U. S.....                                                                             | 708                                                                                            |

Pennsylvania Troops. Mentioned.

Artillery, Heavy—Regiments: 3d (Batteries), H, 644, 765, 980; 5th, 618; 5th (Batteries), E, 619.

Artillery, Light—Battalions: 1st, 882, 975. Batteries: C, 975; F, 982; H, I, 977; Keystone, 106, 707, 809, 979. Regiments: 1st (Batteries), D, 110, 124, 129, 135, 365, 413-416, 418, 419, 983; G, 982; H, 976.

Cavalry—Companies: Hebble's, 106, 980; Lambert's, 106, 980; Philadelphia City Scouts, 789; Sanno's, 106, 789, 979; Stroud's, 782, 797, 979; Warren's, 106, 856, 973, 980. Regiments: 1st, 2d, 978; 3d, 739, 978; 4th, 978; 6th, 95, 111, 487-490, 866, 978, 986; 8th, 978; 12th, 425, 673, 674, 724, 896, 914, 982; 13th, 949, 978; 14th, 94, 111, 117, 124, 130, 136, 185, 422, 496, 506, 512, 514, 515, 771, 983; 16th, 978; 17th, 111, 116, 125, 183, 186, 439, 469-473, 475, 482, 487, 919, 978, 986; 18th, 102, 111, 117, 130, 137, 521, 532-534, 536, 540-542, 544, 978, 987; 20th, 850, 958, 983; 21st, 106, 809, 980; 22d, 94, 111, 117, 124, 130, 136, 186, 422, 496, 506, 513, 716, 733, 771, 803, 983.

Engineers—Companies: Smith's, * 982.

Infantry—Battalions: 1st, 808, 809, 979. Regiments: 23d, 622, 984; 47th, 108, 114, 122, 127, 133, 290, 294, 312-315, 985; 49th, 107, 112, 125, 185-188, 744, 982, 984; 54th, 110, 115, 123, 129, 135, 372, 381, 386-388, 390-392, 398, 982; 61st, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 212-216, 218, 220, 221, 985; 67th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 222, 246, 247, 250, 252, 263, 265-269, 985; 74th, 881, 977; 82d, 107, 112, 125, 186, 188, 984; 87th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 231, 242, 985; 93d, 107, 113, 120, 126, 131, 194-196, 198-201, 203, 205, 984; 95th, 107, 120, 125, 131, 174-179, 181-183, 984; 96th, 107, 120, 125, 131, 176, 177, 182, 183, 984; 98th, 107, 113, 120, 126, 131, 196, 198-201, 203, 984; 102d, 107, 113, 120, 126, 131, 196-199, 201-204, 984; 104th, 919, 944, 963, 977; 119th, 107, 112, 125, 189, 190, 984; 138th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 222, 227, 246, 247, 250-252, 259, 266, 267, 269, 270, 985; 139th, 107, 113, 120, 126, 131, 196, 198-201, 204-207, 984; 150th, 976; 186th, 106, 809, 980; 192d, † 706, 766, 773; 193d, 751, 766, 981; 194th, 981; 195th, 765, 980; 196th, 197th, 751, 773; 201st, 979.

|                                                                                                   |                                        |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------|
| Penrose, James W. Mentioned.....                                                           | 125                                    |
| Penrose, William H. Mentioned. 44, 55, 63, 66, 125, 131, 166, 167, 424, 516, 778, 814, 984 |                                        |
| Perk, J. J. Mentioned .....                                                                | 890                                    |
| Per Lee, Samuel R. Mentioned .....                                                         | 108, 292, 985                          |
| Perry, William L. Mentioned .....                                                          | 328                                    |
| Peters, William E. Mentioned .....                                                         | 4-6, 726, 734, 994                     |
| Petersburg, W. Va. Skirmish near, Oct. 11, 1864. Report of Daniel Sheets..                 | 645                                    |
| Petrie, Peter B.                                                                           |                                        |
| Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                                                      | 878, 888, 894, 915, 938, 951, 959, 968 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                    | 983                                    |
| Petrie, Willard A. Mentioned .....                                                         | 421                                    |
| Pettit, Rufus D. Mentioned .....                                                           | 977                                    |
| Peyton, Greene. Mentioned.....                                                             | 586, 600                               |
| Peyton, Henry E. Correspondence with Robert E. Lee .....                                   | 610                                    |
| Pfouts, Leonard. Mentioned .....                                                           | 540                                    |
| Phelps, Horace E. Mentioned.....                                                           | 137                                    |
| Phillips, Augustus. Mentioned .....                                                        | 138, 229, 234                          |
| Phillips, Daniel M. Mentioned .....                                                        | 118                                    |
| Phillips, John W.                                                                          |                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 111, 130                               |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                   | 540                                    |
| Phinney, Stewart W.                                                                        |                                        |
| Correspondence with William Dwight .....                                                          | 300                                    |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 299                                    |

* Formerly Gaskill's.

† Also called 20th Militia.

|                                                                                                                         | Page.                                               |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------|
| Pickens, Samuel B. Mentioned .....                                                                               | 1013                                                |
| Pickett, George E. Mentioned.....                                                                                | 20, 91, 94, 791, 889, 890, 905, 936, 953, 997, 1017 |
| Piedmont, Va. Skirmish near, Oct. 9, 1864.....                                                                   | 1                                                   |
| Piedmont, W. Va. Skirmish at, Nov. 28, 1864. See Moorefield, W. Va. Skirmishes at, Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc. |                                                     |
| Pierce, Lewis B. Mentioned .....                                                                                 | 733, 982                                            |
| Pinckard, William E. Mentioned .....                                                                             | 564                                                 |
| Pinckney, George E. Mentioned.....                                                                               | 331                                                 |
| Pine, Benjamin A. Mentioned.....                                                                                 | 170, 171                                            |
| Pinkham, Hollis C. Mentioned.....                                                                                | 630, 786                                            |
| Platner, John S. Mentioned.....                                                                                  | 983                                                 |
| Poague, William T. Mentioned.....                                                                                | 997                                                 |
| Poe, Philip F. Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 395                                                 |
| Polhamus, William A. Mentioned .....                                                                             | 540                                                 |
| Poling, Newton. Mentioned.....                                                                                   | 395                                                 |
| Polk, John R. Mentioned .....                                                                                    | 128, 305                                            |
| Pollard, Henry M.                                                                                                |                                                     |
| Correspondence with William Dwight .....                                                                                | 299                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                         | 300                                                 |
| Pomeroy, David H. Mentioned.....                                                                                 | 550                                                 |
| Pontoons. Employment of, etc. Communications from Max Weber.....                                                 | 747, 795                                            |
| Poole, John F. Mentioned.....                                                                                    | 119                                                 |
| Pope, Albert A. Mentioned .....                                                                                  | 697                                                 |
| Pope, Edmund M. Mentioned.....                                                                                   | 519, 544                                            |
| Pope, Henry D. Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 331, 335                                            |
| Pope, Y. J. Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 595                                                 |
| Porter, Francis E. Mentioned.....                                                                                | 988                                                 |
| Porter, G. Ellis. Mentioned.....                                                                                 | 982                                                 |
| Porter, James. Mentioned.....                                                                                    | 203                                                 |
| Porter, Sylvester. Mentioned .....                                                                               | 397                                                 |
| Porter, Thomas W. Mentioned .....                                                                                | 109, 128, 133, 304, 325, 986                        |
| Port Republic, Va.                                                                                               |                                                     |
| Skirmishes at.                                                                                                          |                                                     |
| Sept. 26, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.                                            |                                                     |
| Reports of                                                                                                       |                                                     |
| Deane, Charles W.                                                                                                       | Kidd, James H.                                      |
| Devin, Thomas C.                                                                                                        | Lomax, Lunsford L.                                  |
| Sept. 27, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.                                            |                                                     |
| Itinerary, p. 85.                                                                                                |                                                     |
| Sept. 28, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.                                            |                                                     |
| Reports of                                                                                                       |                                                     |
| Early, Jubal A.                                                                                                         | Merritt, Wesley.                                    |
| Lee, Robert E.                                                                                                          | Powell, William H.                                  |
| Sheridan, Philip H.                                                                                                     |                                                     |
| Potomac River. Navigation of. Communications from                                                                |                                                     |
| Henry, Joseph .....                                                                                                     | 810                                                 |
| Keyser, Benjamin U.....                                                                                                 | 810                                                 |
| War Department, U. S.....                                                                                               | 809                                                 |
| Potter, Andrew.                                                                                                  |                                                     |
| Correspondence with Thomas F. Wildes.....                                                                               | 382                                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                          | 128, 381, 382                                       |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                         | 381                                                 |
| Potter, George H. Mentioned .....                                                                                | 649                                                 |
| Potter, Orson O. Correspondence with William H. Emory.....                                                       | 700                                                 |
| Potts, Junius D. Correspondence with Robert E. Lee.....                                                          | 999                                                 |

|                                                                                                                                                                                         | Page                              |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Potts, Peter J.                                                                                                                                                                  |                                   |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 87, 89, 656, 657, 659-662, 669    |
| Reports of skirmishes at Moorefield, W. Va., Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc.....                                                                                                                 | 663, 664                          |
| Powell, William H.                                                                                                                                                               |                                   |
| Assignment to command.....                                                                                                                                                              | 505                               |
| Congratulatory Orders. Engagement at Oldfields, W. Va., near Moorefield,Aug. 7, 1864.....                                                                                           | 735                               |
| Mentioned. 28, 31, 32, 35, 36, 49, 52, 53, 55, 56, 85, 93, 100, 130, 136, 147, 379, 429-434, 437,442, 461, 477, 494-496, 505, 506, 523, 534, 554, 614, 677, 679, 735, 736, 827, 983 |                                   |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                        | 506, 511, 512                     |
| Power, Benjamin F. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                | 263                               |
| Powers, Patrick. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                  | 397                               |
| Prados, Louis. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                    | 1003                              |
| Pratt, Alonzo D. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                  | 827                               |
| Pratt, Harrison W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                | 110, 377, 379, 981                |
| Prendergast, Richard G. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                           | 84, 513                           |
| Prentiss, Clifton K.                                                                                                                                                             |                                   |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 108, 223, 224, 226, 248, 249, 251 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                         | 252                               |
| President, C. S. See Jefferson Davis .                                                                                                                                    |                                   |
| President, U. S. See Abraham Lincoln .                                                                                                                                    |                                   |
| Prevost, Charles M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                               | 979                               |
| Price, William G. W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                              | 398                               |
| Pridemore, Auburn L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                              | 652                               |
| Prisoners of War.                                                                                                                                                                |                                   |
| Reported attempt for the release of. Communications from                                                                                                                                |                                   |
| Grant, U. S.....                                                                                                                                                                        | 775                               |
| Halleck, Henry W.....                                                                                                                                                                   | 778                               |
| Treatment of. Communications from                                                                                                                                                       |                                   |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.....                                                                                                                                                 | 836                               |
| Grant, U. S.....                                                                                                                                                                        | 811                               |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                                                                                                                 | 843                               |
| Private Property.                                                                                                                                                                |                                   |
| Action touching. Communication from Philip H. Sheridan.....                                                                                                                             | 43                                |
| Depredations on. Communications from James H. Wilson.....                                                                                                                               | 787, 818                          |
| Destruction of. Communications from                                                                                                                                                     |                                   |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                                                                                                                 | 816                               |
| War Department, C. S.....                                                                                                                                                               | 998                               |
| Probasco, Jacob O. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                | 467                               |
| Property Captured.                                                                                                                                                               |                                   |
| Fauquier and Loudoun Counties, Va. Expedition from Winchester into,Nov. 28-Dec. 3, 1864, by Union troops.....                                                                       | 673                               |
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864, by                                                                                                                                    |                                   |
| Confederate Troops.....                                                                                                                                                                 | 38                                |
| Union Troops.....                                                                                                                                                                       | 37, 58, 59, 436, 443, 529, 548    |
| Pryce, Samuel D. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                  | 331                               |
| Puder, John. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                      | 541, 542                          |
| Pugh, Samuel B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                   | 796                               |
| Purinton, George A.                                                                                                                                                              |                                   |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 102, 111, 117, 130, 518, 987      |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                         | 539                               |
| Quartermaster-General's Office, U. S. A. Correspondence with                                                                                                                     |                                   |
| Gardner, Robert S.....                                                                                                                                                                  | 836                               |
| Ingalls, Rufus.....                                                                                                                                                                     | 696                               |
| Quay, George W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                   | 137, 348                          |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Quinan, T. H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 637                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Quinn, Timothy.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Assignment to command .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 886                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 111, 130, 886, 983                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Radford, John T. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 512, 614                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Ramsay, James R. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 693                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Ramseur, Stephen D. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 24, 25, 32, 33, 47, 493, 496, 503,518, 528, 553-555, 560-562, 564, 567-574, 576-583, 599, 600, 604, 605, 773, 889,912, 953, 966, 969, 991, 1000, 1002, 1003, 1010, 1011, 1013, 1018-1025, 1027-1031 |
| Rand, Silas M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 540                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Randall, Francis J.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 107, 152, 154, 984                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 182                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Randall, George W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 109, 985                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Randolph, M. L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 600                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rank, William D. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 980                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rankin, William S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 1012                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Ransom, Dunbar R. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 112, 130, 922, 987                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Ransom, Robert, jr.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Correspondence with Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A. ....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 1003                                                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 567, 990, 993, 996, 1001, 1008, 1019                                                                                                                                                                        |
| Relieved from command of cavalry, Army of the Valley District.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 993                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rasberry, William J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 138                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rawlins, John A. For correspondence as Chief of Staff, see U. S. Grant .                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Rayburn, Lovel C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 119, 402                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Raymond, Carrington H. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Christopher C. Augur .                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Raymond, James P. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 331                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rectortown, Va. Skirmish near, Oct. 10, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 1                                                                                                                                                                                                           |
| Reed, William B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 540                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reen, Charles. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 198                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reeves, John N. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 544                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Regan, John W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 331                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reger, Monroe C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 87, 648                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Rehr, Lewis. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 392                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reigle, Daniel P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 228, 234, 242, 551                                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Reilly, Terrence. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 112                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reily, Kate. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 184                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reinhold, Martin. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 475                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Remley, George A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 331                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reno, Marcus A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 435, 512, 827, 836, 837, 864, 890                                                                                                                                                                           |
| For correspondence as Chief of Staff, see Alfred T. A. Torbert .                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Revell, William A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 619                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rexford, Willie M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 331, 340                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Reymer, Michael D. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 973                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reynolds, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 981                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Reynolds, George. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 551                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rhoades, Charles W. C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 321                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rhode Island Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Artillery, Light— Regiments : 1st ( Batteries ), C , 108, 114, 121, 127, 132, 149,195, 201, 206, 271, 272, 277, 985; D , 109, 115, 123, 128, 134, 281, 282, 285-287,342, 347, 348, 352, 986; G , 108, 121, 127, 132, 157, 271, 272, 277, 985; H , 976. |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st , 98, 110, 129, 433, 436, 484, 487, 978, 986.                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Infantry— Companies : Hospital Guards , 989. Regiments : 2d , 67, 107, 112,125, 187, 190, 984.                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                             |

|                                                                                         | Page.                           |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| Rhodes, Augustus C. Mentioned .....                                              | 670                             |
| Rhodes, Elisha H.                                                                |                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                         | 107, 125, 984                   |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                        | 190                             |
| Rice, James Q. Mentioned .....                                                   | 118, 177, 179                   |
| Rich, Reuben H. Mentioned .....                                                  | 277                             |
| Richards, Adolphus E. Mentioned .....                                            | 634, 635                        |
| Richards, Benjamin W. Mentioned .....                                            | 224                             |
| Richards, Thomas W. Mentioned .....                                              | 990                             |
| Richardson, Edmund. Mentioned .....                                              | 977                             |
| Richardson, Robert M. Mentioned .....                                            | 983                             |
| Richmond, Caleb. Mentioned .....                                                 | 600                             |
| Richmond, Duncan. Mentioned .....                                                | 138, 331, 334                   |
| Richmond, Va., Campaign, Aug. 1-Dec. 31, 1864. Operations during.                |                                 |
| Communications from                                                                     |                                 |
| Grant, U. S. ....                                                                       | 791, 799, 822, 856, 870         |
| Lee, Robert E. ....                                                                     | 996                             |
|                                                                                         | See also Vol. XL, Pt. I.        |
| Ricketts, James B.                                                               |                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                         | 26, 27, 32, 45, 48,             |
| 54, 55, 68, 70, 73, 108, 113, 121, 125, 131, 149-156, 158, 159, 161, 163, 164, 167,     |                                 |
| 168, 183, 187, 188, 191, 192, 194, 199-201, 203, 206, 207, 213, 225-228, 239, 246-      |                                 |
| 250, 253, 254, 256, 272, 364, 370, 426, 686, 743, 768, 778, 785, 814, 902, 952, 985     |                                 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                        | 221                             |
| Ricksecker, Rufus. Mentioned .....                                               | 119, 247, 264                   |
| Riddle, Samuel. Mentioned .....                                                  | 975                             |
| Riemenschneider, John W. Mentioned .....                                         | 137                             |
| Rife, Joseph B. Mentioned .....                                                  | 988                             |
| Rigby, James H. Mentioned .....                                                  | 982                             |
| Rigby, William T. Mentioned .....                                                | 350, 357                        |
| Riley, James D. W. Mentioned .....                                               | 395                             |
| Riley, Peter. Mentioned .....                                                    | 421                             |
| Ripley, Robert A. Mentioned .....                                                | 331                             |
| Ripley, Theodore A. Mentioned .....                                              | 128, 305, 327                   |
| Roach, Lucien. Mentioned .....                                                   | 331                             |
| Robbins, John D. Mentioned .....                                                 | 383                             |
| Roberts, Cyrus S. Mentioned .....                                                | 363, 364                        |
| Roberts, Horatio. Mentioned .....                                                | 981                             |
| Roberts, William P. Mentioned .....                                              | 979                             |
| Robertson, Claude S. Mentioned .....                                             | 988                             |
| Robertson, John. Mentioned .....                                                 | 465                             |
| Robertson, Peter.                                                                |                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                         | 108, 126                        |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                       | 236, 237                        |
| Robeson, William P., jr. Mentioned .....                                         | 111, 535, 537                   |
| Robinson, David. Mentioned .....                                                 | 232                             |
| Robinson, Frederick. Mentioned .....                                             | 278                             |
| Robinson, Robert A. Mentioned .....                                              | 978                             |
| Robinson, Sampson B. Mentioned .....                                             | 568, 570, 571, 577-579, 583-588 |
| Roche, James D. Mentioned .....                                                  | 316                             |
| Rockafellow, Benjamin F. Mentioned .....                                         | 978                             |
| Rockfish Gap, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 28, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Cam- |                                 |
| paign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                          |                                 |
| Devin, Thomas C. ....                                                                   | Lowell, Charles R., jr. ....    |
| Lee, Edwin G. ....                                                                      | Torbert, Alfred T. A. ....      |

Also itinerary, p. 95; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 577.

|                                                                                                                                                           | Page.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Rodenbough, Theophilus F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                          | 111, 443, 445                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rodes, Robert E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                   | 23-                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| 25, 38, 39, 84, 85, 486, 497, 513, 552, 554, 555, 557, 567-575, 580, 583,598, 601, 773, 889, 912, 961, 991, 993, 1000-1002, 1010-1012, 1017-1027      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Rodgers, Robert S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 367, 981                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Roe, William B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                    | 974, 975                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Rogers, Charles R. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 421                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rogers, George H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                  | 548                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rogers, George W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                  | 109, 127, 985                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Rogers, Joab B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                    | 535, 536                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Rollyson, Samuel A. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                | 369                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Roome, William P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                  | 163, 175, 176, 178, 186                                                                                                                                                                                                               |
| Root, Adrian R. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                    | 981                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rorer, Jonathan T. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 224, 229, 250, 252                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Rosney, Andrew. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                    | 983                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Ross, James R. For correspondence as A. A. A. G., see Lew. Wallace .                                                                        |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Ross, John W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                      | 331                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Ross, P. D. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                        | 564                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Ross, William B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                   | 138, 224, 229, 231                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Rosser, Thomas L.                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 31, 35, 36, 38, 82, 87-89, 100, 101, 103, 431, 432, 437,508, 515, 521, 523, 524, 528, 533-535, 537, 548, 549, 552, 554, 556, 559, 561, 562,564, 567, 578-588, 605, 612, 656, 659-662, 664, 667, 668, 675, 676, 679, 1029-1032 |
| Report of skirmishes at Moorefield, W. Va., Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc .....                                                                                   | 669                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rouston, Albert J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 249                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rouzer, John R. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                    | 248, 253                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Rowley, Thomas A.                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Couch, Darius N .....                                                                                                                                     | 830                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Harper, Albert M .....                                                                                                                                    | 929                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 706, 980                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Royall, William B.                                                                                                                                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Correspondence with William W. Averell .....                                                                                                              | 771                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 979                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rucker, William P. Correspondence with John H. Oley .....                                                                                          | 693                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rude's Hill, near Mount Jackson, Va. Action at, Nov. 22, 1864. See Shen-andoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Birdseye, Mortimer B.                      Lee, Robert E.                      Pennington, Alexander C. M.                                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Cummings, William G.                      Meem, A. Russell.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A.                                                    |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Also itineraries , pp. 84, 101, 103; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 585.                                                                         |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Ruhl, Edgar M.                                                                                                                                     |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 126, 138, 229                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                          | 242                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rulison, William H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                | 145, 426                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Rumsey, Will. For correspondence as A. A. G., see William W. Averell .                                                                      |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Rundlet, Taylor P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                 | 343                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Rupley, S. K. Correspondence with Thomas T. Eckert .....                                                                                           | 949                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Russell, Charles E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                | 175                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Russell, David A.                                                                                                                                  |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Edwards, Oliver .....                                                                                                                                     | 744                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |
| Wright, Horatio G .....                                                                                                                                   | 744, 814                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                           | 25, 47, 54, 65, 107, 112, 119, 151, 154, 155, 164,165, 169, 173, 185, 188, 201, 253, 258, 621, 686, 743, 768, 778, 785, 814, 902, 984                                                                                             |

|                                                                                                                | Page.                                                 |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------|
| Russell, Edward E. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 224, 231, 232                                         |
| Russell, Edward J. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 977                                                   |
| Russell, John K. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 623-627                                               |
| Russell, Milton. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 1003                                                  |
| Russell, Solomon W. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 163                                                   |
| For correspondence as A. A. A. G., see Frank Wheaton .                                                  |                                                       |
| Russell, William, jr. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 435, 518, 842, 846                                    |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Alfred T. A. Torbert .                                              |                                                       |
| Rust, Henry, jr. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 87, 985                                               |
| Rutherford, Allan. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 976                                                   |
| Ryan, Peter J. Mentioned .....                                                                          | 551                                                   |
| Ryer, B. Franklin. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 988                                                   |
| Safford, Charles H. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 463                                                   |
| Safford, William S. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 421                                                   |
| Sale, John B. Correspondence with Adjutant and Inspector General's Office,C. S. A. ....             | 1004                                                  |
| Salem, Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 4, 1864 .....                                                              | 1                                                     |
| Salsbury, John A.                                                                                       |                                                       |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 126                                                   |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                               | 242                                                   |
| Sanborn, John W. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 356, 357                                              |
| Sanders, Henry P. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 238                                                   |
| Sandford, John L. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 641                                                   |
| Sanford, George B. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 435                                                   |
| For correspondence as A. A. A. G., see Alfred T. A. Torbert .                                           |                                                       |
| Sanford, Morris H. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 175                                                   |
| Sanno, Edward B. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 979                                                   |
| Sargent, John. Report of scout from Fairfax Court-House to Hopewell Gap,Va., Dec. 26-27, 1864 ..... | 680                                                   |
| Sargent, Lorenzo D. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 109, 128, 331, 340, 986                               |
| Saunders, Franklin T. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 477                                                   |
| Saunders, Samuel H. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 565, 1003                                             |
| Sauthoff, Robert. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 421                                                   |
| Sawyer, Henry W. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 978                                                   |
| Sawyer, Nathaniel C. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 485, 621                                              |
| Scearce, John T. Mentioned .....                                                                        | 145                                                   |
| Schadt, Michael A. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 421                                                   |
| Schall, John W. Mentioned .....                                                                         | 108, 230, 985                                         |
| Schneider, Adolph. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 475                                                   |
| Schneider, Joseph.                                                                                      |                                                       |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 955                                                   |
| Report of skirmish at Annandale, Va., Aug. 24, 1864 .....                                                      | 638                                                   |
| Schoonmaker, James M.                                                                                   |                                                       |
| Correspondence with William W. Averell .....                                                                   | 771, 789, 797                                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 111, 117, 124, 442, 496, 498, 506, 619, 620, 738, 983 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                               | 513                                                   |
| Schoonmaker, Joseph S. Mentioned .....                                                                  | 797                                                   |
| Schultze, John S.                                                                                       |                                                       |
| Correspondence with Darius N. Couch .....                                                                      | 694, 774                                              |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 774                                                   |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Darius N. Couch .                                                   |                                                       |
| Schwartz, Edward. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 111, 130                                              |
| Scofield, David H. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 551                                                   |
| Scott, Charles V. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 138                                                   |

|                                                                                                                                                           | Page.             |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------|
| Scott, Henry D. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                            | 975               |
| Scott, James. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                              | 421               |
| Scott, Rufus.                                                                                                                                             |                   |
| Correspondence with Alfred Gibbs .....                                                                                                                    | 770               |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                            | 439, 442, 487     |
| Scott, Walter B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                          | 331               |
| Scott, William. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                            | 542               |
| Seal, William P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                          | 542               |
| Seddon, James A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                           | 993, 1000, 1001   |
| For correspondence, etc., see War Department, C. S.                                                                                                |                   |
| Seddon, John. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                              | 998               |
| Seddon, John, Mrs. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                         | 998               |
| Sedgwick, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                           | 161               |
| Seibert, Jacob M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                         | 198               |
| Seivers' Ford, Opequon Creek, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 15, 1864. See Shen-andoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Itinerary, p. 90. |                   |
| Selkirk, George H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                         | 214, 217          |
| Sessions, George H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                       | 211               |
| Seston, Charles H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                         | 331, 551          |
| Severance, La Grange. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                      | 329               |
| Seward, William H., jr. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                    | 649               |
| Seymour, Charles J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                       | 111, 986          |
| Seymour, Truman. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                          | 65                |
| Shannon, Thomas J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                        | 138, 145          |
| Sharp, Eliphalet F. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                       | 1003              |
| Sharpe, George H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                         | 760               |
| Sharpe, Jacob. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                            | 55,               |
| 109, 115, 279-281, 318, 319, 321, 325, 326, 330, 339, 345, 349, 986                                                                                       |                   |
| Shaurman, Nelson. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                         | 127, 985          |
| Shaw, James W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                            | 647-649, 904, 983 |
| Sheets, Daniel.                                                                                                                                           |                   |
| Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                                                                                                              | 927               |
| Report of skirmish near Petersburg, W. Va., Oct. 11, 1864.....                                                                                            | 645               |
| Shellenbarger, William J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 421               |
| Shellenberger, William D. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                  | 258, 259          |
| Shelley, Richard L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                        | 29                |
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.                                                                                                         |                   |
| Casualties. Returns of.                                                                                                                                   |                   |
| Confederate Troops.....                                                                                                                                   | 557               |
| Union Troops .....                                                                                                                                        | 59,               |
| 60, 112-124, 131-139, 176, 230, 252, 294, 315, 321, 325, 366, 372, 400, 409, 436                                                                          |                   |
| Charges and specifications against William Dwight.....                                                                                                    | 300-306           |
| Congratulatory address. George A. Custer .....                                                                                                            | 527               |
| Congratulatory Orders.                                                                                                                                    |                   |
| Campbell, Edward L.....                                                                                                                                   | 170               |
| Dwight, William.....                                                                                                                                      | 307               |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A.....                                                                                                                                 | 437               |
| Itineraries.                                                                                                                                              |                   |
| Army Corps, 6th .....                                                                                                                                     | 63-75             |
| Army Corps, 19th .....                                                                                                                                    | 75-81             |
| Cavalry Corps, Middle Military Division.....                                                                                                              | 89-106            |
| Susquehanna, Army of the.....                                                                                                                             | 106               |
| West Virginia, Army of .....                                                                                                                              | 81-89             |
| Journal of Jed. Hotchkiss .....                                                                                                                           | 567               |
| Medals of Honor awarded by U. S. Congress for distinguished services in.                                                                                  | 550               |

Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 27–Nov. 28, 1864—Continued.

Page

Movements and disposition of troops during. Communications from

|                            |                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
|----------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Augur, Christopher C ..... | 730, 778, 779                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Averell, William W .....   | 503, 771, 804, 819, 853                                                                                                                                                                          |
| Beal, George L .....       | 825                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Breckinridge, John C ..... | 1005                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Chipman, Norton P .....    | 896                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Duffié, Alfred N .....     | 733, 803, 818                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Dwight, William .....      | 824                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Early, Jubal A .....       | 991, 992, 1000, 1005, 1006, 1010                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Emory, William H .....     | 846, 944                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Halleck, Henry W .....     | 776, 783                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....   | 821, 839                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Lee, Fitzhugh .....        | 1008                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Lee, Robert E .....        | 1006                                                                                                                                                                                             |
| Melvin, Thayer .....       | 789                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Merritt, Wesley .....      | 816                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Russell, David .....       | 778                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Schoonmaker, James M ..... | 771                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....   | 52, 496, 501, 503,722, 725, 730, 739, 740, 744–746, 760, 761, 764, 769, 775, 776, 788, 801, 813, 824,831, 833, 838, 863, 864, 891, 892, 896, 911, 924, 934, 937, 941, 944, 945, 947, 949 |
| Stevenson, John D .....    | 820                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A ..... | 502,745, 801, 802, 816, 825, 827, 833, 852, 873, 874, 883, 902, 956, 964                                                                                                                     |
| Weber, Max .....           | 805                                                                                                                                                                                              |
| Wilson, James H .....      | 779, 795, 817–819, 892, 913, 925, 936, 937, 947, 948, 964–965                                                                                                                                    |
| Wright, Horatio G .....    | 744, 768, 778, 785, 814                                                                                                                                                                          |

Operations during. Communications from

|                            |                                                                                                                                |
|----------------------------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Averell, William W .....   | 823, 836, 837, 850, 888, 911, 936, 967                                                                                         |
| Bacon, William P .....     | 849                                                                                                                            |
| Brenaman, A. T .....       | 829                                                                                                                            |
| Chipman, Norton P .....    | 792,812, 822, 823, 842, 858, 870, 871, 877, 880, 906, 917, 932, 940                                                        |
| Devin, Thomas C .....      | 834                                                                                                                            |
| Di Cesnola, Louis P .....  | 770, 865, 890, 891, 946                                                                                                        |
| Duffié, Alfred N .....     | 851                                                                                                                            |
| Early, Jubal A .....       | 1001, 1007                                                                                                                     |
| Edwards, Oliver .....      | 794                                                                                                                            |
| Grant, U. S .....          | 916, 939                                                                                                                       |
| Lawrence, George J .....   | 760                                                                                                                            |
| Longstreet, James .....    | 52                                                                                                                             |
| McIntosh, John B .....     | 867                                                                                                                            |
| Merritt, Wesley .....      | 770, 864                                                                                                                       |
| Miller, Frank B .....      | 894                                                                                                                            |
| Myers, Edward .....        | 834                                                                                                                            |
| Petrie, Peter B .....      | 938                                                                                                                            |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....   | 787, 792, 794, 811, 822, 830, 841, 851,856, 857, 867, 876, 880, 889, 890, 898, 910, 914, 918, 920, 925, 932, 952, 961, 963 |
| Stevenson, John D .....    | 837, 849, 867, 877, 957                                                                                                        |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A ..... | 769, 794, 834, 864, 875, 921                                                                                                   |
| Wickham, Williams C .....  | 1009                                                                                                                           |
| Wilson, James H .....      | 834–836, 864, 866, 867, 883–885, 891, 911, 922, 923, 934, 935                                                                  |
| Wright, Horatio G .....    | 51                                                                                                                             |

|                                                                    | Page.                                            |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864—Continued. |                                                  |
| Property captured and destroyed by                                 |                                                  |
| Confederate Troops .....                                           | 38                                               |
| Union Troops .....                                                 | 37, 58, 59, 436, 443, 529, 548                   |
| Reported movements of Confederate troops during. Communications    |                                                  |
| from                                                               |                                                  |
| Augur, Christopher C .....                                         | 897                                              |
| Averell, William W .....                                           | 502, 733, 858, 893                               |
| Grant, U. S .....                                                  | 43, 775, 811, 841, 905                           |
| Halleck, Henry W .....                                             | 840, 841                                         |
| Harrison, Henry N .....                                            | 764                                              |
| Hull, E. J. C .....                                                | 926                                              |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....                                           | 732, 838                                         |
| Leet, George K .....                                               | 952                                              |
| Means, Samuel C .....                                              | 799                                              |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                           | 720, 737, 783, 842, 883, 884, 897, 905, 935, 953 |
| Stevenson, John D .....                                            | 948, 972                                         |
| Thayer, Amos M .....                                               | 926, 939                                         |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                 | 773                                              |
| Weber, Max .....                                                   | 772                                              |
| Wells, Henry H .....                                               | 832                                              |
| Reported movements of Union troops during. Communications from     |                                                  |
| Durst, ——— .....                                                   | 992                                              |
| Early, Jubal A .....                                               | 993                                              |
| Lee, Fitzhugh .....                                                | 1005, 1009                                       |
| Lee, Robert E .....                                                | 990, 994, 997                                    |
| War Department, C. S .....                                         | 993                                              |
| Reports of                                                         |                                                  |
| Adams, George W .....                                              | 277                                              |
| Allen, Charles F .....                                             | 343                                              |
| Allstrom, John V .....                                             | 536                                              |
| Averell, William W .....                                           | 493, 495                                         |
| Ball, William H .....                                              | 250, 260                                         |
| Bassett, Isaac C .....                                             | 188                                              |
| Beal, George L .....                                               | 311                                              |
| Beardsley, William E .....                                         | 484                                              |
| Benjamin, William H .....                                          | 543                                              |
| Bennett, John W .....                                              | 544                                              |
| Bidwell, Daniel D .....                                            | 212                                              |
| Binkley, Otho H .....                                              | 258, 259                                         |
| Birdseye, Mortimer B .....                                         | 538                                              |
| Birge, Henry W .....                                               | 322, 325                                         |
| Bouldin, Wood, jr .....                                            | 597                                              |
| Bradbury, Albert W .....                                           | 356                                              |
| Brewer, Melvin .....                                               | 468                                              |
| Bukey, Van H .....                                                 | 394                                              |
| Purgess, Charles .....                                             | 255                                              |
| Cadot, Lemuel Z .....                                              | 412, 413                                         |
| Campbell, Edward L .....                                           | 168                                              |
| Cannon, Henry G .....                                              | 595                                              |
| Chandler, Charles G .....                                          | 244                                              |
| Chapman, George H .....                                            | 542                                              |
| Clark, Gideon .....                                                | 189                                              |
| Clark, Sidney E .....                                              | 315, 316                                         |

|                                                                    | Page.                   |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864—Continued. |                         |
| Reports of                                                         |                         |
| Coates, Benjamin F.....                                            | 410, 411                |
| Coleman, James H.....                                              | 202, 203                |
| Comly, James M.....                                                | 407, 408                |
| Conner, James.....                                                 | 592                     |
| Cowand, David G.....                                               | 601, 607                |
| Crook, George.....                                                 | 360, 361, 363, 365      |
| Crowninshield, Casper.....                                         | 491                     |
| Cummings, William G.....                                           | 548                     |
| Custer, George A.....                                              | 454, 520, 522           |
| Dalton, Henry R.....                                               | 163                     |
| Darling, Daniel H.....                                             | 468                     |
| Darnall, William W.....                                            | 336                     |
| Deane, Charles W.....                                              | 466                     |
| Devin, Thomas C.....                                               | 470, 474, 475, 481, 483 |
| Devol, Hiram F.....                                                | 406                     |
| Di Cesnola, Louis P.....                                           | 469                     |
| Doughty, John B.....                                               | 191                     |
| Douw, John D. P.....                                               | 182                     |
| Du Pont, Henry A.....                                              | 413, 419                |
| Duval, Isaac H.....                                                | 399, 400                |
| Dwight, William.....                                               | 287                     |
| Early, Jubal A.....                                                | 554, 557, 559-561       |
| Edwards, Oliver.....                                               | 183-186                 |
| Emerson, William.....                                              | 230, 231, 233           |
| Emory, William H.....                                              | 279, 282, 284           |
| Farmer, George E.....                                              | 485                     |
| Fay, Thomas M.....                                                 | 238                     |
| Ferguson, William D.....                                           | 241                     |
| Fisk, Henry C.....                                                 | 180, 181                |
| Fletcher, Stephen C.....                                           | 217                     |
| Foster, George P.....                                              | 208                     |
| French, Winsor B.....                                              | 219, 220                |
| Getty, George W.....                                               | 191, 193                |
| Ghiselin, James T.....                                             | 139                     |
| Gibbs, Alfred.....                                                 | 487                     |
| Gibbs, Frank C.....                                                | 417                     |
| Gibson, Thomas.....                                                | 514                     |
| Goggin, James M.....                                               | 593                     |
| Graham, Harvey.....                                                | 337, 338                |
| Granger, Moses M.....                                              | 261                     |
| Grant, John V.....                                                 | 317                     |
| Grant, Lewis A.....                                                | 209                     |
| Grimes, Bryan.....                                                 | 598                     |
| Grover, Cuvier.....                                                | 318                     |
| Hague, Albert G.....                                               | 514                     |
| Halsted, Edward L.....                                             | 148                     |
| Hamblin, Joseph E.....                                             | 177                     |
| Harris, Thomas M.....                                              | 371, 372, 387, 390      |
| Hayes, Rutherford B.....                                           | 401-403, 405            |
| Healy, John G.....                                                 | 327                     |
| Hickman, Baynton J.....                                            | 187                     |
| Hill, Joseph C.....                                                | 254                     |

Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864—Continued.

Reports of

|                                  |                    |
|----------------------------------|--------------------|
| Hoge, George W .....             | 263, 265           |
| Holliday, John W .....           | 396                |
| Hotchkiss, Jed .....             | 1023               |
| Howard, Ocran H .....            | 146                |
| Hufty, Baldwin .....             | 165, 167, 171      |
| Hull, Walter C .....             | 537                |
| Hunt, Lucius T .....             | 243                |
| Hyde, Thomas W .....             | 214                |
| Ives, Brayton .....              | 535                |
| Janeway, Jacob J .....           | 235                |
| Johnson, Daniel D .....          | 408, 409           |
| Keifer, J. Warren .....          | 225, 246           |
| Kellogg, Horace .....            | 385                |
| Kidd, James H .....              | 459, 463           |
| Lamb, Jacob H .....              | 277                |
| Lee, Edwin G .....               | 615                |
| Lee, Robert E .....              | 552-554            |
| Lewis, George N .....            | 317                |
| Linton, John P .....             | 386                |
| Lomax, Lunsford L .....          | 610, 614           |
| Lowell, Charles R., jr .....     | 486, 490           |
| Macanley, Daniel .....           | 339                |
| McCartney, William H .....       | 273                |
| McCausland, John .....           | 614                |
| McGregor, James .....            | 205                |
| McIntosh, John B .....           | 529, 531           |
| Mackenzie, Ranald S .....        | 179                |
| McKnight, James .....            | 278                |
| McMillan, James W .....          | 308, 313           |
| May, Lewis A .....               | 269, 270           |
| Meem, A. Russell .....           | 589                |
| Merritt, Wesley .....            | 438, 443, 446, 448 |
| Milliken, Charles A .....        | 218                |
| Molineux, Edward L .....         | 329, 333           |
| Moore, Edwin L .....             | 609                |
| Munk, William .....              | 418                |
| Munroe, Robert .....             | 204                |
| Neafie, Alfred .....             | 341, 344           |
| Nesmith, John H .....            | 514                |
| Olcott, Egbert .....             | 174, 181           |
| Parr, John G .....               | 206                |
| Peirce, Charles H .....          | 549                |
| Pennington, Alexander C. M ..... | 532                |
| Phillips, John W .....           | 540                |
| Potter, Andrew .....             | 381                |
| Powell, William H .....          | 506, 511, 512      |
| Prentiss, Clifton K .....        | 252                |
| Purinton, George A .....         | 539                |
| Randall, Francis J .....         | 182                |
| Rhodes, Elisha H .....           | 190                |
| Ricketts, James B .....          | 221                |
| Robertson, Peter .....           | 236, 237           |

|                                                                                                                                  | Page.                                                                                              |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864—Continued.                                                               |                                                                                                    |
| Reports of                                                                                                                       |                                                                                                    |
| Ruhl, Edgar M.....                                                                                                               | 242                                                                                                |
| Salsbury, John A.....                                                                                                            | 242                                                                                                |
| Schoonmaker, James M.....                                                                                                        | 513                                                                                                |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                                                          | 17-37, 40                                                                                          |
| Shunk, David.....                                                                                                                | 346, 347                                                                                           |
| Simms, James P.....                                                                                                              | 589                                                                                                |
| Snow, John S.....                                                                                                                | 358                                                                                                |
| Snyder, James W.....                                                                                                             | 256                                                                                                |
| Stagg, Peter.....                                                                                                                | 461                                                                                                |
| Stevens, Greenleaf T.....                                                                                                        | 273                                                                                                |
| Suter, John.....                                                                                                                 | 391                                                                                                |
| Taft, Elijah D.....                                                                                                              | 286                                                                                                |
| Taylor, David J.....                                                                                                             | 221                                                                                                |
| Teters, Wilbert B.....                                                                                                           | 383                                                                                                |
| Thoburn, Joseph.....                                                                                                             | 367-369                                                                                            |
| Thurber, Benjamin F.....                                                                                                         | 328                                                                                                |
| Tompkins, Charles H.....                                                                                                         | 271                                                                                                |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A.....                                                                                                        | 421, 437                                                                                           |
| Upton, Emory.....                                                                                                                | 162, 173                                                                                           |
| Van Etten, Orsamus R.....                                                                                                        | 274, 276                                                                                           |
| Warner, James M.....                                                                                                             | 199, 200, 207, 211                                                                                 |
| Wells, George D.....                                                                                                             | 374, 375, 378                                                                                      |
| Wells, Milton.....                                                                                                               | 397                                                                                                |
| Wheaton, Frank.....                                                                                                              | 196                                                                                                |
| Whiting, Henry A.....                                                                                                            | 600                                                                                                |
| Wildes, Thomas F.....                                                                                                            | 379                                                                                                |
| Wilkie, Frederick C.....                                                                                                         | 382                                                                                                |
| Wilson, Bartholomew W.....                                                                                                       | 354, 355                                                                                           |
| Wilson, James H.....                                                                                                             | 516                                                                                                |
| Winston, John R.....                                                                                                             | 608                                                                                                |
| Withers, Henry H.....                                                                                                            | 392                                                                                                |
| Wolcott, John A.....                                                                                                             | 239, 240                                                                                           |
| Wright, Edward.....                                                                                                              | 349, 351, 352                                                                                      |
| Wright, Horatio G.....                                                                                                           | 149, 152, 154, 158                                                                                 |
| Young, John F.....                                                                                                               | 265, 267                                                                                           |
| Signal operations during. Communication from Philip H. Sheridan.....                                                             | 147                                                                                                |
| Thanks of U. S. Congress to Philip H. Sheridan for victories during.....                                                         | 63                                                                                                 |
| Shepherd, Oliver L. Mentioned.....                                                                                        | 989                                                                                                |
| Shepherdstown, W. Va. Action near, Aug. 25, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of |                                                                                                    |
| Cowand, David G.....                                                                                                             | Kidd, James H.....                                                                                 |
| Gibbs, Alfred.....                                                                                                               | Torbert, Alfred T. A.....                                                                          |
|                                                                                                                                  | Merritt, Wesley.....                                                                               |
| Also itineraries , pp. 92, 98; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 570; Custer to Torbert , p. 922.                   |                                                                                                    |
| Sheridan, Michael V. Mentioned.....                                                                                       | 720, 871                                                                                           |
| Sheridan, Philip H.                                                                                                       |                                                                                                    |
| Assignments to command.....                                                                                                      | 709, 719                                                                                           |
| Assumes command of Middle Military Division.....                                                                                 | 721                                                                                                |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                              |                                                                                                    |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.....                                                                                          | 60                                                                                                 |
| Augur, Christopher C.....                                                                                                        | 727, 728, 740, 741, 761, 776, 831, 843, 859, 860, 871, 872, 889, 897, 898, 909, 910, 918, 919, 941 |

Sheridan, Philip H.—Continued.

Correspondence with

|                                                                                        |                                                                                                                                       |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Averell, William W .....                                                               | 496, 501-505, 725, 764, 770,788, 804, 819, 820, 827, 836-838, 851, 867, 877, 893, 914, 925, 937, 958, 966, 972                    |
| Chipman, Norton P .....                                                                | 953                                                                                                                                   |
| Couch, Darius N .....                                                                  | 725, 808                                                                                                                              |
| Crook, George .....                                                                    | 744, 794, 864, 883, 890, 917, 920                                                                                                     |
| Currie, Leonard D. H .....                                                             | 873                                                                                                                                   |
| Custer, George A .....                                                                 | 722, 730                                                                                                                              |
| Duffié, Alfred N .....                                                                 | 725, 733                                                                                                                              |
| Dwight, William .....                                                                  | 306                                                                                                                                   |
| Eckert, Thomas T .....                                                                 | 857                                                                                                                                   |
| Edwards, Oliver .....                                                                  | 621, 794                                                                                                                              |
| Ellis, Milton A .....                                                                  | 921                                                                                                                                   |
| Emory, William H. 722, 744, 785, 801, 815, 824, 833, 845, 863, 883, 911, 934, 944, 964 |                                                                                                                                       |
| Grant, U. S .....                                                                      | 39, 40, 61, 696, 709, 710, 719, 720, 737, 783,791, 799, 811, 822, 830, 841, 856, 869, 870, 880, 905, 906, 916, 932, 939, 952, 953 |
| Halleck, Henry W .....                                                                 | 37, 51, 720,725, 726, 737, 759, 783, 792, 811, 812, 830, 841, 842, 857, 917, 932, 940, 953, 961                                   |
| Howard, Ocran H .....                                                                  | 147                                                                                                                                   |
| Hunter, David .....                                                                    | 730                                                                                                                                   |
| Inspector-General's Office, U. S. A .....                                              | 738, 759                                                                                                                              |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....                                                               | 732, 749, 772, 790, 839, 926, 967                                                                                                     |
| Kenly, John R .....                                                                    | 620                                                                                                                                   |
| Lincoln, Abraham .....                                                                 | 61, 62                                                                                                                                |
| Merritt, Wesley .....                                                                  | 55, 711, 944, 945, 956                                                                                                                |
| Parsons, Enos B .....                                                                  | 60                                                                                                                                    |
| Stevenson, John D .....                                                                | 826, 849, 850, 867, 876, 877, 886, 892, 913, 924, 949, 957                                                                            |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A .....                                                             | 43, 437, 531, 711, 745, 769, 787, 816, 921                                                                                            |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                                     | 798, 854                                                                                                                              |
| War Department, U. S. .....                                                            | 51, 61, 62, 857, 931, 969                                                                                                             |
| Weber, Max .....                                                                       | 747, 772, 780, 788, 795, 805                                                                                                          |
| Wilson, James H. . 730, 746, 802, 817, 883, 884, 891, 911, 912, 923, 934, 935, 946-948 |                                                                                                                                       |
| Wright, Horatio G .....                                                                | 51, 52, 743, 883, 902, 963                                                                                                            |

|                 |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
|-----------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Mentioned ..... | 3, 37, 38, 40, 43, 52, 58, 59, 61-63, 66, 69, 71, 73, 76-78, 80-82, 87, 94,107, 112, 120, 125, 131, 141, 143, 146-150, 152, 155-159, 161, 185, 189, 194, 201,227, 238, 241, 250, 251, 256, 258, 267, 269, 281, 283, 285, 291, 306, 307, 309, 310,336, 348, 349, 351-353, 361, 365, 366, 368, 377, 421, 424, 431, 433-435, 446, 450,463-465, 467, 475, 476, 480, 493, 495-503, 516, 517, 519, 523, 532, 544, 548, 552,556, 558-560, 564, 580, 583, 613, 623, 625, 635, 674, 681, 682, 684, 686, 695, 698,699, 709, 711, 719, 720, 722, 725, 729-735, 739, 740, 746-748, 759-762, 767, 769,771-773, 775, 776, 778-780, 785, 787-789, 791-794, 796, 798, 800-805, 808, 812,815, 817-819, 822-824, 829, 831-833, 836-843, 847, 849, 850, 856-859, 861, 862,864, 865, 868, 870, 871, 873, 877, 878, 880, 881, 883, 884, 886, 889, 891-893, 895,896, 905-909, 911, 913, 917, 919-922, 925, 926, 931-933, 937, 938, 940, 944, 945,947-949, 951-953, 956, 957, 960, 962-964, 967, 969, 971, 974, 975, 994-996, 1006 |
|-----------------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|

Reports of

|                                                                                                      |                         |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Gordonsville, Va. Expedition from Winchester to near, etc., Dec. 19-28, 1864 .....                   | 38, 39                  |
| Lacey's Springs, Va. Expedition from Kernstown to, Dec. 19-22, 1864. .                               | 38, 39                  |
| Moorefield, W. Va. Skirmishes at, Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc .....                                        | 653                     |
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                               | 17-37, 40               |
| Staff. Announcements of .....                                                                        | 720, 738, 800, 843, 940 |
| Thanks of U. S. Congress to, for victories in Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 ..... | 63                      |

|                                                                                   | Page.                             |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Sherman, William T. Mentioned.....                                         | 430, 519, 767                     |
| Sherman, William W. Mentioned .....                                        | 198                               |
| Shier, Charles, jr. Mentioned .....                                        | 138, 460, 461                     |
| Shipley, Samuel D. Mentioned .....                                         | 108, 127, 308                     |
| Shivers, William R. Mentioned.....                                         | 1012                              |
| Shoemaker, Levi. Mentioned .....                                           | 551                               |
| Shook, Daniel. Mentioned .....                                             | 261                               |
| Short, Jim. Mentioned .....                                                | 968                               |
| Shorter, Captain. Mentioned .....                                          | 582, 583                          |
| Showalter, John H. Mentioned .....                                         | 983                               |
| Shreeve, Lewis H. Mentioned .....                                          | 250                               |
| Shunk, David.                                                              |                                   |
| Mentioned .....                                                                   | 80, 81, 109, 115,                 |
| 122, 128, 134, 279, 289, 292, 298, 304, 311, 312, 318, 319, 321-326, 349-353, 986 |                                   |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                 | 346, 347                          |
| Sibley, Henry R. Mentioned .....                                           | 300                               |
| Siebert, Louis. Mentioned .....                                            | 520                               |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see James H. Wilson.                       |                                   |
| Sieg, Henry. Mentioned.....                                                | 573                               |
| Silsby, Frank. Mentioned.....                                              | 329                               |
| Simes, Edward D. Mentioned.....                                            | 248, 258                          |
| Simison, Samuel A. Mentioned.....                                          | 110, 129, 387, 390                |
| Simms, James P.                                                            |                                   |
| Mentioned.....                                                                    | 566, 593                          |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                  | 589                               |
| Simonds, Joseph F. Mentioned.....                                          | 331                               |
| Simpson, Frank W. Mentioned.....                                           | 175                               |
| Simpson, James L. Mentioned .....                                          | 395, 692, 706, 715, 887, 950, 983 |
| Sims, John V. Mentioned .....                                              | 119                               |
| Sinclair, William. Correspondence with Inspector-General's Office, U.      |                                   |
| S. A .....                                                                        | 685, 686, 699, 908                |
| Singleton, John. Mentioned.....                                            | 218                               |
| Sizer, John M. Mentioned.....                                              | 285, 358                          |
| Skinner, Benjamin M. Mentioned.....                                        | 110, 409, 982                     |
| Skinner, James H. Mentioned .....                                          | 1012                              |
| Skinner, Jeffrey. Mentioned .....                                          | 177, 179                          |
| Slack, Greenbury. Mentioned.....                                           | 119, 402                          |
| Slack, Hedgeman. Mentioned .....                                           | 983                               |
| Slater, Joel B. Mentioned.....                                             | 435                               |
| Slough, John P. Mentioned .....                                            | 977                               |
| Small, David. Mentioned .....                                              | 190                               |
| Small, Lemuel C. Mentioned.....                                            | 214, 217                          |
| Small, Melville R. Mentioned.....                                          | 138                               |
| Smart, John C. Mentioned .....                                             | 138                               |
| Smith, Captain. Mentioned.....                                             | 670                               |
| Smith, General. Mentioned .....                                            | 998                               |
| Smith, Andrew J. Mentioned.....                                            | 224, 225, 230-232, 234, 235       |
| Smith, Benjamin F. Mentioned .....                                         | 75                                |
| Smith, Charles R. Mentioned.....                                           | 896                               |
| Smith, Demarest J. Mentioned .....                                         | 248, 253                          |
| Smith, D. Howard. Mentioned.....                                           | 1013                              |
| Smith, Francis W. Mentioned .....                                          | 997                               |
| Smith, Gad N. Mentioned.....                                               | 176                               |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Page.                     |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------|
| Smith, George W. P.                                                                                                                                                                                   |                           |
| Correspondence with Henry H. Lockwood.....                                                                                                                                                                   | 785, 800                  |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                               | 981                       |
| Smith, Herman. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                         | 119, 331                  |
| Smith, Howard M.                                                                                                                                                                                      |                           |
| Correspondence with Alfred Gibbs .....                                                                                                                                                                       | 866, 964                  |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                               | 986                       |
| Smith, Isaac. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 145                       |
| Smith, James W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                        | 541                       |
| Smith, Robert S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                       | 111, 130, 986             |
| Smith, Rufus W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                        | 138                       |
| Smith, S. Crawford. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                   | 982                       |
| Smith, Thomas. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                        | 566, 595, 599, 1011, 1028 |
| Smith, William. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                        | 540                       |
| Smith, William Prescott. Correspondence with John D. Stevenson .....                                                                                                                                  | 966                       |
| Smith, William Proctor. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                               | 572, 584, 586-588, 1032   |
| Smith, William W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                     | 350, 354                  |
| Smithfield, W. Va.                                                                                                                                                                                    |                           |
| Skirmish at. See Leetown and Smithfield, W. Va. Skirmishes at, Aug. 28, 1864.                                                                                                                         |                           |
| Skirmish near, Aug. 30, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                            | 9                         |
| Smithfield Crossing of the Opequon, W. Va. Engagement at, Aug. 29, 1864.See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                                   |                           |
| Averell, William W.                                                                                                                                                                                          | Gibbs, Alfred.            |
| Devin, Thomas C.                                                                                                                                                                                             | Merritt, Wesley.          |
| Di Cesnola, Louis P.                                                                                                                                                                                         | Sheridan, Philip H.       |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                              | Torbert, Alfred T. A.     |
| Also itineraries , pp. 90, 95; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 571; Sheridan to Averell ,p. 966; Merritt to Lowell , p. 956.                                                       |                           |
| Snicker's Gap, Va.                                                                                                                                                                                    |                           |
| Operations about, Oct. 28-29, 1864, and skirmish (29th) at Upperville.Reports of Christopher C. Augur .....                                                                                              | 646                       |
| Skirmishes at.                                                                                                                                                                                               |                           |
| Sept. 16-17, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Chapman , p. 543.                                                                                                  |                           |
| Nov. 30, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                          | 2                         |
| Snodgrass, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                      | 199                       |
| Snow, Alonzo. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 983                       |
| Snow, John S.                                                                                                                                                                                         |                           |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                               | 128, 323, 356, 357        |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                              | 358                       |
| Snowden, James M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                     | 176                       |
| Snyder, James W.                                                                                                                                                                                      |                           |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                               | 126, 229, 975             |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                             | 256                       |
| Sodoin, Adilard. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                      | 277                       |
| Sorrel, G. Moxley. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Richard H. Anderson .                                                                                                                   |                           |
| Soule, Lewis. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                          | 989                       |
| South, Zedekiah. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley .....                                                                                                                                         | 705                       |
| South Carolina Troops. Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                     |                           |
| Infantry— Battalions : 3d, 566. Regiments : 2d, 76, 551, 566, 595; 3d, 566,593, 594; 7th, 566; 8th, 24, 46, 98, 102, 427, 517, 530, 566, 592, 593, 893; 15th,486, 566, 594; 20th, 566. |                           |
| Miscellaneous— Hampton Legion , 185.                                                                                                                                                                  |                           |
| Southwest Virginia and East Tennessee, Department of. Affairs in, gen-erally. Communication from John Echols.....                                                                                 | 1010                      |

|                                                                                                                                                                           | Page.                                                      |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| Southworth, Samuel D. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                              | 139, 415, 416, 420, 421                                    |
| Spangler, Aaron. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                    | 223, 224, 229, 248, 249, 254, 258                          |
| Spear, Vivian K. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                   | 981                                                        |
| Spear, Wallace M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 977                                                        |
| Spence, Beldin. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                     | 982                                                        |
| Spencer, Joseph H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                  | 149                                                        |
| Spera, Weidner H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 125                                                        |
| Sperry, William J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 126                                                        |
| Stafford, Leroy A. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                  | 565, 609, 1003, 1011, 1012                                 |
| Stagg, Peter.                                                                                                                                                      |                                                            |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                            | 97, 111, 448, 455, 458, 671, 673, 678                      |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                           | 461                                                        |
| Stahel, Julius.                                                                                                                                                    |                                                            |
| Assignment to command .....                                                                                                                                               | 731                                                        |
| Assignment to duty .....                                                                                                                                                  | 686                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                           | 686, 731, 739                                              |
| Relieved from duty in Department of West Virginia .....                                                                                                                   | 739                                                        |
| Stanley, Wallace S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                 | 407                                                        |
| Stanton, Edwin M. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                   | 57,                                                        |
| 452, 635, 681, 755, 756, 774, 792, 809, 810, 836, 840, 855, 860, 867, 869, 908, 970                                                                                       |                                                            |
| For correspondence, etc., see War Department, U. S.                                                                                                                |                                                            |
| Starr, James. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                       | 487, 866, 946, 986                                         |
| Starr, William C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                  | 363, 364                                                   |
| Staunton, Va., Commanding Officer at. Correspondence with Briscoe G. Baldwin.....                                                                                  | 995                                                        |
| Steadman, George W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                | 118, 316                                                   |
| Stearns, Joseph L. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                 | 540                                                        |
| Stedman, Joseph. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                   | 977                                                        |
| Steen, Enoch. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                      | 988                                                        |
| Stephens, Edward W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                 | 363, 364, 410                                              |
| Stephenson's Depot, Va. Skirmish near, Sept. 5, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Itinerary, p. 85; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 572. |                                                            |
| Sterling, John T. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                   | 331, 551                                                   |
| Steuart, George H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                  | 609, 1004, 1012                                            |
| Stevens, Charles E. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                 | 220                                                        |
| Stevens, Greenleaf T.                                                                                                                                              |                                                            |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                            | 108, 127, 152, 154, 271, 272, 985                          |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                          | 273                                                        |
| Stevens, Hazard. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                    | 193, 195                                                   |
| Stevens, William S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                | 331                                                        |
| Stevenson, James H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                | 982                                                        |
| Stevenson, John D.                                                                                                                                                 |                                                            |
| Assignment to command .....                                                                                                                                               | 803                                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                       |                                                            |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A .....                                                                                                                                  | 836, 966                                                   |
| Averell, William W .....                                                                                                                                                  | 820, 828, 829, 836, 837, 850                               |
| Duffié, Alfred N.....                                                                                                                                                     | 837, 893, 903, 914, 924                                    |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                                                                                                   | 829                                                        |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                                                                                                   | 826, 849, 850, 867, 876, 877, 886, 892, 913, 924, 949, 957 |
| Smith, William Prescott.....                                                                                                                                              | 966                                                        |
| War Department, U. S .....                                                                                                                                                | 948, 949, 957, 965, 966, 972                               |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                           | 78, 185, 425, 619, 620, 623, 628, 630, 631,                |
| 800, 803, 812, 850, 858, 859, 871, 873, 878, 886, 887, 896, 914, 941, 944, 969, 982                                                                                       |                                                            |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Page.                                       |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------------------|
| Stevenson, Robert.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                                             |
| Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley..                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 692, 704, 715, 764, 853, 868, 887, 894, 916 |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 3, 86, 706, 714, 735, 904                   |
| Stewart, Charles. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 782, 809, 979                               |
| Stewart, C. Seaforth. Report of skirmishes at Moorefield, W. Va., Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc .....                                                                                                                                                            | 654                                         |
| Stewart, Milton. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 402                                         |
| Stickle, Augustus C. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 876                                         |
| Stiles, William H., sr. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 1012                                        |
| Stocking, Solon W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 977                                         |
| Stoddard, Fayette B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 395                                         |
| Stone, Edgar H. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 421                                         |
| Stone, George H. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 119                                         |
| Stone Chapel, Va. Skirmish near, Aug. 10, 1864. See Shenandoah ValleyCampaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                                                                                                            |                                             |
| Gibbs, Alfred.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Merritt, Wesley.                            |
| Lowell, Charles R., jr.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | Torbert, Alfred T. A.                       |
| Stough, Israel. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 86, 705                                     |
| Strain, Alexander. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 127, 312                                    |
| Strasburg, Va.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |                                             |
| Skirmishes at.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                             |
| Aug. 15, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.Reports of                                                                                                                                                                    |                                             |
| Crook, George.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Hufty, Baldwin.                             |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Wright, Horatio G.                          |
| Sept. 20, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.Reports of                                                                                                                                                                   |                                             |
| Bidwell, Daniel D.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Devin, Thomas C.                            |
|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Merritt, Wesley.                            |
| Sept. 21, 1864. Casualties. Returns of. Union troops .....                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 121-123                                     |
| See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of                                                                                                                                                                                        |                                             |
| Graham, Harvey.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | Taft, Elijah D.                             |
| Sheridan, Philip H.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | Wright, Edward.                             |
| Also itineraries , pp. 68, 69.                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |                                             |
| Skirmishes near.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                             |
| Aug. 13, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.Report of Merritt , p. 439.                                                                                                                                                   |                                             |
| Aug. 14, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.Reports of                                                                                                                                                                    |                                             |
| Crook, George.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Hufty, Baldwin.                             |
| Gibbs, Alfred.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | Wright, Horatio G.                          |
| Also journal of Hotchkiss , p. 569.                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                             |
| Skirmish on the Back Road near. See Back Road, near Strasburg, Va.Skirmish on, Oct. 7, 1864.                                                                                                                                                      |                                             |
| Strasburg (or Hupp's Hill), Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 14, 1864. See Shenan-doah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Devin ,p. 478; Simms , p. 590; itinerary , p. 93; journal of Hotchkiss , p.579. |                                             |
| Stratton, Asa S. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 540                                         |
| Stratton, Edward L. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 980                                         |
| Strength of Troops. See Organization, Strength, etc.                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                             |
| Strickland, Nelson J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 977                                         |
| Strong, Joseph G. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 355                                         |
| Stroud, George D. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 979                                         |
| Stroup, Lawrence K. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 402                                         |
| Stuckey, John S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 248, 269                                    |
| Subsistence Stores. See Munitions of War.                                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                             |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | Page.                                                      |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| Sullivan, Jeremiah C.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                                            |
| Assignment to command.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 709                                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                                            |
| Crampton, Harvey .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 905                                                        |
| Hunter, David .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 723                                                        |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 736, 806                                                   |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 709, 749, 983                                              |
| Report of Nounnan's expedition into Kanawha Valley, W. Va., Sept. 23-Oct. 1, 1864, etc .....                                                                                                                                                            | 641                                                        |
| Summit Point, W. Va. Skirmish near, Aug. 21, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Gibbs, p. 488; Sheridan, pp. 19, 104; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 570; Wilson to Merritt, p. 874; Wilson to Torbert, p. 875. |                                                            |
| Sumner, Alexander B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 214, 216                                                   |
| Sumner, Edwin V. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 739, 784, 805                                              |
| Susquehanna, Army of the. Itineraries. Shenandoah Valley Campaign,Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                      | 106                                                        |
| Susquehanna, Department of the.                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                            |
| Affairs in, generally. Communications from Darius N. Couch.....                                                                                                                                                                                             | 694,774, 782, 830, 960                                 |
| Brandywine District discontinued.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 106, 840                                                   |
| Designation of, changed to Department of Pennsylvania.....                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 106                                                        |
| Included in Middle Military Division .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 719                                                        |
| Movements and disposition of troops in. Communications from Darius N.Couch .....                                                                                                                                                                        | 809, 928, 929                                              |
| Orders, Circular, series 1864— Couch : Aug. 4, 694, 695.                                                                                                                                                                                             |                                                            |
| Orders, General, series 1864— Couch : No. 45, 840; No. 48, 889.                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                            |
| Orders, Special, series 1864— Couch : No. 181, 707; No. 183, 759; No.185, 782; No. 191, 856; No. 198, 928.                                                                                                                                       |                                                            |
| Signal operations in. Communication from Amos M. Thayer.....                                                                                                                                                                                                | 973                                                        |
| Union troops in. Organization, strength, etc. See Middle Military Division.                                                                                                                                                                          |                                                            |
| Suter, John.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                                            |
| Correspondence with Milton Wells.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 392                                                        |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 129, 398                                                   |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                            | 391                                                        |
| Sutherland, Robert J. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 981                                                        |
| Sutton, W. Va. Skirmish at, Aug. 24, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 1                                                          |
| Suydam, Charles C. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 130, 519, 530, 536, 987                                    |
| Swann, Thomas B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 651, 652                                                   |
| Swearingen, T. Brent. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Darius N. Couch.                                                                                                                                                                    |                                                            |
| Sweeney, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 551                                                        |
| Sweeney, James W. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 5, 754                                                     |
| Sweet, William E. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 402, 407                                                   |
| Sweitzer, Nelson B. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 487, 488                                                   |
| Swift, Henry. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 785                                                        |
| Szink, Jacob. Correspondence with Darius N. Couch .....                                                                                                                                                                                              | 929                                                        |
| Tabor, William J. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 138                                                        |
| Taft, Henry S. Correspondence with Amos M. Thayer .....                                                                                                                                                                                              | 973                                                        |
| Taft, Elijah D.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                                            |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 109, 115, 123, 127, 275, 291, 309, 317, 319, 357, 944, 986 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                            | 286                                                        |
| Taggart, George W. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 110, 402, 409, 982                                         |
| Taggart, Robert. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 930, 931                                                   |
| Taliaferro, Alexander G. Mentioned.....                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 1012                                                       |

|                                                                                                           | Page.                                           |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------|
| Tannatt, Thomas R. Mentioned .....                                                                 | 872                                             |
| Tarbell, Dr. Mentioned .....                                                                       | 795                                             |
| Tarbell, Joel H. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 989                                             |
| Tarbell, Jonathan. Mentioned .....                                                                 | 981                                             |
| Tate, Augustus C. Mentioned .....                                                                  | 988                                             |
| Tate, William. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 198                                             |
| Tay, Charles H. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 166                                             |
| Taylor, David J.                                                                                   |                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 108, 126, 138, 215                              |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                          | 221                                             |
| Taylor, Franck E. Mentioned .....                                                                  | 112, 130, 433, 435, 449, 455, 476, 987          |
| Taylor, Joseph. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 1003                                            |
| Taylor, Joseph H.                                                                                  |                                                 |
| Correspondence with Christopher C. Augur .....                                                            | 762                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 899                                             |
| For correspondence as Chief of Staff, see Christopher C. Augur .                                   |                                                 |
| Taylor, Richard. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 348, 551                                        |
| Taylor, Robert F.                                                                                  |                                                 |
| Assignment to command .....                                                                               | 803                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 803, 958                                        |
| Taylor, Walter H. Correspondence with Robert E. Lee .....                                          | 1000                                            |
| For correspondence as A. A. G., see Robert E. Lee .                                                |                                                 |
| Taylortown, Va. Skirmish at, Dec. 24, 1864 .....                                                   | 2                                               |
| Templeton, ———. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 595                                             |
| Tennessee Troops. Mentioned. (Confederate.)                                                        |                                                 |
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : McClung's , 1013; Rhett , 1013.                        |                                                 |
| Cavalry— Battalions : 12th , 16th , 1004. Regiments : Carter's , 1004. |                                                 |
| Tennison, Mrs. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 639                                             |
| Terrell, William H. Mentioned .....                                                                | 193                                             |
| Terrill, James B. Mentioned .....                                                                  | 1012                                            |
| Terry, Thomas M. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 1003                                            |
| Terry, William. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 25, 565, 570, 609, 1002, 1003, 1005, 1011, 1012 |
| Teters, Wilbert B.                                                                                 |                                                 |
| Correspondence with Thomas F. Wildes .....                                                                | 384                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 128, 381                                        |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                          | 383                                             |
| Thayer, Amos M.                                                                                    |                                                 |
| Correspondence with                                                                                       |                                                 |
| Averell, William W .....                                                                                  | 926                                             |
| Couch, Darius N .....                                                                                     | 706, 880, 939                                   |
| Tafft, Henry S .....                                                                                      | 973                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 694, 718, 979                                   |
| Thayer, Enos W. Mentioned .....                                                                    | 119                                             |
| Thoburn, Joseph.                                                                                   |                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 33, 54, 110, 115, 123, 128, 134,                |
| 139, 280, 360–366, 368–376, 380–383, 386–390, 396, 399, 400, 402–404, 410, 981                            |                                                 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                         | 367–369                                         |
| Thom, George. Mentioned .....                                                                      | 52, 53                                          |
| Thomas, Edwin. Mentioned .....                                                                     | 977                                             |
| Thomas, Francis. Mentioned .....                                                                   | 755                                             |
| Thomas, Gilbert F. Mentioned .....                                                                 | 138, 220                                        |
| Thomas, Horace G.                                                                                  |                                                 |
| Correspondence with Martin D. Hardin .....                                                                | 889                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                           | 975                                             |

- Page.
- Thomas, Lorenzo. Mentioned ..... 340, 855, 890
     For correspondence, etc., see Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.
- Thomas, Stephen. Mentioned... 108, 127, 133, 162, 284, 292, 308-311, 314, 315, 551, 985
- Thomas, William B. Mentioned ..... 766
- Thompson, Francis W. Mentioned ..... 983
- Thompson, George W. Mentioned ..... 119, 369, 377
- Thompson, James. Mentioned ..... 975
- Thompson, John K. Mentioned ..... 597
- Thompson, John L. Mentioned ..... 111, 130, 987
- Thompson, Lucas P. Mentioned ..... 585
- Thompson, Lucian D. Mentioned ..... 139, 229, 245
- Thompson, Samuel F. Mentioned ..... 118
- Thorn, Edward. Mentioned ..... 975
- Thorp, Alexander K. Mentioned ..... 119, 482
- Thruston, Stephen D. Mentioned ..... 1012
- Thurber, Benjamin F.
     Mentioned ..... 109, 128, 304, 327
     Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 328
- Thurber, William D. Mentioned ..... 138
- Thurmond, Philip J. Mentioned ..... 641, 645, 693
- Thurmond, William D. Mentioned ..... 640, 641
- Thyng, George P. Mentioned ..... 976
- Tibbits, William B. Mentioned ..... 101, 512, 537, 723
- Tilden, Albert L. Mentioned ..... 138
- Timberville, Va. Skirmish at. See Forest Hill (or Timberville), Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 24, 1864.
- Tingle, Stewart. Mentioned ..... 785
- Todd, Rutherford P. Mentioned ..... 566, 595
- Tolles, Cornelius W. Mentioned ..... 32, 56
- Toll-Gate, near White Post, Va. Action at, Aug. 11, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Devin, Thomas C.                      Sheridan, Philip H.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A.
     Merritt, Wesley.
- Also itineraries, pp. 90, 92, 94.
- Tolman, Flavel L. Mentioned ..... 109, 327
- Tomlinson, Abia A. Mentioned ..... 982
- Tompkins, Alonzo. Mentioned ..... 421
- Tompkins, Charles H.
     Mentioned ..... 108, 114, 121, 127, 132, 150, 151, 195, 226, 273, 278, 743, 768, 902, 985
     Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 271
- Tom's Brook, Va.
     Engagement at, Oct. 9, 1864.
     Communication from War Department, U. S. .... 62
     Congratulatory Orders. Torbert ..... 437
     See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Benjamin, William H.                      Early, Jubal A.                      Phillips, John W.
     Bennett, John W.                      Hull, Walter C.                      Purington, George A.
     Crowninshield, Casper                      Kidd, James H.                      Sheridan, Philip H.
     Custer, George A.                      Merritt, Wesley.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A.
     Devin, Thomas C.                      Peirce, Charles H.
- Also itineraries, pp. 84, 91, 93, 96, 100, 103; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 578.
- Skirmish at, Oct. 8, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Devin, Thomas C.                      Merritt, Wesley.                      Sheridan, Philip H.
     Kidd, James H.                      Phillips, John W.
- Also itineraries, pp. 91, 93, 102; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 578.

|                                                                                          | Page.                                                      |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| Tompson, William H. Mentioned .....                                               | 564                                                        |
| Toon, Thomas F. Mentioned .....                                                   | 565, 1013                                                  |
| Torbert, Alfred T. A                                                              |                                                            |
| Assignment to command .....                                                              | 501                                                        |
| Assumes command of cavalry of Middle Military Division .....                             | 744                                                        |
| Congratulatory Orders.                                                                   |                                                            |
| Tom's Brook, Va. Engagement at, Oct. 9, 1864 .....                                       | 437                                                        |
| Winchester (or the Opequor) Va. Battle of, Sept. 19, 1864 .....                          | 437                                                        |
| Correspondence with                                                                      |                                                            |
| Angur, Christopher C .....                                                               | 682                                                        |
| Averell, William W .....                                                                 | 502, 796, 827, 852, 903                                    |
| Custer, George A .....                                                                   | 528, 529, 921, 922                                         |
| Duffié, Alfred N .....                                                                   | 818, 851                                                   |
| Merritt, Wesley .....                                                                    | 453,                                                       |
| 701, 745, 769, 794, 802, 816, 825, 833, 846, 864, 873, 874, 883, 902, 921, 956           |                                                            |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                 | 43, 437, 531, 711, 745, 769, 787, 816, 921                 |
| Wilson, James H .....                                                                    | 531, 802, 834, 848, 866, 875, 884, 892, 912, 923, 948, 964 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                          | 20, 22, 25, 27-29, 31, 33,                                 |
| 36, 38, 39, 41, 42, 44-51, 53, 54, 56, 61, 62, 89, 94, 100, 110, 116, 118, 124, 129,     |                                                            |
| 136, 137, 155, 159, 166, 172, 362, 421, 436, 437, 446, 450, 461, 483, 496-504, 508-      |                                                            |
| 510, 512, 516, 517, 519, 556, 621, 630, 672, 675, 679, 680, 696, 708, 710, 719, 720,     |                                                            |
| 726, 738-740, 744, 745, 761, 762, 764, 769, 776, 803, 813, 820, 826, 827, 830, 831,      |                                                            |
| 834, 836-838, 846, 848, 852, 857, 863, 864, 876, 881, 883-885, 891-893, 908, 911-        |                                                            |
| 913, 917, 921-923, 925, 934, 935, 946, 947, 949, 958, 963-965, 972, 974, 986, 996        |                                                            |
| Reports of                                                                               |                                                            |
| Gordonsville, Va. Expedition from Winchester to near, Dec. 19-28,                        |                                                            |
| 1864 .....                                                                               | 39, 677                                                    |
| Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                   | 421, 437                                                   |
| Staff. Announcements of .....                                                            | 842, 846                                                   |
| Torbit [?], Lieutenant. Mentioned .....                                           | 772                                                        |
| Towle, Ransom W. Mentioned .....                                                  | 119                                                        |
| Town, Franklin E. Mentioned .....                                                 | 962, 973                                                   |
| Townsend, Edward D. For correspondence as A. A. G., see Adjutant-General's |                                                            |
| Office, U. S. A.                                                                  |                                                            |
| Tracy, Amasa S. Mentioned .....                                                   | 107, 113, 126, 132, 208-211, 551, 984                      |
| Tracy, Osgood V. Mentioned .....                                                  | 224, 230, 233, 234                                         |
| Trammell, Phil. Mentioned .....                                                   | 911                                                        |
| Transportation. (Army.) See Munitions of War.                              |                                                            |
| Transportation. (Railroad and water.) Communications from                         |                                                            |
| Garrett, John W .....                                                                    | 780                                                        |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....                                                                 | 748                                                        |
| Weber, Max .....                                                                         | 780                                                        |
| Traver, Charles. Mentioned .....                                                  | 180                                                        |
| Traver, Robert N. Mentioned .....                                                 | 540                                                        |
| Tremain, Alfred F. Mentioned .....                                                | 312, 313                                                   |
| Trevor, John. Mentioned .....                                                     | 119                                                        |
| Trimble, Alexander. Mentioned .....                                               | 119, 248, 258                                              |
| Trotter, Frederick E. Mentioned .....                                             | 976                                                        |
| Troutman, Adam. Mentioned .....                                                   | 392                                                        |
| Truesdell, Martin L. Mentioned .....                                              | 147                                                        |
| Tuck, Matthew. Mentioned .....                                                    | 684                                                        |
| Tucker, William H. Mentioned .....                                                | 138, 176                                                   |
| Tunis, Nehemiah. Mentioned .....                                                  | 171                                                        |
| Turnbull, Charles N. Mentioned .....                                              | 782                                                        |
| Turner, Alfred L. Mentioned .....                                                 | 108, 127, 306                                              |

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | Page.                             |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| Turner, William H., jr. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 110, 129                          |
| Twitchell, Preston. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 331                               |
| Tyler, Albert M. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 163, 164                          |
| Tyler, Erastus B.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                   |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               |                                   |
| Emory, William H .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 711                               |
| Wallace, Lew .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 693, 766, 895                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 765, 767, 773, 781, 808, 854, 980 |
| Report of operations in Montgomery County, Md., Oct. 7-11, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 644                               |
| Tyler, Nat. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 582                               |
| Underhill, Charles W.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                   |
| Correspondence with William Dwight .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 299                               |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 293                               |
| Underhill, Henry P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        | 127                               |
| Union Troops.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              |                                   |
| Casualties. Returns of.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                                   |
| Cedar Creek, Va.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                   |
| Action at, Oct. 13, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 372                               |
| Battle of, Oct. 19, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 131-139, 176, 230, 252, 325, 366  |
| Fisher's Hill, Va.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |                                   |
| Battle of, Sept. 22, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 120-124, 294, 321                 |
| Skirmish at, Sept. 21, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 120-124                           |
| Gordonsville, Va. Expedition from Winchester to near, Dec. 19-28, 1864, etc .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 | 679                               |
| Strasburg, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 21, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 121-123                           |
| Winchester (or the Opequon), Va. Battle of, Sept. 19, 1864 .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 112-119, 294, 315, 321            |
| See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 , pp. 59, 60, 400, 409, 436.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |                                   |
| Mentioned.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                                   |
| Colored.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                   |
| Infantry— Companies : A * ( Independent ), 979. Regiments : 1st , 2d , 19th , 23d , 27th , 28th , 29th , 975; 31st , 975, 988; 39th , 43d , 975; 45th , 975, 979; 102d , 975; 127th , 979.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |                                   |
| Regulars.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                   |
| Artillery, Light— Regiments : 1st , 988; 1st ( Batteries ), A , 768, 975; E , 976; F , 768, 975; K , L , 112, 118, 130, 136, 433, 435, 449, 455, 476, 477, 479, 482, 793, 987; 2d ( Batteries ), B , 99, 112, 118, 130, 137, 433, 435, 471-473, 518, 520, 521, 523, 524, 532, 533, 549, 550, 987; C , 975; D , 112, 487, 488, 987; E , 975; G , 976; H , 854, 981; I , 975; K , 854, 981; L , 99, 112, 118, 130, 137, 433, 435, 471-473, 518, 520, 521, 523, 524, 532, 533, 549, 550, 987; M , 112, 516, 517, 529, 779, 795, 848, 903, 913, 936, 964, 965, 987; 3d ( Batteries ), C , F , 112, 130, 137, 464, 466, 517, 987; G , 975; I , 989; K , 112, 130, 137, 464, 466, 517, 987; L , M , 975; 4th ( Batteries ), A , 975; C , E , 112, 779, 795, 848, 903, 913, 936, 965, 987; 5th , 987; 5th ( Batteries ), B , 58, 59, 110, 124, 129, 135, 365, 366, 413-417, 419-421, 983; L , 111, 124, 130, 435, 496, 506, 511, 827, 983; M , 108, 127, 132, 149, 191, 197, 212, 233, 237, 245, 255, 271, 278, 279, 985. |                                   |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st , 97, 98, 111, 117, 130, 136, 441, 444, 457, 487-492, 672, 673, 833, 978, 986; 2d , 97, 111, 117, 130, 136, 443, 444, 487-492, 672, 673, 834, 866, 898, 978, 986; 5th , 111, 117, 130, 433, 443, 447, 449, 457, 490, 492, 978, 986; 6th , 96, 97, 107, 120, 125, 672, 673, 975, 978.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |                                   |

* Sometimes called Southard's Pennsylvania.

Union Troops—Continued.

Mentioned.

Regulars.

Infantry—Regiments: 3d, 987; 6th, 7th, 10th, 11th, 988; 12th, 987; 14th, 15th, 16th, 17th, 989.

Veteran Reserve Corps.

Infantry—Battalions: 1st (Companies), 228th, 979; 2d, 809, 854, 981; 2d (Companies), 46th, 980; 50th, 979, 980; 51st, 52d, 53d, 55th, 57th, 980; 71st, 72d, 89th, 95th, 96th, 981; 105th, 108th, 109th, 980; 118th, 119th, 981; 131st, 980; 132d, 984; 143d, 981; 162d, 980. Regiments: 1st, 976; 3d, 977; 4th, 696, 889, 975; 6th, 976; 7th, 696, 975; 9th, 976; 10th, 696, 889, 975, 981; 11th, 976; 12th, 14th, 977; 16th, 106, 979; 18th, 979; 19th, 976, 979; 20th, 976; 21st, 975, 980; 22d, 24th, 976.

For Volunteers, see respective States.

Organization, strength, etc.

East, Department of the ..... 987-989

Middle Military Division .. 61, 107-112, 125-130, 743, 848, 902, 903, 965, 974-987

Recruitment, organization, etc., of. Communication from Governor of Massachusetts ..... 767

Upperville, Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 29, 1864. See Snicker's Gap, Va. Operations about, Oct. 28-29, 1864.

Upton, Emory.

Mentioned ..... 25, 26, 47, 54, 55, 66, 107, 112, 151, 152, 159, 162, 164, 165, 169, 173, 177, 182, 185, 188, 192, 273, 274, 314, 362, 778, 984

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 162, 173

Urban, Caspar. Mentioned ..... 110, 379, 981

Urban, Gustavus. Mentioned ..... 111, 130, 986

Valley District, Army of the. (Confederate.)

Cook, Philip, assigned to command of Doles' brigade, Rodes' division .... 993

Godwin, Archibald C., assigned to command of Hoke's brigade, Early's division ..... 995

Inspection of Gordon's division. Communication from Henry E. Peyton . 610

Lomax, Lunsford L., assigned to command of cavalry of ..... 993

Organization, strength, etc.

Aug. 20, 1864 ..... 1002, 1003

Aug. 31, 1864 ..... 1011-1013

Oct. 19, 1864 ..... 564-567

Ransom, Robert, jr., relieved from command of cavalry of ..... 993

Re-enforcements for. Communications from Robert E. Lee ..... 557, 558

Reorganization of cavalry of. Communication from Robert Ransom, jr . 1003

Vandeventer, Alexander S.

Correspondence with John C. Breckinridge ..... 644

Mentioned ..... 643, 1012

Van Eaton, Joseph B. Mentioned ..... 224, 248, 258

Van Etten, Orsamus R.

Mentioned ..... 108, 127, 152, 154, 157

Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 274, 276

Van Loan, Lyman W. Mentioned ..... 382

Van Patten, Volkert V. Mentioned ..... 985

Van Petten, John B. Mentioned ..... 108, 290, 293, 314, 985

Vaughn, Henry D. Mentioned ..... 138

Vaughn, John C. Mentioned ..... 22, 92, 472, 493, 570, 572, 652, 753, 754, 773, 992, 1003, 1004, 1013, 1020, 1022, 1025, 1026

Vermont Troops. Mentioned.

Artillery, Heavy—Regiments : 1st, 107, 113, 120, 126, 132, 207, 209, 211, 984.

Cavalry—Regiments : 1st, 105, 111, 117, 130, 137, 479, 485, 519, 525, 526, 533, 541, 544-549, 676, 978, 987.

Infantry—Regiments : 2d, 3d, 107, 113, 120, 126, 132, 210, 984; 4th, 107, 113, 120, 126, 132, 984; 5th, 107, 113, 120, 126, 132, 207, 209, 984; 6th, 107, 113, 120, 126, 132, 207-209, 984; 8th, 108, 114, 122, 127, 133, 290, 291, 294, 302, 314, 315, 985; 10th, 108, 113, 121, 126, 132, 226, 231, 232, 243-246, 985.

Vincent, Thomas M. Mentioned ..... 755

For correspondence as A. A. G., see Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A.

Vines, Charles. Mentioned ..... 608

Vinton, Harvey H. Mentioned ..... 464

Virginia, Northern.

Movements and disposition of troops in. Communications from Robert E.

Lee ..... 995-997

Operations in. Communications from

Augur, Christopher C ..... 909, 918, 941-943

Lazelle, Henry M ..... 910, 943, 955, 963

Sheridan, Philip H ..... 909

Reported movements of Confederate troops in. Communications from

Augur, Christopher C ..... 872

Lazelle, Henry M ..... 871, 873, 890

Virginia Troops. Mentioned. (Confederate.)

Artillery, Light—Batteries : Alleghany, 192, 567, 573; Amherst, 567; Bryan's, 567, 568; Charlottesville, 567; Courtney, 567; Fluvanna, 567; Jackson's, 567; Johnston's, 567; King William, 567; Lee, 567; Levi's, 1013; Lowry's, 567, 568; Lurty's, 512, 567; McClanahan's, 567; Monroe, 567; Morris, 567; Orange, 567; Shoemaker's, 567; Stafford, 567; Staunton, 567; Thomson's, 567.

Cavalry—Battalions : 27th, 6, 644, 994, 1004; 32d, 550; 34th, 566, 640, 1004; 35th, 567, 636, 722, 777, 792, 831, 881; 36th, 530, 551, 566, 1004; 37th, 515, 530, 566, 640, 1004; 41st, 649; 43d, 633-635, 722, 777, 792, 811, 831, 842, 847, 849, 860, 865, 866, 877, 880-882, 898-900; 46th, 47th, 566, 1004. Companies : Amick's Partisans, 640; Kincheloe's, 862; McNeill's Partisans, 7, 89, 649, 655, 658, 664, 669, 691, 692, 716, 950, 959, 968; P. J. Thurmond's Partisans, 640; W. D. Thurmond's Partisans, 640. Regiments : 1st, 567; 2d, 567, 833; 3d, 474, 551, 567; 4th, 567, 680; 5th, 567, 668; 6th, 441, 491, 567, 668, 676, 697; 7th, 567; 8th, 5, 6, 530, 566, 894, 1004; 11th, 567; 12th, 530, 567; 14th, 512, 550, 566; 15th, 567, 862; 16th, 17th, 512, 566; 18th, 19th, 20th, 566, 1004; 21st, 5, 512, 530, 531, 566, 994, 1004; 22d, 512, 551, 566; 23d, 566, 1004; 25th, 530, 566.

Infantry—Battalions : 13th Reserves, 1013; 23d, 26th, 30th, 566; 45th, 89, 566, 596, 655, 664. Regiments : 2d, 185, 565, 1003, 1012; 4th, 5th, 565, 1003, 1012; 7th, 185; 10th, 13th, 21st, 565, 1003, 1012; 22d, 566; 23d, 25th, 27th, 31st, 33d, 565, 1003, 1012; 36th, 566; 37th, 42d, 565, 1003, 1012; 44th, 228, 263, 565, 1003, 1012; 45th, 566, 596; 48th, 49th, 565, 1003, 1012; 50th, 565, 566, 1003, 1012; 51st, 566; 52d, 58th, 565, 1003, 1012; 60th, 566; 62d, 512, 566, 1004; 64th, 643, 644.

Virginia Troops. Mentioned. (Union.)

Cavalry—Battalions : Loudoun Rangers, 636, 670, 777, 858, 867, 881, 982.

Voorhes, George W. Mentioned ..... 126, 229

Vredenburg, Peter, jr. Mentioned ..... 108, 119, 222, 231, 235, 985

Wade, John T. S. Mentioned ..... 641

Wadsworth, Silas A. Mentioned ..... 118

|                                                                                       | Page                                                                 |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|----------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Waggaman, Eugene. Mentioned .....                                              | 1003, 1012                                                           |
| Wagner, Louis. Mentioned .....                                                 | 979                                                                  |
| Waite, John M.                                                                 |                                                                      |
| Correspondence with Christopher C. Augur .....                                        | 683,                                                                 |
| 697, 708, 729, 742, 793, 800, 823, 831, 844, 861, 862, 882, 919, 920, 942, 943, 954   |                                                                      |
| Mentioned .....                                                                       | 693, 728, 742, 832, 859, 898, 918, 942, 943, 949, 955, 963, 971, 979 |
| Wakefield, William H. Mentioned .....                                          | 499                                                                  |
| Walcott, William H. Mentioned .....                                            | 989                                                                  |
| Wales, Elijah. Mentioned .....                                                 | 126                                                                  |
| Walker, Aldace F. Mentioned .....                                              | 107, 208                                                             |
| Walker, Duncan S. For correspondence as A. A. G., see William H. Emory. |                                                                      |
| Walker, John S. Mentioned .....                                                | 489                                                                  |
| Walker, Samuel.                                                                |                                                                      |
| Correspondence with Darius N. Couch .....                                             | 929, 960                                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                       | 928                                                                  |
| Wallace, Joseph W. Mentioned .....                                             | 119                                                                  |
| Wallace, Lew.                                                                  |                                                                      |
| Correspondence with                                                                   |                                                                      |
| Adjutant-General's Office, U. S. A .....                                              | 750, 773                                                             |
| Augur, Christopher C .....                                                            | 879                                                                  |
| Catlin, Lynde .....                                                                   | 806                                                                  |
| Churchman, Caleb .....                                                                | 716                                                                  |
| De Witt, David P .....                                                                | 869                                                                  |
| Lockwood, Henry H .....                                                               | 717, 927                                                             |
| Morris, William W .....                                                               | 908                                                                  |
| Mullikin, James C .....                                                               | 717                                                                  |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                              | 798, 854                                                             |
| Tyler, Erastus B .....                                                                | 693, 766, 895                                                        |
| War Department, U. S. ....                                                            | 773, 969                                                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                       | 55, 501, 717, 718, 728, 739, 753, 776, 806, 860, 869, 908, 974, 980  |
| Wallace, Robert C. Mentioned .....                                             | 435                                                                  |
| Wallen, Henry D. Mentioned .....                                               | 988                                                                  |
| Walsh, John. Mentioned .....                                                   | 551                                                                  |
| Walsh, Walter S. Mentioned .....                                               | 398                                                                  |
| Walter, James H. Mentioned .....                                               | 248, 269                                                             |
| Waltermire, William. Mentioned .....                                           | 109, 128, 335, 986                                                   |
| Walton, Henry B. Mentioned .....                                               | 138                                                                  |
| War Department, C. S. Correspondence with                                      |                                                                      |
| Adjutant and Inspector General's Office, C. S. A .....                                | 991                                                                  |
| Davis, Jefferson .....                                                                | 991, 994                                                             |
| Early, Jubal A .....                                                                  | 998                                                                  |
| Lee, Robert E .....                                                                   | 557, 558, 650, 990, 993, 994, 1006                                   |
| War Department, U. S. Correspondence with                                      |                                                                      |
| Cadwalader, George .....                                                              | 707                                                                  |
| Chipman, Norton P .....                                                               | 792,                                                                 |
| 812, 822, 823, 842, 858, 859, 870, 871, 880, 881, 896, 906, 917, 932, 940, 953, 954   |                                                                      |
| Couch, Darius N .....                                                                 | 706, 756, 840                                                        |
| Dix, John A .....                                                                     | 809, 961                                                             |
| Garrett, John W .....                                                                 | 780                                                                  |
| Grant, U. S. ....                                                                     | 767, 856                                                             |
| Henry, Joseph .....                                                                   | 810                                                                  |
| Keyser, Benjamin U .....                                                              | 810                                                                  |
| Means, Samuel C .....                                                                 | 799                                                                  |
| Ohio, Governor of .....                                                               | 916, 931, 951, 960, 969                                              |

|                                                                                                                                | Page.                                                                                               |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| War Department, U. S.—Continued. Correspondence with                                                                    |                                                                                                     |
| Pennsylvania, Governor of .....                                                                                                | 708                                                                                                 |
| Sheridan, Philip H. ....                                                                                                       | 51, 61, 62, 857, 931, 969                                                                           |
| Stevenson, John D. ....                                                                                                        | 948, 949, 957, 965, 966, 972                                                                        |
| Wallace, Lew. ....                                                                                                             | 773, 969                                                                                            |
| West Virginia, Governor of .....                                                                                               | 681, 682, 960                                                                                       |
| Warner, James M.                                                                                                        |                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                | 107, 113, 120,126, 131, 151, 152, 154, 191-195, 201, 203, 208-211, 213, 217, 218, 221, 271, 984 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864..                                                                  | 199, 200, 207, 211                                                                                  |
| Warner, Lineus F. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 458, 510, 511                                                                                       |
| Warren, Edward M.                                                                                                       |                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with Darius N. Couch .....                                                                                      | 973                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                | 856, 980                                                                                            |
| Warren, Edward T. H. Mentioned .....                                                                                    | 1012                                                                                                |
| Warren, Gouverneur K. Mentioned .....                                                                                   | 65, 73, 856                                                                                         |
| Warthen, William F. Mentioned .....                                                                                     | 398                                                                                                 |
| Wartman, J. H. Mentioned .....                                                                                          | 991                                                                                                 |
| Washburn, Henry D. Mentioned .....                                                                                      | 986                                                                                                 |
| Washburn, James. Mentioned .....                                                                                        | 981                                                                                                 |
| Washburn, Peter T. Mentioned .....                                                                                      | 211                                                                                                 |
| Washburne, A. Livingston. Mentioned .....                                                                               | 963                                                                                                 |
| Washburne, George A. Mentioned .....                                                                                    | 976                                                                                                 |
| Washington, Department of (22d Army Corps).                                                                             |                                                                                                     |
| Included in Middle Military Division .....                                                                                     | 719                                                                                                 |
| Movements and disposition of troops in. Communications from                                                                    |                                                                                                     |
| Augur, Christopher C. ....                                                                                                     | 728, 813, 879                                                                                       |
| Halleck, Henry W. ....                                                                                                         | 727                                                                                                 |
| Hardin, Martin D. ....                                                                                                         | 696                                                                                                 |
| Operations in. Communications from                                                                                             |                                                                                                     |
| Augur, Christopher C. ....                                                                                                     | 859, 898                                                                                            |
| Lazelle, Henry M. ....                                                                                                         | 683, 684, 697, 721, 729, 777, 793, 862                                                              |
| Wells, Henry H. ....                                                                                                           | 729                                                                                                 |
| Orders, General, series 1864— Augur : No. 75, 954.                                                                      |                                                                                                     |
| Orders, Special, series 1864— Augur : No. 192, 696; No. 195, 741; No. 205, 861; No. 207, 881; No. 215, 963.             |                                                                                                     |
| Union troops in. Organization, strength, etc. See Middle Military Division .                                            |                                                                                                     |
| Wass, Ansel D. Mentioned .....                                                                                          | 751                                                                                                 |
| Waterman, Richard. Mentioned .....                                                                                      | 985                                                                                                 |
| Watkins, Maurice. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 363, 364                                                                                            |
| Watrous, Frank E. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 539                                                                                                 |
| Watson, Alexander G. Mentioned .....                                                                                    | 545                                                                                                 |
| Watson, William D. Mentioned .....                                                                                      | 137, 348                                                                                            |
| Waynesborough, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 29, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of |                                                                                                     |
| Early, Jubal A. ....                                                                                                           | Lee, Robert E. ....                                                                                 |
| Wilson, James H. ....                                                                                                          |                                                                                                     |
| Also itineraries , pp. 99, 102, 105; journal of Hotchkiss , p. 577.                                              |                                                                                                     |
| Weaver, Edward G. Mentioned .....                                                                                       | 421                                                                                                 |
| Webb, Francis I. D. Correspondence with Lynde Catlin .....                                                              | 765                                                                                                 |
| Webb, James A. Mentioned .....                                                                                          | 421                                                                                                 |
| Webb, Joseph T. Mentioned .....                                                                                         | 364                                                                                                 |
| Webb, Robert F. Mentioned .....                                                                                         | 1012                                                                                                |

- Weber, Max.
 Assumes command of Military District of Harper's Ferry..... 731
 Correspondence with
   Cook, Roger E..... 724
   Crook, George..... 850, 886, 968
   Duffié, Alfred N..... 748
   Farrington, Preston M..... 622
   Graham, Samuel..... 702
   Huntley, John H..... 702
   Maulsby, William P..... 701
   Sheridan, Philip H..... 747, 772, 780, 788, 795, 805
   Yellott, John I..... 796
 Mentioned..... 19, 701, 738, 739, 749, 762, 780, 784, 788
 Staff. Announcement of..... 788
- Webster, Moulton S. Mentioned..... 119
- Weddle, Jacob. Mentioned..... 110, 128, 981
- Weir, Gulian V. Mentioned..... 111, 130, 435, 496, 506, 511, 983
- Welch's (or Flowing) Spring, near Charlestown, W. Va. Skirmish at,
 Aug. 21, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Cowand, David G.                      Hufty, Baldwin.                      Torbert, Alfred T. A.
   Crook, George.                      Sheridan, Philip H.                      Warner, James M.
   Edwards, Oliver.                      Simms, James P.
- Also itineraries, pp. 64, 67, 70, 72, 73, 80, 98; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 570.
- Weld, Horace N. Mentioned..... 966
- Wells, Charles A. Mentioned..... 988
- Wells, David R. S. Mentioned..... 248
- Wells, George D.
 Mentioned..... 54, 83, 110, 115, 123, 164, 365, 368-372, 374-376, 378, 387, 390, 981
 Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864..... 374, 375, 378
- Wells, Henry H.
 Correspondence with Christopher C. Augur..... 683,
   697, 709, 729, 742, 784, 813, 823, 832, 882, 899, 910, 963
 Mentioned..... 861, 890, 899, 977
 Report of skirmish at Annandale, Va., Aug. 24, 1864..... 637
- Wells, Milton.
 Correspondence with
   Bukey, Van H..... 395
   Harris, Thomas M..... 397
   Suter, John..... 392
   Withers, Henry H..... 393
 Mentioned..... 129, 135, 372-374, 397
 Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864..... 397
- Wells, Omer O. Mentioned..... 544
- Wells, Thomas M. Mentioned..... 485, 551
- Wells, William. Mentioned..... 100,
   102, 111, 130, 137, 519-525, 527, 532, 534, 536, 543, 545, 546, 987
- Wentz, E. L. Mentioned..... 836
- Western, Charles B. Mentioned..... 343
- Western Virginia and East Tennessee, Department of. (Confederate.)
 Confederate troops in. Organization, strength, etc., Aug. 31, 1864..... 1013
 Echols, John, assigned to command of District of Southwestern Virginia. 1005
- Weston, Newcomb J. Mentioned..... 475

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      |                                   |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------|
| West Virginia. Witcher's expedition into, Sept. 17-28, 1864, including skirmishes at Buckhannon (27th-28th). Reports of                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                   |
| Lee, Robert E .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 639                               |
| Witcher, Vincent A.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 640                               |
| West Virginia, Army of.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                   |
| Averell, William W., relieved from command of 2d Cavalry Division of...                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 505                               |
| Designation of Crook's command.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 726                               |
| Itineraries. Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 81-89                             |
| Powell, William H., assigned to command of 2d Cavalry Division of.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 505                               |
| West Virginia, Department of. (Union.)                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                        |                                   |
| Affairs in, generally. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           |                                   |
| Crook, George .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  | 958                               |
| War Department, U. S .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                           | 681, 682                          |
| West Virginia, Governor of.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                      | 682, 950                          |
| Crook, George.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |                                   |
| Assigned to command of.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          | 962                               |
| Assigned to temporary command of.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 739                               |
| Assumes temporary command of.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    | 747                               |
| Hunter, David, relieved from command of.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         | 962                               |
| Included in Middle Military Division.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 719                               |
| Movements and disposition of troops in. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |                                   |
| Averell, William W.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 688, 689                          |
| Emory, William H.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 701, 710                          |
| Grant, U. S.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 695-697                           |
| Halleck, Henry W .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 708                               |
| Hunter, David.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 687, 698, 710, 712                |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                             | 689                               |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 710, 711                          |
| Weber, Max .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 701, 702                          |
| Wright, Horatio G.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 686                               |
| Operations in. Communications from                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   |                                   |
| Averell, William W.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 713, 714                          |
| Duffié, Alfred N.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                | 713                               |
| Godwin, Joseph M .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 716                               |
| Grant, U. S.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     | 57                                |
| Halleck, Henry W .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                               | 932                               |
| Harrison, Charles J .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            | 959                               |
| Hinkle, A.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       | 959                               |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 714, 715, 724, 853, 868, 887, 927 |
| Oley, John H .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 693                               |
| Pease, Harry .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                   | 959                               |
| Wilkinson, Nathan .....                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                              | 895                               |
| Orders, series 1864— Wright : Aug. 4, 686.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |                                   |
| Orders, Circular, series 1864— Kelley : Aug. 20, 868.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |                                   |
| Orders, General, series 1864— Hunter : No. 58, 686; No. 60, 709; No. 63, 723; No. 64, 731. Crook : No. 65, 747; No. 66, 803; No. 68, 913. Averell : No. 22, 505. Duffié : No. 11, 803; No. 13, 958. Powell : Aug. 8, 735. Stevenson : No. 2, 827. Weber : No. 59, 731; No. 60, 788. |                                   |
| Orders, Special, series 1864— Hunter : No. 146, 709; No. 147, 731. Crook : No. 150, 826; No. 154, 914. Averell : No. 31, 789. Duffié : No. 26, 733; No. 32, 886; No. 35, 914. Kelley : No. 21, 732; No. 24, 821; No. 27, 904; No. 28, 915. Stevenson : No. 7, 893.                         |                                   |

West Virginia, Department of. (Union)—Continued.

|                                                                                     |                         |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------------------------|
| Quinn, Timothy, assigned to command of 2d Brigade, 1st Cavalry Division of.....     | 886                     |
| Reported movements of Confederate troops in. Communications from                    |                         |
| Averell, William W .....                                                            | 688, 689                |
| Byers, John A.....                                                                  | 690                     |
| Couch, Darius N .....                                                               | 718, 719                |
| Duffié, Alfred N.....                                                               | 703                     |
| Grant, U. S.....                                                                    | 952                     |
| Hinkle, A.....                                                                      | 887                     |
| Howe, Albion P.....                                                                 | 685, 699, 701           |
| Hunter, David.....                                                                  | 684, 699                |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....                                                            | 685, 894                |
| Ohio, Governor of.....                                                              | 951, 969                |
| Sinclair, William.....                                                              | 699                     |
| War Department, U. S .....                                                          | 960                     |
| Sheridan, Philip H., assigned to command of all troops within the Department .....  | 709                     |
| Stahel, Julius.                                                                     |                         |
| Assigned to temporary command of .....                                              | 731                     |
| Relieved from duty in.....                                                          | 739                     |
| Stevenson, John D., assigned to command of Military District of Harper's Ferry..... | 803                     |
| Taylor, Robert F., assigned to command of 2d Brigade, 1st Cavalry Division of.....  | 803                     |
| Union troops in. Organization, strength, etc. See Middle Military Division . |                         |
| Weber, Max, assumes command of Military District of Harper's Ferry .....            | 731                     |
| West Virginia, Governor of. Correspondence with                              |                         |
| Kelley, Benjamin F .....                                                            | 712, 724, 749, 838, 950 |
| War Department, U. S.....                                                           | 681, 682, 960           |

West Virginia Troops. Mentioned.

|                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
|------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Artillery, Light— Batteries : A , 982; C , 977; D , 705, 731, 983; E , 983; H , 2, 89, 660, 732, 983.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Cavalry— Regiments : 1st , 88, 111, 117, 124, 130, 136, 496, 506, 512, 639, 736, 771, 797, 894, 909, 983; 2d , 111, 117, 124, 130, 495, 496, 506, 507, 736, 771, 983; 3d , 111, 117, 124, 130, 495, 496, 505, 506, 512, 736, 771, 853, 983; 5th , 87, 89, 652, 662, 668, 705, 967, 983; 6th , 87, 89, 652, 668, 798, 820, 821, 839, 853, 967, 983; 7th , 642, 645, 646, 651, 983.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Infantry— Battalions : Exempts' , 984. Companies : Ramsay's Militia , 693. Regiments : 1st , 110, 128, 367, 981; 4th , 110, 128, 981; 5th , 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 399, 400, 402, 405, 982; 6th , 2, 88, 89, 660, 665, 705, 781, 821, 878, 895, 983; 9th , 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 399, 401, 403, 408-411, 982; 10th , 110, 115, 123, 129, 135, 372, 374, 376, 386-390, 392-394, 982; 11th , 3, 110, 115, 123, 129, 135, 372, 374, 386-388, 390, 392, 394-396, 692, 764, 781, 821, 829, 887, 895, 982, 983; 12th , 110, 128, 981; 13th , 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 401, 402, 405, 406, 982; 14th , 110, 116, 123, 129, 135, 399, 400, 402, 408-411, 982; 15th , 110, 115, 123, 129, 135, 367, 372, 386-388, 390, 392, 394, 396-398, 982. |
| Miscellaneous— Companies : Pendleton County Home Guards ,* 645, 655, 658, 659, 669.                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                          |

|                                           |     |
|-------------------------------------------|-----|
| Wetherill, John M. Mentioned ..... | 984 |
| Wettstein, Andrew. Mentioned ..... | 977 |

* Commonly known as "Swamps."

- Weyer's Cave, Va. Skirmishes at.
 Sept. 26, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Powell, p. 507.
 Sept. 27, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of Devin, Thomas C.                      Merritt, Wesley.                      Powell, William H.
     Lee, Edwin G.
     Also itinerary, p. 85; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 576.
- Wharton, Gabriel C. Mentioned ..... 24,
     555, 557, 561, 562, 566, 568–581, 583–588, 911, 1005, 1011, 1020–1024, 1026–1031
- Wharton, Rufus W. Mentioned ..... 1012
- Wharton, W. Woodson. Mentioned ..... 608
- Wheaton, Frank.
     Correspondence with Egbert Olcott ..... 174
     Mentioned ..... 27, 64, 68, 107, 113, 120,
     125, 131, 149, 150, 152, 153, 159, 161, 167, 170, 174, 175, 178, 191–193, 197, 198,
     206–208, 212, 213, 218, 219, 221, 225, 227, 234, 256, 262, 271, 272, 276, 312, 984
     Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 196
- Wheeler, Jerome B. Mentioned ..... 474
- Wheeler, Moses D., jr. Mentioned ..... 224
- Wheeler, William H. Mentioned ..... 107, 125, 984
- Whelan, Major. Mentioned ..... 998
- Whistler, Joseph N. G. Mentioned ..... 727, 872, 976
- Whitaker, Edward W. Mentioned ..... 56, 520, 536, 817
- Whitcomb, George F. Mentioned ..... 138
- White, Elijah V. Mentioned ..... 636
- White, Ephraim G. Mentioned ..... 333
- White, George S. Mentioned ..... 459
- White, Harrison. Mentioned ..... 452, 474, 479, 480
- White, Isaac. Mentioned ..... 648
- White, John M. Mentioned ..... 909
- White, Robert. Mentioned ..... 823, 828, 881
- White Plains, Va. Skirmish near, Oct. 11, 1864 ..... 1
- White Post, Va. Action at Toll-Gate, near. See Toll-Gate, near White Post, Va. Action at, Aug. 11, 1864.
- Whitener, B. M. Mentioned ..... 566, 595
- Whiting, Daniel P.
     Correspondence with Darius N. Couch ..... 970
     Mentioned ..... 980
- Whiting, Henry A.
     Mentioned ..... 600
     Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864 ..... 600
- Whittelsey, Charles H. Mentioned ..... 743
- Whittier, Charles A. For correspondence as A. A. A. G., see Horatio G. Wright.
- Whittier, Edward N. Mentioned ..... 272, 551
- Whittier, Francis H. Mentioned ..... 985
- Wibley, William. Mentioned ..... 540
- Wickham, Williams C.
     Correspondence with Fitzhugh Lee ..... 1009
     Mentioned ..... 19, 28, 31, 95, 423, 428,
     439, 441, 465, 467, 472, 473, 475, 491, 554, 559, 567, 571, 574, 576, 577, 586, 588,
     611, 612, 615, 676, 822, 823, 936, 947, 952, 953, 1004, 1007, 1008, 1027, 1028
- Wiggins, John C. Mentioned ..... 148
- Wilbourn, R. E. Mentioned ..... 573
- Wilcox, Cadmus M. Mentioned ..... 470, 791, 811, 1016

|                                                                                                                    | Page.                                            |
|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|--------------------------------------------------|
| Wilcox, William. Mentioned.....                                                                             | 540                                              |
| Wildes, Thomas F.                                                                                           |                                                  |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                |                                                  |
| Kellogg, Horace.....                                                                                               | 385                                              |
| Potter, Andrew.....                                                                                                | 382                                              |
| Teters, Wilbert B.....                                                                                             | 384                                              |
| Wilkie, Frederick C.....                                                                                           | 383                                              |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                     | 110, 128, 134, 372, 373, 376, 377, 379, 383, 384 |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                    | 379                                              |
| Wildrick, Abram C. Mentioned.....                                                                           | 989                                              |
| Wilds, John Q. Mentioned.....                                                                               | 109, 128, 137, 305, 348, 349, 353, 354, 986      |
| Wiles, Browning N. Mentioned.....                                                                           | 126, 240                                         |
| Wiley, Robert W. Mentioned.....                                                                             | 224, 229, 230, 248–250, 252, 254, 256, 258       |
| Wilhelm, Thomas. Mentioned.....                                                                             | 977                                              |
| Wilkie, Frederick C.                                                                                        |                                                  |
| Correspondence with Thomas F. Wildes.....                                                                          | 383                                              |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                     | 128, 381                                         |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                    | 382                                              |
| Wilkins, John D. Mentioned.....                                                                             | 988                                              |
| Wilkinson, Nathan.                                                                                          |                                                  |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                |                                                  |
| Beverly, W. Va., Commanding Officer at.....                                                                        | 692                                              |
| Donohue, Michael.....                                                                                              | 705                                              |
| Hagans, Harrison H.....                                                                                            | 750                                              |
| Kelley, Benjamin F.....                                                                                            | 705, 750, 839, 879, 894, 895, 904                |
| Youart, Robert.....                                                                                                | 904                                              |
| Reports of action at Beverly, W. Va., Oct. 29, 1864.....                                                           | 646, 647                                         |
| Wilkinson, Robert F. Mentioned.....                                                                         | 279, 286                                         |
| Willard, John P. Mentioned.....                                                                             | 798                                              |
| Williams, Constant. Mentioned.....                                                                          | 988                                              |
| Williams, Hobart. Mentioned.....                                                                            | 238                                              |
| Williams, Jesse M. Mentioned.....                                                                           | 1012                                             |
| Williams, John W. Mentioned.....                                                                            | 448                                              |
| Williams, Jonathan H. Mentioned.....                                                                        | 137                                              |
| Williams, Titus V. Mentioned.....                                                                           | 1012                                             |
| Williams, William G. Mentioned.....                                                                         | 248                                              |
| Williamson, James W. Mentioned.....                                                                         | 393                                              |
| Williamsport, Md.                                                                                           |                                                  |
| Affair at, Aug. 26, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Averell , p. 497. |                                                  |
| Skirmish at, Aug. 5, 1864.....                                                                                     | 1                                                |
| Williamsport and Hagerstown, Md. Skirmishes at, Aug. 5, 1864. Commu-nication from Lot Bowen.....        | 707                                              |
| Willis, A. C. Mentioned.....                                                                                | 509                                              |
| Willis, Edward. Mentioned.....                                                                              | 1013                                             |
| Willis, William H. Mentioned.....                                                                           | 564                                              |
| Williston, Edward B. Mentioned.....                                                                         | 112, 487, 987                                    |
| Wills, George D. Mentioned.....                                                                             | 388                                              |
| Wilson, Bartholomew W.                                                                                      |                                                  |
| Mentioned.....                                                                                                     | 109, 128, 305, 320, 347, 348, 986                |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7–Nov. 28, 1864.....                                                   | 354, 355                                         |
| Wilson, David. Mentioned.....                                                                               | 335                                              |
| Wilson, Edwin C. Mentioned.....                                                                             | 989                                              |
| Wilson, James E. Mentioned.....                                                                             | 976                                              |

Wilson, James H.

Correspondence with

|                            |                                                            |
|----------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| Augur, Christopher C ..... | 730, 746, 779                                              |
| Averell, William W .....   | 925, 936                                                   |
| Chapman, George H.....     | 867, 885, 971                                              |
| Custer, George A.....      | 922                                                        |
| Duffié, Alfred N.....      | 819                                                        |
| Johnston, Thomas P .....   | 948                                                        |
| McIntosh, John B.....      | 763, 787, 818, 835, 836, 848, 867, 885, 892, 936, 937, 965 |
| Merritt, Wesley .....      | 864, 874                                                   |
| Sheridan, Philip H.....    | 730,                                                       |

746, 802, 817, 883, 884, 891, 911, 912, 923, 934, 935, 946-948

|                            |                                                            |
|----------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|
| Torbert, Alfred T. A ..... | 531, 802, 834, 848, 866, 875, 884, 892, 912, 923, 948, 964 |
|----------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|

|                 |                             |
|-----------------|-----------------------------|
| Mentioned ..... | 19, 21, 23, 24, 26, 27, 29, |
|-----------------|-----------------------------|

43-49, 94, 95, 97, 98, 111, 117, 149, 150, 191, 219, 423-430, 436, 440, 441, 463,

486, 490, 491, 552, 612, 696, 727, 728, 740, 741, 746, 762, 783, 792, 802, 811, 812,

816, 818, 825, 827, 830, 831, 833-835, 842, 848, 851, 852, 861, 864, 874, 876, 885,

890, 902, 903, 917, 921, 925, 937, 942, 945, 947, 948, 958, 965, 971, 972, 987, 1021

|                                                                 |     |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864..... | 516 |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------|-----|

|                                           |     |
|-------------------------------------------|-----|
| Wilson, J. Arthur. Mentioned ..... | 588 |
|-------------------------------------------|-----|

|                                      |          |
|--------------------------------------|----------|
| Wilson, John. Mentioned ..... | 170, 171 |
|--------------------------------------|----------|

|                                      |     |
|--------------------------------------|-----|
| Wilson, R. E. Mentioned ..... | 565 |
|--------------------------------------|-----|

|                                        |     |
|----------------------------------------|-----|
| Wilson, Robert. Mentioned ..... | 986 |
|----------------------------------------|-----|

|                                         |     |
|-----------------------------------------|-----|
| Wilson, William. Mentioned ..... | 198 |
|-----------------------------------------|-----|

|                                           |     |
|-------------------------------------------|-----|
| Wilson, William R. Mentioned ..... | 977 |
|-------------------------------------------|-----|

|                                           |     |
|-------------------------------------------|-----|
| Wilson, William T. Mentioned ..... | 981 |
|-------------------------------------------|-----|

Winants, H. L.

|                 |          |
|-----------------|----------|
| Mentioned ..... | 666, 748 |
|-----------------|----------|

|                                                                         |     |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|
| Report of skirmishes at Moorefield, W. Va., Nov. 27-28, 1864, etc ..... | 666 |
|-------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----|

Winchester, Va.

Action at, Aug. 17, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

Hufty, Baldwin.

Torbert, Alfred T. A.

Wilson, James H.

Lowell, Charles R., jr.

Also itineraries, pp. 63, 101; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 569; Sheridan to Halleck, p. 830.

Expedition from, into Fauquier and Loudoun Counties. See Fauquier and Loudoun Counties, Va. Expedition from Winchester into, Nov. 28-Dec. 3, 1864.

Expedition from, to near Gordonsville. See Gordonsville, Va. Expedition from Winchester to near, Dec. 19-28, 1864, etc.

Skirmish at Abraham's Creek, near. See Abraham's Creek, near Winchester, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 13, 1864.

Skirmishes near.

Aug. 11, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

Deane, Charles W.

Lowell, Charles R., jr.

Sheridan, Philip H.

Kidd, James H.

Also itinerary, p. 90; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 568.

Sept. 24, 1864. See Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Report of Edwards, p. 183.

Skirmishes near Brucetown and near. See Brucetown, Va. Skirmishes near Winchester and near, Sept. 7, 1864.

Winchester (or the Opequon), Va. Battle of, Sept. 19, 1864.

Casualties. Returns of. Union troops..... 112-119, 294, 315, 321

Charges and specifications against William Dwight ..... 300-306

Communications from

Dwight, William..... 295, 306-308

Emory, William H ..... 300

Grant, U. S ..... 61

Leefe, John G..... 298

Lincoln, Abraham..... 61

Phinney, Stewart W ..... 300

Pollard, Henry M ..... 299

Underhill, Charles W..... 299

War Department, U. S..... 61

Congratulatory Orders.

Campbell, Edward L..... 170

Dwight, William..... 307

Torbert, Alfred T. A..... 437

See also Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864. Reports of

Adams, George W.

Averell, William W.

Ball, William H.

Bassett, Isaac C.

Beal, George L.

Bidwell, Daniel D.

Binkley, Otho H.

Birge, Henry W.

Burgess, Charles.

Cadot, Lemuel Z.

Campbell, Edward L.

Clark, Gideon.

Clark, Sidney E.

Coleman, James H.

Cowand, David G.

Crook, George.

Custer, George A.

Dalton, Henry R.

Deane, Charles W.

Devin, Thomas C.

Doughty, John B.

Douw, John D. P.

Dwight, William.

Early, Jubal A.

Edwards, Oliver.

Emerson, William.

Emory, William H.

Fay, Thomas M.

Fisk, Henry C.

French, Winsor B.

Getty, George W.

Ghiselin, James T.

Graham, Harvey.

Grant, John V.

Grover, Cuvier.

Hamblin, Joseph E.

Harris, Thomas M.

Hayes, Rutherford B.

Hickman, Baynton J.

Hoge, George W.

Hufty, Baldwin.

Hunt, Lucius T.

Janeway, Jacob J.

Keifer, J. Warren.

Kidd, James H.

Lamb, Jacob H.

Lee, Robert E.

Lomax, Lunsford L.

Lowell, Charles R., jr.

McCartney, William H.

Mackenzie, Ranald S.

McKnight, James.

McMillan, James W.

May, Lewis A.

Merritt, Wesley.

Molineux, Edward L.

Munroe, Robert.

Neafie, Alfred.

Olcott, Egbert.

Prentiss, Clifton K.

Randall, Francis J.

Rhodes, Elisha H.

Ricketts, James B.

Robertson, Peter.

Ruhl, Edgar M.

Sheridan, Philip H.

Shunk, David.

Stagg, Peter.

Stevens, Greenleaf T.

Taft, Elijah D.

Thoburn, Joseph.

Tompkins, Charles H.

Torbert, Alfred T. A.

Upton, Emory.

Van Etten, Orsamus R.

Warner, James M.

Wells, George D.

Wheaton, Frank.

Wilson, Bartholomew W.

Wilson, James H.

Wolcott, John A.

Wright, Edward.

Wright, Horatio G.

Young, John F.

Also itineraries, pp. 24, 47, 64, 65, 67-69, 71, 72, 74, 76-83, 85, 90, 95, 99, 102, 105; journal of Hotchkiss, p. 574.Winfield, W. Va. Skirmish at, Oct. 26, 1864. Report of John H. Oley..... 645Winston, John R.

Mentioned ..... 564

Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864..... 608

Winters, John R. Mentioned..... 541Wisconsin Troops. Mentioned.Artillery, Heavy—Regiments: 1st (Batteries), A, 977.Artillery, Light—Batteries: 2d, 976.Infantry—Regiments: 5th, 107, 112, 125, 190, 191, 984.Wise, William. Mentioned..... 249, 258

|                                                                                                                                        | Page.                       |
|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Wisewell, Moses N.                                                                                                              |                             |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                    |                             |
| Bostick, C .....                                                                                                                       | 741                         |
| O'Beirne, James R .....                                                                                                                | 721                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                        | 976                         |
| Witcher, John S.                                                                                                                |                             |
| Correspondence with William W. Averell .....                                                                                           | 853, 878                    |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                        | 111                         |
| Witcher, Vincent A.                                                                                                             |                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                        | 87, 639, 642, 643, 645, 650 |
| Reports of                                                                                                                             |                             |
| Kanawha Valley, W. Va. Witcher's operations in, Nov. 5-12, 1864 ..                                                                     | 650, 651                    |
| West Virginia. Witcher's expedition into, Sept. 17-28, 1864 .....                                                                      | 640                         |
| Witcher, William A. Mentioned .....                                                                                             | 1012                        |
| Witcher's Expedition into West Virginia. See West Virginia. Witcher's Expedition into, Sept. 17-28, 1864, etc.           |                             |
| Witcher's Operations in Kanawha Valley, W. Va. See Kanawha Valley, W. Va. Witcher's Operations in, Nov. 5-12, 1864, etc. |                             |
| Witherell, James H. Mentioned .....                                                                                             | 314                         |
| Withers, Henry H.                                                                                                               |                             |
| Correspondence with Milton Wells .....                                                                                                 | 393                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                        | 110, 129, 387, 390, 982     |
| Report of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                       | 392                         |
| Withers, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                  | 1000                        |
| Withers, Robert W. Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 1012                        |
| Wofford, William T. Mentioned .....                                                                                             | 566, 581, 599, 893          |
| Wolcott, John A. Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                              | 239, 240                    |
| Wolfer, John. Mentioned .....                                                                                                   | 540                         |
| Wood, Anson S. Mentioned .....                                                                                                  | 230, 234                    |
| Woodbury, Eri D. Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 551                         |
| Woodruff, Carle A. Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 112, 987                    |
| Woodruff, Dickinson. Mentioned .....                                                                                            | 987                         |
| Woods, Lucius P. Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 527                         |
| Woods, Thomas B. Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 331                         |
| Woodson, Blake L. Mentioned .....                                                                                               | 89, 653, 660                |
| Woodstock, Va. Skirmish at, Sept. 23, 1864 .....                                                                                | 9                           |
| Wooster, Samuel R. Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 459                         |
| Work, George T.                                                                                                                 |                             |
| Correspondence with William W. Averell .....                                                                                           | 714                         |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                        | 494, 495                    |
| Wreights, Elias. Mentioned .....                                                                                                | 249                         |
| Wright, Carroll D. Mentioned .....                                                                                              | 305, 327                    |
| Wright, Edward.                                                                                                                 |                             |
| Mentioned .....                                                                                                                        | 128, 305                    |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....                                                                      | 349, 351, 352               |
| Wright, Horatio G.                                                                                                              |                             |
| Correspondence with                                                                                                                    |                             |
| Crook, George .....                                                                                                                    | 816                         |
| Edwards, Oliver .....                                                                                                                  | 814                         |
| Leiper, Charles L .....                                                                                                                | 722                         |
| Russell, David A .....                                                                                                                 | 744, 814                    |
| Sheridan, Philip H .....                                                                                                               | 51, 52, 743, 883, 902, 963  |

|                                                                     | Page                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
|---------------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------------|
| Wright, Horatio G.—Continued.                                |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 18, 19, 25-27, 32, 34, 36, 40-42, 44, 45, 47-53, 55, 59, 61, 63, 66, 74-76, 79, 80, 82, 101, 107, 112, 118, 120, 124, 125, 131, 137, 139, 140, 143, 148-150, 152, 153, 156-159, 161, 164, 181, 194, 210, 221-223, 225-228, 233, 238, 239, 241, 246, 247, 253, 256, 259, 272, 275, 279-282, 284, 285, 288, 291, 297, 309, 310, 312, 313, 318, 319, 323, 326, 330, 334, 335, 342, 344, 346, 348, 349, 351-554, 359, 360, 363, 366, 368, 375-378, 380, 391, 395, 397, 403, 404, 415, 433, 489, 490, 499, 508, 518, 546, 552, 553, 560-562, 564, 581, 586, 599, 608, 624-626, 630, 702, 710, 711, 740, 744, 760, 761, 769, 775, 776, 783, 811-814, 816, 817, 822, 848, 863, 870, 874, 875, 880, 889, 896, 941, 952, 957, 966, 974, 984, 997, 1009, 1031 |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864..       | 149, 152, 154, 158                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Wright, Raymond L. Mentioned .....                           | 119, 474, 482                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                       |
| Wright, William W. Mentioned .....                           | 546                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Wyckoff, Jesse F. Mentioned.....                             | 699                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Wynkoop, John E.                                             |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with Alfred N. Duffié .....                          | 949                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned .....                                                     | 958                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Wynne, Thomas H. Correspondence with Bradley T. Johnson..... | 994                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Wynne, William B. Mentioned .....                            | 506                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Yard, Alexander A. Mentioned.....                            | 537, 913                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Yeakle, C. C. Correspondence with Benjamin F. Kelley.....    | 703                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Yellott, John I. Correspondence with Max Weber.....          | 796                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Yocum, John. Mentioned.....                                  | 716                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Yoder, Daniel B. Mentioned .....                             | 278, 279                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| York, Zebulon. Mentioned .....                               | 570, 574, 609, 1002, 1003, 1011, 1012, 1027                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                         |
| Youart, Robert.                                              |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Correspondence with Nathan Wilkinson.....                           | 904                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 82, 87, 647, 983                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                    |
| Report of action at Beverly, W. Va., Oct. 29, 1864 .....            | 648                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Young, Henry H. Mentioned.....                               | 185                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Young, H. K. Mentioned.....                                  | 56                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Young, John F.                                               |                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                     |
| Mentioned.....                                                      | 108, 126, 246, 985                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                  |
| Reports of Shenandoah Valley Campaign, Aug. 7-Nov. 28, 1864 .....   | 265, 267                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Young, John V. Mentioned .....                               | 395, 396                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Young, Lewis L. Mentioned.....                               | 975                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Young, Pierce M. B. Mentioned .....                          | 952                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Yutzy, Enoch D. Mentioned.....                               | 110, 390                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                            |
| Zable, David. Mentioned.....                                 | 1003                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                |
| Zedaker, Absalom. Mentioned .....                            | 540                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |
| Zimmerman, John. Mentioned .....                             | 406                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                                 |

House documents

Bd.: [455.] 1893/94, Vol. 7 = Congress 53, Sess. 2

Washington, DC 1895

Am.b. 3040-455,7

urn:nbn:de:bvb:12-bsb11548984-4